Flintshire, a county of North Wales, bounded on the north by the Irish Sea, and the estuary of the river Dee; on the east by Cheshire; and on the south and west by Denbighshire. It is the smallest of the Welch counties, being only about 33 miles long, and about 9 broad; comprising 160,000 acres of land, of which 110,000 acres are pasturage, and only 20,000 acres arable. It contains 7585 houses, inhabited by 39,622 persons, being 19,577 males and 20,045 females, of whom 6989 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture; and 16,352 in agriculture. The principal rivers in this county are the Wheeler, the Sevion, and the Alen, the latter of which sinks under ground near Mold, and reappears at a short distance. Flintshire is divided into five hundreds, viz. Coleshill, Mayler, Mold, Prestayn, and Rhyddlan; and contains one city, St. Asaph; one borough, Flint; one market-town, Caerwys; and 28 parishes; which are partly in the diocese of St. Asaph, and partly in that of Chester. A steep ridge of hills rises abruptly from the banks of the Dee, and runs in a line with that river. The soil of the low county is clayey, produces good corn and grass, and is tolerably well stocked with wood; it abounds also with coal and free-stone. The hills are barren on the surface, but contain within rich mines of lead and calamine. The northern extremity of this county is level, and produces good wheat; the southern parts are varied with hill and dale, and contain several ruinous castles. The vale of Mold is a rich and beautiful tract. The air of this county is sharp but healthy, and the inhabitants are in general long-lived. Honey is very plentiful, and the natives make of it a wholesome beverage which they call Methegtin. The cows are small, but give a great quantity of milk for their size. The principal commerce of Flintshire is derived from its mineral productions; the lead ore is smelted on the spot, and the metal sent to Chester, whence it is exported; some of the ore is found to contain small quantities of silver. From the south-east part of this county the city of Chester is principally supplied with coal. Several potteries of coarse earthen ware have been also established here. In the time of the Romans this county formed a part of the kingdom of the Ordovices.

FLINTHAM, a parish in the hundred of Bingham, Notts, 4¾ miles from Bingham, and 128 from London; containing 82 houses and 459 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*

FLITCHAM, a small village in the hundred of Freebridge Lynn, Norfolk, 7 miles from Lynn, and 110 from London. It was formerly called Felixham, or the village of Felix, and St. Mary de Fontibus, from the numerous springs in the neighbourhood. It contains 50 houses and 309 inhabitants.

FLIXTON, a hamlet to the parish of Humbleton, in the wapentake of Holderness, and east-riding of York, 10 miles from Hull, and 185 from London; containing 18 houses and 105 inhabitants.

FLISK, a parish in the shire of Fife, Scotland, on the river Tay, opposite the carse of Gowrie, 8 miles from Cupar, and 9 from Dundee; containing 62 houses and 300 inhabitants. The ruins of Balinbreick castle are still visible.

FLITT, the name of a hundred in Bedfordshire, at the south-eastern extremity of the county bordering on Hertfordshire.

FLITTON, a parish in the hundred of Flitt, Bedford, 9½ miles from Luton, and 41 from London; containing 49 houses and 292 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 7*s.* 8*d.* with Silso chapel annexed, in the patronage of the dean and canons of Christ church, Oxford.

FLITWICK, a parish in the hundred of Redbornstoke, Bedford, 2½ miles from Ampthill, and 44 from London; containing 80 houses and 436 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 17*s.*

FLIXBOROUGH, a parish in Manley wapentake, and Lindsay division, Lincoln, 8 miles from Glandford Brigg, and 165 from London; containing 32 houses and 173 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 13*l.* 10*s.* united with Burton Stather.

FLIXTON, a hamlet to the parish of Blundeston, in the hundred of Mutford and Lothingland, Suffolk, 2½ miles from Lowestoft, and 116 from London; containing 4 houses and 41 inhabitants.

FLIXTON, a parish in the hundred of Wangford, Suffolk, 2 miles from Bungay, and 105 from London; containing 24 houses and 219 inhabitants. A convent of Augustine nuns formerly stood here. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.*

FLIXTON, a parish in the hundred of Salford, Lancaster, between the Mersey and Irwell, 7 miles from Manchester, and 187 from London; containing 198 houses and 1093 inhabitants, of whom 596 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures.

FLIXTON, a hamlet to the parish of Folkton, in Dickering lythe, and east riding of York, 3½ miles from Huntmanby, and 213 from London; containing 37 houses and 154 inhabitants.

FLOCKTON UPPER AND NETHER, two hamlets forming a township and chapelry to the parish of Thornhill, in Aybrigg wapentake, west riding of York, 9¾ miles from Barnsley, and 180 from London; containing 162 houses and 800 inhabitants.

FLODDEN HILL, 2 miles north of Milfield, in Northumberland, memorable in history for the desperate battle fought between the English and Scots in 1513, which terminated in favour of the English, the Scottish king, James IV. falling, with the flower of his nobility and 10,000 of his men; the English lost about half that number.

FLOOKBOROUGH, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Cartmel, in Lonsdale ward, Lancaster, 2 miles from Cartmel, and 265 from London. Population included with that of Cartmel.

FLORDON, a parish in the hundred of Humbleyard, Norfolk, 8 miles from Norwich, and 101 from London; containing 76 houses and 418 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

FLOTA, one of the Orkney Isles, about 5 miles long, and 3½ broad, encompassed with high rocks. It breeds great quantities of sheep and land fowl, and with the adjacent small isles of Fasa, Cava, and Gransey, contains about 240 inhabitants.

FLOWER, a parish in the hundred of Nobottle Grove, Northampton, 9½ miles from Daventry, and 68 from London; containing 156 houses and 821 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 17*l.* in the patronage of the dean and canons of Christ church, Oxford.

FLOYTON, a parish in the hundred of Bosmere and Claydon, Suffolk, 4 miles from Needham Market, and 72 from London; containing 18 houses and 121 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 3*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.*

FLURYSBRIDGE, a village in the county of Louth, and province of Leinster, Ireland, 46 miles from Dublin.

FOBBING, a parish in the hundred of Barnstaple, Essex, 7 miles from Billericay, and 25 from London; containing 45 houses and 304 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 21*l.* in the patronage of the crown.

FOCHABERS, a small village in the parish of Bellie, and shire of Murray, Scotland, on the west bank of the river Spey, 140 miles from Edinburgh; containing 180 houses and 937 inhabitants, chiefly employed in the salmon fishery and the manufacture of sewing-thread, calicoes, and worsted stockings. The town is a burgh of barony, governed by a baron bailie appointed by the duke of Gordon. It formerly stood in the neighbourhood of Gordon castle, but has been removed to a rising ground about 1 mile south of its ancient site.

FOCKERBY, a hamlet to the parish of Adlingfleet, in Osgoldness wapentake, west riding of York, on the river Don, 2 miles from Burton-on-Stather, and 166 from London; containing 17 houses and 84 inhabitants.

FODDERTY, a parish in the shire of Ross and Cromarty, Scotland, 3 miles from Dingwall, and 8 from Beauley; containing 335 houses and 1789 inhabitants. It is situated in a valley surrounded by high hills watered by the rivulet Peffen, and contains several lofty mountains. On the hill of Knockfallaric is a vitrified fort, supposed to have been erected by Fingal. Several sulphureous mineral springs in this parish are much resorted to for the relief of stomachic complaints. The soil appears to be not destitute of coal-mines.

FOGGATHORPE, a hamlet to the parish of Bubwith, in Beaconhólme wapentake, and Harthill division of the east riding of York, 6 miles from Howden, and 186 from London; containing 2 houses and 78 inhabitants.

FOGO, a parish in the shire of Berwick, Scotland, 10 miles from Coldstream; containing 97 houses and 506 inhabitants. It is watered by the river Blackadder.

FOLESHILL, a parish in the liberties of Coventry, Warwick, 2 miles from Coventry, and 93 from London; containing 607 houses and 3026 inhabitants, of whom 937 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures, in common with those of Coventry. The living is a vicarage, in the patronage of the crown.

FOLK, a parish in the hundred and division of Sherborn, Dorset, 2 miles from Sherborn, and 146 from London; containing 36 houses and 182 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 19*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*

FOLKING, a hamlet to the parish of Poynings, in the hundred of Poynings, and rape of Lewes, Sussex, 5½ miles from Brighton, and 50 from London; containing 23 houses and 167 inhabitants.

FOLKINGHAM, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Aveland, and parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 7 miles from Bourn, and 107 from London; containing 99 houses and 531 inhabitants. It is pleasantly situated on a rising ground, commanding a very extensive view over the fens. The church is well built, with a lofty tower. The county gaol has been entirely rebuilt, in which the quarter sessions are held. The ruins of its ancient castle, which was destroyed by Oliver Cromwell, are still to be seen; as are likewise in the neighbourhood the remains of two pieces of decayed magnificence, the old monastery of Sempringham, the seat of the Gilbertine nuns, and the ancient house of the lord Clinton, queen Elizabeth's admiral, where he lived in the utmost splendour. Folkingham is a place of very little trade; it has a market on Thursday; and on Palm-Monday and Ash-Wednesday for stock; on the 12th May (called the town fair) for May stock; on the 15th and 16th June for horses; on the 3d July for all kinds of goods; on the first Thursday after Michaelmas for sheep; and on the 22d November for goods in general. The living of the parish is a rectory, value 21*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*

FOLKINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Longbridge, and rape of Pevensey, Sussex, 4 miles from Eastbourne, and 60 from London; containing 34 houses and 179 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 12*l.* in the patronage of the duke of Dorset.

FOLKSTONE, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Folkstone, and lathe of Shepway, Kent, on the English Channel, 3 miles east from Hithe, and 72 from London; containing 762 houses and 3257 inhabitants, being 1354 males and 1903 females, of whom only 342 were returned as being principally occupied in fishing and other marine avocations. Folkstone is a member of the port of Dover, and gives title of viscount to the earl of Radnor. It was once much more flourishing than it now is, and had a castle or fort on an eminence, still called Castle-hill, about 1½ mile from the sea, and at the same distance from the present church. This parish appears to have had originally five churches, of which four have been destroyed by the incursions of the sea, whose encroachments are daily extending their dilapidations. The ruins of an ancient convent of Benedictine nuns, and other buildings have shared a similar fate. Through the town runs a copious spring. The houses are mostly of brick, and form three narrow, irregular, and badly paved streets; but many of them command, in a clear day, distinct views of the French coast. Beside the church, Folkstone contains three meeting-houses for Baptists, Quakers, and Methodists; also a good charity school, founded in pursuance of the will of Dr. Harvey, a native of this place, who made the important discovery of the circulation of the blood. The corporation of this town is by prescription, and consists of a mayor, 12 jurats, 24 common council-men, a recorder, town clerk, and chamberlain. The custom-house has several riding officers attached to it, on account of the number of smugglers that frequent the coast; and on the heights is a strong battery. The beauty of the surrounding country, and the salubrity of the air, have rendered Folkstone a place of great resort in the summer. A multitude of fishing boats belong to this harbour, which during the season are employed in catching mackarel for the London market, and about Michaelmas in the herring fishery on the Norfolk and Suffolk coast, for the merchants of Yarmouth and Lowestoff. Many curious strata of pyrites, talc, fuller's-earth, and a kind of sulphur, are found about Folkstone, which accounts for the chalybeate springs in its vicinity. The market is held on Thursdays, and the fairs on the 28th June. The living of the parish is only a curacy. Folkstone church, Lat. 51° 4′ 47″. Long. 1° 10′ 52″ W. — Hasted's Kent.

Folksworth, a parish in the hundred of Normancross, Hunts, 14 miles from Huntingdon, and 74 from London; containing 27 houses and 119 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 6*s.* 3*d.*

Folkton, a parish in Dickering lythe of the east riding of York, 2 miles from Hunmanby, and 212 from London; containing 25 houses and 112 inhabitants. The rectory is valued at 22*l.* and the vicarage at 8*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.*

Follyfoot, a hamlet to the parish of Spofforth, in Claro wapentake of the west riding of York, 4 miles from Wetherby, and 198 from London; containing 49 houses and 273 inhabitants.

Fonthill Giffard, a parish in the hundred of Dunworth, Wilts, 1 mile from Hindon, and 94½ from London; containing 76 houses and 493 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 13*l.* 10*s.*

Fontmel, a parish in the hundred of Six-Penny Handley, and division of Shaston, Dorset, 4 miles from Shaftesbury, and 105 from London; containing 63 houses and 394 inhabitants. The parish is very extensive, and has a hamlet called Little Fontmel. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 10*s.* with Worchard chapel annexed.

Foolow, a township to the parish of Eyam, in the hundred of High Peake, Derby, 2 miles from Tideswell, and 158 from London; containing 58 houses and 301 inhabitants.

Foot's Cray. See Cray, Kent.

Foothog, a hamlet to the parish of Lanthony, Brecon, although it belongs to the hundred of Ewias Lacey, Herefordshire. The tract called The Futhog is an extensive mountain near three miles long, entirely surrounded by the county of Brecon. It contains 25 houses and 96 inhabitants.

Forbes, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, united to Kearn, on the banks of the Don and Bogie, 26 miles from Aberdeen, and 42 from Montrose; containing 44 houses and 206 inhabitants. In the vicinity are mountains which rise 1200 feet above the level of the river.

Forcett, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Gilling, in Gilling West wapentake of the north riding of York, 8 miles from Richmond, and 242 from London; containing 42 houses and 204 inhabitants.

Ford, the name of a hundred in Salop, on the western side of the county, and borders of Montgomery.

Ford, a hamlet to the parish of Stoke Prior, in the hundred of Wolphy, Hereford, 4 miles from Leominster, and 134 from London; containing 6 houses and 25 inhabitants.

Ford, a parish in Glendale ward, Northumberland, 7 miles from Wooler, and 330 from London; containing 381 houses and 1903 inhabitants, of whom 126 were returned as being employed in trade. In this parish is an ancient castle, belonging to the Delaval family. The living is a rectory, value 24*l.*

Ford, a parish in the hundred of Ford, Salop, 4 miles from Shrewsbury, and 165 from London; containing 58 houses and 349 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* discharged.

Ford, a parish in the hundred of Avisford, and rape of Arundel, Sussex, 2 miles from Arundel, and 62 from London; containing 8 houses and 70 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Chichester.

Ford, a hamlet to the parish of Laverstock, in the hundred of Alderbury, Wilts, 2 miles from Salisbury, and 82 from London, on the river Bourne, near St. Thomas bridge. Population included with that of Laverstock.

Ford. See Bathford, Somerset.

Forden, a parish in the hundred of Cawrse, and county of Montgomery, Wales, between the rivers Camlet and Severn, and near the borders of Salop, 3¼ miles from Montgomery, and 172 from London; containing 115 houses and 1074 inhabitants.—In the neighbourhood of this parish are the remains of an ancient Roman camp. The living is a curacy.

Fordham, a parish in the hundred of Staploe, Cambridge, 9 miles from Ely, 5 from Newmarket, and 66 from London; containing 425 houses and 700 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of Jesus college, Cambridge.

Fordham, a parish in the hundred of Lexden, Essex, 5 miles from Colchester, and 48 from London; containing 82 houses and 559 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*

Fordham, a parish in the hundred of Clackclose, Norfolk, near the river Stoke, 3 miles from Downham, and 81 from London; containing 17 houses and 111 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Ford High, a township to the parish of Bishopwearmouth, in Easington ward, Durham, on the banks of the Wear, 2½ miles from Sunderland, and 273 from London; containing 74 houses and 602 inhabitants.

Fordice, a parish in the shire of Banff, Scotland, on the sea-coast, near Cullen, 56 miles from Aberdeen, and 240 from Edinburgh; containing 617 houses and 2747 inhabitants, being 1182 males and 1565 females, of whom 860 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. The Kirk town stands about half a mile from the sea, and is a burgh of barony; and at the bottom of a bay is a considerable village, called Portsoy, which gives name to the bay, and is chiefly inhabited by fishermen. A species of jasper, called Portsoy marble, is found in this neighbourhood, which is manufactured into chimney-pieces, &c. The quarry is near 4 miles in length.

Fordingbridge, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Fordingbridge, and division of New Forest West, Hampshire, on the banks of the Avon, and borders of the New Forest, 91½ miles from London; containing 449 houses and 2335 inhabitants, being 1117 males and 1218 females, of whom 892 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures, principally in the fabrication of ticking and calico printing. It has a good stone bridge of seven arches over the river, which is formed from several springs in Wiltshire, and falls into the sea at Christchurch. The town was formerly much larger than it is at present, having often suffered by fire. It is governed by a constable, who is chosen annually at the lord of the manor's court leet. In the neighbourhood are many handsome seats. The market is on Fridays; and the fairs on the 9th September. The living is a vicarage, value 30*l.* 2*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of King's college, Cambridge.

Fordington, a parish in the hundred of Ugglescombe, and division of Dorchester, Dorset, ¼ mile from Dorchester, and 119½ from London; containing 147 houses and 888 inhabitants. This parish was formerly a hamlet to Dorchester. The church stands on an eminence, and is a large ancient building, with a tower about 80 feet high.—In 1747 the road here, which passes over an extensive moor, and was very dangerous, underwent a complete repair, and a new bridge was thrown over the Froome. In digging chalk for the roads, above 200 skeletons were discovered about four or five feet below the surface of the ground. Fordington formerly had a market. The living is a vicarage, united with Wridlington, belonging to the prebend thereof in the church of Sarum.

Fordley, a hamlet to the parish of Middleton, in the hundred of Blything, Suffolk, 2 miles from Saxmundham, and 92 from London. Population included with that of Middleton.

Fordoun, a parish in the shire of Kincardine, Scotland, containing the villages of Auchinblae and Kincardine, the latter of which gives name to the shire, and was the county town till the reign of James VI. when it was removed to Stonehaven. Fordoun lies 15 miles north from Montrose, and contains 465 houses and 2225 inhabitants, being 1050 males and 1173 females, of whom 909 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. In this parish is to be seen an ancient ruin, supposed to have been a royal palace of Kenneth III. Fordoun gave birth to two remarkable personages, Johannes de Fordoun, author of the Scotichronicum, the most ancient authentic Scottish history published, and the celebrated lord Monboddo.

Fordwich, a parish in the lathe of St. Augustine, Kent, on the river Stour, 2 miles from Canterbury, and 57½ from London; containing 44 houses and 236 inhabitants. It is a member of the port of Dover, and enjoys the same privilege as the cinque ports. The Stour is navigable for small vessels up to the town. The large haven at the entrance of the river is supposed to have been the Portus Trutulensis of the Romans, from the great quantity of excellent trout, for which it is still famous. The living is a rectory, value 5*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.*

Forehoe, the name of a hundred in Norfolk, in the centre of the county, west of Norwich.

Foreland North, the extreme eastern point of land in Kingsgate, in the isle of Thanet, and county of Kent. All vessels that pass on the south side of this headland are said to enter the Channel; and all the towns and harbours between this place and London, whether on the Kent or Essex coast, are called members of the port of London. Here is a light-house, under the direction of the Trinity-house. Two new stories of brick have been raised on the old building, and its height, including the small room in which the lights are kept, is more than 100 feet. The lantern is in the form of a dome, about 10 feet in diameter and 12 in height, consisting of 10 sides coated with copper, with a gallery round it. Patent lamps (which cost 50*l.* each), with a reflector and magnifier, burn the whole night on each side of the Decayon next the sea. The whole building is white washed. Lat. 51° 25′ Long. 1° 29′ E.

Foreland South, a head of land, forming the east point of the Kentish shore, about 6 miles south of the North Forcland. Lat. 51° 12′. Long. 1° 25′ E.

Foremark, a parish in the hundred of Repton and Gressley, Derby, 6 miles from Ashby-de-la-Zouch, and 121 from London; containing 11 houses and 77 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Forest Hill, a parish in the hundred of Bullington, Oxford, 4½ miles from Oxford, and 99 from London; containing 23 houses and 115 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Forest Row, a hamlet to the parish of East Grinstead, in the hundred of Burleigh Arches, and Pevensey rape, Sussex, on the borders of Ashdown forest, 2½ miles from East Grinstead, and 31 from London. Its fairs are on the 25th June and 8th November.

Forfar, County of. See Angus-shire.

Forfar, a royal borough of considerable antiquity, in the shire of Angus or Forfarshire, Scotland, 13 miles from Dundee; containing 726 houses and 5165 inhabitants, being 2486 males and 2679 females, of whom 1281 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. The streets of Forfar are irregular, but the houses in general neat and well built. The church is a good structure, nearly in the centre of the town. The new town-house is likewise a good building; the lower part is used as a prison, and the upper stories for assemblies and public meetings. The sheriff's court is held in this borough, which is governed by a provost, two bailiffs, and 19 counsellors, who are annually self-elected. A considerable manufacture of canvas, sail-cloth, osnaburghs for sheeting, and other coarse linens, is carried on in this place; besides the making of shoes called brogues, which employs a number of hands. In the loch of Forfar was an island with a castle, said to have been a place of religious retirement for queen Margaret.

Forgan, or St. Phillan's, a parish in the shire of Fife, Scotland, on the south bank of the river Tay, which is here about two miles broad, opposite to Dundee, from whence there is a regular ferry. This parish contains 205 houses and 916 inhabitants, mostly employed in the manufacture of coarse linens for Dundee. On the river are several valuable salmon fisheries.

Forgandenny, a parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, in the vale of Strathern, 3 miles from Perth; containing 199 houses and 914 inhabitants. The village stands about half a mile from the river Erne, and is neatly built, having a small clear stream, dividing it into two parts. There are three other small villages in the parish, Ardargie, Newton, and Condie.

Forglen, a parish in the shire of Banff, Scotland, near the banks of the Deveron, 8 miles from Banff, and 36 from Aberdeen; containing 146 houses and 605 inhabitants.

Forgue, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, 8 miles from Huntly, and 30 from Aberdeen; containing 417 houses and 1768 inhabitants, of whom 117 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture.

Formby, a township and chapelry to the parish of Walton, in the hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 3 miles from Liverpool, and 206 from London; containing 194 houses and 1045 inhabitants. The rector of Walton nominates to the curacy of the chapel.

Fornham Allsaints, a parish in the hundred of Thingoe, Suffolk, 2½ miles from Bury St. Edmund's, and 73 from London; containing 41 houses and 236 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 19*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.* united with Westley.

Fornham St. Genevieve, a parish in the hundred of Thedwestry, Suffolk, 1 mile from the last-mentioned parish; containing 19 houses and 116 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 1*s.*

Fornham St. Martin's, a parish in the hundred of Thedwestry, Suffolk, near the two foregoing; containing 22 houses and 160 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.*

Fornsett St. Mary's, and Fornsett St. Peter's, an united parish in the hundred of Depwade, Norfolk, 10 miles from Norwich, and 100 from London; containing 140 houses and 731 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 20*l.*

Forraberry, a parish united with Minster, in the hundred of Lesnewth, Cornwall, on the sea-coast, 4 miles from Camelford, and 228 from London; containing 33 houses and 140 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.*

Forres, a royal borough in the shire of Murray, Scotland, on a rising ground, near the bay of Findhorn, 10 miles from Nairn, and 90 from Fochaber; containing 663 houses and 3114 inhabitants, being 1274 males and 1840 females, of whom 380 were returned as being employed in trade, &c. The houses are neatly built, and the river Findhorn, which is navigable within two miles of the town, abounds with salmon. The borough is governed by a provost, two baillies, and a dean of the guild. For an account of Sweno's pillar, near this town, see Rafford.

Forscott, a parish in the hundred of Wellow, Somerset, 7 miles from Froome, and 112 from London, on the Somerset Coal canal; containing 13 houses and 160 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.*

Forse, a considerable river in Caithness, Scotland, which falls into the Pentland frith.

Fortevior, a parish in Perthshire, Scotland, on the banks of the river Erne, 6 miles from Perth, and 28 from Stirling; containing 170 houses and 786 inhabitants. This parish comprehends some of the highest of the Ochill hills, from which the Erne descends in times of flood with great violence, doing considerable damage, and in its course exhibiting several natural cascades.

Forth, one of the most considerable rivers in Scotland, rising on the side of Benlomond mountain, in Dunbartonshire, and after passing almost through the kingdom, forms the Frith, or arm of the German Ocean, after a course of not less than 200 miles. Its winding stream skirted with woods, fertile plains, or ancient ruins; its waters, sometimes expanding themselves from the breadth of a moderate rivulet to the size of a considerable lake, form some of the most picturesque scenes of the country. It is navigable as far as Stirling for vessels of 80 tons, and a grand canal now forms a navigation from the Forth to the Clyde, thereby uniting the two opposite seas. The water of this river abounds with excellent fish, and its banks have several good oyster beds.

Forthampton, a parish in the hundred of Tewkesbury, Gloucester, 2 miles from Tewkesbury, and 106 from London; containing 54 houses and 449 inhabitants. It has a very large church, with a strong tower at the west end. The living is a curacy.

Fortingal, a Highland parish in Perthshire, Scotland, about 37 miles in length, situate in a fertile vale, 26 miles from Dunkeld, and 46 from Stirling; containing 712 houses and 3875 inhabitants, being 1507 males and 2368 females, of whom 216 only were returned as being employed in trade. In this parish are three extensive lakes, viz. Rannoch, Erruck, and Lyon, besides several of less extent, from whence issue rivers of considerable size, the union of whose waters form the tunnel. Loch Rannoch is 12 miles long and 1 mile broad. At the foot of the hill of Shichallin, which rises 3557 feet above the level of the sea, issues a spring impregnated with neutral salt. Prior to the year 1745 the whole of this district was in an uncivilized state.

Forton, a hamlet to the parish of Gosport, in Portsdown division, Hants, ¾ mile from Gosport, and 78 from London. Population included with Gosport. It is a depôt for prisoners of war.

Forton, a township to the parish of Cockerham, in the hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, 4 miles from Garstang, and 231 from London; containing 90 houses and 402 inhabitants.

Forton, a parish in the hundred of Cuttlestone, Stafford, 2 miles from Newport, in Salop, and 142 from London; containing 88 houses and 566 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 20*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.*

Fortrose, a royal borough in the shire of Ross, Scotland, on the north side of the Murray Frith, nearly opposite to Fort George, 7 miles from Fort George, and 9 from Inverness; containing 278 houses and 1239 inhabitants. This borough comprises two towns, viz. Rosemarkie and Chanonry, which were united by royal charter. The former is a borough of considerable antiquity. The latter lies about one mile westward, and receives its name from the Chanonry of Ross, and bishop's residence: it is now the seat of a presbytery. The town is small, and owes its consequence to the late establishment of an academy, under the direction of a rector and two masters. Two small portions of the ancient cathedral still remain, one of which is now used as a burial-place by the Mackenzie family: the other is the court-house, having vaulted prisons below. There is a regular ferry between this place and Fort George. Fortrose is included in the northern district of burghs in sending a member to parliament.

Fosbrooke, a township to the parish of Dilhorn, in the hundred of Totmonslow, Stafford, 3 miles from Cheadle, and 143 from London; containing 119 houses and 563 inhabitants. A monastery formerly stood here.

Fosdyke, a hamlet to the parish of Algakirk, in the hundred of Kirton and parts of Holland, Lincoln, 8 miles from Boston; containing 47 houses and 271 inhabitants. The Foss Dyke Wash, between the Witham and the Trent, was cut by Henry I.: it is seven miles in length.

Fossaway, a parish united with Tullibole, in the shire of Perth, Scotland, among the Ochil hills, by the river Dovan, 5 miles from Kinross, and 16 from Perth. The united parishes contain 320 houses and 1312 inhabitants.

Fosse, a river of Yorkshire, which falls into the Ouse near York.

Fosse, or Leven, a river of Lancashire, which falls into the Irish Sea on the Seven Sands.

Foston, a parish in the hundred of Guthlaxton, Leicester, 6 miles from Leicester, and 90 from London; containing 5 houses and 24 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 2*s.* 3*d.*

Foston, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Long Beniton, in the hundred of Leveden, and parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 5½ miles from Grantham, and 114 from London; containing 69 houses and 243 inhabitants.

Foston, a parish in Dickering lythe, of the east riding of York, 3 miles from Great Driffield, and 197 from London; containing 31 houses and 175 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* in the patronage of the crown.

Foston on the Wolds, a parish in Bulmer wapentake, north riding of York, 11½ miles from York, and 211 from London; containing 12 houses and 75 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 15*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of the crown.

Fotherby, a parish in the hundred of Sedbrough, and Lindsay division, Lincoln, 3 miles from Louth, and 156 from London; containing 55 houses and 141 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* in the patronage of the crown.

Fotheringay, a parish in the hundred of Willybrooke, Northampton, 10 miles from Stamford, 3¼ from Oundle, and 85 from London; containing 46 houses and 307 inhabitants. It is pleasantly situated on the river Nen, and consists of one street; it is also celebrated for its castle, rebuilt by Edmund duke of York, son of Edward III. The keep is in the form of a fetter lock, the device of the house of York. Richard III. was born in this castle, and in the hall Mary queen of Scotland was tried in 1586, and shortly after beheaded. Her son, James VI. king of England, so completely demolished this fortress, that only the earth-works remain. Fotheringay church was built in the reign of Henry V. by Edward duke of York, whose body was brought from Agincourt in France, where he was killed, and interred here. The remains of Richard duke of York, slain at Wakefield, and of his wife Cecilia Neville, are also buried in this church; their monuments were rebuilt by queen Elizabeth. The windows contain some handsome painted glass. Near the church is a free school. The fairs are on the Monday after Old Midsummer-day, and on the 5th July. The living is a curacy.

Fotherley, a hamlet to the parish of Bywell St. Peter's, in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 3 miles from Corbridge, and 279 from London; containing 21 houses and 91 inhabitants.

Foulden, a parish in the hundred of South Greenhoe, Norfolk, 7 miles from Brandon, and 86 from London; containing 57 houses and 376 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.* united with Oxburgh, in the patronage of Gonvil and Caius college, Cambridge.

Foulden, a parish in the shire of Berwick, 4 miles from Berwick, and 9 from Dunse; containing 80 houses and 393 inhabitants. It is watered by the Whittader, which is in many places near 50 yards deep. From some ancient ruins this parish should seem to have been strongly fortified, and to have been much more considerable than at present. It is a burgh of barony, and holds two annual fairs.

Fouldrige, a township to the parish of Whalley, in the hundred of Blackburn, Lancaster, 8 miles from Haslingden, and 211 from London; containing 155 houses and 833 inhabitants.

Foulis, a parish in the district of Strathern, Perthshire, Scotland, 4½ miles from Crieff, and 10 from Perth; containing 321 houses and 1614 inhabitants, of whom 136 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. It is watered by the river Almond. About a mile from the church are the ruins of an ancient fort or castle.

Foulk Stapleford, a hamlet to the parish of Tarvin, in the hundred of Broxton, Chester, 5 miles from Chester, and 180 from London; containing 44 houses and 212 inhabitants.

Foulmire, a parish in the hundred of Thriploe, Cambridge, 3 miles from Royston, and 41 from London; containing 76 houses and 420 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 29*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.*

Foulness, an island and parish in the hundred of Rochford, Essex, between Wallasea island and the ocean, 5 miles from Rochford, and 44½ from London; containing 43 houses and 306 inhabitants. The best oysters in England are obtained from this spot; they are named from the bank whence they are taken, Wallfleet, at the mouth of the Crouch. This island was formerly subject to frequent inundations, but is now converted into good land, by being drained after the Dutch method. A fair is held here on the 10th July. The living is a rectory, value 15*l.*

Foulsham, a parish in the hundred of Eynesford, Norfolk, 46 miles from Reepham, and 113 from London; containing 101 houses and 605 inhabitants. The houses are mostly modern buildings, the village having been nearly destroyed by a fire in 1770. The church was also rebuilt at the same time. A fair is held in this parish on Tuesday in Easter week. The living is a rectory, value 27*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.*

Foulstone, a township to the parish of Kirkburton, in the wapentake of Aybrig, and west riding of York, 4 miles from Huddersfield, and 183 from London; containing 203 houses and 1128 inhabitants, of whom 572 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture.

Fountain's Earth, a township to the parish of Kirby Malzeard, in Claro wapentake of the west riding of York, 5 miles from Rippon, and 227 from London; containing 77 houses and 329 inhabitants.

Fovant, a parish in the hundred of Cawden and Cadworth, Wilts, 4 miles from Wilton, and 90 from London; containing 100 houses and 514 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 17*l.* in the patronage of Pembroke college.

Foveran, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, 12 miles from Aberdeen, and 16 from Peterhead, on the sea-coast; containing 334 houses and 1591 inhabitants. It is watered by the river Ythan, at the mouth of which lies the small village of Newburgh. The ruins of several castles and chapels are to be met with in this neighbourhood.

Fowey, a borough, market, and sea-port town, in the hundred of Powder, Cornwall, 5 miles from Lostwithiel, and 239 from London; containing 213 houses and 1155 inhabitants, of whom 134 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. Fowey stands on the west side of a river of the same name, which, falling into the British Channel, forms an harbour capable of containing and receiving vessels of 1000 tons at all times of the tide. The inhabitants carry on a considerable trade in the pilchard fishery. This borough was anciently a place of considerable note; in the reign of Edward III. it appears to have furnished 47 ships, or small vessels, for assisting his majesty in his wars, being a greater proportion than was supplied by any other port in the kingdom. It became so powerful through naval wars and piracies, that in the same king's reign its ships refused to strike their colours as required, when they sailed by Rye and Winchelsea, for which they were attacked by the vessels of those ports, but they defeated them; whereupon the corporation of Fowey bore their arms mixed with those of the two cinque ports, and obtained the appellation of Gallants of Fowey. In the same reign, they likewise rescued several ships of Rye from distress, for which the town was made a member of the cinque ports. The French having threatened to burn this sea-port, Edward IV. caused two towers to be built at the public charge, the ruins of which are still visible. After this, the inhabitants having attacked the French in the time of a truce, Edward took away all their ships and naval stores, together with the harbour-chain, which was carried to Dartmouth; 2 links of this chain were taken up by a trawl-boat in 1776; they were incrusted with stones and shells. For the present defence of the harbour three batteries have been erected at the entrance, which stand so high that no ship can bring her guns to bear on them. Fowey church is a handsome edifice, and the tower is beautifully adorned with carved work. The market-house is large and spacious, over which there is a neat town-hall. There are also two free-schools, an excellent poor-house, and an almshouse for eight decayed widows. No wheeled carriages can come into this town, owing to the narrowness and sudden turnings of the streets. The grotto of Monabilly, standing on a lawn near the sea, 2 miles south-west of the town, is the family seat of the Rashleighs: near it, almost on the beach, is a curious grotto, built chiefly of large, rough pebbles, the inside being covered with valuable and curious fossils fixed to the walls, and arranged in a very masterly manner. Place, or Theffry-house, is the castellated mansion mentioned by Leland, and has been for many ages in the family of Theffry, one of whose ancestors was knighted by Edward the Black Prince, for taking the chief standard of the French at the battle of Cressy. The tower on the north-east angle has fallen, and the whole is in a state of rapid decay: it has been a very handsome building, the outside being ornamented with various devices in stone: it has a very fine old hall, with a flat oaken ceiling richly carved, and several of the rooms are ornamented with windows of painted glass, particularly one, on which appears the plume of feathers and E. P. with the motto Hic Dies (a mis-spelling of Ich Dien). Most of the chambers have been repaired in a modern style. The chief entrance to this castle is from the church-yard by three flights of steps, and through a ruined gateway, guarded with a strong wicket, and flanked by a lodge, pierced with loop-holes. The gardens run upon an eminence overlooking the whole town and harbour. The corporation of Fowey consists of a mayor, recorder, eight aldermen, town-clerk, two serjeants at mace, &c. The mayor for the time being, as well as the year following, and also the aldermen, are justices of the peace. It began to send two members to parliament about the thirteenth year of queen Elizabeth; they are chosen by the inhabitants paying scot and lot, and prince's tenants eligible to serve the offices of portreve: it is a feudal tenure under the prince of Wales, as duke of Cornwall. The market on Saturdays is well supplied with all kinds of provisions, fish, and vegetables. The fairs are on Shrove-Tuesday, the 1st May, and 10th September. The toll of the market and fairs, as well as the quavage of the harbour, are vested in the corporation, on the payment of a fee-farm rent of 40*s*. Great quantities of tin are dug in the neighbourhood. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l*. Fowey Windmill, Lat. 50° 20′ 7″. Lon. 4° 37′ 31″. W.—Polwhele's Cornwall.

Fowla, or Fule, one of the northern isles of Scotland, nearly 20 miles distant from any land, to the westward of the cluster of Orkney and Shetland Isles. It is much resorted to as a fishing station, affords excellent pasturage for sheep, and contains 26 families and 130 inhabitants; who, although the island cannot supply them with provisions, are so attached to the place, that they are seldom known to leave it. The only landing-place is at the village of Ham.

Fownhope, a parish in the hundred of Greytree, Hereford, on the river Wye, 6 miles from Hereford, and 129 from London; containing 149 houses and 787 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l*. 9*s*. 9*d*. in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Hereford.

Foxcot, a hamlet to the parish of Andover, in the hundred and division of Andover, Hants, 2 miles from Andover, and 65 from London; containing 12 houses and 57 inhabitants.

Foxearth, a parish in the hundred of Hinckford, Essex, 3 miles from Sudbury, and 56 from London; containing 74 houses and 361 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l*. 4*s*. 4*d*.

Foxfleet, a hamlet to the parish of South Cave, in the division of Beacon Hunsley and wapentake of Harthill, in the east riding of York, 4 miles from South Cave, and 168 from London; containing 19 houses and 139 inhabitants.

Foxford, a town in the county of Mayo and county of Connaught, Ireland, on the river May, which is about 1½ mile below the town, and falls into Lough-Conn 8 miles from Castlebar.

Foxhall, a small village in the hundred of Carlford, Suffolk, 4 miles from Ipswich, and 73 from London; containing 21 houses and 150 inhabitants.

Foxhall. See Vauxhall, Surry.

Foxham, a hamlet to the parish of Brimhill, in the hundred of Chippenham, Wilts, 3½ miles from Chippenham, and 91 from London. Population included with that of Brimhill.

Foxholes, a parish in Dickering Lythe, of the east riding of York, on the road to Scarborough, 10 miles from Driffield, and 205 from London; containing 18 houses and 130 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 22*l.*

Foxley, a parish in the hundred of Eynesford, Norfolk, 3 miles from Reepham, and 109 from London; containing 35 houses and 187 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Foxley, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Malmsbury, Wilts, 3 miles from Malmsbury, and 98 from London; containing 9 houses and 50 inhabitants.

Foxton, a parish in the hundred of Thriplow, Cambridge, 6 miles from Cambridge, near Harlston; containing 46 houses and 322 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.

Foxton, a hamlet to the parish of Sedgefield, in Stockton ward, Durham, 46 miles from London; containing 9 houses and 53 inhabitants.

Foxton, a parish in the hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 2 miles from Market Harborough, and 84 from London; containing 88 houses and 420 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the crown.

Foy, a parish in the hundred of Wormilow, Hereford, 3 miles from Ross, and 124 from London; containing 42 houses and 245 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Foyers, a small river of the shire of Inverness, Scotland, remarkable for its stupendous fall into Loch Ness: the height of the lower fall is 207 feet, being 67 feet more than the celebrated cataract of Niagara in North America. The river rushes down this precipice with a noise like thunder, forming an unbroken stream as white as snow; the spray arising from the concussion forms a most beautiful mist.—Garnett's Tour.

Frapley, a hamlet to the parish of Alrewas, in the hundred of Offlow, Stafford, 4 miles from Litchfield, and 124 from London; containing 51 houses and 268 inhabitants.

Fraithorpe, a hamlet to the parish of from London; containing 12 houses and 87 Carnaby, in Dickering lythe, east riding of York, 4 miles from Bridlington, and 204 inhabitants.

Framfield, a parish in the hundred of Lexfield, Dorset, and rape of Pevensey, Sussex, 1 mile from Uckfield, and 43 from London; containing 548 houses and 969 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 15*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Framland, the name of a hundred in Leicestershire, forming the north-eastern point of the county, adjoining Lincolnshire.

Framlingam, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Loes, Suffolk, near the source of the river Ore, 16 miles from Ipswich, and 88 from London; containing 388 houses and 1854 inhabitants, of whom 704 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. The name of this place is Saxon, and implies it to have been the habitation of strangers. The town is ancient, and stands on an eminence. The church is a very stately edifice, built of black flint; the steeple, which is 100 feet high, is seen at a great distance. In the parish are two good almshouses, two free-schools, and a Sunday school. Part of the ruins of an ancient castle are still standing, the walls whereof are 44 feet high and 8 feet thick, with several remains of watch-towers. It is supposed to have been built in the time of the Saxons, and was the retreat of St. Edmund, the king and martyr, when he fled from Dunwich: being pursued by the Danes, he again attempted to escape, but was overtaken and beheaded at Huxton, and his body was interred at Bury, whence its present name. To this castle queen Mary also retired in 1553. Framlingham has a very spacious market-place, and its market, on Saturdays, is well supplied. Its fairs are on Whit-Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, and on the 29th September. The living is a rectory, value 43*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* with Saxted chapel annexed; which, with the manor and privileges of the castle, belongs to Pembroke-hall, Cambridge.

Framlingham Earl's, a parish in the hundred of Henstead, Norfolk, 4 miles from Norwich, and 108 from London; containing 16 houses and 96 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* united with Bixley.

Framlingham Picott, a parish in the hundred of Henstead, Norfolk, 4½ miles from Norwich, and 107½ from London; containing 44 houses and 256 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Framlington Long, a township and chapelry to the parish of Felton, in Coquetdale ward, Northumberland, 11½ miles from Morpeth, and 303 from London; containing 100 houses and 471 inhabitants.

Frampton, a parish in the hundred of Godderthorne, in the division of Bridport, Dorset, 4½ miles from Dorchester, and 130 from London; containing 43 houses and 295 inhabitants. It stands on the river Frome, from whence it derived the name Frome-town, now Frampton. Here was an ancient priory. The river abounds with excellent trout, and has at this place a good stone bridge. The church stands on the north side of the river, and has a very handsome and lofty tower; the chancel was neatly rebuilt in 1746. An ancient priory stood in this parish. Frampton was formerly a market-town; and has fairs on the 4th March, 1st August, and 4th September. The living is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*

Frampton, a parish in the hundred of Kirton, and parts of Holland, Lincoln, 43 miles from Boston, and 114 from London; containing 113 houses and 542 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 18*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.*

Frampton Cottrell, a parish in the hundred of Langley and Swineshead, Gloucester, 4½ miles from Chipping Sodbury, and 117 from London; containing 226 houses and 1208 inhabitants, of whom 215 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture, principally of felt hats. The living is a rectory, value 14*l.* 16*s.*

Frampton-a-Severn, a parish in the hundred of Whitstone, Gloucester, near the river Severn, 7 miles from Stroud, and 108 from London; containing 170 houses and 860 inhabitants. At the hamlet of Froombridge, in this parish, is an extensive manufacture of iron and steel wire. The tides of the Severn rise here with great rapidity, and, when the wind is strong up the river, were often the occasion of considerable damage, by overflowing their banks and inundating the country, until the earl of Berkley erected a great bulwark called Hockcrib, to retain the river within its proper channel. A fair is held here on the 14th February, called Frying-pan Fair. The living of the parish is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 11*s.*

Framsden, a parish in the hundred of Thredling, Suffolk, 9 miles from Ipswich, and 78 from London; containing 27 houses and 684 inhabitants. A fair is held in this parish on Holy Thursday. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 0*s.* 2*d.*

Framwellgate, a hamlet to the parish of St. Oswald's, and a suburb of Durham, to which it adjoins; containing 131 houses and 1071 inhabitants.

Frankley, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Halesowen in the hundred of Halfshire, Worcester, 7 miles from Bromesgrove, and 118 from London; containing 28 houses and 194 inhabitants.

Frankton, a parish in the hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, 7 miles from Coventry, and 85 from London; containing 53 houses and 273 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.*

Fransham Great, a parish in the hundred of Launditch, Norfolk, 6 miles from Dereham; and 97 from London; containing 35 houses and 207 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 15*s.* 10*d.*

Fransham Little, a parish in the same hundred, ½ mile from the foregoing; containing 42 houses and 214 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.*

Frant, a parish in the hundred of Rotherfield, in Pevensey rape, Sussex, 2½ miles from Tunbridge, and 38 from London; containing 172 houses and 1090 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.*

Fraserburgh, a town in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, on the south point of Kinnaird head, 18 miles from Peterhead, and 41 from Aberdeen; containing 490 houses and 2215 inhabitants, being 1000 males and 1215 females, of whom 217 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture, principally of linen yarn. The houses are neatly built, many of them new and covered with state; the streets are spacious, crossing each other nearly at right angles. The tolbooth and town-house are nearly in the centre of the town. The cross is a fine stone structure of an hexagonal figure, 12 feet high, ornamented with the British arms and those of the Frasers of Philorth, standing in an area of about 500 feet square. This town has a small but excellent harbour for vessels of 300 tons, contiguous to which is a good roadsted, or bay, near 3 miles long. Some of the ships belonging to this harbour are employed in the Baltic trade. Adjoining the west end of the town is the small fishing village of Broadsea, containing about 160 inhabitants. At this end of the town also, is an old quadrangular tower three stories in height, being part of an intended college and university, founded by sir Alexander Fraser in 1590, but never carried further into effect. The government of this burgh is vested in lord Saltoun as superior, two bailiffs, a dean of guild, and council.

Frating, a parish in the hundred of Tendring, Essex, 4 miles from Colchester, and 55 from London; containing 26 houses, and 176 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 10*l.* united with Therington, in the patronage of St. John's college, Cambridge.

Freckenham, a parish in the hundred of Lachford, Suffolk, 2½ miles from Mildenhall, and 68 from London; containing 62 houses and 256 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 3*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.*

Freckleton, a township to the parish of Kirkham, in the hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, 2 miles from Kirkham, and 227 from London; containing 114 houses and 561 inhabitants.

Freebridge Lynn, the name of a hundred in Norfolk, on the north-western side of the county, lying on the shore of Lynn Wash, and bounded on the south by the river Lynn.

Freeby, a hamlet to the parish of Melton Mowbray, in the hundred of Framland, Leicester, 3½ miles from Melton Mowbray, and 105 from London; containing 21 houses and 134 inhabitants.

Freefolk, a hamlet to the parish of Whitchurch, in the hundred of Evingam, and division of Kingsclere, Hants, 1 mile from Whitchurch, and 55 from London; containing 8 houses and 54 inhabitants. In this hamlet is a paper-mill, where the finer kind of paper is manufactured, particularly that sort used by the Bank of England.

Freeford, a hamlet to the parish of Whittington, in the hundred of Offlow, Stafford, 1½ mile from Litchfield, and 122 from London; containing 6 houses and 35 inhabitants.

Freethorpe, a parish in the hundred of Blofield, Norfolk, 10 miles from Norwich, and 119 from London; containing 29 houses and 207 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 12*l.*

Freiston, a parish in the hundred of Skirbeck, and parts of Holland, Lincoln, 2 miles from Boston, and 118 from London; containing 146 houses and 734 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 16*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.* united with Butterwick.

Fremington, the name of a hundred in Devonshire, towards the western extremity of the county, lying between the two rivers that fall into Bideford or Barnstaple bay.

Fremington, a parish in the hundred of Fremington, Devon, 2½ miles from Barnstaple, and 195 from London; containing 164 houses and 875 inhabitants. This place was formerly much more considerable than at present, and sent members to parliament in the reign of Edward III. The living is a vicarage, value 20*l.* 0*s.* 5*d.*

Frenchmore, a hamlet to the parish of East Wellow, in the hundred of Thorngate, and division of Andover, Hants, 3 miles from Romney, and 76 from London; containing 11 houses and 52 inhabitants.

Frensham, a parish in the hundred of Farnham, Surry, on the borders of Hants, 4 miles from Farnham, and 41 from London; containing 84 houses and 543 inhabitants. It is a curacy. See Frinsham.

French Hay, a hamlet to the parish of Stapleton, in the hundred of Barton Regis, Gloucester, 4½ miles from Bristol, and 111 from London. Population included with that of Stapleton. It is a very neat and respectable place, containing a number of good houses, on the side of a common or down, many of which are built of freestone in an elegant style; besides which there is a Presbyterian meeting-house, with a tower and bell to it; and also a neat meeting-house belonging to the Quakers.

Frenze, a parish in the hundred of Diss, Norfolk, 1½ mile from Diss, and 92 from London; containing only 5 houses and 36 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 2*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Freshford, a parish in the hundred of Bath Forum, Somerset, 3 miles from Bath, and 110 from London; containing 124 houses and 624 inhabitants. Its fair is on the 16th September. The living is a rectory, value 7*l.* 7*s.* 8*d.*

Freshwater, a parish in West Medina liberty, in the Isle of Wight, Hants, at the bottom of a bay to which it gives name, 2 miles from Yarmouth, and 101 from London; containing 108 houses and 605 inhabitants. It is watered by the river Yar. The living is a rectory, value 9*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of St. John's college, Cambridge.

Freshwell, the name of a hundred in Essex, at the northern extremity of the county, lying between the hundreds of Uttlesford and Hinckford, the north stretching to Haverhill in Suffolk, and Linton in Cambridge.

Fressingfield, a parish in the hundred of Hoxne, Suffolk, 3½ miles from Harleston, and 93¼ from London; containing 116 houses and 1044 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 17*l.* 17*s.* 1*d.* united with Withersdale, in the patronage of Emanuel college, Cambridge; to whom it was given by archbishop Sancroft, a native of this place.

Freston, a parish united with Snape, in the hundred of Samford, Suffolk, 3½ miles from Ipswich, and 66 from London; containing 21 houses and 142 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.*

Frethorne, a parish in the hundred of Whitestone, Gloucester, 9 miles from Gloucester, and 112 from London; containing 28 houses and 117 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Frettenham, a parish united with Stanninghall, in the hundred of Taverham, Norfolk, 5 miles from Norwich, and 115 from London; containing 25 houses and 195 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.*

Freystrop, a parish in the hundred of Roose, Pembroke, Wales, near Haverford West, 260 miles from London; containing 103 houses and 445 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of the prince of Wales.

Friarmere, a hamlet to the parish of Rochdale, in the hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 1 mile from Rochdale, and 198 from London. Population included with that of Rochdale.

Frickley, a hamlet to the parish of Clayton, in Morley wapentake of the west riding of York, between Bradford and Hallifax. Population included with that of Clayton.

Fridaythorpe, a parish in Buckrose wapentake of the east riding of York, 18 miles from York, and 206 from London; containing 23 houses and 112 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Friendsbury, a parish in the hundred of Shamwell, and lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 1 mile from Chatham, and 28½ from London; containing 194 houses and 1066 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 3*s.* 11*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Rochester.

Friern Barnet, a parish in the hundred of Ossulton, Middlesex, 8½ miles from London; containing 82 houses and 423 inhabitants. It is a curacy. See Barnet.

Friesden, a hamlet to the parish of Nettleden, in the hundred of Cotslow, Bucks,

2 miles from Berkhampstead, and 28 from London. Population included with that of Nettleden.

FRILFORD, a hamlet to the parish of Marcham, in the hundred of Ock, Berks, 3½ miles from Abingdon, and 59 from London; containing 23 houses and 148 inhabitants.

FRILSHAM, a parish in the hundred of Faircross, Berks, 11 miles from Reading, and 48 from London; containing 42 houses and 187 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l*.

FRIMLEY, a hamlet to the parish of Ash, in the hundred of Godley and Chertsey, Surry, 13½ miles from Staines, and 30 from London; containing 83 houses and 532 inhabitants. It has a chapel of ease to the mother church, and a bridge over the Blackwater into Hampshire. Frimley heath adjoins that of Bagshot.

FRING, a hamlet to the parish of Docking, in the hundred of Smithden, Norfolk, 6 miles from Burnham, and 118 from London; containing 23 houses and 174 inhabitants. Its fairs are on the 10th May and 30th September.

FRINGFORD, a parish in the hundred of Ploughley, Oxford, 3½ miles from Bicester, and 58 from London; containing 51 houses and 252 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l*. 16*s*.

FRINSHAM, a parish in the hundred of Farnham, Surry, on the borders of Hants and Sussex, 3 miles from Farnham, and 41 from London; containing 34 houses and 543 inhabitants. Although the village of Frinsham consists of straggling houses, the parish is very extensive. The church is a low building, of ancient appearance, with a square tower at the west end. In the vestry-room, adjoining the north side of the chancel, hangs a cauldron, concerning which many legendary tales are told: antiquarians suppose it to have been brought from Waverley abbey. In the south wall of the chancel is a gothic niche with a piscina, near which, towards the angle of the wall, is a small square recess, probably a repository for the eucharist, preserved for the use of the sick. The baptismal font is a square sand stone, fixed on a central column, with smaller pillars at the angles. On the heath, about ½ mile from the church, is an extensive piece of water, called Frinsham Great Pond, which is a place of great resort for wild fowl in the winter months. The living is a curacy.

FRINSTEAD, a parish in the hundred of Eyhorne, and lathe of Aylesford, Kent; 9 miles from Maidstone, and 43 from London; containing 21 houses and 153 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l*. 11*s*. 8*d*.

FRINTON, a hamlet to the parish of Walton-le-Token, in the hundred of Tendring, Essex, 12 miles from Colchester, and 63 from London, on the sea-shore; containing 3 houses and 31 inhabitants. It was formerly a parish, but the chief part of its demesnes having been swallowed up by the encroachments of the sea, which have also nearly destroyed the mother church, it is now consolidated with Kirby and Thorpe.

FRISBY, a hamlet to the parish of Galby, in the hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 7 miles from Leicester, and 90 from London; containing 7 houses and 23 inhabitants.

FRISBY, a parish in the hundred of East Goscote, Leicester, 11 miles from Leicester, on the road to Melton Mowbray, and 108 from London; containing 78 houses and 386 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l*. 6*s*. 8*d*.

FRISKNEY, a parish in the hundred of Candleshoe, Lindsay division of Lincoln, 7 miles from Spilsby, and 123 from London; containing 115 houses and 691 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 15*l*. 6*s*. 8*d*.

FRISTELTON. See THISTLETON, Rutland.

FRISTHORPE, a parish in the hundred of Lawress, and Lindsay division, Lincoln, 8 miles from Lincoln, and 144 from London; containing 9 houses and 46 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 4*l*. 10*s*. in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Lincoln.

FRISTON, a parish in the hundred of Plomsgate, Suffolk, 3½ miles from Aldborough, and 91 from London; containing 40 houses and 299 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l*. united with Snape.

FRISTON, a parish in the hundred of Willingdon, and rape of Pevensey, Sussex, 3 miles from Seaford, and 65 from London; containing only 4 houses and 35 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l*. united with East Dean.

FRITH, a hamlet to the township of Wrenbury, in the parish of Acton, and hundred of Nantwich, Chester, 6 miles from Nantwich, and 160 from London. Population included with that of Wrenbury.

FRITTENDEN, a parish in the hundred of Cranbrook, and lathe of Scray, Kent, 10 miles from Maidstone, and 44½ from London; containing 97 houses and 551 inhabitants. Its fair is on the 8th September. The living is a rectory, value 15*l*. 18*s*. 9*d*.

FRITHELSTOCK, a parish in the hundred of Shebbear, Devon, 1 mile from Black Torrington, and 198 from London; containing 68 houses and 479 inhabitants. A priory of Augustine canons stood here. The living is a curacy.

FRITTON, a parish in the hundred of Depwade, Norfolk, 9 miles from Norwich, and 101 from London; containing 27 houses and 241 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l*.

FRITTON, a parish in the hundred of Mutford and Lothingland, Suffolk, on the river Waveney, 4 miles from Yarmouth, and 119¼ from London; containing 21 houses and 174 inhabitants. It has a bridge over the Waveney, called St. Olave's bridge. The living is a rectory, value 6*l*. 13*s*. 4*d*.

FRIZINGTON, a hamlet to the parish of Arlecdon, in the ward of Allerdale above Derwent, Cumberland, 2½ miles from Whitehaven, and 305 from London; containing 32 houses and 156 inhabitants.

FROCESTER, a parish in the hundred of Whitstone, Gloucester, 5 miles from Stroud, 11 from Gloucester, and 111 from London; containing 79 houses and 362 inhabitants. The parish church is very small, and divine service is performed in a chapel built on the earl of Warwick's ground, but the funeral service is performed in the church. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.*

Froddingham, a parish in Manley wapentake, and Lindsay division, Lincoln, 4 miles from Glandford Brigg, and 161 from London; containing 14 houses and 65 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 12*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.*

Frodesley, a parish in the hundred of Condover, Salop, 7¼ miles from Shrewsbury, and 155 from London; containing 29 houses and 158 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 14*s.*

Frodingham, a parish in Holderness wapentake of the east riding of York, 4 miles from Driffield, and 193 from London; containing 90 houses and 415 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.*

Frodsham, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Eddisbury, Chester, on the banks of the river Wever, 10 miles from Chester, and 193 from London; containing 272 houses and 1551 inhabitants. Its name is supposed to be derived from a ford over the river before the erection of its present stone bridge. The town consists of two main streets, spacious and well paved, intersecting each other at right angles about the middle of the town. The church stands on a lofty hill, at the extremity of one of these streets, and is a very handsome ancient building, repaired and beautified in 1790. This town has a well endowed free-school. The circumference of the parish is about 31 miles, bordering on the forest of De la Mere, and containing about 10 small villages, besides the market-town. The principal employment of the inhabitants is in the refining of salt, and in a small manufacture of cotton. A graving dock and yard have been lately erected here, for building and repairing of vessels. At the west end of the town formerly stood Maurice castle, the seat of the earls Rivers. On Beacon hill, above the town, was formerly placed a signal-beacon. This hill is now cut out into walks, having a gradual ascent to the summit, whence there is a charming prospect of the surrounding country, intersected by the rivers Mersey and Wever, and the navigable canal. The town is well supplied with water from several excellent springs, one of which discharges 1700 gallons in a minute, and is used as a cold bath. The market is on Thursday; and fairs on the 15th May and 21st August, for cattle. The living is a vicarage, value 23*l.* 13*s.* 11*d.* in the patronage of the dean and canons of Christ church, Oxford.

Frodswell, a hamlet to the parish of Colwich, in the hundred of Pirehill, Stafford, 4 miles from Uttoxeter, and 139 from London; containing 29 houses and 163 inhabitants.

Frogsatt, a hamlet to the parish of Bakewell, in the hundred of High Peake, Derby, 1 mile from Bakewell, and 152 from London; containing 19 houses and 103 inhabitants.

Frogmore, a hamlet to Windsor, Berks, lying between the Great and Little Park, 22½ miles from London; known as the elegant rural retreat of their majesties.

Frome, the name of a hundred in Somerset, on the eastern side of the county, and borders of Wilts.

Frome, a river that rises from several springs in the western parts of Dorset, whose united stream passes Dorchester, and falls into a bay of the English Channel, called Poolhaven, near Wareham.

Frome, or Frome Selwood, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Frome, Somerset, on a river of the same name, over which it has a stone bridge of five arches, 7 miles from Warminster, and 105 from London. Its name is derived from a considerable forest, called Selwood, which began here and extended near 15 miles. The town contains 1653 houses and 8748 inhabitants, being 4084 males and 4664 females, of whom 2282 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures, principally of broad cloths and kersey meres, and 406 in agriculture; beside an extensive trade in card-making for the wool-combers, carried on in the parish. On the banks of the river are likewise several mills for fulling, rolling of iron, &c. The waters of the Frome abound with excellent trout and eels; the river flows to the east side of Bath, and there falls into the Avon. The situation of this town is pleasant, being built upon several abrupt hills; it contains about 38 streets, which are mostly narrow and irregular; the houses are built of small rough stones, and covered with stone tiles dug on the spot. The church is extremely neat, and very spacious, being 150 feet long and 54 broad, comprising a nave, chancel, north and south aisles, four chapels, and a vestry-room, with a handsome altar-piece and a good-toned organ. From the tower, which is square and embattled, rises an octagonal spire, 120 feet high. Besides the church, here are five meeting-houses for various descriptions of Dissenters. Near the bridge stands a free school for 20 boys, and an almshouse for widows; the latter is a handsome building, and was erected by subscription in 1720. The neighbourhood of this town is embellished with many very elegant mansions. Frome was formerly governed by a bailiff, but at present the civil police is maintained by the neighbouring magistrates, and by constables chosen at the courts leet of the marquis of Bath and the earl of Cork and Orrery, who are lords of the manors. In this parish stood an ancient monastery, erected by Aldhelm the monk, bishop of Sherborn; also a priory and a nunnery. The ale of Frome has long been celebrated among the lovers of malt liquor; and at the sign of the Bell, in this town, a cask is kept, as a curiosity, which contains several hundred hogsheads. Besides the river Frome, this town has the advantage of a canal navigation from Stalbridge, in Dorset, with a branch to Wells and Bradford. The market is on Wednesday, for cattle, pigs, corn, &c.; the fairs on the festivals of St. Matthias and St. Catherine, for cattle, pigs, provisions, and pedlary. The living is a vicarage, value 22*l.* in the patronage of the marquis of Bath.—Frome steeple, Lat. 51° 13′ 47″. Lon. 2° 18′ 41″ W.

Frome St. Quintin's, a parish in the hundred of Tollesford, and division of Dorchester, Dorset, 3 miles from Cerne Abbas, and 123 from London; containing 23 houses and 132 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 15*l.* 7*s.* 1*d.* in the patronage of the crown, with Eversholt chapel annexed.

Frome Vaugh Church, a parish in the same hundred and division with the preceding, on the river Frome, 7 miles from Dorchester, and 126 from London; containing 19 houses and 103 inhabitants. The church is a low ancient building. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 11*s.* united with Batcombe.

Frome Canons. See Canons Frome, Herefordshire.

Froome, a river of Herefordshire, which falls into the Lug near Hereford.

Froome, a river of Gloucestershire, which falls into the Severn below Berkeley. There is also another river of this name, which falls into the Avon at Bristol, after passing Frome.

Frostendon, a parish in the hundred of Blything, Suffolk, 4 miles from Southwold, and 108 from London; containing 36 houses and 266 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.*

Frosterley, a hamlet to the parish of Stanhope, in Darlington ward, Durham, 5 miles from Bishop Auckland, and 250 from London. Population returned with that of Newlandside.

Frowlesworth, a parish in the hundred of Guthlaxton, Leicester, 4½ miles from Lutterworth, and 88 from London; containing 74 houses and 297 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 10*s.*

Froxfield, a township to the parish of East Meon, in the hundred of East Meon, and division of Alton, Hants, 3 miles from Peterfield, and 58 from London; containing 67 houses and 437 inhabitants.

Froxfield, a parish in the hundred of Kinwardstone, Wilts, 2 miles from Hungerford, and 67 from London; containing 128 houses and 492 inhabitants. In this parish is a handsome and well endowed almshouse, founded by Sarah, duchess dowager of Somerset, for the maintenance of 30 poor widows not possessing an income of 20*l.* per annum; one half of the number must be widows of clergymen, and the rest are those of laymen. The building is of a quadrangular form, with an open court before it, and contains 30 rooms on the ground floor, with as many chambers above; each occupier has a bed in a garden belonging to the establishment. In the midst of the quadrangle is a convenient chapel, the chaplain of which, beside his salary of 30*l.* per annum, is presented, on the first vacancy after his appointment, with the rectory of Kemish, in the same county, according to the duchess's will. In addition to the original foundation there has been, within these last 20 years, additional apartments erected for 20 more widows, who are supported out of the accumulated profits of the estates and leases left for the maintenance of this charity. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 16*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the dean and canons of Windsor.

Froyle, a parish in the hundred and division of Alton, Hants, 3 miles from Alton, and 44 from London; containing 123 houses and 744 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 12*s.* 3*d.*

Frustfield, the name of a hundred in Wilts, being the south-eastern point of the county bordering on Hants.

Fryars Place, a small hamlet to the parish of Acton, in the hundred of Ossulton, Middlesex, 1 mile from Acton, and 6 from London, on the road to the Wells, and on the borders of a large common, through which the Paddington canal runs. This hamlet is a rural and sequestered spot, and contains several gentlemen's cottages. The name is derived from an ancient friary which formerly stood in the vicinity.

Fryerning, a parish in the hundred of Chelmsford, Essex, 6 miles from Chelmsford, and 23 from London; containing 76 houses and 646 inhabitants. This parish lies to the left of Ingatestone, part of the houses of which are within its boundaries. The church has a brick tower at the west end, with five bells. The living is a rectory, called Ginge Hospital, value 9*l.* in the patronage of Wadham college, Oxford.

Fryton, a hamlet to the parish of Hovingham, in Rydal division of the north riding of York, 5 miles from New Malton, and 220 from London; containing 8 houses and 72 inhabitants.

Fuggleston, or Fulston, a parish in the hundred of Branch and Dole, Wilts, 2¾ miles from Salisbury, and 83 from London; containing 111 houses and 590 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 24*l.* united with Bemerton.

Fulbeck, a parish in the hundred of Loveden, and parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 9 miles from Grantham, and 120 from London; containing 79 houses and 397 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 20*l.* 15*s.* 7*d.*

Fulbrook, a hamlet to the parish of Burford, in the hundred of Chadlington, Oxford, 1 mile from Burford, 10 from Chipping Norton, and 74 from London; containing 63 houses and 320 inhabitants.

Fulbrook, a hamlet to the parish of Shirbourn, in the hundred of Barlichway, Warwick, 3½ miles from Stratford-on-Avon, and 95 from London; containing 8 houses and 81 inhabitants.

Fulbrooke, a hamlet to the parish of Quainton, in the hundred of Ashendon, Bucks, 7 miles from Aylesbury, and 46 from London. Population returned included with that of Hogshaw.

Fulbrooke, a small river of Cheshire, which empties itself into the river Wheelock.

Fulburn, or Fullbourne, a parish in the hundred of Flendish, Cambridge, 4 miles from Cambridge, and 55 from London; containing 129 houses and 702 inhabitants. This parish is divided into Great and Little Fulburn, with two churches in one churchyard, and a small almshouse. The living is a rectory, value 25*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of St. John's college, Cambridge.

Fulford, a hamlet to the parish of Dunsford, Wonsford, Devon, 8½ miles from Exeter, and 64 from London. The Fulford family has a beautiful mansion, with extensive park and grounds, in this neighbourhood, which was a garrison during the civil war.

Fulford, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Stone, in the hundred of Pirehill, Stafford, 4½ miles from Stone, and 145 from London. Population included with that of Stone. Its stone quarries are in great estimation.

Fulford, a township to the parish of St. Olave's, in the city of York, in Ouze and Derwent wapentake of the east riding of York, near the river Ouse, 200 miles from London; containing 93 houses and 642 inhabitants.

Fulham, a parish in the hundred of Ossulton, Middlesex, on the banks of the Thames, 4 miles from London; containing 724 houses and 4428 inhabitants, being 2108 males and 2320 females, of whom 319 were returned as being employed in various trades. Most of the houses in this parish are neat; many indeed are elegant, it being inhabited chiefly by persons connected with the metropolis, as a retreat for their families. Here is a wooden bridge over the Thames, erected in 1729, at the expence of 23,975*l.* the interest of which is defrayed by a toll.—The bishop of London has a palace in this parish, on the banks of the river; but it contains little that is worthy of remark, except the gardens, which were much improved by bishop Grindall, a great promoter of botany, and who first imported the tamarisk tree. Succeeding bishops have also greatly contributed to its choice stock of exotic plants and forest trees. The church is a very plain edifice. The rectory is a sinecure, value 26*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of London; the vicarage is in the patronage of the rector.

Fulletby, a parish in the hundred of Hill, and Lindsay division, Lincoln, 2¼ miles from Horncastle, and 141 from London; containing 35 houses and 190 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 21*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.*

Fulwood, a hamlet to the parish of Lancaster, in the hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, between Garstang and Lancaster, 230 miles from London; containing 70 houses and 396 inhabitants.

Fulmer, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Datchet, in the hundred of Stoke, Bucks, 4 miles from Uxbridge, and 19 from London; containing 54 houses and 292 inhabitants.

Fulmer. See Foulmire, Cambridge.

Fulmodeston, a parish in the hundred of Gallow, Norfolk, 3 miles from Fakenham, and 107 from London; containing 58 houses and 276 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 10*l.* united with Croxton, in the patronage of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge.

Fulneck, a settlement of the Moravian brethren, at a small distance from the high road from Leeds to Bradford, in Morley wapentake of the west riding of York, 4½ miles from Leeds, and 196 from London. This settlement is pleasantly situated on the slope of a rising ground, and consists principally of two long streets, well paved with a chapel and burial-ground. The buildings are simple, but remarkably neat. On one side are the habitations for single men, and on the other those for single women. About 400 persons reside in the place. The men are employed in various branches of the clothing trade, and in making spinning-wheels; whilst the women are occupied in spinning and embroidery. The name of this spot was originally Lamb's hill, but it was called Fulneck by its present inhabitants, after their native place in Moravia. The founder of this sect was count Zinzendorf.—The population of Fulneck declines considerably; for many of those who at first, for the sake of novelty, joined the settlers, have withdrawn themselves; and the separation of the sexes, according to the principles of their founder, together with their peculiar management of trade, does not encourage or contribute either to the increase of population or manufacture.

Fulnetby, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Rand, in the hundred of Wraggoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 2 miles from Wragby, and 57 from London. Population included with that of Rand.

Fulshaw, a hamlet to the parish of Wilmslow, in the hundred of Macclesfield, Chester, 11 miles from Congleton, and 170 from London; containing 33 houses and 214 inhabitants.

Fulstow, a parish in the hundred of Bradley Haverstoe, in Lindsay division, Lincoln, 9 miles from Louth, and 161 from London; containing 82 houses and 362 inhabitants.

Fulstone. See Fuggleston, Wilts.

Fulsutton, a parish in the division of

Beacon, Wilton, and wapentake of Harthill, in the east riding of York, 6 miles from Pocklington, and 194 from London; containing 21 houses and 100 inhabitants.

Fulwell, a hamlet to the parish of Monkwearmouth, in Chester ward, Durham, on the north side of the river Weare, 2 miles from Sunderland, and 277 from London; containing 12 houses and 85 inhabitants.

Fundenhall, a parish in the hundred of Depwade, Norfolk, 9 miles from Norwich, and 100 from London; containing 37 houses and 233 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Funtington, a parish in the hundred of Bosham, in the rape of Chichester, Sussex, 4 miles from Chichester, and 62 from London; containing 137 houses and 681 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Furbeck, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Laughton, in Strafforth and Tickhill wapentake of the west riding of York, 7 miles from Worksop, and 153 from London. Population included with that of Loughton.

Furcott, a hamlet to the parish of Ardley, in the hundred of Ploughby, Oxford, 3 miles from Bicester, and 58 from London. Population included with that of Ardley.

Furness, a peninsula or neck of land, as its name implies, situated near Ulverstone, Lancaster, defended on the north and south by dangerous quick sands, on the west by St. George's Channel, and on the east by the Furness fells, which were formerly clothed with woods. The first settlers on this spot were called Sistantii or Setantii, who lived free and unmolested from the devastation of war till the beginning of the Christian era, when they were overpowered by the Brigantes, with whom they became united as one people. They were afterwards subjected to the Roman dominion by Agricola. A Roman road is still visible at a place called Redlane, so named from the ground being coloured with the ore, which is carried this way towards Conishead bank for exportation.—The district of Furness is surrounded with beacons. The liberty contains, besides villages, four market-towns, viz. Cartmel, Dalton, Ulverstone, and Hawkshead. An abbey was founded here in 1127; and here also stands Broughton tower, which commands an extensive prospect down the river Dudden. The tower is now in a great part hid by the modern house, which encloses it on three sides, but the north-east front remains in its ancient form.

Furtho, a parish in the hundred of Cleby, Northampton, 1¼ mile from Stony Stratford, and 53 from London; now containing only 2 houses and 12 inhabitants. It is a rectory, belonging to Jesus college, Oxford.

Fyfield, a parish in the hundred of Ock, Berks, 5½ miles from Abingdon, and 61 from London; containing 67 houses and 315 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 11*l.* 12*s.* 11*d.*

Fylingdale, a township and chapelry to the parish of Whitby, in Whitby Strand liberty of the north riding of York, 4 miles from Whitby, and 242 from London; containing 360 houses and 1568 inhabitants, of whom 172 were returned as being employed in various trades, &c.

Fyne Loch, an extensive lake or arm of the sea in Argyleshire, Scotland, extending from the frith of Clyde, between the isles of Bute and Arran. It is about 32 miles long, and in some places 12 broad, but its average breadth is about 4 miles. At the town of Inverary it forms a noble bay of an irregular circle of 12 or 14 miles in circumference, beautifully surrounded with mountains. This loch has long been noted for the superior excellence of its herrings. The fishery begins about July, and finishes about January. It is supposed to produce annually about 20,000 barrels.

Fyvie, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, 12 miles from Inverary, and 35 from Aberdeen; containing 550 houses and 2891 inhabitants, of whom 138 were returned as being employed in various trades. The parish is about 13 miles long and 8 miles broad. It is watered by the small river Ythan, which abounds with trout. Fyvie castle is a large and elegant seat. Near the church, on the banks of the Ythan, are the ruins of a priory, supposed to have been founded by Fergus earl of Buchan, in 1179.

Gaddesdon Great, a parish in the hundred of Dacorum, Herts, 5 miles from Berkhampstead, and 26 from London; containing 149 houses and 794 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.*

Gaddesdon Little, a parish in the same hundred with the foregoing, from which it is 1¼ mile distant; containing 82 houses and 388 inhabitants. In this parish is a beautiful mansion and extensive park, called Ash-bridge, formerly a royal palace, where Edward I. held a parliament: it is now the seat of the duke of Bridgewater. Gaddesdon is celebrated for being the birth-place of John de Gaddesdon, who flourished in the 14th century, and is said to have been the first Englishman who was a court physician. The living is a rectory, value 11*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the duke of Bridgewater.

GADSBY, or GADDSBEY, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Rothby, in the hundred of East Goscote, Leicester, 7 miles from Leicester, and 104 from London; containing 55 houses and 263 inhabitants.

GADSHILL, in the county of Kent, 2½ miles from Rochester, and 26½ from London. This place has been rendered famous by Shakspeare making it the scene of the frolics of Henry V. when prince of Wales, with his companion Falstaff. On the spot is a public-house, with a sign bearing the prince's head on one side, and the fat knight and his companion on the other.

GAGINWELL, a hamlet to the parish of Enstone, in the hundred of Chadlington, Oxford, 5½ miles from Woodstock, and 68 from London. Population included with that of Enstone.

GAINFORD, a parish in Darlington ward, Durham, on the banks of the river Tees, 7 miles from Darlington, and 250 from London; containing 97 houses and 445 inhabitants. It was anciently a very extensive manor, and is still the mother church of Bernard castle, from which it is distant 8½ miles. The living is a vicarage, value 39*l.* 6*s.* in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge.

GAINSBOROUGH, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Corringham, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 18 miles from Lincoln, and 148 from London; containing 1064 houses and 4506 inhabitants, being 2095 males and 2410 females, of whom 585 were returned as being employed in trade, &c.—The town is pleasantly situated on the east bank of the Trent, which separates it from Nottinghamshire, and brings vessels of a tolerable size with the tide up to the town, about 40 miles from the Humber. Over the river here is a handsome stone bridge, erected in 1787. The tide rises here in a very rapid manner, and produces that striking phenomenon called the Eagre or Hygre. The town is clean, well paved and lighted. The church, which is a very neat edifice, has been lately rebuilt at the expence of the inhabitants. The pulpit-cloth and cushions are of crimson brocade velvet, trimmed with gold; the materials of which they are made were taken at the battle of Dettingen, in 1743. There are likewise several meeting-houses for sects of various denominations, and several good charity schools.—Gainsborough gives title of earl to the Noel family. Courts leet and baron are held here, and also a court for the recovery of small debts. At the north-west end of the town stands an old gothic mansion, called Old hall, spoken of as the residence of John of Gaunt, earl of Lincoln; and the remains of a large tower, with the moats and fortifications, are still visible. When the Danes invaded England, they brought their ships close up to this town; and here Sweyn their king was assassinated whilst he was revelling with his companions. In 868, Alfred the Great celebrated his nuptials with Ethelfrid, daughter of the alderman of the Ganii, at this place. It suffered much during the civil wars between Charles I. and the parliament; and lately, in paving the streets, the workmen discovered many bodies of persons, who appeared to have been promiscuously buried as if they had fallen in battle. Five miles to the south-east are vestiges of the city of Sidnacester, the see of Eadulfus, and eight other bishops, in the 7th or 8th century, before it was joined to Dorchester and Lincoln. In the North Mark horse-races are annually held. Gainsborough market is on Tuesday, and its fairs and marts on the Tuesday and Wednesday in Easter week, and the first Tuesday and Wednesday after the 20th October, which last nine days each. The living is a vicarage, value 22*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Lincoln.

GAINLOCK, a parish in the shire of Ross, Scotland, 50 miles from Inverness; containing 491 houses and 1437 inhabitants. In this parish lies Loch Mare, a large fresh-water lake, containing many beautiful islands; it is formed by the union of two large rivers. The coast is much frequented for the cod and herring fishery.

GALA, a river which rises in the parish of Heriot, in the shire of Mid-Lothian, Scotland, and after passing by Galashiels falls into the Tweed.

GALASHIELS, a parish of Scotland, in the district of Tweedale, which being divided by the river Tweed, is partly in the county of Roxburgh, and partly in that of Selkirk, 4 miles from Melrose, and 8 from Peebles; containing 167 houses and 840 inhabitants, most of whom are employed in the manufacture of woollen cloths, particularly the coarsest sort, called Galashiels greys. Machinery for spinning the wool has lately been introduced. Besides the Tweed, this parish is watered by the Etterick and Gala waters, the village being situated on the banks of the latter. The point of Meghill is 1480 feet above the level of the sea.

GALATON, a hamlet in the parish of Dysart, Fifeshire, Scotland, 2 miles from Dysart, and 16 from Cupar; containing about 430 inhabitants, chiefly employed in making nails and other small iron work.

GALBY, a parish in the hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 7 miles from Leicester, and 90 from London; containing 19 houses and 81 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 18*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*

Galey, a river of Ireland, which rises in Limerick, and discharges itself into the Feal, in the county of Kerry.

Galleon Point, the east point of Castle-haven harbour in the county of Cork and province of Munster, Ireland.

Galley Head, a promontory on the coast of Cork, on the extremity of which is Dundede castle.

Gallow, the name of a hundred in Norfolk, in the north-western part of the county, lying around Fakenham.

Galloway, a district of Scotland, comprehending the stewardry of Kirkcudbright and the county of Wigton, supposed to have been peopled originally by the ancient Irish, and formerly governed by its own laws and princes.

Galloway, the Mull of, a rocky promontory extending several miles into the sea, and excavated by several caverns, into which, where the tide enters with a strong south wind, it causes a noise like thunder. The rocks of this coast are extremely dangerous.

Galloway New, a royal burgh in the parish of Glens, and stewardry of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, in a delightful vale called Glenkins, from the river Ken, which waters it, 18 miles from Newton Douglas, and 78 from Edinburgh; containing, Kells included, 170 houses and 778 inhabitants. The buildings are neat and regular. It possesses little, if any trade: however, from its centrical situation, it has a good market, chiefly for oatmeal and barley. Galloway was made a royal borough by Charles I. when it had scarcely 20 houses. In this neighbourhood stands Kenmure castle, the seat of the Gordons of Kenmure, who are proprietors of the town.

Gallowhill, a hamlet to the parish of Bolam, in Morpeth ward, Northumberland, 15 miles from Newcastle, and 291 from London; containing 7 houses and 43 inhabitants.

Galston, a parish in the shire of Ayr, Scotland, 6 miles from Irvine, and 24 from Hamilton; containing 332 houses and 2139 inhabitants, of whom 890 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture; but the village of Galston contains about 600 inhabitants, most of whom are silk weavers. The parish is bounded on the north by the river Irvine, and contains two considerable lakes. The land abounds with excellent coal, iron ore, and several freestone quarries. On the banks of the Irvine are several mills, one of which, called Patie's, has been celebrated by the poet Ramsay in the song of "The Lass of Patie's Mill." The remains of several fortifications and druidical temples are to be met with in this parish, where are likewise two well frequented fairs, held in July and December.

Galway, a county of Ireland, in the province of Connaught, bounded on the north by the counties of Mayo and Roscommon; on the east by Roscommon, King's county, and Tipperary; on the south by Clare and Galway Bay; and on the west by the Atlantic Ocean; being about 82 miles long, and 42 broad; and containing 116 parishes, 28 churches, about 28,242 houses, and 142,000 inhabitants. The greater part of this county is very fertile, the soil being a warm limestone, and extremely productive: toward the north and west, however, the soil is very coarse, and the country very thinly inhabited. The western coast contains many well sheltered harbours, and is mostly bordered with green islands and rugged rocks.

Galway, the county town, is pleasantly and advantageously situated for foreign trade, on the bay of Galway, in the Atlantic Ocean. The northern side is foul and dangerous for vessels, but on the south it is very safe; yet none but vessels of small burthen can come up to the town. This harbour is defended by a strong fort. The town is surrounded with strong walls, and contains several large and strait streets; the houses are generally well built of stone. It has but one parish church, which is a large and beautiful gothic structure; but it has an exchange, a hospital, a charter-house, and an extensive barrack for foot soldiers. It is governed by a mayor, sheriffs, and recorder, and sends one member to the imperial parliament. This was one of the strongest towns in the kingdom, and held out a considerable time against general Ginkle, who invested and took it after the battle of Aughrim, since which time the bastions have been suffered to go to decay. Several religious houses were in this neighbourhood, but the ruins were entirely demolished in 1652, to prevent Cromwell from turning them into fortifications. The salmon and herring fishery is carried on in Galway with great spirit, and employs several hundred boats; it has also a considerable trade in making and exporting kelp, and of late years the linen manufactures have been considerably improved. The town lies 49 miles west-south-west of Athlone, and 108 south-west of Dublin. Lat. 53° 10'. Lon. 9° 50' W. — Beaufort's Memoir, Ledwich's Antiquities, &c.

Gamblesby, a hamlet to the parish of Addingham, and Leath ward, Cumberland, 3 miles from Kirkoswald, and 293 from London; containing 45 houses and 222 inhabitants.

Gamlingay, a parish in the hundred of Longstow, Cambridge, 5 miles from Biggleswade, and 50 from London; containing 146 houses and 846 inhabitants. — In this parish are an ancient hospital and a charity school. The rectory, value 15*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.* is in the patronage of Merton college, Oxford; and the vicarage, value 5*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.

Galton, a hamlet to the parish of Ower Moine, in the hundred of Winfrith, division of Blandford, Dorset, 10 miles from Wareham, and 120 from London. Population included with that of Ower Moine.

GALTRES FOREST, 3½ miles from Sheriffs Hutton, in Bulmer wapentake of the north riding of York. It was formerly an extent of moors, bogs, and trees, approaching the very gates of the city of York; but is now cleared and drained, and several considerable villages built on it. Beside timber, this forest abounds in coal. In ancient times Galtres was famous for an annual horse-race, when the prize for the winning horse was a little golden bell.

GAMERSHALL, a hamlet to the parish of Birstall, in Morley wapentake of the west riding of York, 6½ miles from Huddersfield, and 194 from London. It is a very small place, but the clothiers have erected a large brick building for a cloth-maker, in the hope of bringing the merchants nearer their own houses.

GAMRIE, a parish in the shire of Banff, Scotland, on the sea-coast, 3 miles from Banff, and 17 from Fraserburgh; containing 667 houses and 3052 inhabitants, being 1377 males and 1675 females, of whom 809 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures. The shore presents a tremendous front of rocks, some of them 300 feet in perpendicular height. The parish has several small creeks or bays, which form good harbours, particularly those at the town of Macduff and the village of Gardenston. The river Dovern waters the parish, and presents a good salmon fishery. The chief employment of the inhabitants of the village, on the coast, is in catching and curing a variety of fish, which are exported from the frith of Forth. Near Macduff is the well of Farlair, a mineral spring, which is much esteemed.

GAMSTON, a parish in the hundred of Basset Law, Notts, 3¼ miles from Retford, and 142 from London; containing 56 houses and 410 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 16*s.* 5*d.* in the patronage of the crown.

GAMSTON, a hamlet to the parish of West Bridgeford, in the hundred of Bingham, Notts, on the Grantham canal, 3 miles from Nottingham, and 121 from London; containing 18 houses and 97 inhabitants.

GANEREW, a parish in the hundred of Greytree, Hereford, 3 miles from Monmouth, and 128 from London; containing 17 houses and 88 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

GANFIELD, the name of a hundred in Berks, at the north-western extremity of the county, bordering on Oxfordshire, lying between the hundreds of Faringdon and Ock.

GANSTEAD, a hamlet to the parish of Swine, in Holderness wapentake of the east riding of York, near Swine, 4 miles from Hull; containing 9 houses and 58 inhabitants.

GANTHORPE, a hamlet to the parish of Teddington, in Bulmer wapentake of the north riding of York, 14 miles from York, and 213 from London; containing 19 houses and 101 inhabitants.

GANTON, or GANTON DALE, so called from its situation, a parish in Dickering lythe, east riding of York, on the road to Scarborough, 204 miles from London; containing 46 houses and 223 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*

GARBOLDISHAM, a parish in the hundred of Guiltcross, Norfolk, on the river Wavency, 3 miles from East Harling, and 90 from London; containing 82 houses and 577 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 19*l.* 16*s.*

GARDENSTONE, a small town in the parish of Gamrie, in the shire of Banff, Scotland, possessing a tolerable harbour, to which belongs a number of fishing-boats. The town contains about 300 inhabitants.

GARDINER'S STREET, a hamlet to the parish of Herstmonceaux, in the hundred of Foxearle, and rape of Hastings, Sussex, 4 miles from Hailsham, and 53 from London. Population included with that of Herstmonceaux.

GARDON, a parish in the wapentake of Holderness, east riding of York, 12 miles from Hull, and 188 from London; containing 16 houses and 105 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* in the patronage of the crown.

GARFORD, a tything to the parish of Marcham, in the hundred of Ock, Berks, 3 miles from Abingdon, and 58 from London; containing 37 houses and 183 inhabitants.

GARFORTH, a parish in Skyrack wapentake of the west riding of York, 7 miles from Leeds, and 186 from London; containing 44 houses and 254 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 17*s.* 8*d.*

GARGRAVE, a parish in Staincliffe wapentake, west riding of York, 4¼ miles from Skipton, and 221¾ from London; containing 117 houses and 728 inhabitants. It is pleasantly divided by the windings of the river Aire, which abounds with good fish. This place is much frequented during the sporting season, and has a cotton manufactory established on the banks of the Leeds canal, which passes here. A court for the recovery of small debts is held here under the duke of Devonshire. The fair is on the 11th December. The living is a vicarage, value 12*l.* 13*s.* 11*d.*

GARGUNNOCK, a parish in the shire of Stirling, Scotland, on the south bank of the river Forth, 6 miles from Stirling, and 36 from Edinburgh; containing 176 houses and 954 inhabitants. This village is clean and neat, and consists mostly of thatched cottages, standing on the side of a hill, which commands a most beautiful prospect of the winding of the Forth. The village of Gargunnock contains about one half the inhabitants of the parish.

GARIOCH, a district of Aberdeenshire, Scotland. It is remarkably fertile, and the air so salubrious that it has long been famed as a retreat for the valetudinarian. It gives name to a presbytery, which holds its seat at the chapel of Garioch.

GARLECLOUGH, a river in the county of Waterford, and province of Munster, Ireland.

Garliesᴛon, a considerable sea-port in the shire of Wigton, Scotland, 6 miles from Wigton, and 12 from Newton Douglas; containing 97 houses and 470 inhabitants. This is a newly erected port, and is daily on the increase, having been first established by lord Garlies, now earl of Galloway. It stands at the head of a good bay, in the form of a crescent, and is an advantageous fishing station.

Garmaylᴇ Pool, in the county of Down, and province of Ulster, Ireland, an harbour for ships trading to Belfast, preferred on account of the shallowness of the water at Belfast bridge.

Garmondsway Moor, a hamlet to the parish of Bishop Middleham, in Stockton ward, Durham, 5 miles from Durham, and 255 from London; containing 5 houses and 28 inhabitants. Canute the Dane went barefooted from this place to Durham, to visit St. Cuthbert's tomb.

Garmouᴛh, a burgh of barony in the shire of Murray, Scotland, at the mouth of the river Spey, 4 miles from Fochaber, and 8 from Elgin; containing 304 houses and 1256 inhabitants. The houses are mostly built of clay; but as the streets are regular, they have a neat appearance. In the harbour of this burgh a number of vessels are built from the timber produced in the forests of Strathspey and Badenoch; and a number of sloops are employed during the season in conveying salmon to the London market. Two sawmills have been erected on the spot for sawing timber.

Garnock, a river of Ayrshire, Scotland, which rises at the Misty Law hill, and falls into the sea near Irwin.

Garraway, a parish in the hundred of Wormelow, Hereford, on the banks of the Munnow, 10 miles from Monmouth, and 141 from London; containing 92 houses and 450 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Garner, a river of Herefordshire, which falls into the Wye a little above Whitchurch.

Garran, a river of Herefordshire, which falls into the Wye at Langarran.

Garrenden, an extra-parochial district in the hundred of West Goscote, Leicester, near Loughborough, 106 miles from London; containing 4 houses and 43 inhabitants.

Garrett, a hamlet to the parish of Wandsworth, Surry, from which it is distant ½ a mile. It is much famed for its mock election on the recurrence of a new parliament, which the facetious Foote made the subject of a popular farce, called the Mayor of Garret, first acted in 1763, in which several public characters of the day were strongly caricatured.

Garrigill, a township and chapelry to the parish of Aldston Moor, in Leath ward, Cumberland, 9 miles from Hexham, and 280 from London; containing 77 houses and 1120 inhabitants.

Garrison, a town of the county of Fermanagh, in the province of Ulster, Ireland, 10 miles south-east of Ballyshannon.

Garriston, a hamlet to the parish of Hauxwell, in Hang West wapentake of the north riding of York, 3 miles from Leyburn, and 237 from London; containing 12 houses and 63 inhabitants.

Garry, a lake of Perthshire, Scotland, which falls into a river of the same name, and after receiving the waters of several smaller streams, joins the Tay near Logierat. It has several steep water-falls in its course.

Garry, a lake and river of Invernesshire, Scotland, which gives name to the district of Glengarry.

Garsby, a hamlet to the parish of Brough, in the hundred of Wraggoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 5 miles from Louth, and 513 from London. Population included with that of Brough.

Garsdale, a township and chapelry to the parish of Sedbergh, in the wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, west riding of York, 3 miles from Sedberg, and 272 from London; containing 118 houses and 571 inhabitants.

Garsdon, a parish in the hundred of Malmsbury, Wilts, 2½ miles from Malmsbury, and 95 from London; containing 24 houses and 143 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.* united with Lea.

Garsington, a parish in the hundred of Bullington, Oxford, 4½ miles from Oxford, and 50 from London; containing 107 houses and 493 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 19*s.* 9*d.*

Garstang, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, 11 miles from Lancaster, and 228 from London; containing 62 houses and 731 inhabitants. The town, which is very irregular and meanly built, was incorporated as a borough town by Charles II. The church is a stately gothic structure. On the north-east side of the town are the ruins of Greenhaugh castle, built by Stanley, first earl of Derby, of which only one tower now remains. Within a small distance of the town runs the river Wier, which supplies the inhabitants with excellent water, and abounds with trout, chub, gudgeons, &c. There is no manufactory immediately in the town, but there are several considerable cotton-works in the adjacent townships within the limits of the parish. The market is on Thursday; and the fairs on Holy-Thursday for cattle and hardware; on the 21st November and two following days, for cattle, wool, toys, &c.; and on the 21st November (also for three days) for cattle, horses, woollen cloths, pedlary, &c. Garstang has communication with the rivers Mersey, Dee, Ribble, Ouse, Trent, Derwent, Severn, Humber, Thames, and Avon, by means of navigable canals. The living is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

Garston, a parish in the hundred of Wan-

tage, Berks, 5 miles from Hungerford, and 62 from London; containing 111 houses and 609 inhabitants.

GARSTON, a hamlet to the parish of Watford, Herts, 5¼ miles from St. Albans.

GARSTON, a township and chapelry to the parish of Childwall, in the hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, on the banks of the Mersey, 4½ miles from Liverpool, and 200 from London; containing 80 houses and 458 inhabitants.

GARTH, a parish in the hundred of Caerphilly, Glamorgan, Wales, 6 miles from Caerphilly, and 164 from London; containing 208 houses and 1077 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

GARTHBERIO, a parish in the hundred of Mathra'el, Montgomery, Wales, 8½ miles from Lanvair, and 193 from London; containing 55 houses and 320 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 6*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

GARTHBRENGY, a parish in the hundred of Merthir, Brecon, Wales, 4 miles from Brecon, and 171 from London; containing 20 houses and 78 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

GARTHELY, a parish in the hundred of Penarth, Cardigan, Wales, 3 miles from Tregaron, and 207 from London; containing 45 houses and 227 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

GARTHELVIN, a hamlet united with Firbont, in the hundred of Isdulas, Denbighshire, Wales, near Llanrwst, 226 miles from London; containing 20 houses and 150 inhabitants.

GARTHORPE, a parish in the hundred of Framland, Leicester, 4 miles from Melton Mowbray, and 100 from London; containing 26 houses and 134 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.*

GARTHORPE, a hamlet to the parish of Luddington, and manor of Crowle, on the banks of the Dun, 1½ mile from Burton-on-Stather, and 164 from London; containing 83 houses and 388 inhabitants.

GARTLY, a parish in the shire of Banff, Scotland, in the district of Strathbogie, 4 miles from Huntly, and 12 from Inverarie; containing 111 houses and 514 inhabitants. It is watered by the river Bogie and many smaller streams, by which the valleys are rendered extremely fertile. An excellent slate of a beautiful blue colour is dug out of the quarries in this parish. Here is an ancient ruin, called the Place of Gartly.

GARTON, a parish in Dickering lythe, east riding of York, 3 miles from Driffield, and 200 from London; containing 55 houses and 288 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the crown.

GARTREE, the name of a hundred in Leicestershire, on the south-eastern side of the county, divided from Northamptonshire by the river Welland.

GARTREE, the name of a hundred in the division of Lindsay, Lincolnshire, in the centre of the county, and bounded on the west by the river Witham.

GARVALD, a parish united with Baro, in the shire of Haddington, Scotland, situated among the Lammermuir hills; containing 37 houses and 749 inhabitants, of whom about 200 dwell in the village of Garvald, on the banks of the Hope. In the neighbourhood are several elegant mansions, of which Nunraw, belonging to the marquis of Tweedale, the ancient remains of a nunnery, the ruins of White castle, and the castle of Yester, are truly magnificent.

GARVESTON, a parish in the hundred of Midford, Norfolk, 4 miles from East Dereham, and 97 from London; containing 42 houses and 247 inhabitants.

GARVIE, a considerable river of the shire of Ross, Scotland, which falls into the Connon several miles before it discharges itself into the Cromarty frith.

GARVOCK, a parish in Kincardineshire, Scotland, 8 miles from Montrose, and 12 from Stonehaven; containing 91 houses and 468 inhabitants. The greater part of the parish is covered with heath and broom. Near the church a very extensive annual fair, dedicated to St. James, is held in August.

GASK, a parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, 5 miles from Crieff, and 8 from Perth; containing 139 houses and 769 inhabitants. A Roman causeway runs through the middle of the parish.

GASPER, a township situated in the hundred of Ferris Norton, Somerset, belonging to the parish of Stourton, Wilts, 3 miles from Wincanton, and 107 from London; containing 56 houses and 343 inhabitants.

GASTHORPE, a parish united with Riddlesworth, in the hundred of Gilteross, Norfolk, on the banks of the Waveney, 2½ miles from Haring, and 91 from London; containing 8 houses and 81 inhabitants.

GATCOMBE, a parish in West Medina liberty, in the Isle of Wight, and county of Southampton, 2 miles from Carisbrooke, and 94 from London; containing 28 houses and 222 inhabitants.

GATEHELMSLEY, a parish in the liberties and east riding of York, 6 miles from York, and 205 from London; containing 33 houses and 151 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of the crown.

GATEHOUSE OF FLEET, a village in the parish of Gerthon, in the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, on the side of a river near the Solway frith, 5 miles from Kirkcudbright, and 28 from Dumfries; containing 240 houses and 1250 inhabitants. It is of modern erection, the first house having been built about 40 years ago, to serve as an inn for the accommodation of travellers from Dumfries to Port Patrick. The village now consists of three streets running parallel to the river Fleet, over which is a handsome bridge, communicating with a suburb on the western side of the river. In 1795 this place was erected into a burgh of barony, with power to hold a weekly market and several fairs. It contains an extensive tannery, and several cotton-works, Lough Whinnion supplying a sufficient quantity of water.—Coals, however, are imported from England: 8 or 10 vessels belong to the port.

GATELEY, a parish in the hundred of Launditch, Norfolk, 6 miles from East Dereham, and 107 from London; containing 13 houses and 77 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 3*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of Christ church college, Cambridge.

GATESCILL, a hamlet to the parish of Dalton, in Cumberland ward, Cumberland, 4 miles from Carlisle, and 300 from London. Population returned with that of Raughton.

GATEFORTH, a hamlet to the parish of Brayton, in Barkston Ash wapentake, west riding of York, 3 miles from Selby, and 180 from London; containing 32 houses and 178 inhabitants.

GATESHEAD, a parish in Chester ward, Durham, being a suburb of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, to which it is united by a handsome stone bridge, with an iron gate in the middle, bearing the arms of Durham on one side, and those of Newcastle on the other, thus forming a boundary between the bishopric, and the county of Northumberland. The parish contains 1037 houses and 8597 inhabitants, being 3974 males and 4623 females, of whom 1679 were returned as being employed in trade, &c. but the men are mostly employed in the coal-pits in the neighbourhood. The church is a handsome building, with a lofty tower, which may be seen at a great distance; in the church-yard are several antique monuments. A very extensive monastery formerly stood here, together with an hospital granted to the priory of St. Nicholas, Newcastle, which was afterwards used as a Roman Catholic chapel, till burnt down by the populace.

GATHAMPTON, a hamlet to the parish of Goring, in the hundred of Langtree, Oxford, 8 miles from Reading, and 46 from London. Population included with that of Goring.

GATLEY, a hamlet to the parish of Earls Leinthal, in the hundred of Wigmore, Hereford, 6 miles from Ludlow, and 140 from London. Population omitted to be returned.

GATONBY, a hamlet to the parish of Burneston, in Hallikeld wapentake of the north riding of York, 2¼ miles from Bedale, and 221 from London; containing 12 houses and 67 inhabitants.

GATTON, a borough in the hundred of Ryegate, Surry, 19¼ miles from London, on the road to Ryegate, from which it is distant 2 miles, containing 18 houses and 112 inhabitants. Although now a mean village, it was once a very considerable town, and is supposed to have been a Roman station. It has sent members to Parliament ever since the reign of Henry VI.; they are returned by the constable, who is annually chosen at the lord of the manor's court by seven electors. The church is a small, low building. The manor-house, or Lower Gatton-park, is a new and elegant structure, commanding one of the most enchanting views in the kingdom; at the foot of the eminence on which it is situated is a lake of about 40 acres, enriched with two beautiful well-planted islands, stocked with various water fowl. The river Mole has its rise in this parish. The living is a rectory, value 9*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.*

GAUIR, a river of Perthshire, Scotland, issuing from Loch Rannoch, and afterwards forming the Tummel, which falls into the Tay at Logierat.

GAUTBY, a parish in the hundred of Gartree, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 4 miles from Horncastle, and 143 from London; containing 17 houses and 118 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the crown.

GAWCOT, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Buckingham, Bucks, 1 mile from Buckingham, and 56 from London; containing 17 houses and 85 inhabitants.

GAWSWORTH, a parish in the hundred of Macclesfield, Cheshire, 3 miles from Macclesfield, and 163 from London; containing 114 houses and 697 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.*

GAWTHORP, a hamlet to the parish of Harewood, in Skyrack wapentake, west riding of York, 7 miles from Leeds, and 198 from London. Population included with that of Harewood.

GAYDON, a hamlet to the parish of Bishop's Itchingham, in the hundred of Kineton, Warwick, 2 miles from Kineton, and 86 from London; containing 44 houses and 219 inhabitants.

GAYHURST, a hamlet to the parish of Tyringham, in the hundred of Newport Pagnell, Bucks, 2½ miles from Newport Pagnell, and 53 from London; containing 11 houses and 89 inhabitants.

GAYLES, a hamlet to the parish of Kirby-Ravensworth, in Gilling West wapentake of the north riding of York, 6 miles from Richmond, and 240 from London; containing 43 houses and 190 inhabitants.

GAYTEFORD, a hamlet to the parish of Worksop, in the hundred of Basset Law, Notts, 2 miles from Worksop, and 148 from London. Population included with that of Worksop.

GAYTON, a hamlet to the parish of Heswall, in the hundred of Wirrall, Cheshire, 1 mile from Parkgate, and 191 from London; containing 15 houses and 100 inhabitants.

GAYTON-IN-THE-MARSH, a parish in the hundred of Calceworth, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 4 miles from Alford, and 144 from London; containing 41 houses and 238 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 13*l.* 10*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of the crown.

GAYTON-LE-WOLD, a parish in the hundred of Louth Eske, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 4 miles from Louth, and 150 from London; containing 11 houses and 67 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 11*s.* in the patronage of the crown.

GAYTON, a parish in the hundred of Freebridge Lynn, Norfolk, 5 miles from Lynn, and 96 from London; containing 52 houses and 397 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

GAYTON THORPE, a hamlet to the parish of Gayton, from which it is distant ¼ mile; containing 13 houses and 113 inhabitants.

GAYTON, a parish in the hundred of Towcester, Northampton, 4 miles from Towcester, and 63 from London; containing 36 houses and 267 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.*

GAYTON, a parish in the hundred of Pirehill, Stafford, 5 miles from Stone, and 135 from London; containing 47 houses and 273 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

GAYWOOD, a parish in the hundred of Freebridge Lynn, Norfolk, 5 miles from Lynn, and 96 from London; containing 83 houses and 410 inhabitants. The bishop of Norwich has a palace in this parish. The fairs are June 11 and Oct. 6. The living is a rectory, value 5*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

GAZELEY, a parish in the hundred of Resbridge, Suffolk, 4 miles from Newmarket, and 65 from London; containing 67 houses and 523 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.*

GEASHILL, a small village in King's county, in the province of Leinster, Ireland.

GEDDING, a parish in the hundred of Thedwestry, Suffolk, 8 miles from Bury St. Edmund's, and 70 from London; containing 16 houses and 108 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 4*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the corporation of Ipswich.

GEDDINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Corby, Northampton, 3½ miles from Kettering, and 74 from London; containing 152 houses and 663 inhabitants. It has a good charity school. This place had formerly a royal mansion, in which Henry II. held a parliament in 1188 to raise money for a crusade; here is also an ancient cross of a triangular form, erected by Edward I. in memory of his queen Eleanor, whose remains stopped in this parish on their road to London for interment. The living is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 11*s.*—Bridge's Northampton.

GEDGRAVE, a hamlet to the parish of Sudbury, in the hundred of Plomsgate, Suffolk, 1½ mile from Orford, and 90 from London; containing 7 houses and 71 inhabitants.

GEDLING, a parish in the hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, 2¼ miles from Nottingham, and 126 from London; containing 91 houses and 554 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 6*s.* in the patronage of the earl of Chesterfield.

GEDNEY, a parish in the hundred of Elloe, and parts of Holland, Lincoln, 3½ miles from Crowland, and 96 from London; containing 209 houses and 1042 inhabitants, of whom 71 were returned as being employed in trade. The rectory, value 23*l.* 11*s.* is a sinecure; and the vicarage, value 30*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.* is in the patronage of the crown.

GEDNEY HILL, a hamlet and chapelry to the foregoing parish, and adjoining thereto; containing 46 houses and 265 inhabitants.

GELDERSTONE, a parish in the hundred of Clavering, Norfolk, 3 miles from Beccles, and 109 from London; containing 34 houses and 224 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* in the patronage of the crown.

GELLY, in Vaynor, a hamlet in the hundred of Penkelly, Brecon, Wales, 4 miles from Merthyr Tydvil, and 190 from London; containing 41 houses and 174 inhabitants.

GELLYDEG, a parish in the hundred of Caerphilly, Glamorgan, Wales, 6 miles from Caerphilly, and 165 from London; containing 202 houses and 1177 inhabitants. At a house called Lancavach, in this parish, king Charles I. remained several days in disguise.

GELT, a river of Cumberland, which falls into the Irthing, a little below Haton.

GEMBLING, a hamlet to the parish of Foston, in Dickering lythe, east riding of York, on a rivulet called Old How, 3 miles from Great Driffield, and 197 from London; containing 12 houses and 61 inhabitants.

GENNIS ST. a parish in the hundred of Lesnewth, Cornwall, 8 miles from Camelford, and 230 from London; containing 114 houses and 597 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.*

GEORGE NYMPTON, a parish in the hundred of South Molton, Devon, 2 miles from South Moulton, and 183 from London; containing 51 houses and 237 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.*

GEORGEHAM, a parish in the hundred of Braunton, Devon, on the sea-coast, 6 miles from Barnstaple, and 199 from London; containing 141 houses and 627 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 40*l.* 17*s.* 11*d.*

GEORGE'S ST. a parish in the hundred of Barton Regis, Gloucester, about 1 mile from Lawford's gate in the city of Bristol, to which it is deemed a suburb, and 110 from London; containing 312 houses and 1668 inhabitants. The church was erected in the year 1732, and is a plain modern building, 70 feet long and 60 broad, consisting of a nave and two aisles, supported by two rows of handsome free-stone pillars; at the west end is a large square tower 73 feet high. On a hill within a few yards of the turnpike-gate leading to Crow's hole, is a small dwelling-house, which was formerly a Romish chapel, and is still called St. Anthony's chapel. The living is a vicarage, in the nomination of the corporation of Bristol.

GEORGE'S ST. a parish in the hundred of Dinas Powis, Glamorganshire, Wales, 5 miles from Cardiff, and 165 from London; containing 27 houses and 114 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

GEORGE'S ST. an island of Cornwall, opposite to East and West Looe.

GEORGE FORT, a strong and regular fortress in the parish of Ardersier, and shire of Inverness, Scotland, standing on a peninsula which overhangs the Murray Frith, and completely commanding the entrance of the harbour of Inverness, although 10 miles distant. It has a governor, lieutenant-governor, and inferior officers, and contains a strong garrison both of invalids and regulars. It has been lately occupied as a state prison, particularly for several leaders of the Irish rebellion.

GERMAIN'S ST. a borough, market-town, and parish in the hundred of East Cornwall, between Saltash and Leskeard, on the river Tidi, a branch of the Lyner, 226½ miles from London; and containing 350 houses and 2036 inhabitants, being 1007 males and 1023 females, of whom 151 were returned as being employed in various trades. It was a bishop's see, and now sends two members to parliament. It owes its name to a bishop of Auxene, who extirpated the Pelagian heresy from Britain, and to whose memory king Athelstan here founded a priory of secular canons. The see of Bodmin was translated hither in 981; and in 1049 it was united to Crediton, through the interest of bishop Levinus, a favourite of Canute. The remains of the palace may still be traced in a farm about 1 mile distant from the town. The conventual church, which is now used as the parish church, is a large and handsome building, and still contains an episcopal choir and the prebends' stalls. The parish of St. Germain's is the largest in the county, and includes 16 villages. A portreve is elected annually at the court leet of the lord of the manor, who is also bailiff of the borough, and may make any house in it the prison of whomsoever he arrests. The persons entitled to vote are, all the householders who have lived a year within the borough, which consists of about 60 houses near the church. The town stands on a rising ground. Here is a free school, and a small market held on Friday. The fairs are on the 28th May and 1st August. The living is a curacy, in the patronage of the dean and canons of Windsor. — Polwhele's Cornwall.

GERMAN'S WECK, or WICK, a parish in the hundred of Lyfton, Devon, 8 miles from Oakhampton, and 203 from London; containing 42 houses and 153 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

GERMOE ST. a parish in the hundred of Kerriar, Cornwall, 2 miles from Marazion or Market Jew, and 284 from London; containing 130 houses and 629 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

GERRANCE, a parish in the hundred of Powder, Cornwall, 6 miles from Grampound, and 256 from London; containing 165 houses and 771 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 15*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Exeter.

GERRARD'S CROSS, a hamlet to the parish of Denham, in the hundred of Stoke, Bucks, 4 miles from Uxbridge, and 19 from London. It has a good charity school.

GESTLINGTHORPE, a parish in the hundred of Hinckford, Essex, 4 miles from Sudbury, and 50 from London; containing 83 houses and 544 inhabitants. The rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* is a sinecure, and the vicarage is valued at 7*l.*

GIDDING GREAT, a parish in the hundred of Leightonstone, Hunts, 10 miles from Kimbolton, and 72 from London; containing 77 houses and 420 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.*

GIDDING LITTLE, a parish 1 mile from the last-mentioned; containing 5 houses and 47 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 6*s.* 4*d.*

GIDDING STEEPING, a parish ¼ mile from the foregoing; containing 8 houses and 77 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 17*s.* 8*d.*

GIDLEY, a parish in the hundred of Wowford, Devon, 5 miles from Oakhampton, and 120 from London, near the borders of Dartmoor forest; containing 17 houses and 125 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 9*s.*

GIFFORD, a village in the county of East Lothian, Scotland. Considerable quantities of linen are bleached here; and at Gifford-hall, in the neighbourhood, was erected the first mill for breaking and swingling flax, by Mr. Spalding, the inventor.

GIGHA, one of the Hebrides, annexed to Argyleshire, Scotland, in the district of Kintyre, from which it is separated by a channel 3½ miles broad: the shore is dangerous on account of hidden rocks, but it has several good bays or creeks. The small isle of Cara lies to the south about 1½ mile distant. Gigha contains about 600 inhabitants. Along the shore several curious caves are formed in the rocks; in the island itself many cairns are observable, which are said to point out the scenes of the exploits of Fingal's heroes. The island is supplied with spring water sufficient to work two corn-mills, and contains abundance of excellent fish.

GIGLESWICK, a parish in the wapentake of Staincliff and Ewercross, in the west riding of York, on the river Ribble, 1¼ mile from Settle, and 234 from London; containing 118 houses and 556 inhabitants. The parish church of Settle is at this place; which has likewise a very eminent free grammar school. It stands at the base of a lime-stone rock, which runs 300 feet above the level of the town. The inhabitants have lately carried an easy winding ascent to the top of it, whence there is a very fine prospect. At the foot of a ledge of rocks, about ½ mile from the village, is a spring, which sometimes ebbs and flows four or five times in an hour to the height of about six inches, and at the reflux to the height of more than 20,

Several good quarries of slate and stone are in the neighbourhood. The living is a vicarage, value 21*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

GILBERDIKE, a township to the parish of Eastrington, in Howdenshire wapentake of the east riding of York, 5½ miles from Howden, and 186 from London; containing 63 houses and 337 inhabitants.

GILBY, a hamlet to the parish of Pilham, in the hundred of Caringham, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 5 miles from Gainsborough, and 156 from London. Population included with that of Pelham.

GILCRUX, or GILCROSS, a parish in the ward of Allerdale below Derwent, Cumberland, 5 miles from Cockermouth, and 307 from London; containing 47 houses and 249 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Carlisle.

GILDERSOME, a township to the parish of Batley, in Morley wapentake, of the west riding of York, 6 miles from Bradford, and 195 from London; containing 241 houses and 1232 inhabitants, of whom 792 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures.

GILES ST. a parish united with Black Torrington, in the hundred of Fremington, Devon, 2 miles from Black Torrington, and 195 from London; containing 105 houses and 547 inhabitants.

GILES ST. ON THE HEATH, so called to distinguish it from the last-mentioned parish, lies also in the hundred of Black Torrington, Devon, 4 miles from Launceston, and 217 from London; containing 36 houses and 187 inhabitants. The living is a curacy.

GILESTON, a small parish in the hundred of Cowbridge, Glamorganshire, Wales, 4 miles from Cowbridge, and 172 from London; containing 8 houses and 60 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.*

GILFORD, a town in the county of Down, and province of Ulster, Ireland, on the river Ban, 3 miles from Warrington, and 62 from Dublin. Over the river is a good stone bridge of 22 arches. In the neigbourhood are a number of bleaching grounds, and several small woods, which, from the various rising grounds, have a very picturesque appearance. Near the town is a chalybeate spa of good quality.

GILL, a hamlet to the parish of Greystock, in Leath ward, Cumberland, 5 miles from Penrith, and 288 from London. Population included with that of Motherby.

GILL, a hamlet to the parish of Bolton, in Staincliffe wapentake, west riding of York, 5 miles from Skipton, and 221 from London. Population included with that of Bolton.

GILLDINGWELL, a hamlet to the parish of St. John's-in-le-Morthern, in Staincross wapentake, west riding of York, between Rotherham and the borders of Nottingham, 6 miles from Worksop, and 152 from London. Population included with that of Letwell.

GILLMOOR, a township to the parish of Kirby Moorside, in Rydall division of the north riding of York, 2 miles from Kirby Moorside, and 230 from London; containing 41 houses and 228 inhabitants.

GILLING EAST AND WEST, the name of two hundreds in the north riding of York.

GILLING, a parish in Gilling West wapentake, north riding of York, 2½ miles from Richmond, and 236 from London; containing 158 houses and 809 inhabitants. This was formerly a very considerable place, and had a stately castle, supposed to have been the royal residence prior to Richmond. King Oswy was murdered at this place, and queen Eanfleda built a monastery here, which was destroyed by the Danes. The living is a vicarage, value 23*l.* 11*s.* 5*d.*

GILLING, a parish in Rydal division of the north riding of York, 5 miles from Helmsley, and 217 from London; containing 38 houses and 197 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 10*s.*

GILLINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Redlane, division of Shaston, Dorset, on the river Stour, near Gillingham forest, 4½ miles from Shaftesbury, and 105½ from London; containing 355 houses and 1873 inhabitants. Over the river are two stone bridges. The extent of this parish is greater than any in the county, it being 40 miles in circumference. It has a very large old free school, and a church of great antiquity. Here are some silk-throwsters mills; but the chief consequence of the place arises from its grazing lands and dairies. About ½ mile from the church, on the road to Shaston, stood a palace of the Saxon and Norman kings, which, according to the traces of the foundation, must have been an extensive and stately building; it was encompassed by a moat in some places, 9 feet deep by 20 feet wide, and the rampart appears to have been 30 feet thick. Here Edmund Ironside vanquished the Danes in 1016. In this neighbourhood lies Blackmore, or White Hart forest, so named from the favourite white stag of Henry I. which being accidentally killed by one T. de la Lynde, an heavy impost was laid on his estate, which to this day is charged with an annual fine to the treasury, called White Hart Silver. The fairs are on the Monday after Trinity, and on the 1st September. The living is a vicarage, value 40*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Salisbury, with East and West Motcombe chapels annexed. — Hutchins's Dorsetshire.

GILLINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Chatham and Gillingham, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, on the river Medway, 2 miles from Chatham, and 32 from London; containing 715 houses and 4135 inhabitants, being 2025 males and 2110 females, of whom 600 were returned as being employed in trade. It is pleasantly situated on an eminence commanding a view of the Thames and Medway in all directions, and near the village of Brompton, which is partly in this parish, and partly in that of Chatham. The whole of this neighbourhood is strongly fortified, as forming the out-posts of the arsenal of Chatham; and at Brompton, in time of war, it is usual to have an encampment of militia and regulars. Near Brompton are some extensive barracks for infantry and marines, which are esteemed among the most healthy buildings of the kind in England. The streets of Gillingham are wide, and, from their lying on a declivity, remarkably clean. In the church are several very ancient monuments; over the porch at the west end, is a niche, in which stood the image of the famous lady of Gillingham. The vestiges of an ancient palace of the archbishop of Canterbury may still be seen in an old barn. This village, on account of its vicinity to the Medway, was much exposed to the depredations of the Danes. History relates that 600 noblemen, who came over in the retinue of the princes Alfred and Edward, were here murdered by earl Godwin. The living is a vicarage, united with Upberry, value 15*l.* 13*s.* 11*d.* in the patronage of Brazenose college, Oxford, with Lidsing chapel annexed.—Hasted's Kent.

GILLINGHAM ALLSAINTS, and GILLINGHAM ST. MARY'S, } two united parishes in the hundred of Clavering, Norfolk, near the river Waveney, 1½ mile from Beccles, and 110 from London; the former containing 24 houses and 190 inhabitants, and the latter 24 houses and 154 inhabitants. The living is united with Winston and Windell.

GILLSLAND, a piece of land full of gills or brooks, in the parish of Upper Denton, Eskdale ward, Cumberland, on the borders of Northumberland, about 8 miles from Brampton, 17 from Carlisle, and 310 from London. A spa here is much frequented during the season by persons of fashion from both sides the Tweed. There are only two houses for the accommodation of the company; but they are commodious, and after the plan of those at Harrowgate. One of these buildings is called The Shaws, the other The Orchard-house. The former is delightfully situated on a steep bank of the river Irthing. The latter is about a mile distant, also by the side of a river, on both sides of which are several beautiful walks, with benches at convenient distances. The Picts wall passes by this place. About two miles distant is a fine natural cascade, almost equal to the celebrated fall of the Clyde.—Garnet's Account of the Gilsland Waters.

GILLMONBY, a hamlet to the parish of Bowes, in Gilling West wapentake of the north riding of York, 4 miles from Barnard-castle, and 243 from London; containing 14 houses and 145 inhabitants.

GILL MORTON, a parish in the hundred of Guthlaxton, Leicester, 3 miles from Lutterworth, and 86 from London; containing 114 houses and 554 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 17*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.*

GILSTON, a parish in the hundred of Braughen, Herts, 6 miles from Hoddesdon, and 23 from London; containing 29 houses and 186 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

GIMINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of North Erpingham, Norfolk, 3 miles from North Walsham, and 127 from London; containing 37 houses and 272 inhabitants. The living is a rectory united with Trunch, value 11*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of Catharine hall, Cambridge.

GINGE MARGARETTING. See MARGARETTING, Essex.

GINGE MOUNTNEY. See MOUNT NESSING, Essex.

GIPPING, a parish in the hundred of Stow, Suffolk, 3½ miles from Stow Market, and 79 from London; containing 12 houses and 120 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.*

GIRCH, a river of Carnarvonshire, Wales, which falls into the Irish Sea at Carodinhill rock, near Pwlhelly.

GIRSBY, a hamlet to the parish of Sockburn, in the division of Allertonshire, north riding of York, 11 miles from North Allerton, and 226 from London; containing 17 houses and 80 inhabitants.

GIRTHON, a parish in the stewardry of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 4 miles from Kirkcudbright, and 28 from Dumfries; containing 251 houses and 1727 inhabitants, of whom 364 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. This parish includes the flourishing village of Gatehouse, which stands on the banks of the river Fleet, whose stream is formed by the junction of several lakes, and possesses a small salmon fishery.

GIRTON, a hamlet to the parish of South Scarle, in the hundred of Newark, Notts, on the banks of the river Fleet, 5 miles from Tuxford, and 153 from London; containing 28 houses and 125 inhabitants.

GIRVAN, a town and parish in Ayrshire, Scotland, at the mouth of the river Girvan, 18 miles from Ayr, and 93 from Edinburgh; containing 440 houses and 2260 inhabitants, of whom 1360 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture, of which the most important is that of wearing-cotton for the merchants of Glasgow. The town, which is neatly built, is a burgh of barony, governed by two bailies and 10 counsellors. The parish extends about 9 miles along the Carrick coast of the Atlantic. On the hills are several remains of encampments. The soil in general is flat and sandy, mixed with whinstone, of which the houses are chiefly built; it also contains gypsum or plaster of Paris, and excellent coal.

GISBOROUGH, a market-town and parish in Langborough East wapentake, north riding of York, near the mouth of the Tees, 8 miles from Stokesley, and 248 from London; containing 383 houses and 1719 inhabitants, of whom 273 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. This place has long been noted for its alum works, the mines of which were first discovered in the reign of James I. and were for many years a source of considerable traffic; but since other alum mines have been discovered in various parts of the kingdom, the trade of this place has much declined. The soil in the neighbourhood is particularly fertile, and produces earths of different colours, with a little iron. The bay at the mouth of the Tees forms a good harbour for vessels. Gisborough abbey was once the principal burial-place of the nobility of the surrounding country, and the ruins of its church evince it to have been equal in magnificence to almost any of our cathedrals. Near the town stands the remains of a stately building, consisting of an arch which once contained the east window of a priory. The market is on Friday, and the fairs on the 26th April, on Whit-Tuesday, on the 26th August, the 19th September, and the Monday after the 11th November. The church living is a curacy, in the patronage of the archbishop of York.

GISBURN, a parish in the wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, in the west riding of York, on the river Ribble, 6 miles from Clitheroe, and 222 from London; containing 176 houses and 881 inhabitants. This place has no particular trade or manufactory, but the whole neighbourhood consists of rich meadows, where innumerable flocks of cattle and sheep are fattened for different markets. The church is a very large antique building. The fairs are on Easter-Monday and two following days, and on September 18 and 19 for cattle and pedlary. The living is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the crown.

GISLEHAM, a parish in the hundred of Mutford and Lothinland, Suffolk, 3½ miles from Lowestoff, and 110 from London; containing 23 houses and 198 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

GISLINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Hartismere, Suffolk, 4 miles from Eyr, and 85 from London; containing 75 houses and 473 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 26*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.*

GITSFORD, a hamlet to the parish of Sandy, in the hundred of Biggleswade, Bedford, 4 miles from Biggleswade, and 49 from London; containing 54 houses and 320 inhabitants.

GISSING, a parish in the hundred of Diss, Norfolk, 3 miles from Diss, and 93 from London; containing 58 houses and 444 inhabitants. Its fair is on the 15th July. The living is a rectory, value 4*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.*

GITTISHAM, a parish in the hundred of East Budleigh, Devon, 2½ miles from Hopiton, and 159 from London; containing 64 houses and 459 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 21*l.* 8*s.* 11*d.*

GIVANDALE, a small parish in the division of Beacon Wilton, and wapentake of Hart-hill, in the east riding of York, 12 miles from York, and 208 from London; containing 9 houses and 54 inhabitants.

GIVENDALE, a hamlet in the parish and liberties of Rippon, in the west riding of York, 1 mile from Rippon, and 222 from London; containing 4 houses and 20 inhabitants.

GLADSMERE HEATH, near Barnet, Herts, where a battle was fought between the houses of York and Lancaster, and where an obelisk is erected to commemorate it.

GLADSMUIR, a parish in the shire of Haddington, Scotland, on the south bank of the frith of Forth, 10 miles from Edinburgh, and 3 from Haddington; containing 345 houses and 1470 inhabitants. It is watered by the small river Tyne; and several coal-pits are wrought in its vicinity.

GLAIZDALE, a township and chapelry to the parish of Ayton, in Langborough East wapentake, north riding of York, 9 miles from Whitby, and 239 from London; containing 151 houses and 763 inhabitants.

GLAMMIS, a small town and parish in the shire of Forfar, 3 miles from Forfar, and 24 from Perth; containing 385 houses and 1931 inhabitants, of whom 356 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. The parish includes part of the valley of Strathmore, and part of the Sidlaw hills: it is bordered by the loch of Forfar, whence issues the river Deane, which falls into the Isla. The town of Old Glammis contains about 500 inhabitants, exclusive of the adjoining suburb, called New Town. The principal manufacture is that of yarn and coarse linen cloth. The ancient castle, belonging to the family of the earl of Strathmore, and formerly a royal residence, stands on the banks of the Dean, commanding a most extensive and delightful prospect of the vale of Strathmore. In the parish, several rude obelisks and cairns are to be met with, some of which are said to point out the place where king Malcolm II. was murdered.—Glammis gives a second title of baron to the family of Strathmore.

GLAMORGANSHIRE, a county of South Wales, bounded on the north by Carmarthenshire and Brecknockshire, on the east by Merionethshire, and on the south-west by the Severn Sea, or Bristol Channel, about 48 miles in length, and from 8 to 27 in breadth; containing 422,400 acres of land, of which 305,000 are in a state of cultivation, viz. 45,000 as arable, and 262,000 in pasturage. It is divided into 10 hundreds, Caerphilly, Cowbridge, Dinas Powis, Kibber, Llangwelack, Miskin, Neath, Newcastle, Ogmore, and Swansea; comprising one city, Landaff, one borough, Cardiff, and four other market-towns, viz. Cowbridge, Neath, Penrice, and Swansea; and containing 14,225 houses and 71,525 inhabitants, being 34,190 males and 37,335 females, of whom 6905 were returned as being employed in trade, manufacture, and handicraft, and 18,515 in agriculture. Total amount of property in this county returned under the income tax in 1806, 561,251*l.* Amount of assessment under the poor's rates in 1803, 27,780*l.* being at the rate of 7*s.* 3*d.* in the pound. The name of this county is supposed to be derived from the word Gwlad Morgan, or the county of Morgan, a prince of that part of the country. It was anciently inhabited by the Silures, and under the Romans formed a part of the province of Britannia Secunda. It is now included in the south-east circuit, and contains 118 parishes, all in the province of Canterbury, and diocese of Landaff. On the north and north-east it is very mountainous, and the soil various, being in some parts a mere rock, and in others full of coal and iron: the mines are covered with wood. On the south side, and towards the sea, is a spacious vale or plain, which produces good corn. The roads over the mountains are extremely steep, and scattered with loose stones washed from the rocks, which render travelling very troublesome. The principal rivers are the Rymny or Rumney, which rises in Brecon and falls into the Severn, near Cardiff, and the Taaf, an extremely rapid river that falls into the sea at Cardiff. Upon this river, near Caerphilly, is a stone bridge, called Pont-y-Pryd, consisting of a single arch, 140 feet in the span, and 34 feet high, planned and executed by the untaught genius of a common mason; the Ogmore, which comes from Brecknock, and after passing Cowbridge falls into the Severn; and the Tavy, which rises also in Brecon, and falls into the British Channel at Swansea. The greatest part of the sea-coast of this county forms a semicircular sweep, the western part being formed into a narrow beak, between the open channel and an arm running round to the Caermarthenshire coast. The peninsulated extremity of the county beyond Swansea bay, called Gower, has very lofty lime-stone cliffs next the sea, whence great quantities of lime are exported to the English counties across the channel. Lime is also the general manure of the county, and there is scarcely a cottage that is not regularly white-washed once a week. The plenty of coal, with the conveniences for exportation, have occasioned the establishment of an extensive copper work at Swansea.—Aikin's Tour.

GLANDESTREY, a parish in the hundred of Radnor, Radnorshire, Wales, 7 miles from Builth, and 166 from London; containing 63 houses and 323 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the prince of Wales.

GLANDFORD BRIGG. See BRIGG, Lincoln.

GLANDFORD, a hamlet to the parish of Blakeney, in the hundred of Holt, Norfolk, 2½ miles from Holt, and 121 from London; containing 14 houses and 71 inhabitants.

GLANLETS, a hamlet to the parish of Felton, in Coquetdale ward, Northumberland, 10 miles from Morpeth, and 301 from London; containing 10 houses and 34 inhabitants.

GLANTON, a hamlet to the parish of Whittingham, in Coquetdale ward, Northumberland, 6 miles from Rothbury, and 312 from London; containing 59 houses and 279 inhabitants.

GLAPTHORNE, a parish in the hundred of Willybrook, Northampton, 1¼ mile from Oundle, and 84 from London; containing 49 houses and 315 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

GLAPTON, a hamlet to the parish of Clifton, in the hundred of Rushcliff, Nottingham, 4½ miles from Nottingham, and 120 from London. Population included with that of Clifton.

GLAPWELL, a hamlet to the parish of Bolsover, in the hundred of Scarsdale, Derby, 6 miles from Chesterfield, and 146 from London; containing 22 houses and 109 inhabitants.

GLASBURY, a parish in the hundred of Falgarth, and county of Brecon, Wales, 4 miles from Hay, and 157 from London; containing 86 houses and 400 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Gloucester.

GLASCOED, a hamlet to Panteage, in the hundred of Usk, Monmouth, 4½ miles from Caerleon, and 155 from London; containing 29 houses and 131 inhabitants.

GLASCOMB, a parish in the hundred of Painscastle Radnorshire, Wales, 4 miles from Kingston, and 159 from London; containing 112 houses and 580 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

GLASGOW, a city in Lanarkshire, Scotland, 35 miles from Edinburgh, and 10 from Dumbarton; containing 20,276 houses and 77,385 inhabitants, viz. 35,007 males and 42,378 females, of whom 22,335 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures, and 1834 in agriculture. Glasgow is situated on the north bank of the Clyde, and with respect to commerce and manufactures may be considered the chief city of Scotland. Pit-coal and other articles required for the establishment of manufactories are found in abundance in the whole of the surrounding district on both sides of the Clyde. Some of the pits are worked near the city, and even in the suburbs, especially at Camlachie. The annual value of the produce of the coal-mines in the barony of Glasgow is estimated at from 30 to 40,000*l.* sterling. Over the coals there is a thin, but very rich, stratum of iron-stone. This was formerly considered as an incumbrance, but since the erection of the Clyde iron-works, it has been employed in the most advantageous manner, and affords a new source of employment to a great number of persons. In early times the trade of Glasgow chiefly arose from the curing of salmon and herrings, which were chiefly sent to France, whence wines and other commodities were received in return. In 1609 the population of Glasgow amounted to only from 7 to 8000; 50 years after that period it was from 14 to 15,000; in the year 1755 it had increased to 27,415; and in 1775 to 43,000. From the census in 1802 it appears to have increased to 77,385, and including the suburbs and adjoining places, to 86,630. The New Town of Glasgow has broad regular streets, with houses built of hewn stone. The erection of the new bridge over the Clyde cost 9000*l*. The Clyde was formerly so shallow, that only vessels of 30 tons burthen could come up to the keys, (the Bromelaw); but since 1771 the bed of the river has been deepened, sufficiently for lighters of from 70 to 90 tons burthen. The superintendence of the navigation of the river is entrusted to a board, called The Commissioners of the River Clyde. Port Dundas is a bason at the end of the collateral cut of the great canal, distant 2¼ miles. The Monkland canal goes from Glasgow about 10 miles to Airdrie, and serves chiefly for the conveyance of coals from the neighbourhood of that village. At the Tontine coffee-house a great number of newspapers, and foreign and English journals, are taken in; and the merchants and tradesmen assemble here for the purpose of transacting business. In the Tontine buildings goods are sold by public auction; and there is a large room where the merchants shew samples of sugar, &c. each having his own stand with drawers. A book is kept of all the transactions, and bargains are concluded on the spot. There are several banks at Glasgow; the Old Bank, or Ship Bank, opened in the year 1749; the Thistle Bank, established in 1761. The Edinburgh Royal Bank does more business here than even in Edinburgh. There are likewise branches of several provincial banks. In 1775 57,145 hogsheads of tobacco were imported into Glasgow from Virginia, Maryland, and Carolina; being more than one half of the whole quantity imported into Great Britain. At present the quantity imported is inconsiderable, this branch of trade having been almost transferred to Liverpool. The exports from Glasgow to foreign parts consist chiefly of manufactured goods; beside which, raw and refined sugar, rum, cotton, coffee, &c. are sent to the continent of Europe; and pit-coal and fish to America. The imports from the West Indies and America consist of sugar, rum, cotton, coffee, wheat, flour, mahogany, pot-ash, staves, &c. The four first are the principal articles; and the rum from Glasgow and Greenock fetches higher prices, and is preferred in foreign markets to that obtained from the English ports; and, accordingly, large quantities are exported. Not only the numerous manufactories in Scotland, but even in part, Lancashire, and the continent of Europe are supplied hence with raw cotton. In the year 1802, 51,366 bags of cotton were imported into Glasgow, and in the following year only 38,174; in 1775 the number of bags did not exceed 503. From the ports of the Baltic, Glasgow obtains timber, iron, flax, hemp, Russian canvas, pitch, tar, wheat, &c.; from Ireland, hides, corn, salt beef, butter, flour, &c.; from Portugal, Spain, and France, chiefly wines. The Port wine is of the first quality, and is not so frequently adulterated as in England. In 1803 the merchants of Glasgow opened a commercial intercourse with the Russian provinces on the Black Sea, and sent a ship from Greenock to Odessa. The original manufactures of Glasgow were tartans, or plaids, for the Highlanders, and some coarse linens. About 1725 linen became the staple of Glasgow, and the western districts of Scotland; and continued so a considerable time, till supplanted in the markets by the Irish linen. On the other hand, the demand for cotton goods increased; and, therefore, the Glasgow manufacturers employed their workmen in weaving this far more profitable article, which has since become the staple manufacture of the west of Scotland. The linen manufacture has not, however, been entirely abandoned; but its great inferiority will appear from the following statement: In the year 1805 there were exported from the Clyde 24,699,760 yards of cotton goods, and only 3,219,955 yards of linen. Cotton-mills, bleach-fields, print-fields, and other establishments connected with the cotton manufactures, are found on all the rivulets and other convenient situations in the whole of the adjacent districts. One of the cotton-mills is remarkable for being fire proof, as iron is used in every part of the building usually made of wood. For some years past it has been found impracticable to spare sufficient quantities of yarn to answer the increasing demands for muslins, and furnish employment to the many thousands of weavers, who, to the extent of from 30 to 40 miles round the city, work for the Glasgow manufacturers; large quantities of twists have accordingly been imported from Lancashire. In the year 1791 the number of looms in the west of Scotland were estimated at 15,000, and the number of weavers, and other persons in the various operations of weaving, at 135,000. Since that time this branch of manufacture has been considerably increased; but its present extent, and the number of workmen deriving their subsistence from it, cannot be ascertained. In the year 1742 the art of printing pocket-handkerchiefs was first introduced, and has since been brought to great perfection, by the invention and improvement of part-work, cylindrical presses, and other useful articles. Great improvements have likewise been made in the dying of cotton, particularly by George Mackintosh, who, in 1805, having engaged M. Papillon, a dyer from Rouen, erected a large dye-house at Dalmarnock, where genuine Adrianople red is dyed; so that the Pulicat handkerchiefs made here are not inferior to those imported from the East Indies. To the same spirited manufacturer Scotland is indebted for the improvement of cutbear, a dye stuff prepared from the lichen taturus, and other mosses, found on the rocks. Large quantities of iron-liquor are manufactured at Glasgow. With respect to the other improvements in the calico manufactures, Lanarkshire keeps pace with, and in some things even surpasses Lancashire. Of late years Glasgow has in particular excelled in the weaving of muslins, some sorts being here made of a superior quality, and others exclusively. At present this may be called the staple manufacture of Glasgow; so great is the demand, that there are instances of common weavers acquiring, in a few years, large fortunes by the invention of a new favourite pattern. Several other extensive manufactures are established at Glasgow; such as the refining of sugar, tanning of leather, stone and Delft ware, carpets, and coarse woollen cloths. Considerable quantities of incle are still woven here. This manufacture was introduced in 1732 by Alexander Harvie, who stole the secret from the Dutch. The glass-house at Verrevill near Glasgow, which was established in 1777, furnishes large quantities of excellent flint, and crystal-glass is made both plain, cut, and ground. The first printing-office in Glasgow was erected in 1638 by George Anderson, who was succeeded, in 1661 by Robert Saunders. In 1730 Robert Urie printed several works more tastefully than his predecessors. Soon after, A. and R. Foulis distinguished themselves; their five editions of the Latin, Greek, and English classics are well known. Andrew Wilson's type-foundery belongs to those of the first class; his letter excels in regularity and neatness. Public breweries were not established till after 1745; at present there is a great number of them: the porter is excellent, but the ale is of an inferior quality. In 1803 the number of licensed houses for retailing spirits amounted to 1230, besides 200 without licence, which were suppressed. The salmon caught in the Clyde is excellent. Herring and other sea-fish are very plentiful. In one year, betwixt July and November, above 2,000,0000 of fresh herrings were brought to the keys. Large quantities are pickled and sent to America and the West Indies. Glasgow is 402 miles from London; the mail-coach generally performs the journey in 63 hours. Glasgow has several suburbs; the oldest and most populous, is that called the Gorbals, containing above 5000 inhabitants. The streets and houses of Glasgow are regular and well built: it contains several handsome public buildings; of which the cathedral, or high church, is the most entire gothic building remaining in North Britain: it was begun by Achaius, bishop of Glasgow, in 1123, and was continued till completed by five successive bishops, the whole clergy of Scotland contributing to the vast expence. It is 284 feet long, 65 broad, and 90 feet high within the walls, with two large towers, on one of which a spire was built in the year 1420. The church is divided, by partitions, into three places of worship, which entirely destroy the beauty of its appearance. It is generally supposed that St. Mungo, or St. Kentigern, founded the first bishopric here in the year 560, and that it was made an archiepiscopal see in 1484. The college, or university, is a venerable building on the east side of the High street, founded in 1450 by Turnbull bishop of Glasgow. The reformation in 1560 almost annihilated the university, and most of its members were dispersed; chancellor Beaton carried all the charters, &c. to France, and deposited them in the Scots college at Paris. The university at present consists of a chancellor, generally a nobleman of high rank, a rector, dean of faculty, a principal, and 16 professors. Its library contains a large and valuable collection, enriched by many recent private donations. The observatory is fitted up with the most improved instruments for the practice of astronomy. The college buildings are neat and commodious, and the professors have houses contiguous to the building; the whole is surrounded with a garden of 10 acres for the use of the members. The average number of students are about 600. The Academical Institution, founded, in 1796, by the late Mr. Anderson, professor of natural philosophy, is a handsome and commodious building; and has all the valuable apparatus, library, and museum of its founder. This institution, which is supported by subscription, affords a regular course of instruction to those who do not intend to enter at the universities; ladies are also admitted, a privilege which other seminaries do not allow of. The town-house is an elegant building; the front is adorned with a range of Ionic pilasters, elevated on strong pillars with arches, forming a piazza; the top is ornamented with a balustrade. It contains a large assembly-room, town-hall, &c. Opposite this is the exchange, a square building, with an equestrian statue of William III. in the centre. Near the town-house is the Tolbooth, with a new tower surmounted by a spire. The Guildhall, in Bridge-street, has an elegant spire 200 feet in height. In this city are also numerous well endowed charitable institutions both for youth and old age. Besides the cathedral there are seven or eight other churches, all neat buildings, but presenting nothing remarkable in their construction or architecture. On each side of the town are extensive suburbs, containing the villages of Calltown, Graham Town, Parkhouse, Camlachie, and Gorbals; the latter of these contains 5,800 persons, and is united to the town by two handsome bridges over the Clyde, which is navigable for vessels drawing seven or eight feet water as far as the bridge; but vessels of larger burthen stop at New Port Glasgow, or Greenock. Glasgow was erected into a burgh by William the Lion in 1172; in 1450 James II. erected the city and barony into a royalty; and in 1611 it was made a royal burgh, to be holden under his majesty in free burgage. In 1636 Charles I. confirmed its power of electing a bailie on the river Clyde, with the power of exercising maritime, civil, and criminal jurisdiction within his liberty; and in 1690 the council were empowered to choose their own magistrates, and other officers, as fully and freely as the city of Edinburgh. The government of Glasgow is vested in a provost and three bailies, a dean of guild, deacon-convener, and a treasurer, assisted by a common council of 13 merchants and 12 tradesmen or mechanics. The provost is styled lord provost by courtesy, and is chief of the police, president of the community, and ex officio one of the justices of the peace. The bailies are similar to aldermen in English boroughs, and hold a weekly court for the recovery of trifling debts. The paving, cleansing, and lighting the streets is defrayed from the duties of imports and exports. Glasgow has several banking companies, two of which issue their own notes. The parish of the barony and the city were formerly one district, but they are now separate parishes. The boundary of the barony parish is from two to five miles round the city. In this district are many print and bleach-fields, and the whole of the villages within the barony contain near 19,000 inhabitants. The side cut from the great canal intersects the parish, and is of great utility to its trade. The water of the city and suburbs is not of the best quality: there are many chalybeate springs in the neighbourhood, some of which contain calcareous earth, whence they obtain a petrifying quality: at the village of Anderston is a spring containing a small quantity of soda or mineral alkali. On the south side of the Clyde lies the village of Gorballs, which was made a separate parish from Govan in 1791. The magistrates of the city are superiors of this barony, which is daily increasing in population and value by the numerous streets and buildings now erecting. Many of the mountains in the neighbourhood exhibit marks of volcanic origin, and basaltic columns are seen near the village of Calton. Lat. 55° 51′ 32″. Lon. 4° 16′ W.—Lettice's Letters, and sir J. Sinclair's Stat. Acct.

Glass, a parish lying partly in the shire of Aberdeen, and partly in that of Banff, situated on both sides of the Deveron, 3 miles from Huntly, and 40 from Aberdeen; containing 88 houses and 795 inhabitants.

Glass Loch, a lake in the parish of Kilteam, and shire of Ross, Scotland, which falls into a river of the same name.

Glassary, a parish in the shire of Argyle, Scotland, 20 miles from Inveraray, and 70 from Glasgow; containing 636 houses and 3293 inhabitants, of whom only 154 were returned as being employed in trade. It is watered by the river Ad. Loch Foyne is its eastern boundary.

Glassbrooke, a hamlet to the parish of Warrington, in the hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 1½ mile from Warrington, and 175 from London. Population included with that of Rixton.

Glassenbury, a hamlet to the parish of Cranbrook, in the hundred of Cranbrook, and lathe of Scray, Kent, 1 mile from Cranbrook, and 49 from London. Population included with that of Cranbrook.

Glasserton, a parish in the shire of Wigton, Scotland, on the east coast of Luce bay, 12 miles from Wigton, and 20 from Newton Douglas; containing 163 houses and 860 inhabitants. The sea-coast in this parish is bold, and the rocks afford abundance of sea-weed for the purposes of manure or the manufacture of kelp.

Glassford, a parish in the shire of Lanark, Scotland, 5 miles from Hamilton, and 9 from Lanark; containing 186 houses and 953 inhabitants, of whom 336 were returned as being chiefly employed in a cotton manufacture established at an adjacent village.

Glasshoughton, a village in Osgoldness wapentake of the west riding of York; containing 78 houses and 382 inhabitants.

Glassonby, a hamlet to the parish of Addingham, in Leath ward, Cumberland, 8 miles from Penrith, and 292 from London; containing 33 houses and 144 inhabitants.

Glaston, the name of a hundred in Somersetshire, in the centre of the county, between the Polden and Mendip hills.

Glastonbury, a market-town consisting of two parishes, in the hundred of Glaston, Somerset, 6 miles from Wells, and 130 from London; containing 391 houses and 2035 inhabitants, of whom 104 only were returned as being employed in trade, chiefly that of manufacturing worsted stockings. The spot on which this town stands was once called Ynyswytryn, or the Glass Island, and in Latin, Avalonia, and was entirely surrounded with marshes. It derived its celebrity from its abbey, which, during a period of 600 years, surpassed in value and authority every other in England, except that of Westminster: the grandeur of its ruins still conveys an idea to the beholder of its ancient magnificence. The abbot lived in all the state of regal splendour, with an income of near 40,000*l.* per annum: he had the title of lord, and sat among the barons in parliament. The last abbot, refusing to surrender his abbey to king Henry VIII. was, with two of his monks, drawn on a hurdle to the Torr near the town, and there hanged; the head of the abbot was set on the gate of his abbey, and his quarters were sent to Bath, Wells, Bridgewater, and Ilchester. This abbey was most liberally endowed by the munificence of king Ina, who built the great church, and is by some historians esteemed the founder; but it was of much earlier origin. In 1184 nearly the whole was consumed by fire; but it was afterwards rebuilt in greater splendour. It is said, that Henry II. relying on the tradition of several songs, which recorded this to be the burial-place of king Arthur, ordered a search to be made, when a leaden cross was discovered with a Latin inscription in rude gothic characters, which was thus translated: "Here lies the famous king Arthur, buried in the isle of Avalon." Beneath was found a coffin hollowed out of the solid rock, wherein were the bones of a human body, supposed to be those of king Arthur; which were then deposited in the church, and covered with a sumptuous monument. Of the ruins of this monastery the kitchen is the most entire, being probably of more recent construction than the other parts of the building. At the west end of the church are the walls of a chapel dedicated to Joseph of Arimathea. The town and environs of Glastonbury abound with religious relics; the most conspicuous of which is the Torr, or St. Michael's Tower (on which the last abbot was executed), standing on a high hill north-east of the town, where was formerly a small oratory, dedicated to St. Michael the archangel, which afterwards was so enlarged as to form a spacious and magnificent church and monastery, surrounded with dwelling-houses. These being all destroyed in 1271 by a violent earthquake, the church was splendidly rebuilt, the tower of which still remains an object of admiration to travellers. The town was built by king Ina about the year 708, and by him endowed with many privileges. About 80 years afterwards it was desolated by the Danes, but rebuilt by king Edmund. In 1184 both the town and abbey were consumed by fire, and again rebuilt by Henry II. It now contains two parishes, St. John's and St. Benedict's, and consists of two principal streets. It was once a parliamentary borough, but was disfranchised on the execution of abbot Whiting in 1539. Queen Anne made it a town corporate, governed by a mayor, justice, 8 aldermen, and 16 burgesses. Besides the two parish churches, which are both donatives, Glastonbury has two meeting-houses, 2 almshouses, and a good free school. South-west of the town is Wearyall hill; so called from a tradition, that St. Joseph and his companions, weary with their journey, sat down here, and that St. Joseph stuck his staff, a hawthorn stick, in the earth; it struck root, and constantly budded on Christmas-day. This famous thorn had two trunks, or bodies, one of which was destroyed in the reign of queen Elizabeth, and in the great rebellion the other was cut down; but there are trees, originally obtained from the old stock, still growing in many gardens of Glastonbury, as well as in various parts of the kingdom. Besides this holy thorn, there grew in the abbey church-yard a miraculous walnut-tree, which never budded till the feast of St. Barnabas, June 11, and on that day shot forth leaves, and flourished in the usual manner: in its stead now stands a fine walnut-tree of the common sort. It was at this town that St. Dunstan is said to have taken the Devil by the nose with a pair of red hot tongs, according to a ridiculous story related in the golden legend, printed by William Caxton in 1493. The George, one of the principal inns, was anciently an hospital for the accommodation of pilgrims resorting to the shrine of St. Joseph. The front is curiously ornamented with carved work, and was formerly decorated with 12 figures, said to be the Cæsars, two of which, with the mutilated figure of Charity, are still to be seen. Near the town are found several petrifactions, resembling snakes, cockles, oyster-shells, &c. Glastonbury has a good market on Tuesday; the fairs are on the Wednesday in Easter week, on September 19, October 10, and on the Monday se'nnight after St. Andrew's-day.—Rudge's Gloucestershire.

Glatton, a parish in the hundred of Normancross, Hunts, 11 miles from Huntingdon, and 70 from London; containing 71 houses and 323 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 21*l.* 8*s.* 11*d.*

Glayston, a parish in the hundred of Wrandike, Rutland, 2 miles from Uppingham, and 90 from London; containing 42 houses and 189 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 16*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of Peter-house college, Cambridge.

Glazeley, a hamlet to the parish of Bridgenorth, in the hundred of Stoddesdon, Salop, 3 miles from Bridgenorth, and 136 from London; containing 5 houses and 31 inhabitants.

Glemsford, a parish in the hundred of Babergh, Suffolk, 3 miles from Clare, and 53½ from London; containing 247 houses and 1215 inhabitants, of whom 666 were returned as being employed in various trades. It has a fair on the 24th June. The living is a rectory, value 30*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.

Glen, a word implying in Scotland an inland valley. Places have this appellation either from the names of rivers which run through them, as Glen Almond, the vale of the river Almond, &c.; or from some local peculiarity, as Glenmore, the great vale, Glen Cairn, the stony vale, &c.

Glen Great, a parish in the hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 6 miles from Leicester, and 90 from London; containing 115 houses and 549 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 12*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.* with Stretton chapel annexed.

GLEN LITTLE, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Aylestone, in the hundred of Guthlaxton, Leicester, 4 miles from Leicester, and 92 from London; containing 28 houses and 128 inhabitants.

GLENBERVIE, a parish in the shire of Kincardine, Scotland, 5 miles from Stonehaven, and 19 from Aberdeen; containing 273 houses and 1204 inhabitants, of whom 513 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture, chiefly that of weaving. It takes its name from being a vale or glen, through which runs the water of Bervie.—The Kirk town of Glenbervie has lately been made a barony in favour of the family of Douglas.

GLENBUCKET, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, on the banks of the Bucket, a stream of the Don, 12 miles from Charleston, and 40 from Aberdeen: containing 106 houses and 420 inhabitants. The whole parish belongs to the earl of Fife.

GLENCAIRN, a parish in the shire of Dumfries, 12 miles from Dumfries; containing 309 houses and 1403 inhabitants. It is watered by the river Cairn and several other small rivulets.

GLENCOE, a vale in the shire of Argyle, Scotland, near the head of Loch Etive, noted for being the birth-place of Ossian, as well as for the cruel massacre of its unsuspecting inhabitants, who had espoused the cause of James II. but had laid down their arms on the promise of an amnesty from William III. Thirty-eight persons were murdered in their beds, and about 150 made their escape. The celebrated Con-Foin, the hill of Fingal, stands on the north side of this vale.

GLENCOWEN, a river of Cumberland, which falls into the Ulls water.

GLENDROE, a vale in the shire of Argyle, Scotland: it is one of the passes to the Highlands, near the extremity of Loch Long. The scenery of this spot is wild and sublime, being overhung with steep and rugged rocks, composed almost entirely of a schistus, which shines like silver. Through the middle of the glen runs a considerable brook, formed by the waters of numerous rills from the mountains.

GLENCROSS, a parish in Mid-Lothian, Scotland, 7 miles west of Edinburgh; containing 81 houses and 390 inhabitants. At Castle Law are the vestiges of some camps. The battle of Pentland hill in 1666, is described on a rude stone erected on the spot. The ancient tower of Pelford, the residence of sir David Purves, in this parish, was repaired after the civil wars, and its name changed to Woodhouselee.

GLENDALE, the name of a ward or division of the county of Northumberland, in the northern part of the county, north of which is Norhamshire, belonging to the county of Durham.

GLENDON BARFOOT, a parish in the hundred of Rothwell, Northampton, 3 miles from Kettering, and 77 from London; containing 5 houses and 48 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge.

GLENDOVAN, a parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, 6 miles from Kinross, and 28 from Edinburgh; containing 26 houses and 149 inhabitants, on the banks of the river Dovan.

GLENELG, a parish in the shire of Inverness, Scotland, comprehending the districts of Glenelg, Knowdort, and North Morrar, 42 miles west of Fort Augustus; containing 528 houses and 2834 inhabitants. The great road from Fort Augustus to the Isle of Sky passes through this parish, in which there have been many castles and round towers in ancient times, and two of them are still entire.

GLENFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Sparkenhoe, Leicester, 3 miles from Leicester, and 99 from London; containing 69 houses and 302 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.*

GLENTHAM GREAT, a parish in the hundred of Plomsgate, Suffolk, 7 miles from Woodbridge, and 84 from London; containing 46 houses and 384 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

GLENHAM LITTLE, a parish half a mile from the foregoing; containing 41 houses and 319 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 6*l.*

GLENHOLM, a parish in the shire of Peebles, so named from the small rivulet Holm, which here falls into the Tweed, 12 miles from Peebles, and 30 from Edinburgh; containing 47 houses and 242 inhabitants. The ruins of several strong castles are still visible in this parish.

GLENISLA, a parish in the shire of Forfar, at the foot of the Grampian hills, on the river Isla, 6 miles from Forfar. This parish is 18 miles in length, and contains 221 houses and 996 inhabitants. The ruins of two castles, Forter and Newton, are still visible here.

GLENKENS, the northern district of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, containing the parishes of Kells, Balmaclellan, Dalry, and Carsphairn, and the royal burgh of New Galloway.

GLENLUCE, a district of Wigtonshire, Scotland, watered by the river Luce. Also a considerable village of the same name, situated on the bay of Glen Luce, where is a good harbour for small vessels; it contains about 200 inhabitants. The ruins of a priory are still visible here.

GLENLYON, a long narrow vale in Bradalbine, Perthshire, Scotland.

GLENMIRE, a village near Cork, in Ireland, where there are two manufactories of coarse woollens, chiefly such as are used for the army clothing.

GLENMUCIK, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, 12 miles from Castle-town, and 40 from Aberdeen; containing 476 houses and 1901 inhabitants, of whom 116 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. It is watered by the rivers Dee, Muich, and Gairn. In this parish is the lake of Cannor, about three miles in circumference, in which are several little islands, with the ruins of castles upon them. The celebrated mineral wells of Pannanach are by the banks of the Dee; and near the castle of Glengairn, belonging to the earl of Aboyne, is a vein of lead ore.

GLENORCHAY, a parish in the shire of Argyle, Scotland, 16 miles from Inverary, and 68 from Dunkeld; containing 174 houses and 1111 inhabitants. The river Urchay, which divides this parish, falls into a beautiful expanse of water, called Loch Awe.—The church and manor of Glenorchay are situated on an oblong islet, formed in the bed of the river. The higher parts of the parish were once covered with forests of lofty pines, but about 80 years ago they were nearly all cleared away. The mountains are mostly of granite, mixed with porphyry, and in some parts a beautiful green jasper is obtained. On some of the islands of Loch Awe are the remains of old castles. Near the villages of Bunaw, in this parish, are iron works belonging to the Lorn Furnace Company.

GLENSHIEL, a parish in the shire of Ross, Scotland, on an arm of the sea, called Loch Duich, 36 miles from Fort Augustus, and 64 from Inverness; containing 110 houses and 710 inhabitants. The great military road from Fort Augustus passes through this parish.

GLENTHAM, a parish in the hundred of Aslacoe, and Lindsay division, Lincoln, 7 miles from Market Raisin, and 143 from London; containing 48 houses and 258 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Lincoln.

GLENTILT, a pass in the Highlands of Athol, famous for the warriors which it anciently produced: on the south is the great hill of Beinglo, whose base is 35 miles in circumference. The road is extremely dangerous, and scarcely practicable for horses.

GLENTRATHEN, a parish in the shire of Forfar, Scotland, 10 miles from Forfar, and 10 from Blair Gowrie; containing 221 houses and 919 inhabitants. It is watered by the river Isla, and contains a lake about a mile in diameter.

GLENTWORTH, a parish in the hundred of Aslacoe, and Lindsay division of Lincoln, 7 miles from Gainsborough, and 144 from London; containing 41 houses and 193 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* with Spital chapel annexed.

GLINTON, a parish in the hundred of Nassaburgh, Northampton, 5½ miles from Peterborough, and 87 from London; containing 63 houses and 314 inhabitants. The church is a curacy.

GLOOSTON, a parish in the hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 4½ miles from Market Harborough, and 87 from London; containing 21 houses and 129 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.*

GLORORUM, a hamlet in the parish and ward of Bamburgh, Northumberland, 2½ miles from Belford, and 324 from London; containing 9 houses and 50 inhabitants.

GLOSSOP, a parish in the hundred of High Peake, Derby, 8 miles from Chapel-le-Frith, and 175 from London; containing 495 houses and 2759 inhabitants, of whom 1014 were returned as being employed in various trades, &c. The living is a vicarage, value 12*l.* 18*s.* 1*d.*

GLOUCESTER HILL, a hamlet to the parish of Warksworth, in Morpeth ward, Northumberland, 11 miles from Morpeth, and 302 from London; containing 5 houses and 21 inhabitants.

GLOUCESTER, a city and the metropolis of Gloucestershire, situated on the east bank of the river Severn, in the hundred of Dudston and Barton Regis, 8 miles from Tewkesbury, and 106 from London; containing 10 parishes, 1325 houses, and 7579 inhabitants, viz. 3428 males and 4151 females, of whom 2317 were returned as being employed in trade and manufactures, particularly those of pin-making, wool-stapling, rope-making, and malting: the value of the pins sent weekly to London is estimated at 20,000*l.* This city is very ancient, and was known to the Britons by the name of Caer Glovi; the Romans called it Glenn, and settled a colony here. The Saxons named it Gleaucestre, from the British words Glaw, fair, and Caer, a city. It continued in after times to be very eminent: some parliaments were held here, and here Henry III. was crowned; it has also given the title of duke or earl to many of the principal nobility and royal family of England. At present it is a pretty large but not a populous place, consisting principally of four spacious streets, meeting each other at right angles, near the centre of the city, and taking their names from the situation of the gate which originally stood at the bottom of each, as East Gate-street, West Gate-street, North Gate-street, and South Gate-street; there are also some back streets and lanes, chiefly on the west side of the city. Where the four main streets meet, formerly stood a lofty and beautiful cross; but this building falling to decay, and being also an impediment to the free passage of carriages, it was removed in 1750, when the city underwent several material improvements: the spot where the cross stood still retains the name. The city is well paved, and from its elevated situation, with a gradual descent on every side, bears a remarkably clean appearance: it contains, besides the cathedral, five parish churches, two grammar-schools, called the College and Crypt schools, and a blue-coat school, where boys are taught reading, writing, and arithmetic, and are afterwards apprenticed to trades; several places of worship for Dissenters, Quakers, &c. a Jews synagogue; a county infirmary in Southgate-street, erected in 1756, and supported by voluntary contributions; an hospital in Westgate-street, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, for the maintenance of 54 poor people, with a chaplain, physician, and surgeon; another hospital and chapel dedicated to St. James, for the maintenance of 19 poor people; a general workhouse, incorporated by act of parliament, for paupers, under the management of guardians elected annually by the several parishes; two commodious market-houses; an elegant theatre, recently built; and a custom-house and a county gaol, erected after the plan of the late benevolent Mr. Howard. A little without the town, on the London road, are also two hospitals belonging to the city, one dedicated to St. Margaret, the other to St. Mary Magdalen. A canal has lately been made from this city to Berkeley, capable of conveying vessels of 200 tons burthen, by which the difficult navigation of the Severn is avoided. At the head of this canal, close to the back of the city, is a capacious bason, fit for the reception of 100 vessels. At the bottom of Westgate-street stands the only remaining city gate; it is in a ruinous state, and leads to a wooden bridge which is connected with a long causeway of stone, that runs through an island, called the Isle of Alney, formed by the water of the Severn, which in winter inundates all the neighbouring meadows. The corporation of Gloucester consists of a recorder, 12 aldermen, one of whom is annually chosen mayor, a town-clerk, chamberlain, sword-bearer, 40 common council-men, four serjeants at mace, &c. besides 12 incorporated companies for trades, whose masters attend the mayor on all public occasions. It has sent members to parliament ever since the 23d of Edward I. The right of election lies in the freemen, and the sheriffs are the returning officers. The election is carried on in the Booth-hall, a curious old structure in an inn-yard, built in 1606. The inhabitants of Gloucester are supplied with water from two large reservoirs at the foot of Robin Hood hill, about a mile and a half distant from the city, whence it is conveyed by means of pipes to the houses in the city.—The cathedral of Gloucester is a very magnificent specimen of gothic architecture.—It was begun, about the year 1047, by Aldred bishop of Worcester (afterwards archbishop of York), nearly on the same ground where Osric, king of Northumberland, had before founded a monastery. In 1551, abbot Horton built the north aisle, and the great hall, now used as a library, and succeeding abbots enlarged and beautified the venerable pile. It was made a cathedral by Henry VIII. when he suppressed the monastery. This fabric, as it now appears, is 420 feet in length, and 144 in width.—From the centre of the building rises a majestic tower, 198 feet in height, surmounted by two beautifully pierced pinnacles, 24 feet in height. In the tower is a peal of eight bells, the tenor of which weighs 6000lb. The interior of the cathedral bears a solemn and impressive aspect; the pillars, which support the roof, are of an extraordinary magnitude, and on a late attempt to reduce their bulk, it was discovered that they were hollow, and filled within with loose stones. The choir is very lofty, and in a narrow passage over it is a remarkable echo, somewhat resembling that in the whispering gallery at St. Paul's, London. Beyond the choir is a very neat chapel, dedicated to the Virgin Mary; and under the choir is the monks old chapel, now used as a bone-house, where is an altar-piece, with an ancient painting of the End of the World and Day of Judgment. Among the various monuments in this cathedral, those of Robert duke of Normandy, and the unhappy Edward II. are most deserving of attention: the former is of wood, with the effigy of the duke; the latter is of alabaster. Gloucester had once a mint, and was surrounded with walls, defended by a castle, built in the reign of William the Conqueror, part of which was standing in Leland's time. The city has three large suburbs, and its boundaries are nearly three miles in circumference; it has several times suffered severely by fire, and in 1750 received material damage from a violent rain. The air is deemed very salubrious, and the inhabitants, particularly the females, are remarkable for comeliness.—The annual average of burials, as registered for 10 years, is about 180, bearing a proportion to the population of 1 in 42. This town was made a borough by king John, and a corporation by Henry III. In 1272, Edward I. held a parliament here, at which several useful laws were enacted, now called the Statutes of Gloucester. Richard II. also held a parliament here, and Richard III. who bore the title of duke of Gloucester, gave the city his sword and cap of maintenance, and made it a county of itself, with jurisdiction over the adjacent hundreds of Dudston and King's Barton: but these privileges were taken away by act of parliament after the restoration, and the walls were razed to the ground, because the inhabitants had shut their gates against Charles I. Gloucester once contained 11 parish churches, but six were demolished during the siege in 1643, and never rebuilt. In the city and neighbourhood are many remains of abbeys of black and white friars, and formerly the religious houses were so numerous here as to have given rise to the monkish

MONMOUTHSHIRE
HEREFORDSHIRE
WORCESTERSHIRE
WARWICKSHIRE
OXFORDSHIRE
BERKSHIRE WILTSHIRE
SOMERSETSHIRE
Severn R.
Monmouth
Gloucester
Cricklade
Tewkesbury
Cheltenham
Stroud
Bristol
Chepstow
Berkeley
Thornbury
Dursley
Wotton under Edge
Sodbury
Chipping Sodbury
Hawkesbury
Old Sodbury
Great Badminton
Malmesbury
Pickle Church
Kemerton
Sherborne
Northleach
Burford
Fairford
Lechlade
Bibury
Cirencester
Tetbury
Wickwar
Alderley
Berkeley
Evesham
Pershore
Upton
Ledbury
Ross
Monmouth
Newent
Dymock
Oxenhall
Tewkesbury
Winchcombe
Sudeley Castle
Bishops Cleeve
Cheltenham
Leckhampton
Prestbury
Painswick
Stroud
Minchinhampton
Nailsworth
Tetbury
Malmesbury
Cricklade
Highworth
Wootton Bassett
Swindon
Wantage
Faringdon
Abingdon
Oxford
Witney
Chipping Norton
Moreton in the Marsh
Stow on the Wold
Bourton on the Water
Northleach
Fairford
Lechlade
Burford
Tetbury
Wickwar
Alderley

proverb "as sure as God is in Gloucester." In the southern suburbs are remains of Lantony abbey, founded by the earl of Hereford for the monks who were driven from Monmouth by the Welsh. It is now converted into out buildings belonging to adjacent farms. The market is on Wednesdays and Saturdays; the fairs are on the 5th April, 5th July, 28th September, and 28th November.—Atkins's History of Gloucester, and Rudge's Gloucestershire.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE, a county of England, in the province of Canterbury and diocese of Gloucester, bounded on the north by Worcestershire and Warwickshire; on the east by Warwick, Oxford, and Wilts; on the south by Somerset; and on the west by the Severn, Monmouth, and Herefordshire: being about 65 miles long, and 25 broad; comprising 800,000 acres of land, of which about 300,000 are arable, and 450,000 pasturage. It is divided into 27 hundreds, viz. Berkley, Bisley, Blidesloe, Botloe, Bradley, St. Briavells, Brightwell, Barrow, Cheltenham, Cleeve, Crowthorne, Deerhurst, Dudstone and Kingsbarton, Grimbalds Ash, Henbury Kiftsgate, Duchy of Lancaster, Langley and Swineshead, Longtrees, Pucklechurch, Rapsgate, Slaughter, Tewksbury, Thornbury, Tibaldstone, Westbury, Westminster, and Whitestone; containing 1 city, Gloucester; 2 boroughs, Cirencester and Tewksbury; and 23 market-towns, viz. Berkley, Campden, Cheltenham, Colford, Dean, Dursley, Fairford, Lechlade, Marshfield, Minchin-hampton, Morton in Marsh, Newent, Northleach, Painswick, Sodbury, Stanley, Stowe, Stroud, Tetbury, Thornbury, Wickwar, Winchomb, and Wootton under Edge. The county contains 280 parishes and 46,457 houses inhabited by 250,809 persons, of whom 49,645, viz. 117,180 males and 133,629 females, were returned as being employed in trade, manufacture, or handicraft, and 49,420 in agriculture. The principal woollen manufactures are superfine, or Spanish, broad cloth; very fine single and double-milled cassimirs, rateens, white cloth for the army, second, or coarse cloth, of various kinds, not only for home consumption, but for exportation. The principal manufacturing district is in the vicinity of Stroud. The cloth manufactured here is mostly dyed in the piece: of late years, however, several manufactories have introduced the practice of dying the wool before it is spun. In the dying of black a considerable improvement was made about 10 years ago by a French emigrant; though it is not equal to the French black; neither does the scarlet possess the glow of the Draps des Gobelins. A cloth, blue on one side, and scarlet on the other, is dyed here for the use of the eastern nations. The grig-mill, preen, perpetual shearing frame, the lot to list shearing-frame, and other machinery for dressing the cloth, are in general use. The principal rivers of this county are the Severn and the Wye; besides which it is watered by the Isis, the Chern, the Coln, the Lethe, the Windrush, the Evenlode, the Leden, the Avon, the Caron, and the Stour. The river Severn divides it into two unequal parts. The south-west extremity is separated from Somersetshire by the Lower Avon, which falls into the sea below the city of Bristol. The Severn and Wye abound with excellent salmon, and supply the markets of the metropolis. Gloucestershire is naturally divided into three longitudinal stripes, or districts, which materially differ from each other. The eastern, by far the widest, is called the Cotswold, and consists of a long tract of high ground, for the most part bleak and bare, though it affords, in many places, a short fine grass, which makes excellent sheep-food. The sheep bred in this district are small, but have a fine light fleece; and the breed has of late years been much improved. Sainfoin is much cultivated here both for the purpose of pasture and for making hay. The middle district is that spacious and extensive vale bordering on the Severn, the fertile pastures of which furnish the kingdom with that kind of cheese for which the county is so celebrated, about 8000 tons of which are annually exported: this district is crossed by the Stroud canal. The western district, which is the smallest of the three, is diversified with hill and dale, and chiefly occupied by the forest of Deane, once the chief support of the English navy, but now mostly cleared and brought into cultivation; it contains several populous villages, though a few solitary deer still continue to run wild in its recesses. The forests of Deane and Kingswood abound with mines of iron and coal; and in the neighbourhood are several capital iron-works. The vale and forest of Dean is well stocked with orchards which produce excellent cider. The Styre apple, the cider of which is in great estimation, is peculiar to the western banks of the Severn. The perry of this district is the basis of most of the wine sold for Champagne in the metropolis. The bacon of this county is remarkably fine flavoured, and good for keeping. The air of the Cotswold hills is milder than might be expected from their height. There are, however, sometimes two or three weeks difference in the ripening of corn in the several parts of the district. The marks of ancient camps, to be traced in various parts of this county and the Fosseway, runs through it from Campden by Cirencester to Bath. The ancient inhabitants of this county were the Dobuni; under the Saxons it formed part of the kingdom of Mercia. It now sends eight members to parliament. The amount of money raised in the county for the maintenance of the poor in 1803, was 144,565*l.* being at the rate of 3*s.* 5*d.* in the pound; the amount of income returned under the Property Tax in 1806, 2,130,5?6*l.*; and the scale of mortality appears to have been, on an average of 10 years, as 1 to 30; 1-third of the existing population. The landed interest of the county lies between the Berkeley and Beaufort families. —Rudge's Gloucestershire.

GLUSBURN, a township to the parish of Kildwick, in Staincliff wapentake of the west riding of York, 3 miles from Skipton, and 214 from London; containing 95 houses and 533 inhabitants.

GLUVIAN'S ST. a parish in the hundred of Kerriar, Cornwall, ½ mile from Penrhyn, and 266 from London; containing 92 houses and 624 inhabitants. The borough of Penrhyn is situated in this parish. The mother church is a vicarage, value 21*l.* 6*s.* 10*d.* united with Budoke.

GLYMPTON, a parish in the hundred of Wootton, Oxford, 3 miles from Woodstock; and 64½ from London; containing 15 houses and 96 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 16*s.*

GLYNCORRWG, a parish in the hundred of Neath, Glamorganshire, Wales, 5 miles from Neath, and 192 from London; containing 18 houses and 102 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

GLYN FRAIAN, a parish in the hundred of Chirk, Denbighshire, Wales, 4 miles from Langollen, and 194 from London; containing 153 houses and 806 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

GLYNRUMNEY, a hamlet in the hundred of Caerphilly, Glamorganshire, Wales, on the banks of the river Rumney, which separates it from Monmouthshire, 1½ mile from Cardiff, and 161 from London; containing 91 houses and 475 inhabitants. It belongs to the parish of Rumpney, Monmouthshire.

GLYND, a parish in the hundred of Ringmer, and rape of Pevensey, Sussex, 2 miles from Lewes, and 51 from London; containing 24 houses and 216 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.*

GNOSALL, a parish in the hundred of Cuttlestone, Stafford, on the Rowley water, a branch of the river Trent, 7 miles from Stafford, 8 from Penkridge, and 137 from London; containing 144 houses and 814 inhabitants. The church was formerly collegiate, with four prebends, and had very extensive privileges as early as the reign of Henry I. It is now a curacy, under the bishop of Litchfield.

GOADBY, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Billesdon, in the hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 10 miles from Leicester, and 90 from London; containing 15 houses and 72 inhabitants.

GOADBY MARWOOD, a parish in the hundred of Framland, Leicester, 5½ miles from Melton Mowbray, and 109 from London; containing 32 houses and 181 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

GOATHILL, a parish in the hundred of Horethorne, Somerset, 2 miles from Sherborn, and 114 from London; containing 5 houses and 24 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 3*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.*

GOATLAND, a township and chapelry to the parish of Pickering, in Pickering lythe of the north riding of York, 2 miles from Pickering, and 225 from London; containing 67 houses and 261 inhabitants.

GOATHURST, a parish in the hundred of Taunton, Somerset, 3 miles from Bridgewater, and 143 from London; containing 45 houses and 296 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 10*s.* 7*d.*

GODALMING, the name of a hundred in Surry, at the south-western point of the county, and borders of Sussex.

GODALMING, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Godalming, Surry, 4 miles from Guildford, and 34 from London; containing 474 houses and 3405 inhabitants, of whom 582 were returned as being employed in various trades, &c. It is delightfully situated in a valley by the side of the river Wye, where that river, which is navigable to London, divides into several small streams. The waters abound with good fish, particularly pike. Its name is supposed to have been derived from Goda, a pious lady among the Saxons, who founded a religious house here. The church is a neat building, with a high and handsome spire; besides which there are a Quakers meeting-house, two chapels for Dissenters, a good charity school, and, on the common, an hospital endowed for 10 old men. The parish is divided into nine tythings. The town is governed by a warden and eight assistants, with a bailiff. It has several manufactories for weaving stockings, and one for the patent fleecy hosiery; wool combing, spinning of worsted, and weaving coarse woollen cloths, also gives employment to a number of hands in this parish. On the river are a grist-mill, two paper-mills, and three corn-mills. Godalming is noted for one Mary Tofts, an impostor, who for a considerable time, about the year 1726, puzzled the townsfolk, and even the faculty, by pretending to conceive and bring forth rabbits. Here is a good market on Saturday, and fairs on the 13th February and 10th July. The living is a vicarage, value 23*l.* 17*s.* 11*d.* in the patronage of the dean of Salisbury. —Manning's Surry.

GODINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Ploughley, Oxford, 4 miles from Bicester, and 56 from London; containing 21 houses and 99 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 7*l.* 18*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of Corpus Christi college, Oxford.

GODLEY, the name of a hundred in Surry, being the north-western point of the county, divided on the north from Bucks and Middlesex by the Thames, as well as bounded by it on the west.

GODMANCHESTER, a parish in the hundred of Toreland, Hunts, near the river Ouse, which divides it from Huntingdon, ½ mile from Huntingdon, and 57½ from London.

This was formerly a very large town. Henry of Huntingdon calls it a noble city. It contains, at present, 337 houses and 1573 inhabitants, of whom 202 were returned as being employed in trade, &c. The church is a very venerable gothic edifice, very large and commodious; besides which here are a well endowed free school, several almshouses, and a handsome stone bridge over the river. The inhabitants of this place have long been famed for their attention to agriculture, and when James I. was passing through it he was met by the farmers with 70 ploughs drawn by as many team of horses: his majesty was so pleased with this novel sight that he granted them a charter to be governed by two bailiffs and 12 assistants; but they have never sent members to parliament. The fair is on the Tuesday and Wednesday in Easter week. The living is a vicarage, value 17*l.* 5*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Westminster.

GODMANSTONE, a parish in the hundred of Cerne Tetcombe, and division of Sherborne, Dorset, 4 miles from Dorchester, and 121 from London; containing 24 houses and 127 inhabitants. The church is a small ancient structure. The living is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

GODMERSHAM, a parish in the hundred of Felborough, and lathe of Scray, Kent, 8½ miles from Canterbury, and 53 from London; containing 62 houses and 337 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 3*s.* 8*d.*

GODOLPHIN, a small village in the hundred of Penwith, Cornwall, 4 miles from Marazion, and 288 from London. It stands on an eminence, and has long been famous for its tin-mines; as also for giving name to the noble family of Godolphin, who were lords of this manor in the reign of William the Conqueror.

GODSBRIDGE, a singular curiosity, distant 2 miles from Bowes, in Yorkshire. It consists of a natural bridge of limestone rock forming a rude arch, 16 feet in the span, through which flows the river Greta; about a ¼ mile distant the river enters a subterraneous passage, and disappears for near half a mile, when it again breaks out through the cavities of the rocks.

GODSHILL, a parish in the liberty of East Medina, in the Isle of Wight, Hants, near the rise of the Cowes river, 5 miles from Newport, and 96 from London; containing 180 houses and 1079 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 37*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* united with the rectory of Niton and Whitwell chapel, in the patronage of Queen's college, Oxford.

GODSTONE, a parish in the hundred of Tanrige, Surry, 9½ miles from Croydon, and 19½ from London; containing 183 houses and 1081 inhabitants. Its name seems to be derived from Good stone, the place having been anciently noted for the goodness of its stone quarries. The church is on an eminence, at a considerable distance from the principal part of the village. The living is a vicarage.

GODSTOW, a hamlet to Wolvercot, in the hundred of Wootton, Oxford, 2 miles north of Oxford. Here are the remains of a nunnery founded for Benedictines in the reign of Henry I. Rosamond Clifford, the mistress of Henry II. passed much of her time with these nuns; she afterwards ended her days with them, and was interred near the altar.

GODWIN SANDS, a bank in the sea, near the coast of Kent, about 5 miles from Deal, and extending about 4 leagues. They were formerly part of the estate of the famous earl Godwin, till through neglect of keeping the walls, &c. in repair, they overflowed about the end of the reign of William Rufus, or the beginning of that of Henry I. These sands are extremely dangerous for vessels riding in the Downs, which are often driven on them by strong winds. They are divided into two parts by a very narrow channel, and are dry in many places at low water. The largest spot of this bank which becomes dry, is known by seamen by the name of Jamaica Island. Storms and strong tides alter the position of these sands every year. New floating lights have been placed off these sands, consisting of three distinct lights in the form of a triangle, of which the middle one is considerably the highest; when they are obscured in hazy weather a bell is kept constantly ringing.—Lambard's Perambulation of Kent.

GOSFORD, a hamlet to the parish of Kidlington, in the hundred of Wootton, Oxford, 4 miles from Oxford, and 59 from London; containing 7 houses and 47 inhabitants. Here is a bridge over the Cherwell.

GOYTRE, or COYTRE, a parish in the hundred of Abergavenny, Monmouth, 4½ miles from Usk, and 148 from London; containing 100 houses and 406 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*

GOLBORN, a township to the parish of Winwick, in the hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 1½ mile from Newton, and 190 from London; containing 159 houses and 962 inhabitants.

GOLBOURNE BELLOW AND GOLBOURNE DAVID, two small hamlets to the parish of Handley, in the hundred of Broxton, Chester, near Bunbury, 7 miles from Chester, and 173 from London; containing each 10 houses, the former 81 inhabitants, and the latter 62.

GOLCAR, a hamlet to the township of Longwood, in the parish of Huddersfield, in Aybrig wapentake of the west riding of York, on the river Ouse, 2½ miles from Huddersfield, and 189 from London; containing 326 houses and 1846 inhabitants, of whom 1191 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture.

GOLDCLIFF, a parish in the hundred of Caldicote, Monmouth, 4 miles from Newport, and 147 from London; containing 39 houses and 179 inhabitants. It lies about ½ mile from the sea, on a rocky peninsula about ½ mile in circumference, which towards the sea is about 60 feet in perpendicular height. A priory of black monks was founded in this parish, on the brow of the hill, in 1103, but its site is now occupied by a farm-house. The dykes, to check the depredations of the sea, were originally of earth, but they are now replaced by walls of stone, which extend several miles along the coast. The living is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of Eton college.—Coxe's Tour in Monmouthshire.

GOLDHANGER, a parish in the hundred of Thurstable, Essex, 3 miles from Maldon, and 40 from London; containing 48 houses and 331 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 25*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.* with Totham chapel annexed.

GOLDINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Barford, Bedford, 1 mile from Bedford, and 50 from London; containing 60 houses and 339 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.*

GOLDSBOROUGH, a parish in Claro wapentake of the west riding of York, 1½ mile from Knaresborough, and 213 from London; containing 32 houses and 177 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 1*s.*

GOLTON, a small village in the hundred of Knighton, Radnorshire, Wales, near Knighton, 158 miles from London; containing 41 houses and 211 inhabitants.

GOLSBY, a parish in the hundred of Gartree, and Lindsay division of Lincoln, 7¼ miles from Horncastle, and 146 from London; containing 38 houses and 191 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 2*d.*

GOLSPY, a parish in the shire of Sutherland, Scotland, on the south-east coast of the county, 8 miles from Dornoch, and 40 north of Inverness. It is divided by the burn of Golspy, at the mouth of which the village of the same name is situated, containing about 300 inhabitants. The whole parish contains 353 houses and 1616 inhabitants, of whom 85 were returned as being employed in trade.

GOLTHO, a hamlet to the parish of Bullington, and hundred of Wraggoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 1 mile from Wragby, and 143 from London. Population included with that of Bullington.

GOMERSALL, a township to the parish of Birstall, in Morley wapentake, west riding of York, 6 miles from Bradford, and 192 from London; containing 847 houses and 4303 inhabitants, of whom 916 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures.

GOMETRA, a small basaltic island of the Hebrides, between the islands of Mull and Staffa.

GONALSTON, a parish in the hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, 3 miles from Southwell, and 129 from London; containing 26 houses and 146 inhabitants. A hospital built in this parish by William Heriz in the reign of Henry III. still exists under the name of Gonalston Spittle: here is also a small charity school. The living is a rectory, value 7*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.*

GONERBY GREAT, a parish in the liberties of Grantham Soke, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 1½ mile from Grantham, and 112 from London; containing 128 houses and 559 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 2*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.*

GONERBY LITTLE, a hamlet to the parish of Grantham, in Grantham Soke liberties, Lincoln, 2 miles from Grantham, and 112½ from London. Population included with that of Manthorpe.

GOODERSTONE, a parish in the hundred of South Greenhoe, Norfolk, 3½ miles from Swaffham, and 90 from London; containing 44 houses and 292 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 12*s.*

GOODLEY, a parish in the hundred of Braunton, Devon, 2 miles from Barnstaple, and 191 from London; containing 53 houses and 248 inhabitants. It stands on a small brook, and is noted for the excellence of its black cherries. The living is a rectory, value 14*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.*

GOODMANHAM, a parish in Beacon Holme division of the wapentake of Harthill, in the east riding of York, 1½ mile from Monk Weighton, and 194 from London; containing 27 houses and 149 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 19*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*

GOODNESTONE, a parish in the hundred of Feversham, and lathe of Scray, Kent, 1½ mile from Feversham, and 48½ from London; containing only 9 houses and 68 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

GOODRICH, a parish in the hundred of Greytree, Hereford, 3 miles from Ross and Monmouth, and 125½ from London; containing 97 houses and 542 inhabitants. The remains of an ancient castle built in this parish soon after the conquest are still visible; it was the ancient seat of the Talbots, and apparently a place of great strength. At Flansford, a short distance from this castle, was a priory of black canons, founded by one of the Talbots in 1347. In the neighbourhood are the traces of several Roman stations. The village of Goodrich is pleasantly situated on the banks of the Wye. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Hereford.

GOODWORTH CLATFORD, a parish in the hundred of Wherwell, division of Andover, Hants, on the river Anton, 2 miles from Andover, and 64 from London; containing 26 houses and 298 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.*

GOOLE, a hamlet to the parish of Snaith, wapentake of Osgoldcross, in the west riding of York, 1 mile from Snaith, and 175 from London; containing 56 houses and 294 inhabitants.

GOOSEY, a tything to the parish of Stanford in the Vale, in the hundred of Ock, Berks, 3 miles from Wantage, and 62 from London; containing 21 houses and 139 inhabitants.

Goosetrey, a hamlet to the parish of Sandbach, in the hundred of Northwich, Chester, 2 miles from Sandbach, and 163 from London. Population returned included with that of Barnshaw.

Goosnargh, a township to the parish of Kirkham, in the hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, 5 miles from Preston, and 221 from London; containing 246 houses and 1558 inhabitants, of whom 766 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture.

Gorbals, a parish and village in the shire of Lanark, Scotland, on the south side of the Clyde opposite to Glasgow, of which it is considered a suburb.

Gordon, a parish in the shire of Berwick, in the district of Lauderdale, Scotland, 4 miles from Greenlaws, and 50 from Edinburgh; containing 179 houses and 802 inhabitants. It is watered by the rivers Eden and Blackadder, on which are several cornmills. In the neighbourhood are many extensive bogs and mosses which supply the inhabitants with fuel.

Goreing, a parish in the hundred of Poleing, rape of Arundel, Sussex, near Worthing, 7 miles from Arundel, and 67 from London; containing 63 houses and 419 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 10*s.*

Gorgeham. See Georgeham, Devon.

Gorey, or Newborough, a town in the county of Wexford, and province of Leinster, Ireland, 21 miles north of Wexford, and 39 south of Dublin.

Gorleston, a parish in the hundred of Mutford and Lothingland, Suffolk, on the river Yare, 1¼ mile from Yarmouth, and 123 from London; containing 338 houses and 1728 inhabitants, of whom 200 were returned as being employed in trade, &c. The living is a rectory, value 11*l.* united with Little Yarmouth.

Gorron, a parish in the hundred of Powder, Cornwall, 3 miles from Tregoney, and 250 from London; containing 183 houses and 1009 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 20*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Exeter.

Gort, a town of Galway, in the province of Connaught, Ireland, 16 miles from Galway, and 98 from Dublin.

Gortahurk, a village in the county of Donegal, and province of Ulster, Ireland.

Gortin, a small village in the county of Tyrone, and province of Ulster, Ireland.

Gorton, a township and chapelry to the parish of Manchester, in the hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 2 miles from Manchester, and 182 from London; containing 202 houses and 1127 inhabitants.

Gosbeck, a parish in the hundred of Bosmere and Claydon, Suffolk, 3 miles from Needham Market, and 75 from London; containing 36 houses and 284 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.*

Gosberton, a parish in the hundred of Kitonr, and parts of Holland, Lincoln, 8 miles from Boston, and 102½ from London; containing 274 houses and 1139 inhabitants, of whom 112 were returned as being employed in trade, &c. The living is a vicarage, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Lincoln.

Goscote East and West, the name of two hundreds in Leicestershire, comprising about one third of the county north of Leicester, bordering on Nottinghamshire.

Gosfield, a parish in the hundred of Hinckford, Essex, 2 miles from Halstead, and 44 from London; containing 75 houses and 460 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.*

Gosforth North and South, two small villages forming a parish, in Castle ward, Northumberland, 3 miles from Newcastle, and 279 from London; containing 31 houses and 196 inhabitants. The living is a curacy.

Gosforth, a parish in the ward of Allendale above Derwent, Cumberland, 4 miles from Egremont, and 306 from London; containing 69 houses and 330 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 17*l.* 14*s.* 7*d.*

Gosport, a market-town in the parish of Alverstoke, Hants, on the west side of Portsmouth harbour, over which there is a constant ferry, 5 miles from Fareham, and 78½ from London, but the nearest way is by Portsmouth, 72 miles, and across the ferry; containing 1863 houses and 11,295 inhabitants, (viz. 4753 males and 6542 females) of whom 1724 were returned as being employed in various trades. This is a place of great trade and business, but more particularly so in time of war, from the number of docks here for the king's service. Here is likewise a large iron-foundery, in which various articles are cast for the use of the navy. A little to the south of this town, nearer the sea, is that noble building, Haslar hospital, for the cure of the sick and wounded seamen in his Majesty's service. It has a strong fort, with a platform well mounted with cannon, to defend the Channel. Here is also a neat chapel of ease to the mother church. The market is on Saturday; the fairs on the 4th May and 10th October.—Warner's Hants.

Gotherhurst, a parish united with Stoke Goldington, in the hundred of Newport, Bucks, 4 miles from Newport Pagnel, and 54 from London. Population included with that of Stoke Goldington.

Gotham, a parish in the hundred of Rushcliff, Notts, 7 miles from Nottingham, and 117 from London; containing 91 houses and 475 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 19*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.*

Gotherington, a hamlet to the parish of Bishop's Cleeve, in the hundred of Cleeve, Gloucester, 4 miles from Cheltenham, and 99 from London; containing 70 houses and 195 inhabitants.

Goudhurst, or Gouldhurst, a parish in the hundred of Marden, and lathe of Scray, Kent, 14 miles from Tunbridge, and 44 from London; containing 284 houses and 1782 inhabitants, of whom 111 were returned as being employed in various trades. This was formerly a market-town, and carried on a considerable clothing trade; but it is now gone to decay. The church is a modern building, and the parish has two free schools. The fair is on the 26th August. The living is a vicarage, value 26*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Rochester.

Gourdon, a small fishing village in Kincardineshire, Scotland, 2 miles from the burgh of Inverbervie; containing 37 houses and 200 inhabitants. It has a small indifferent harbour.

Gourock, a small town and harbour in the shire of Renfrew, Scotland, ¼ mile distant from Greenock, to which it is nearly joined by a row of houses; and may be considered as a suburb thereof. It was made a burgh of barony by king Charles I.

Govan, a parish partly situated in the shire of Renfrew, and partly in that of Lanark, 1 mile from Glasgow, to which there is a ferry over the river Clyde. It contains 748 houses and 6701 inhabitants, of whom 1314 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures, but principally of cotton and linen. The parish is nearly divided by the river Clyde, on the banks of which and the river Kelvin are several bleach fields. About 2 miles from the church are the remains of an old castle, of Gothic architecture; and near the banks of the Kelvin are the ruins of what was anciently the country residence of the bishops of Glasgow.

Gowdall, a hamlet to the parish of Snaith, in Osgoldness wapentake, of the west riding of York, 1½ mile from Snaith, and 176 from London; containing 42 houses and 218 inhabitants.

Goxhill, a parish in the hundred of Yarborough, in Lindsay division of Lincoln, 3 miles from Barton on Humber, and 169 from London; containing 146 houses and 596 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.*

Goxhill, a parish in Holderness wapentake of the east riding of York, 2 miles from Hornsea, and 188 from London; containing only 8 houses and 54 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 8*l.*

Goyte, a river of Derbyshire and Lancashire, which falls into the Mersey.

Goytre. See Gottre, Monmouth.

Grace-dieu, a hamlet to the parish of Belton, in the hundred of West Goscote, Leicester, 3 miles from Loughborough, and 111 from London. Population included with that of Belton.

Grade, a parish in the hundred of Kerriar, Cornwall, near the Lizard point, 8 miles from Kelston, and 284 from London; containing 62 houses 320 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 1*s.* 5*d.*

Græmsay, one of the Orkney islands, united to the island of Hoy as a parish: it is nearly 1½ mile long and 1 in breadth, and contains about 36 families and 160 persons. Considerable quantities of kelp are prepared here.

Graffham, a parish in the hundred of Leightonstone, Hunts, 3½ miles from Kimbolton, and 65 from London; containing 33 houses and 176 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* 14*s.* 4*d.*

Graffham, a parish in the hundred of Easebourne, and rape of Chichester, Sussex, 2½ miles from Midhurst, and 62 from London; containing 45 houses and 260 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.*

Grafton, a hamlet to the parish of Beckford, in the hundred of Tibaldstone, Gloucester, 6 miles from Tewksbury, and 100 from London; containing 34 houses and 178 inhabitants. In the year 1764 a large tract of land, amounting to nearly 16 acres, fell from the side of Breedon hill, and entirely covered several pasture grounds, and a considerable space of the common field at the bottom of the hill. It is remarkable, that the ground which then shifted its position retained its own surface almost entire; and the tops of trees 20 feet high were left only two feet above ground. This accident was attributed to the incessant rains at that time.

Grafton, a hamlet to the parish of Hemscot, in the hundred of Bampton, Oxford, near the Isis or Thames, 4 miles from Bampton, and 74 from London; containing 15 houses and 66 inhabitants.

Grafton, a hamlet to the parish of Bromesgrove, in Halfshire hundred, Worcester, 1½ mile from Bromesgrove, and 117½ from London; containing 11 houses and 72 inhabitants.

Grafton-Flyford, a parish in the hundred of Pershore, Worcester, 6 miles from Droitwich, and 112 from London; containing 49 houses and 184 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 20*l.* 0*s.* 10*d.*

Grafton, a hamlet to the parish of Great Bedwin, in the hundred of Kinewardstone, Wilts, 2 miles from Bedwin, and 72½ from London. Population included with that of Great Bedwin.

Grafton, a hamlet to the parish of Marton, in Claro wapentake, west riding of York, 3 miles from Aldborough, and 211 from London. Population included with that of Marton.

Grafton Regis, a parish in the hundred of Cleley, Northampton, on the river Tove, 5 miles from Stony Stratford, and 57 from London; containing 31 houses and 167 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 9*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the crown.

Grafton Underwood, a parish in the hundred of Huxloe, Northampton, 3 miles from Kettering, and 75 from London; containing 45 houses and 227 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.*

Grafton Temple, a parish in the hundred of Barlichway, Warwick, 5 miles from Stratford-on-Avon, and 99 from London; containing 46 houses and 216 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Grafton Ardens, a small hamlet to the last-mentioned parish, from which it is distant ½ mile to the south-west. Population included with that of Grafton Temple.

Grahampston, a village in the barony of Glasgow and shire of Lanark, Scotland, containing about 900 inhabitants; being joined to Glasgow by several streets, it may be considered as a suburb to that city.

Grain, Isle of, an islet opposite to Shepey, at the mouth of the Thames, in the hundred of Hoo, and lathe of Aylesford, Kent. It is formed by the Yantlet creek, running from the Medway to the Thames, being about 3¼ miles long and 2½ wide. It contains 31 houses and 191 inhabitants; but has no regular village, the houses being mostly scattered on low marshy land. It has several salt-works at the bottom of the island. Nearly opposite to Sheerness is a small church, called St. Peter's, the living of which is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*

Grainsby, a parish in the hundred of Bradley Haverstoc, Lindsay division of Lincoln, 7 miles from Grimsby, and 163 from London; containing 15 houses and 85 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.*

Grainthorpe, a parish in the hundred of Louth Esk, Lindsay division of Lincoln, 3 miles from Saltfleet, and 162 from London; containing 79 houses and 408 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Graitney, a parish in the shire of Dumfries, Scotland, on the banks of the Solway Frith, 12 miles from Carlisle, and 316 from London; containing 300 houses and 1765 inhabitants, of whom 131 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. On the Solway Frith, in this parish, are several harbours, tolerably safe and commodious for small vessels. This village is the first stage in Scotland on the road to Edinburgh, and has long been famous by the name of Gretna Green, where stolen marriages are contracted by fugitive lovers from England. The ceremony is performed by several persons, none of whom are clergymen. The greater part of the trade is monopolized by a tobacconist, and not a blacksmith, as has been generally thought. It is supposed, that about 60 or 70 couple are annually married in this way; the fee demanded for reading the form, which is that of the church of England, is generally determined by the appearance of the parties, or the urgency of the case; sometimes nothing less than 20 guineas will satisfy the avarice of this hymeneal factor, who signs the certificate, and thus legalizes the marriage. Nothing further being required by the Scottish law to render a marriage contract valid than that there be sufficient witnesses to it. The person officiating is indeed liable to an imprisonment of a few days, for not being a licensed minister, but the irregularity does not affect the parties married. Graitney-hall has of late been fitted up as a commodious stage inn by the earl of Hopetoun, the proprietor. The village of Springfield, on the estate of sir William Maxwell, promises in time to become a very thriving manufactory. At Graitney Mains are the ruins of an oval druidical temple, enclosing about an acre of ground.

Graizley, a tything to the parish of Sulhamsted, in the hundred of Theale, Berks, 3½ miles from Reading, and 42½ from London; containing 17 houses and 87 inhabitants.

Grampian Hills, a chain of hills in Scotland, extending from the district of Cowal in Argyleshire on the Atlantic, to Aberdeen on the German ocean, and thence turning north-west to Moray and the borders of Inverness. Their name is derived from the words Grant and Bhein, signifying the huge or ugly mountains. The soil is remarkably fertile, and interspersed with numerous valleys, which are well watered by rivulets: many of the streams forming large expanses of water well stocked with fish. The general height of these hills varies from 1400 to 3500 feet above the level of the sea; but Mount Cairngorm in Morayshire, and Benlomond in Dumbarton, are still higher.

Grampound, a tything to the parish of St. Aldate's, in the city of Oxford, situate in the hundred of Hormer, Berks, ½ mile from Oxford, and 54 from London; containing 36 houses and 172 inhabitants.

Grampound, a borough and market-town in the parish of Creed and hundred of Powder, Cornwall, 8 m from Truro, and 263 from London; containing 80 houses and 525 inhabitants. The river Fale, or Vale, is of a considerable breadth at this town, where is a good stone bridge over it. Grampound is supposed to stand on the site of the ancient town of Voluba, which when the bridge was erected received the appellation Grand-pont, or the great bridge. The remains of a famous Caedefulo, or Felon wood, which was granted with all the lands in it to this town by king Edward I. are still to be seen. By the same prince the town was made a borough with very extensive privileges, particularly that of freedom from toll throughout all Cornwall. The corporation consists of a mayor, eight magistrates, a recorder, and town clerk. It sends two members to parliament; and the mayor is the returning officer. The chapel of ease to the parish church is a small neat building. A small manufactory of gloves is carried on in this town. The market is on Saturday, and the fairs are on the 18th January, 25th March, and 11th June.—Polwhele's Cornwall.

Granard, a borough and market-town in the county of Longford, province of Leinster, Ireland, 16 miles from Longford, and 52 from Dublin. It takes its name from Grianard, or "the height of the sun," and was formerly the residence of the chiefs of North Teffia. In this town have lately been given annual prizes to the best performers on the Irish harp. It gives title of earl to the family of Forbes. A remarkable hill here is called the Moat of Granard, thought to be artificial, and the scite of a Danish castle or fort commanding a view of six or seven adjoining counties.

GRANBY, a parish in the hundred of Bingham, Notts, 4 miles from Bingham, and 120 from London; containing 69 houses and 329 inhabitants. The fair is on the 1st November. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.*

GRANCHESTER, a parish in the hundred of Wetherleigh, Cambridge, on the river Cam, 1¼ mile from Cambridge, and 51 from London; containing 35 houses and 294 inhabitants. It is recorded as having been anciently a city. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 14*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge.

GRANDBOROUGH, a parish in the hundred of Ashendon, Bucks, 2 miles from Winslow, and 48 from London; containing 44 houses and 230 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* in the patronage of the crown.

GRANDBOROUGH, a parish in the hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, 4 miles from Southam, and 86 from London; containing 89 houses and 407 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.*

GRANDHERME, a village on the river Don, near Aberdeen, where, of late years, a rich vein of magnesia has been discovered and worked.

GRANGE, a hamlet to the parish of West Kirby, in the hundred of Wirriall, Cheshire, 5 miles from Parkgate, and 190 from London; containing 13 houses and 104 inhabitants.

GRANGE, a parish in the shire of Banff, Scotland, on the banks of the river Isla, 4 miles from Keith, and 46 from Aberdeen; containing 316 houses and 1529 inhabitants. Vast quantities of lime-stone are dug here. The ruins of Kinloss abbey are still remaining.

GRANGEMOUTH, a village in the shire of Stirling, Scotland, at the junction of the great canal with the river Carron, near the Forth, 2 miles from Borrowstonness, and 8 from Linlithgow; containing 100 houses and 500 inhabitants. It was first erected by sir Laurence Dundas, in 1777, to accommodate the vessels passing through the canal. It is only a creek to Borrowstoness.

GRANSDEN GREAT, a parish in the hundred of Foreland, Hunts, 6 miles from St. Neot's, and 52 from London; containing 78 houses and 412 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 7*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of Clare hall, Cambridge.

GRANSDEN LITTLE, a parish in the hundred of Longstow, Cambridge, 12 miles from Cambridge, and 52 from London; containing 38 houses and 232 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 18*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.

GRANSMOOR, a hamlet to the parish of Burton Agnes, in Dickering lythe, east riding of York, 5 miles from Great Driffield, and 202 from London; containing 8 houses and 49 inhabitants.

GRANSTONE, a parish in the hundred of Dewsland, Pembrokeshire, Wales, 3 miles from Tenby, and 254 from London; containing 28 houses and 156 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 8*s.* 11*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. David.

GRANTA, a river of Cambridgeshire, which falls into the Cam at Cambridge.

GRANTOWN, a hamlet to the parish of Cromdale, in the shire of Moray, Scotland, near the river Spey, over which it has a bridge, 3 miles from Cromdale, and 135 from Edinburgh. The buildings of this hamlet, which are neat, with a town-house and prison of elegant architecture, have sprung up within the last 30 years; the site, prior to that time, being merely a barren heath.

GRANTHAM, a borough and market-town in the liberties of Grantham Soke, and parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 14 miles from Newark, and 111½ from London; containing 605 houses and 3303 inhabitants, viz. 1553 males and 1750 females, of whom 563 were returned as being employed in various trades, &c. It is situated on the side of the river Witham, on the ancient Roman road, called Ermine-street, and appears to have been a strong Roman station. Near it was Newbo, a monastery of Premonstratensian canons, founded in 1198, and also another of Franciscans. The borough is governed by an alderman, recorder, 12 common burgesses, a coroner, an escheator, 12 second-men, who are the common council, and six constables to attend the court. It first sent members to parliament in the reign of Edward IV. who are chosen by the freemen of the corporation. The Soke of Grantham comprehends 12 neighbouring villages, in which district the aldermen and burgesses act as justices of the peace. The church is a very elegant stone structure, with one of the loftiest spires in the kingdom, being 282 yards high; but the tower is much disfigured; the staircase, which stands in one corner, being an octagonal projection on the outside. The spire was much injured by a storm in 1797. The inside of the church is very handsome, has a good toned organ, and 10 bells. The charnel-house is remarkable for the number of its sculls and bones bleached by the air, which are placed in regular order in rows one above the other. In this church is a beautiful monument for sir Dudley Ryder, formerly lord chief justice of the King's Bench, who was buried in 1756. In the town are two good charity schools; and it is worthy of remark, that here sir Isaac Newton first received the rudiments of literature. In a part of the town, called Peter Church hill, was formerly a church, and near it stood a cross to the memory of queen Eleanor, erected by Edward I. A navigable canal passes from Grantham to Nottingham, where it joins the Trent, and thence runs to Cromford in Derbyshire. The market is on Saturday, and is well supplied with corn and all kinds of provisions. The fairs are on the 5th Monday in Lent, Holy-Thursday, July 10, October 26, and December 17, all for horses, cattle, &c. The living is a vicarage, value 17*l.* 15*s.* 7*d.* with Braceby and Gunnerby annexed.—Howlett's Lincoln, and Oldfield's Boroughs.

GRANTLEY, a hamlet to the parish and liberties of Rippon, in the west riding of York, 3 miles from Rippon, and 225 from London; containing 39 houses and 195 inhabitants.

GRAPPENHALL, a parish in the hundred of Bucklow, Cheshire, 8 miles from Kautsford, and 180 from London; containing 36 houses and 338 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 6*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.*

GRASSBY, a parish in the hundred of Yarborough, and Lindsay division of Lincoln, 3 miles from Caistor, and 160 from London; containing 31 houses and 168 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 17*s.* 8*d.*

GRASSGARTH, a hamlet to the parish of Kendal, in Kendal ward, Westmoreland, 2 miles from Kendal, and 262 from London. Population returned with that of Hugill.

GRASSINGTON, a hamlet to the parish of Linton, in Staincliff wapentake of the west riding of York, 9 miles from Skipton in Craven, and 225 from London. Population included with that of Linton. The fairs are on the 4th March, 24th April, 29th June, and 26th September.

GRASSMERE, a parish in Kendal ward, Westmoreland, 3 miles from Ambleside, and 277 from London; containing 57 houses and 270 inhabitants. From the top of Grassmere hill is a most beautiful prospect. The church stands at a small distance from Grassmere water or lake, on the side of the river Rothay. The living is a rectory, value 28*l.* 11*s.* 5*d.*

GRASSTHORPE, a hamlet to the parish of Normanton on Trent, in the hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, 9 miles from Newark, and 133 from London; containing 66 houses and 286 inhabitants.

GRATELY, a parish in the hundred and division of Andover, Hants, 5 miles from Andover, and 68 from London; containing 26 houses and 155 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 9*s.* 2*d.*

GRATTON, a hamlet to the parish of Youlgrave, in the hundred of High Peak, Derby, 3 miles from Bakewell, and 153 from London; containing 5 houses and 35 inhabitants.

GRATWICH, a parish in the hundred of Totmonslow, Stafford, 3 miles from Uttoxeter, and 137 from London; containing 14 houses and 107 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*

GRAVELEY, a parish in the hundred of Papworth, Cambridge, 4 miles from Caxton, and 53 from London; containing 30 houses and 156 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 13*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of Jesus college, Cambridge.

GRAVELEY, a parish in the hundred of Broadwater, Herts, 2 miles from Stevenage, and 33 from London; containing 39 houses and 260 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 10*d.* united with Sheffield.

GRAVENEY, a parish in the hundred of Boughton Blean, and lathe of Scray, Kent, 2 miles from Feversham, and 49 from London; containing 23 houses and 152 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 12*l.* in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury.

GRAVENEY. See TOOTING, Surry.

GRAVENHURST UPPER, a parish in the hundred of Flitt, Bedford, 10 miles from Luton, and 41 from London; containing 31 houses and 201 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 12*s.* 11*d.* in the patronage of the crown.

GRAVENHURST LOWER, a hamlet to the foregoing, from which it is 1 mile distant, and 9 from Luton; and containing 9 houses and 48 inhabitants.

GRAVESEND, a market-town in the hundred of Toltingtrough, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, and the first port in the river Thames, 22½ miles from London; containing 401 houses and 2483 inhabitants, viz. 1205 males and 1278 females, of whom 783 were returned as being employed in various trades. This parish was incorporated with that of Milton in the 10th year of queen Elizabeth, and is governed by a mayor, 12 jurats, and 24 common council-men. The old town of Gravesend being burnt in 1380, by the French and Spaniards, who came up the river with row gallies, Henry VIII. raised a platform here, and another at Milton, for the defence of the river; for which purpose also the present town was erected in 1513. The manor being in the possession of the abbot of St. Mary le Grace, on Tower hill, he obtained for Gravesend and Milton from Richard II. the exclusive privilege of conveying passengers to London, for which they were to provide boats and carry all persons at 2*d.* per head. This privilege is still enjoyed, but the fare is now 1*s.* each. The boats depart from Billingsgate every tide at high water, on the ringing of a bell, and from Gravesend to London every flood. Here was formerly a nunnery, the chapel of which may still be traced in the cellar of a tavern standing on its site; and in Church field, at some distance from the town, stood the ancient church. The plow often discovers ruins of the building, or bones of persons buried in the church-yard. From the inconvenient distance of the church, the inhabitants built a chapel at their own expense, dedicated to St. George, at the end of chapel-lane, which ultimately became the parochial church; on the delapidation of the original church, not many years after it had been rebuilt by bishop Fisher in 1516. In 1727, St. George's chapel was destroyed by fire, together with the greatest part of the town; and the present elegant church was erected by act of parliament passed in 1731, as one of the 50 new churches ordered to be built by queen Anne. Gravesend has a set of good almshouses, the gift of Henry Penock in 1624, consisting of 21 dwelling houses, and a house for a weaver to employ the poor. The town-house, which stands in the middle of the High street, is a very handsome building, erected in 1764. In 1772 the inhabitants obtained an act for paving and lighting the streets, which has rendered them very commodious. The gardens, round the town, are so rich and fertile, that they not only supply the numerous shipping which stop here with all kinds of vegetables, but they furnish also the London market: this place is also remarkable for its excellent asparagus. All outward-bound vessels are obliged to bring to here, till they have been examined by the proper Custom-house officers, and received their clearances; the Custom-house office being near the town quay. Here also all foreigners are detained, on arriving from abroad, till they have obtained permission, from the secretary of state's office, to proceed; and all foreigners departing must receive their clearance from the Alien office here. A centinel, at the Block-house below the town, gives notice, by the firing of a musket, to vessels coming up the river, that they may receive on board the necessary Custom-house officers, who are here in waiting for the purpose. Opposite the Block-house, on the Essex shore, is Tilbury fort, having a strong battery garrisoned by a company of invalids. The market is well supplied with all kinds of provisions on Wednesday and Saturday; and on Sunday morning there is a good fish market. The living is a rectory, value 15*l.* in the patronage of the crown.—Pocock's Gravesend, and Hasted's Kent.

Gravingham, a parish in the hundred of Corringham, Lindsay division of Lincoln, 7 miles from Gainsborough, and 155 from London; containing 18 houses and 94 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 25*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*

Gravrigg, a township in the parish and ward of Kendal, Westmoreland, 5 miles from Kendal, and 265 from London; containing 37 houses and 199 inhabitants.

Grays Thurrock. See Thurrock Grays, Essex.

Greasebrough, a township to the parish of Rotheram, in the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, in the west riding of York, 2 miles from Rotherham, and 160½ from London; containing 192 houses and 1166 inhabitants.

Greasebey, a hamlet to the parish of Woodchurch, in the hundred of Wirrall, Cheshire, 6 miles from Liverpool, 16 from Chester, and 196 from London; containing 27 houses and 123 inhabitants.

Greaseley, a parish in the hundred of Broxtow, Notts, 7 miles from Nottingham, and 131 from London; containing 574 houses and 2968 inhabitants, viz. 1550 males and 1418 females, of whom 820 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 5*s.*

Greatham, a parish in Stockton ward, Durham, 7 miles from Stockton, and 256 from London; containing 90 houses and 442 inhabitants. In this parish is an ancient hospital, originally founded by the bishop of Durham in 1262. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.*

Greatham, a parish in the hundred and division of Alton, Hants, 4 miles from Petersfield, and 51 from London; containing 24 houses and 129 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.*

Greatham, a hamlet to the parish of Wigginholt, in the hundred of West Easewrith, and rape of Arundel, Sussex, 6 miles from Arundel, and 54 from London; containing 9 houses and 79 inhabitants.

Greencroft, a hamlet to the parish of Lanchester, in Chester ward, Durham, 4 miles from Durham, and 263 from London; containing 32 houses and 184 inhabitants.

Greenfield, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Henbury, Gloucester, 6 miles from Bristol, and 119 from London; containing 4 houses and 24 inhabitants.

Greenfield, a hamlet to the parish of Aby, in the hundred of Calceworth, and Lindsay division of Lincoln, 1¼ mile from Alford, and 141 from London. Population included with that of Aby.

Greenfield, a hamlet to the parish of Watlington, in the hundred of Pirton, Oxford, 1½ mile from Watlington, and 44¼ from London. Population included with Watlington.

Greenhalgh, a township to the parish of Kirkham, in the hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, 2 miles from Kirkham, and 226 from London; containing 73 houses and 378 inhabitants.

Greenham, a tything to the parish of Thatcham, in the hundred of Faircross, Berks, 2 miles from Newbury, and 54 from London; containing 132 houses and 633 inhabitants.

Greenhammerton, a hamlet to the parish of Whixley, in Claro wapentake of the west riding of York, 6 miles from Aldborough, and 205 from London; containing 31 houses and 259 inhabitants.

Greenhill, a hamlet to the parish of St. Mary Litchfield, Stafford, adjoining to Litchfield, 119 miles from London. Population included with that of St. Mary Litchfield.

Greenhithe, a hamlet to the parish of Swanscombe, in the hundred of Axton, and lathe of Sutton, Kent, on the banks of the Thames, below Long Reach, 3 miles from Dartford, and 18 from London. There is a horse-ferry from this hamlet to West Thurrock in Essex. A chapel, or chauntry, formerly stood in Greenhithe. Great quantities of lime are conveyed from this neighbourhood to London for building, and coastways for manure. Extraneous fossils are often found imbedded in the chalk.

Greenhoe North, the name of a hundred in Norfolk, on the northern coast of the county, lying between Burham and Blakeney, Greenroe South, the name also of a hundred in the south-western side of the same county, lying around Swaffham.

Greenholm, one of the Shetland Isles, a mile and a half south-west of the Isle of Eday.

Greenholm, one of the Shetland Isles, 10 miles north-west of the town of Lerwick.

Greenhough, a hamlet to the parish of Ingleby Greenough, in Langborough West wapentake of the north riding of York, 4 miles from Stokesley, and 246 from London; containing 20 houses and 118 inhabitants.

Greenlaw, a town and parish in the shire of Berwick, Scotland, nearly in the centre of the county, 8 miles from Coldstream, and 35 from Edinburgh; containing 252 houses and 1270 inhabitants. It is a burgh of barony under the earl of Marchmont, whose beautiful seat and plantation stands about 2 miles from the town. Here are the remains of two religious houses.

Green Leighton, a hamlet to the parish of Hartburn, in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 19 miles from Newcastle, and 294 from London; containing 7 houses and 39 inhabitants.

Greenock, a considerable sea-port town on the Frith of Clyde, in the shire of Renfrew, Scotland, 10 miles from Renfrew, and 18 from Glasgow; containing 1099 houses and 17,458 inhabitants, viz. 8496 males and 9262 females, of whom 4189 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures. The streets of this town extend along the coast, and, although the houses in general are well built, the whole has a confined and inelegant appearance. The harbour is very commodious, and has lately been improved at a great expence. A kind of bason is formed between two semicircular quays, which contains sufficient depth of water for vessels of the largest burden. The town is a burgh of barony, governed by a council of nine jurors, two of which are annually elected bailies. At the beginning of the last century Greenock was merely a collection of fishermen's-huts, without trade or harbour, and in the middle of the same century had scarcely 400 inhabitants. From the time of the Union till the American war, the trade of Greenock depended almost entirely on that of Glasgow; merchants of the latter being the principal owners of the shipping. But now the greatest part of the shipping belongs to merchants settled here, who carry on the greatest part of the trade on their own account. Before the revolt of the colonies, all the ships belonging to the Clyde were built in America; but since 1783 ship-building has been carried on with the greatest activity at Greenock. In 1791, a ship of 1100 tons was launched here. The manufacture of sailcloth, cordage, and other articles required for the rigging of ships; as well as the making of the nets and other tackling for the fisheries, employ a great number of the inhabitants. The refining of sugar is at present the principal manufacture. Greenock carries on a very considerable trade with America and the West Indies, whither the merchants export the muslins and other manufactures of the adjacent districts, and export, in return, rum, sugar, cotton, coffee, rice, grain, potash, timber, &c. From other countries they bring wine, fruits, oil, naval stores, and a variety of other articles. The vicinity of the great canal presents superior facilities for forwarding West Indian commodities to the north of Europe; as their rum, in particular in the foreign markets, is esteemed better than that from Liverpool or Glasgow. In 1803, 1029 ships, carrying 78,275 tons, and 5665 men, arrived at the port of Greenock; and in the same year there sailed thence 1204 ships, amounting to 86,825 tons, and manned with 6702 sailors. The whale fishery has been twice attempted, but did not succeed; but the cod-fishery at Newfoundland, and on the coasts of Nova Scotia, continues to be carried on with spirit and advantage. In the year 1791, more than 45,000 barrels of herrings were entered at the Custom-house. This town has a private banking company, and also a branch of the Paisley bank. The New Inn, or Tontine, where the citizens meet for the transaction of business and for amusement, is one of the principal ornaments of Greenock. The sum required for building it, amounting to 10,000*l.* was raised by subscription in three days. Previous to 1745, the town of Greenock and the neighbouring country was included in one parish; but at the period mentioned, the town was erected into a new parish, and the vicinity received the appellation of The Old Parish; the latter extends about 4½ miles along the Frith of Clyde. The village of Crawford Dikes, in the Old Parish, at which is a very commodious bay, is a burgh of barony.

Greenock, a small stream which runs into the river Ayr, near Catrine.

Greens, a hamlet to the parish of Felton, in Coquetdale ward, Northumberland, 10 miles from Morpeth, and 201 from London. Population included with that of Glanlets.

Greens Norton, the name of a hundred in Northamptonshire, lying in the southern part of the county, between the hundreds of Chipping warder and Towcester.

Greens Norton, or Norton Davy, a parish in the hundred of Greens Norton, Northamptonshire, 2 miles from Towcester, and 61½ from London; containing 134 houses and 615 inhabitants. The Roman road, called Watling-street, passes here. The living is a rectory, value 38*l.* with Whittlebury and Silveston annexed.

Greenstead, a parish in the liberties of Colchester and hundred of Lexden, Essex, 1 mile from Colchester, and 62 from London. This parish is divided from the town of Colchester by the river Colne, and contains 53 houses and 309 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* in the patronage of the crown.

Greenstead. See Grinstead, Essex.

Greenstreet, a hamlet to the parish of Norton, in the hundred of Tonham. and lathe of Scray, Kent, 3 miles from Sittingbourne, and 42½ from London. Population included with that of Norton. Here formerly stood the seat of the celebrated Apuldorfield, who, in the time of Richard I. so eminently distinguished himself in the holy war, and whose armour was deposited in the church of Lenham. The fair is on the 8th of May for cattle.

GREENWICH, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Blackheath and lathe of Sutton, Kent, 5½ miles from London, on the banks of the Thames adjoining Deptford, from which it is separated by the river Ravensborne; containing 2067 houses and 14339 inhabitants, viz. 7322 males and 7016 females, of whom 1171 were returned as being employed in trade and handicraft, &c. Its name, Grenevic, in Saxon signified a green village. In the reign of king Ethelred the Danish fleet was several times stationed in the river Thames near Greenwich, their army being encamped on the hill above. We have traces of a royal residence at this place as early as the year 1300, and Henry IV. dates his will in 1408 from his manor of Greenwich. Humphrey, duke of Gloucester, in 1433, had the royal licence to fortify and embattle his manor-house, and to make a park of 200 acres. Soon after this the duke rebuilt the palace, inclosed the park, and erected within it a tower on the spot where the observatory now stands. Edward IV. took great pleasure, and was at great expence in finishing and enlarging the palace. In his reign the marriage of Richard duke of York with Anne Mowbray was solemnized at this town with great splendour. Henry VII. resided much at this place, where his second son, afterwards Henry VIII. and his third son, Edmund Tudor, created duke of Somerset, were born. Henry VIII. was baptized in the parish church, and his marriage with his first queen, Catherine of Arragon, was solemnized here in 1510. This became a favourite residence of Henry, and here he frequently held tournaments and revels. In 1513 was introduced at the court here the first masquerade ever seen in England. Edward VI. kept his Christmas at Greenwich in 1552-3, and afterwards died here the following summer. The queens Mary and Elizabeth were both born here, and the latter princess was christened at Greenwich with great state. She made this place her favourite summer residence, and sometimes visited it at other seasons of the year. Charles I. resided occasionally at Greenwich before the breaking out of the civil war. When the crown lands were seized by parliament in 1649, and put up to sale, this manor was reserved for the use of the state. After the restoration, Greenwich palace, park, and manor, came again into the hands of the crown; and it being found that the old building, which, since its first erection by Humphrey duke of Gloucester, had been from time to time enlarged and repaired, was become greatly decayed, the king ordered it to be pulled down, intending to build on its site a magnificent palace, one wing of which was completed at the expence of 36,000*l*. Here he occasionally resided, but no farther progress was made in the work. Soon after the revolution, a project was formed for providing an asylum for seamen disabled by age, or maimed in the service of their country. After their majesties had resolved to found an hospital for this purpose, sir Christopher Wren proposed that the unfinished palace at Greenwich should be converted to this use, and enlarged with new buildings. His advice was adopted, and to his honour be it spoken, contributed his time, labour, and skill, and superintended the progress of the work for several years without any emolument. The foundation of the first new building was laid on the 3d of June, 1696, from which time the hospital has been gradually enlarged and improved, till it has arrived at its present splendour and magnificence. This hospital stands on the south side of the Thames, on a terrace 860 feet long, and in its present state consists of four distinct piles of building, distinguished by the names of King Charles's, Queen Anne's, King William's, and Queen Mary's. King Charles's and Queen Anne's are those next the river, and between them is the grand square, 270 feet wide. The view from the north gate, which opens to the terrace in the midway between the two buildings, presents an assemblage of objects uncommonly grand and striking. Beyond the square are seen the hall and chapel with their beautiful domes, and the two colonnades, which form a kind of avenue, terminated by the ranger's lodge in the park; on an eminence of which appears the royal observatory amidst a grove of trees. In the centre of the great square is a statue of George II. by Rysbrach, carved out of a single block of white marble, which weighed 11 tons, taken from the French by sir George Rooke. King Charles's building stands on the west side of the great square; the eastern part of it, which is of Portland stone, was erected in 1664, by Webb, after a design of his father-in-law, Inigo Jones. The front towards the east has in the centre a portico, supported by four Corinthian columns, and at each end a pavilion formed by four columns of the same order. In this range of buildings is the council-room, with an antichamber. In the antichamber are some sea-pieces, given by Thomas Harman, esq. representing the exploits of his ancestor, captain Thomas Harman, in the reign of Charles II. and a series of small pictures representing the loss of the Luxemburgh galley in 1727. In this room are several portraits of royal and naval characte- and several of sir James Thornhill's original sketches for the great hall. The north front of King Charles's building, which is towards the river, contains the apartments of the governor and lieutenant-governor. The whole of what is now called

King Charles's building contains 14 wards, in which are 301 beds. Queen Anne's building contains several of the officer's apartments, and 24 wards, in which are 437 beds. King William's building stands to the south-west of the great square, and contains the great hall, vestibule, and dome, designed and erected by sir Christopher Wren, between 1698 and 1703. To the east of these adjoins a colonnade, 347 feet in length, supported by columns and pilasters of the Doric order, 20 feet in height. In the vestibule of the hall is the model of an antique ship found in the Villa Mattei, and given by lord Anson. The great hall is 106 feet in length, 56 in width, and 50 in height. The painting of this hall was undertaken by sir James Thornhill in 1708, and finished in 1727. It cost 6685*l*. On the ceiling are portraits of the royal founders, William and Mary, surrounded by the cardinal virtues, the four seasons of the year, the English rivers, the four elements, the arts and sciences relating to navigation, and other emblematical figures, among which are introduced portraits of Flamsteed, the astronomer royal, and his pupil Thomas Weston. The sides are adorned with fluted pilasters, trophies, &c. The ceiling of the upper hall represents queen Anne and prince George of Denmark, accompanied by various emblematical figures, the four quarters of the globe, &c. The subjects on the sides are, the landing of the prince of Orange at Harwich, and of George I. at Greenwich. At the upper end of the hall are portraits of George I. and his family, with many emblematical figures, among which sir James Thornhill has introduced his own portrait. The west front of King William's building, which is of brick, was finished by sir John Vanbrugh, about 1726. The building contains 11 wards, and 551 beds. The foundation of the eastern colonnade, which is similar to that on the west side, was laid in 1699; but the chapel, and other parts of Queen Mary's building, which adjoin to it, were not finished till 1752. This building, which corresponds to that called King William's, contains 13 wards, and 1092 beds. On the 2d of January, 1779, a dreadful fire happened in this building, which destroyed the chapel, with its dome, part of the colonnade, and as many of the adjoining wards as contained 500 beds. The whole has since been rebuilt from the designs of the late James Stuart, well known by his interesting publication on the antiquities of Athens. Before the entrance of this chapel is an octangular vestibule, having four niches, in which are placed the statues of Faith, Hope, Charity, and Meekness, in Coade's artificial stone, after designs by West. From this vestibule the chapel is ascended by a flight of fourteen steps; it is 114 feet long, and 52 broad, and sufficiently spacious to accommodate 1000 pensioners, nurses, and boys, with pews for the directors, and the several officers belonging to the establishment. The portal consists of an architrave, frize, and cornice of statuary marble. The frize is the work of Bacon, and consists of the figures of two angels with festoons, supporting the sacred writings. The great folding doors are of mahogany, highly enriched, and the whole composition of this portal is not to be paralleled in this, or, perhaps, any country. Within this entrance is a portico, of six fluted marble columns, 15 feet high, the capitals and bases, being Ionic, after Greek models. The columns support the organ gallery, and are crowned with an entablature and balustrade, enriched with appropriate ornaments. The tablet in the front of this gallery contains a representation, in basso relievo, of angels sounding the harp, and the pedestals on each side are ornamented with trumpets, &c. The organ was built by Mr. Samuel Green, and on each side are four grand columns, the shafts formed by Richter of Scagliola, in imitation of Sienna marble, and the capitals and vases of statuary marble. At the other end of the chapel are four similar columns, which support the arched ceiling and roof. These columns are of the Corinthian order, and with their pedestals, are 28 feet in height. On the sides of the chapel are the galleries, in which are the pews of the officers and their families, those of the governor and lieutenant-governor being distinguished by a naval crown and other appropriate insignia. Over the lower range of windows are paintings in chiaro scuro, representing the principal events in the life of our Saviour. Above the galleries is a richly carved stone fascia, on which stands a range of pilasters of the Composite order. The curved ceiling is divided into compartments, and enriched with foliage, goloehi, &c. in the antique style. Between the upper pilasters are recesses, in which are painted in chiaro scuro, the apostles and evangelists. At each end of the galleries are concave recesses, in which are the doors of entrance into them; and above the doors are circular recesses, containing paintings in chiaro scuro of the prophets Isaiah, Jeremiah, Moses, and David. The communion table is a semi oval slab of statuary marble, supported by six cherubims, standing on a white marble step. The altar-piece is painted by West, and represents the shipwreck of St. Paul on the island of Melita, a subject peculiarly appropriate to the place. It is 25 feet high, and 14 wide, and consists of three principal groups. The first, which is at the lower part, shews the mariners and prisoners bringing on shore the various articles which have been saved from the wreck; near these is an elegant female figure, affectionately clasping an urn, supposed to contain the ashes of her deceased husband, who had fallen in the wars of India, and before is an aged infirm man who is carried in the arms of two robust young men. The principal group is in the middle, and represents St. Paul shaking into the fire the viper that had fastened on his hand, the brethren who accompanied him, his friend he centurion, and a band of Roman soldiers, with their proper insignia. The third group consists of the hospitable islanders, who are on the summit of the rocks, lowering down fuel and necessaries for the relief of the sufferers. In the back ground appear the sea and the wreck of the ship, which combine to exhibit a scene that cannot fail of having a proper effect on the minds of seafaring men. On either side, the arch which terminates the top of this picture, are angels of statuary marble as large as life, by Bacon, one bearing the cross, the other the emblems of the eucharist. The segment between the great cornice and ceiling is filled by a painting of the ascension, designed by West, and executed by Rebecca. The middle of the aisle, and the space round the organ-gallery, are paved with black and white marble, in Golochi, frets, and other ornaments, having in the centre an anchor and seaman's compass. The pulpit is circular, and is supported by six fluted columns of lime-trees, with an entablature above, richly carved. The six inter-columns are filled with subjects in alto relievo, taken from the Acts of the Apostles, after designs by West. The reading desk is square, with columns at the corners, and the inter-columns have alto relievos of the prophets Daniel, Micah, Zechariah, and Malachi, after designs of the same artist. Over the lower windows are 16 paintings in chiaro scuro, representing as many events in the life of our Saviour: the first four, beginning at the east end of the south side of the chapel, were painted by De Bruyne, and the four which follow on the same by Catton: the four at the west end of the north side are by Milburne, and the next four by Rebecca. The apostles and evangelists, in the recesses between the upper windows and the four prophets above the gallery doors, are after the designs of West. Without the walls of the hospital stands the infirmary, which is a quadrangular brick building, built in 1763, after a design by Stuart: it contains 64 rooms, each of which will accommodate four patients; it contains a chapel, hall, and kitchen, and apartments for the physician, surgeon, and apothecary, together with hot and cold baths. In 1783, a schoolhouse and dormitory was built by Mr. Newton, after a design of Stuart's: the schoolroom is capable of containing 200 boys. The pensioners, who are the objects of this noble charity, must be seamen disabled by age, or maimed, either in the king's service, or in the merchant service, if the wounds were received in defending or taking any ship, or in fight against a pirate; foreigners who have served two years in the British navy, become entitled to receive the benefits of this charity in the same manner as natives. The widows of seamen are provided for, having the exclusive privilege of being appointed nurses in the hospital. In January 1705, Greenwich hospital was first opened, and 42 seamen, qualified as above, were admitted. Their number at present consists of 2410, who are provided with clothes, diet, and lodging, and have a small allowance for pocket-money. The nurses are 144, and are allowed 8*l.* per annum as wages, and are provided with clothing, diet, and lodging. The pensioners are allowed weekly 7 loaves of 1lb. each, 3lbs. of beef, 2lbs. of mutton, 1 pint of pease, 1½lb. of cheese, 2 ounces of butter, 14 quarts of beer, and 1*s.* as tobacco money. Boatswains receive 2*s.* 6*d.* mates 1*s.* 6*d.* and officers in proportion to their rank, and each receives once in two years a suit of blue, a hat, three pair of stockings, two pair of shoes, five neckcloths, three shirts, and two nightcaps. The governors of the hospital are about 100, and are composed of the principal nobility and the great officers of state. The average expence of each pensioner, according to the report of the commissioners of naval enquiry, was estimated at 27*l.* 10*s.* 9*d.* per man, and the nurses 29*l.* 15*s.*; the total yearly expence being 69,206*l.* 5*s.*. The funds of the hospital are principally derived from a duty of 6*d.* per month paid by every mariner, either in the king's or merchant's service; the estates forfeited by the earl of Derwentwater, given by act of parliament in 1735; and various benefactions given by the different sovereigns, by parliament, and by private persons. In the hall is deposited the funeral car of admiral lord Nelson; it is the model of the hull of a ship of war, about 28 feet long, with figure head, stern gallery, &c. surmounted on a platform, or low carriage, with four wheels, trimmed round with velvet drapery, and ornamented with funereal escutcheons and devices, emblematical of the victories of Trafalgar, the Nile, Copenhagen, &c. On a small elevation on the deck was placed the body of the illustrious hero, when it was conveyed in state to St. Paul's. In 1675 king Charles II. ordered the old tower, built by Humphrey duke of Gloucester on an eminence in Greenwich park, to be pulled down, and founded on its site a royal observatory, for the purpose of ascertaining the motions of the moon, and the places of the fixed stars, as a means of discovering the longitude at sea, and Flamsteed, who was recommended to his majesty by sir Jonas Moor, was appointed astronomer royal. In September 1676 he began to make observations with a sextant of six feet radius, contrived by himself, and such other instruments as were then in use; for it was not till 1689 that he had the advantage of a mural quadrant, and even then it was not such as is now in use, but one contrived and divided partly by himself, without any help but the strength of his own genius. Flamsteed died at Greenwich Dec. 31, 1719, and was succeeded by Dr. Halley, who fixed a transit instrument. A mural quadrant of eight feet radius, constructed under the direction of Graham, was put up in 1725. Dr. Halley died in 1742, and was succeeded by Dr. Bradley. In 1750 some valuable additions were made to the instruments at the observatory; a new mural brass quadrant of 8 feet radius, a transit instrument of 8 feet in length, a moveable quadrant of 40 inches radius, an astronomical clock, a Newtonian reflecting telescope of 6 feet focal length. Dr. Bradley died in 1762, and was succeeded by Mr. Bliss, who died two years afterwards. His successor was Dr. Maskelyne, the present astronomer royal, who, since his appointment, has furnished the observatory with an excellent achromatic telescope of 46 inches, focal length, with a treble object glass, together with a divided achromatic object glass micrometer; and the whole apparatus has been much improved by Dollond, Nairne, and Arnold. In 1767 his majesty ordered, that the observations made by the astronomer royal at Greewich should be published annually under the inspection of the Royal Society, which have the power of visiting the observatory annually, to see that the instruments are in proper order. The church is dedicated to St. Alphage, archbishop of Canterbury, who is said to have been killed by the Danes on its site; it is one of the fifty new churches built in queen Anne's reign. At the end of the town, fronting the Thames, is the duke of Norfolk's college, for 12 decayed old housekeepers of Greenwich, and eight more, who are alternately chosen from Snottisham and Castle Rising in Norfolk. This college, though called the duke of Norfolk's, was founded by Henry earl of Northampton in 1613, who lies buried in the chapel belonging to the college. The pensioners are allowed provisions, clothing, and 1*s.* 6*d.* per week. There is another hospital for 20 poor persons, founded by Mr. Lambarde, author of the Perambulation of Kent, called Queen Elizabeth's college, said to be the first erected by an English Protestant subject. There was a convent of friars at Greenwich, founded some time about the reign of Edward IV. For many years there was a considerable powder magazine here, which, after many applications to parliament by the inhabitants, was at length removed to Purfleet in Essex in 1760. The Thames is very broad here, and the channel deep, the water at some high spring-tides being salt; though ordinarily sweet and fresh. His majesty's yachts always lie in the river here. There are some excellent boarding-schools at Greenwich. Its market is on Wednesdays and Saturdays, and is well supplied; its fairs are, Easter Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, and Whit Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. The living is a vicarage, value 21*l.* and the patron is the king.—Lysons's Environs of London.

GREET, a hamlet to the parish of Winchcombe, in the hundred of Kiftsgate, Gloucester, 2 miles from Winchcombe, and 97 from London; containing 36 houses and 124 inhabitants.

GREET, a parish in the hundred of Overs, Salop, 4 miles from Ludlow, and 140 from London; containing 17 houses and 90 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.*

GREETHAM, a parish in the hundred of Hill, and parts of Lindsay, Lincoln, 2 miles from Horncastle, and 140 from London; containing 20 houses and 111 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.*

GREETHAM, a parish in the hundred of Alstoe, Rutland, 6 miles from Oakham, and 93 from London; containing 76 houses and 423 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.*

GREETLAND, a hamlet to the parish of Halifax, in Morley wapentake of the west riding of York, 2 miles from Halifax, and 193 from London. Population included with that of Halifax.

GREETWELL, a small village, and formerly a parish in the hundred of Lawress, and Lindsay division of Lincoln, 1 mile from Lincoln, and 132 from London; containing only 4 houses and 31 inhabitants.

GRENDON, a parish in the hundred of Wymersley, Northampton, 5 miles from Wellington, and 63 from London; containing 93 houses and 486 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.*

GRENDON, a parish in the hundred of Hemlingford, Warwick, on the river Anke, and near the Coventry canal, 3 miles from Atherstone, and 110 from London; containing 73 houses and 450 inhabitants. The church was formerly a chapel of ease to the parish of Oxton. The living is a curacy.

GRENDON BISHOP'S, a parish in the hundred of Broxash, Hereford, 4 miles from Bromyard, and 128 from London; containing 36 houses and 183 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

GRENDON-UNDERWOOD, a parish in the hundred of Ashenden, Bucks, 10 miles from Aylesbury, and 50 from London; containing 47 houses and 285 inhabitants. It is situated on the borders of what was once called Bernwood forest; its name is derived from Green don, the Saxon for Green hill, a verdant eminence westward of the parsonage. The church is a neat gothic building, the walls of which are embellished with several texts from Scripture. This place has long been proverbial for being very dirty. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

GRENDON-WARREN, a hamlet to the parish of Grendon Bishop's, in the hundred of Broxash, Hereford, 1 mile from Grendon Bishop's, with which the population is included.

GRENFORD, a parish in the hundred of Elthorne, Middlesex, 2 miles from Harrow on the Hill, and 7½ from London; containing 65 houses and 359 inhabitants. It has a charity school, founded by Dr. Betham in 1776. The living is a rectory, value 20*l.* in the patronage of King's college, Cambridge.

GRENTON, a parish in the hundred of Whitley, Somerset, 6 miles from Bridgewater, and 135 from London; containing 28 houses and 128 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 10*d.*

Gresham, a parish in the hundred of North Erpingham, Norfolk, 6 miles from Cromer, and 126 from London; containing 60 houses and 306 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 18*s.* 9*d.*

Gressenhall, a parish in the hundred of Launditch, Norfolk, 2 miles from East Dereham, and 103 from London; containing 117 houses and 1224 inhabitants. Here was formerly a collegiate chapel, part of the nave of which is now converted into an infirmary and poor-house for the hundreds of Mitford and Launditch, erected in 1776. The fair is on the 6th December. The living is a rectory, value 15*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Gressford, a parish in the hundred of Bromfield, Denbighshire, Wales, 4 miles from Wrexham, and 186 from London; containing 79 houses and 392 inhabitants. Its church is situated on the brow of a lofty eminence hanging over a beautiful little valley, which opens into the vale of Cheshire. The fairs are on the second Monday in April, the last Monday in August, and the first Monday in December. The living is a vicarage, value 2*l.* 2*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

Gressingham, a hamlet to the parish of Lancaster, in the hundred of Lonsdale, Lancashire, 7 miles from Lancaster, and 215 from London; containing 38 houses and 178 inhabitants.

Gretford, a parish in the hundred of Ness, and parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 4 miles from Stamford, and 93 from London; containing 30 houses and 240 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 18*l.* 10*s.* in the patronage of the crown.

Gretna Green. See Graitney, Scotland.

Gretton, a hamlet to the parish of Winchcombe, in the hundred of Kiftsgate, Gloucester, 2 miles from Winchcombe, and 97 from London; containing 47 houses and 193 inhabitants.

Gretton, a parish in the hundred of Corby, Northampton, 6 miles from Uppingham, and 84 from London; containing 155 houses and 675 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 19*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Grewell, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish and hundred of Odiham, and division of Basingstoke, Hants, on an eminence, 2 miles from Odiham, and 43½ from London; containing 54 houses and 273 inhabitants.

Grewelthorpe, a township to the parish of Kirby Malzeard, in Claro wapentake of the west riding of York, 4 miles from Mashum, and 232 from London; containing 85 houses and 478 inhabitants.

Greysforest, a hamlet to the parish of Kirknewton, in Glendale ward, Northumberland, 4 miles from Wooler, and 327 from London; containing 9 houses and 58 inhabitants.

Greysouthern, a township to the parish of Brigham, in the ward of Allerdale, above Derwent, Cumberland, 3½ miles from Cockermouth, and 305 from London; containing 98 houses and 455 inhabitants.

Greytree, the name of a hundred in Hereford, at the south-eastern extremity of the county, and border of Gloucestershire, and bounded on the west by the river Wye.

Grethorpe, a village in the parish of Bubwith, in the division of Holme Beacon, and wapentake of Harthill, in the east riding of York, 4½ miles from Howden, and 185 from London; containing 17 houses and 120 inhabitants.

Grimelby, a parish in the hundred of Louth Eske, in Lindsay division of Lincoln, 4½ miles from Louth, and 154½ from London; containing 51 houses and 246 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 10*s.*

Grimley, a parish in the hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 5 miles from Worcester, and 117 from London; containing 98 houses and 543 inhabitants. It stands on the banks of the Severn, opposite to where the Droitwich canal falls into that river. In Hallow park adjacent, a spring has lately been discovered, whose waters having been analyzed, prove to be equal in virtue to those of Cheltenham. The living is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 10*d.* with Hallow chapel annexed, in the patronage of the bishop of Worcester.

Grimsargh, a hamlet to the parish of Preston, in the hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, 3 miles from Preston, and 219 from London; containing 48 houses and 262 inhabitants.

Grimsay, a barren island of the Hebrides, lying between North Uist and Benbecula, being about 2 miles long. It is valuable from the vast quantity of kelp burned in it.

Grimsby Great, a borough, market-town, and parish in the hundred of Bradley Haverstoe, and Lindsay division of Lincoln, near the mouth of the Humber, 18 miles from Market Raisin, and 170¼ from London; containing 257 houses and 1524 inhabitants, of whom 318 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. This is one of the most ancient boroughs in the kingdom, and was a mayoralty in the reign of king John. It has returned two members to parliament ever since the reign of Edward I. the right of election is in the resident free burgesses paying scot and lot. All the sons of freemen born in the town are entitled to their freedoms, as well as every person marrying a freeman's daughter or widow. The town is now governed by a mayor, recorder, 14 aldermen, a high steward, 12 common council-men, 2 coroners, 2 bailiffs, 2 chamberlains, a town-clerk, and three sergeants at mace. The mayor is the returning officer at parliamentary elections. Two of the aldermen are annually elected justices of the peace, who, with the mayor, hold a court every Tuesday, as do also the bailiffs every Friday. The town has several good streets, and the houses are, in general, well built. It was formerly considerably more extensive, and had two parish churches, but only one now remains, which is a very large and handsome building, in the form of a cross, with a tower in the center. It had likewise a castle, and a very considerable trade; the harbour being formerly very commodious, but is now so choaked up, that sloops only can come up to the town. Grimsby is a port town under that of Hull; and has a deputy collector, comptroller, and coast surveyor. A convent of Benedictine nuns was founded here about the year 1185, and a house of Augustine friars in 1304. In, and about Grimsby are some extraordinary fountains, called Blow Wells; the water in them rises even with the surface of the ground, but never overflows; they are, however, embanked round for the security of cattle. The principal traffic of this town is by the river Humber, in coals and salt, here being no manufacture of any note. The market is on Wednesday, and well supplied with all kinds of grain. The fairs are on the 6th June, and 4th September, but no stock is ever seen at them. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.*

GRIMSBY, LITTLE, a small parish in the hundred of Ledborough, and Lindsay division of Lincoln, 2½ miles from Louth, and 155 from London; containing 9 houses and 56 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* Lat. 53° 54'. Long. 0° 6' E.

GRIMSHOE, the name of a hundred in Norfolk, on the southern side of the county, divided from Suffolk by the Little Ouse.

GRIMSTEAD WEST, a parish in the hundred of Alderbury, Wilts, 4½ miles from Salisbury, and 78 from London; containing 31 houses and 179 inhabitants.

GRIMSTEAD EAST, a hamlet to the parish of West Dean, in the hundred of Alderbury, Wilts, 5 miles from Salisbury, and 78 from London; containing 29 houses and 148 inhabitants.

GRIMSTHORPE, a hamlet to the parish of Bourn, in the road to Folkingham, Lincoln, 2 miles from Bourne, and 100 from London. The seat of the duke of Ancaster, at this place, is one of the most beautiful in the county, and was originally built by Charles Brandon, duke of Suffolk, to entertain king Henry in his visits to these parts. In this neighbourhood stood Vauldy, or De Valle Dei, an abbey of Cistercians removed from Bitham.

GRIMSTONE, a hamlet to the parish of Stratton, in the hundred of St. George, and division of Dorchester, Dorsetshire, 3 miles from Dorchester, and 122 from London; containing 15 houses and 69 inhabitants.

GRIMSTONE, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Roteley, in the hundred of East Goscote, Leicester, 4½ miles from Melton Mowbray, and 108 from London; containing 40 houses and 193 inhabitants.

GRIMSTONE, a parish in the hundred of Freebridge, Lynn, Norfolk, 5 miles from Lynn, and 98 from London; containing 82 houses and 649 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 26*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of Queen's college, Cambridge.

GRIMSTONE, a parish in Buckrose wapentake of the east riding of York, 3 miles from New Malden, and 217 from London; containing 28 houses and 131 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the prebend of Langtoft in York cathedral.

GRIMSTONE, a hamlet to the parish of Gilling, in the wapentake of Rydall, and north riding of York, 16 miles from York, and 215 from London; containing 9 houses and 47 inhabitants.

GRIMSTONE, a hamlet to the parish of Kirkley, in Barkston Ash wapentake, of the west riding of York, 4 miles from Tadcaster, and 185 from London; containing 16 houses and 71 inhabitants.

GRIMSWORTH, the name of a hundred in Hereford, in the center of the county, bounded on the south and west by the river Wye.

GRIMTHORPE, a hamlet to the parish of Givendale, in the division of Beacon Wilton, and wapentake of Harthill, in the east riding of York, 7 miles from Pochlington, and 203 from London; containing 2 houses and 16 inhabitants.

GRINDALL, a hamlet to the parish of Bridlington Dickering lythe, east riding of York, 3½ miles from Bridlington, and 210 from London; containing 15 houses and 88 inhabitants.

GRINDLETON, a township and chapelry to the parish of Mitton, in the wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, in the west riding of York, 4 miles from Clitheroe, and 218 from London; containing 204 houses and 927 inhabitants.

GRINDLOW, a hamlet to the parish of Hope, in the hundred of High Peake, Derby, 8 miles from Bakewell, and 160 from London; containing 23 houses and 101 inhabitants.

GRINDON, a parish in Stockton ward, Durham, 3 miles from Sedgefield, and 253 from London; containing 48 houses and 325 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 11*s.* 5*d.*

GRINDON, a small hamlet to the parish of Norham, in Norhamshire, Durham, near the river Tweed, 10 miles north of Wooler, and 333 from London, being in that detached part of the county of Durham, which is north of Northumberland. On a rising ground, near the place called Grindon Rigg, are four upright stone pillars, as funereal memorials of chieftains who were slain here in a famous victory gained over the Scots by the earl of Northumberland and his brother in 1558.

GRINDON, a parish in the hundred of Totmonslow, Stafford, 6 miles from Leeke, and 148 from London; containing 71 houses and 388 inhabitants. This place was formerly celebrated for its marble. The living is a rectory, value 15*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.*

GRINGLEY, a parish in the hundred of Bassetlaw, Notts, 5 miles from Gainsborough, 6 from Bawtrey, and 156 from London; containing 107 houses and 533 inhabitants. The Chesterfield canal passes here. The inhabitants carry on a considerable trade in shoes. The fair is on December 12, for black cattle and swine. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the duke of Rutland.

GRINSDALE, a small chapelry in Cumberland ward, Cumberland, 2 miles from Carlisle, and 306 from London; containing 17 houses and 86 inhabitants.

GRINSHILL, a small parish in the liberties of Shrewsbury, Salop, near Shrewsbury, 162 miles from London; containing 30 houses and 179 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, not in charge.

GRINSTEAD, a parish in the hundred of Ongar, Essex, 3½ miles from Epping, and 20 from London; containing 15 houses and 100 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

GRINSTEAD EAST, a borough, market-town, and parish in the hundred of Rushmonden, Pevensey rape of Sussex, pleasantly situated on a hill near the borders of Surry, 28½ miles from London, by the Croydon road; containing 381 houses and 2659 inhabitants, viz. 1318 males and 1344 females, of whom 245 were returned as being employed in various trades. This parish had a large handsome church, the spire of which was destroyed by lightning in 1685, when a very beautiful tower was built in its stead, but owing to the badness of the materials, &c. it fell down in 1785, and so much damaged the body of the church, that the whole was obliged to be taken down and rebuilt. Sackville college, a large handsome stone building in the form of a square, was first founded here by Sackville duke of Dorset, in the reign of James I. about the year 1616, for 24 aged persons of both sexes, where each has a comfortable room, and a yearly allowance of 8*l.* It is governed by a warden and two gentlemen assistants; and has a neat chapel, wherein the warden reads prayers every morning. A suite of apartments, in this edifice, was intended for the occasional residence of his grace, but as he never occupies it, the rooms are used by the judges of the circuit during the assizes, which are held at East Grinstead in Lent, though the county gaol is at Horsham. The town has also a well endowed charity school. This is a borough by prescription of great antiquity, consisting of a bailiff, and about 55 burgage holders, who elect two members to parliament. Its first return of representatives was in the first year of Edward II. The market is on Thursday, chiefly for corn. The fairs are on the 21st April, 13th July, and 11th December, of which the first and last are very large, with a great show of cattle. The living is a vicarage, value 20*l.* in the patronage of the duke of Dorset. Lat. 51° 7′ 28″. Long. 0. 0. 16. E.

GRINSTEAD WEST, a parish in the hundred of West Grinstead, and rape of Bramber, Sussex, 7 miles from Horsham, and 42 from London; containing 133 houses and 939 inhabitants.

GRISTON, a parish in Hang west wapentake of the north riding of York, 8 miles from Richmond, and 242 from London; containing 80 houses and 518 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 12*l.* 5*s.* 7*d.* in the patronage of the crown.

GRISTHORPE, a hamlet to the parish of Filey, in Pickering lythe, and north riding of York, 3½ miles from Hunmanby, and 214 from London; containing 29 houses and 129 inhabitants.

GRISTON, a parish in the hundred of Wayland, Norfolk, 1 mile from Watton, and 90 from London; containing 29 houses and 180 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*, in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.

GRITTENHAM, a hamlet to the parish of Brinkworth, in the hundred of Malmsbury, Wilts, 2 miles from Wootton Basset, and 91½ from London. Population included with that of Brinkworth.

GRITTLETON, a parish in the hundred of North Damerham, Wilts, 6 miles from Chippenham, and 93 from London; containing 73 houses and 340 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 10*s.*

GRITWORTH, a parish in the hundred of Chipping Warden, Northamptonshire, 4 miles from Brackley, and 66 from London; containing 36 houses and 207 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 0*s.* 5*d.*

GROBY, a parish in the hundred of Sparkenhoe, Leicester, 4 miles from Leicester, and 100 from London; containing 60 houses and 299 inhabitants. It was formerly a market-town, and gave title to the family of Grey. The living is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.* united with Ratby.

GROOMBRIDGE, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Speldhurst, in the hundred of Hartfield, and rape of Pevensey, Sussex, 11¼ miles from East Grinstead, and 35 from London. On the borders of Kent, in this parish was formerly an ancient mansion, belonging to the Wallers, said to have been built at the expence of the duke of Orleans, who was taken prisoner by sir William Waller, and remained 35 years in confinement. The fairs are on the 17th May and 25th September.

GRONEY, a river of Brecknockshire, Wales, which falls into the Usk near Langoney.

GROSMOND, or GROSMAUNT, a parish in the hundred of Skenfreth, Monmouth, 8 miles from Monmouth, and 139 from London; containing 111 houses and 519 inhabitants. It stands on the bank of the river Munnon, where are the remains of an ancient castle belonging to the duke of Beaufort, who hence takes the title of viscount. At this place lived John of Kent, concerning whom many wonderful tales are told. The living is a rectory, value 6*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.* united with Langwar, in the patronage of the prince of Wales.

GROTON, a parish in the hundred of Babergh, Suffolk, 4 miles from Sudbury, and 58 from London; containing 69 houses and 516 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.*

Grove, a tything to the parish of Wantage, in the hundred of Wantage, Berks, ½ mile from Wantage, and 60 from London; containing 93 houses and 397 inhabitants.

Grove, an extra parochial hamlet, and formerly a parish, in the hundred of Cotslow, Bucks, 4 miles from Ivinghoe, and 36 from London; containing only 3 houses and 25 inhabitants.

Grove, a parish in the hundred of Bassetlaw, Notts, 2 miles from Retford, and 143 from London; containing 17 houses and 117 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 11*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.*

Grumbaldsash, the name of a hundred in Gloucestershire, at the south-eastern extremity of the county, bordering on Wilts.

Grundisburgh, a parish in the hundred of Carlford, Suffolk, 3 miles from Woodbridge, and 76 from London; containing 130 houses and 641 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 17*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge.

Grutlington. See Grittleton, Wilts.

Guernsey Island of, an island in the English Channel, about 20 miles north-east of Jersey. It is of a triangular shape, and about 30 miles in circumference; containing 1 town, 10 parishes, and several villages, which are included in the diocese of Winchester and province of Canterbury. The number of inhabitants is estimated at 15000. The town of St. Peter's, or St. Pierre, where the courts of justice are held, consists of one long street, in which are many good buildings. The harbour is very safe and commodious, and on each side of it are strong piers. The air is very healthy, and the soil more rich and fertile than in Jersey; but the inhabitants neglect agriculture for the sake of trade and commerce. The town and harbour are defended by a strong fortress, called Castle Cornet, situated on a steep rock surrounded by the sea, and accessible only at low water by a very narrow passage. The governor's apartments are fitted up in a very handsome manner. The island is full of gardens and orchards, and the principal beverage of the inhabitants is cyder. In time of war, this island fits out a great number of privateers, which bring considerable riches to the place. The manners and customs of the inhabitants are similar to those of Jersey; as is the game, consisting only of hares and rabbits. The only manufactory of any consequence is that of stockings. Although subject to Britain, this island, like those adjacent, is governed by its own peculiar laws, which are administered by a governor, a bailiff, and 12 jurats, appointed by the King of Great Britain; they hold their places during his pleasure; and are judges in all civil and criminal cases, except that of high treason. The governor receives tythes of all kinds of grain. Under him is a lieutenant-governor, called the Constable of the Castle. The porter of the castle is also the keeper of the prison. Although this island is very fully peopled, the houses, in general, are scattered up and down the country, according to the humour and convenience of the proprietors; and with the exception of St. Peter's, there are no regular streets. On a very healthy spot is a commodious hospital, in which is a school where the children of the poor are instructed in useful learning. This island is strongly fortified by nature, having a ridge of rocks, one of which abounds with emery, so much used by lapidaries in the polishing of stones, and by various other artificers.

Guestling, a parish in the hundred of Guestling, and rape of Hastings, Sussex, 2 miles from Winchelsea, and 65 from London; containing 88 houses and 496 inhabitants. The fair is on the 23d May. The living is a rectory, value 12*l.* 7*d.*

Gurstwick, a parish in the hundred of Eynesford, Norfolk, 3 miles from Reepham, and 115 from London; containing 26 houses and 129 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 9*d.*

Guiseley, a parish in Skyrack wapentake, of the west riding of York, 3 miles from Otley, and 204 from London; containing 161 houses and 825 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 26*l.*

Guilden Morden, a parish in the hundred of Armingford, Cambridgeshire, 5 miles from Royston, and 42 from London; containing 84 houses and 428 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 5*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of Jesus college, Cambridge.

Guilden-Sutton, a parish in the hundred of Broxton, Cheshire, 3 miles from Chester; and 180 from London; containing 22 houses and 158 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Guildford, a borough and market-town, consisting of three parishes in the hundred of Woking, Surrey, 30 miles from London; containing 464 houses and 2634 inhabitants, viz. 1242 males and 1392 females, of whom 495 were returned as being employed in various trades, &c. It is pleasantly situated on the side of a chalk hill on the banks of the river Wey, was anciently a royal town, and has often been the residence of our monarchs. Part of the remains of its castle are still visible, especially the square tower, or keep, which has been a place of great strength; though history does not inform us by whom it was built. The tower fell down in 1700. Here are also some remains of a palace of great extent, and from the various ruins of foundations that have been dug up, the greater part of the declivity of the hill on the east side of the Wey appears to have been once occupied by buildings. Trinity church, which fell down in 1740, has been since rebuilt of brick. Here were formerly two monasteries, the remains of one of which became the property of lord Onslow, and is still inhabited, part of it affording accommodation for the judges during the assizes; and part of it converted into a boarding-school. The structure is Gothic. Here is an elegant town-hall and council-chamber. The town was first incorporated by Henry I. The corporation consists of a mayor, seven magistrates, and about 20 bailiffs, who hold a court every three weeks; and the mayor, recorder, and two of the bailiffs, are justices of the peace for the corporation and liberties of Stoke above Bar; the mayor also continues in his commission for a year after his mayoralty expires. It sends two members to parliament, and the mayor is the returning officer. Guildford gives title of earl to the family of North. The grammar-school is an elegant Gothic structure, and is handsomely endowed. In 1789, an elegant county hall was built in this parish, together with suitable offices, at the expence of lords Onslow and Grantley, adjoining to which was also built, in the same year, a very commodious playhouse. The clothing trade, which was once very considerable here, has declined; near the town is a circular race-course, where a plate of 100 guineas value, left by king William III. is annually run for in the Whitsun-week; at which time there are also three subscription plates ran for, exclusive of private matches. In a spacious cockpit near this spot, the diversion of cockfighting is pursued every forenoon on the racing days: these diversions are often very brilliantly attended, and the town is crowded with the numerous visitants. The river Wey was made navigable to Guildford about the year 1656, by which the parish and town carries on a considerable trade in corn, malt, beer, &c. to the metropolis. The road from hence to Farnham is very picturesque, running along a ridge of high chalky hills, not much wider than the road itself, from whence is a very extensive prospect. The market is on Saturday, and is well supplied. The fairs are on the 4th May, 2d October, and 22d November. The churches of St. Mary and St. Trinity are rectories united, in the patronage of the crown; the former valued at 12*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.* the latter at 11*l.* 11*s.* St. Nicholas is a rectory, value 21*l.* 0*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of the dean of Sarum.—Manning's Surry.

Guilford-East, a parish in the hundred of Goldspur and Hastings rape of Sussex, 1½ mile from Rye, and 63 from London; containing 11 houses and 59 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.*

Guilsborough, a parish in the hundred of Guilsborough, Northampton, 9 miles from Northampton, and 74 from London; containing 79 houses and 531 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 17*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

Guilsborough, the name of a hundred in Northamptonshire, on the north-western side of the county, divided from Leicestershire by the river Avon.

Guiltcross, the name of a hundred in Norfolk, on the southern side of the county, divided from Suffolk by the river Ouse.

Guinear, a parish in the hundred of Penwith, Cornwall, 8 miles from Marazion, and 276 from London; containing 314 houses and 1654 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Guist, a parish in the hundred of Eyneford, Norfolk, near the river Wensum, over which it has a bridge, 7 miles from East Dereham, and 108½ from London; containing 28 houses and 234 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 15*s.* 5*d.*

Guiting. See Guyting, Gloucestershire.

Gulval, a parish in the hundred of Penwith, Cornwall, pleasantly situated at the bottom of Mount Bay, 2 miles from Marazion, 1½ from Penzance, and 288 from London; containing 211 houses and 1076 inhabitants, of whom 128 were returned as being employed in trade. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 14*s.* in the patronage of the crown.

Gumley, a parish in the hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 3½ miles from Market Harborough, and 86 from London; containing 51 houses and 224 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 16*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Lincoln.

Gumfreyston, a parish in the hundred of Narbeth, Pembrokeshire, Wales, 2 miles from Tenby, and 249 from London; containing 24 houses and 132 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 12*s.* 3*d.*

Gunby, a parish in the hundred of Betisloe, and parts of Kesteven, Lincolnshire, 11 miles from Stamford, and 100 from London; containing 22 houses and 113 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 4*s.*

Gunby, another parish in the hundred of Candleshoe, and parts of Lindsay, Lincolnshire, 2 miles from Spilsby, and 156 from London; containing 5 houses and 38 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 3*l.* 10*s.* 2*d.*

Gunna, a small island in the English channel, betwixt Col and Tiree; the shores are covered with a plant from which kelp is prepared.

Gunnersbury, a hamlet to the parish of Acton, Middlesex, between the two western roads, and between Acton and Brentford, 5½ miles from London; consisting of 5 or 6 houses. In this hamlet formerly was the elegant mansion and extensive grounds of the late princess Amelia; on the site of which has been built some small dwellings, not worthy of notice.

Gunthorpe, a parish in the hundred of Holt, Norfolk, 3½ miles from Holt, and 116 from London; containing 30 houses and 292 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.*

Gunthorpe, a hamlet to the parish of Paston, in the hundred of Nassaburgh, Northampton, 3 miles from Peterborough, and 84 from London; containing 6 houses and 30 inhabitants.

Gunthorpe, a township to the parish of Neveringham, in the hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, 4 miles from Bingham, and 126 from London; containing 60 houses and 278 inhabitants.

Gunthorpe, a hamlet to the parish of Egleton, in Oakham Soke, Rutland, 2 miles from Oakham, and 93 from London; containing 1 house and 7 inhabitants.

Gunthwaite, a hamlet to the parish of Penistone, in Staincross wapentake of the west riding of York, 5 miles from Barnsley, and 176 from London; containing 15 houses and 111 inhabitants.

Gunton, a small parish in the hundred of North Erpingham, Norfolk, 5 miles from Aylsham, and 126 from London; containing 8 houses and 36 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l*.

Gunton, a parish in the hundred of Mutford and Lothingland, Suffolk, 2 miles from Lowestoff, and 116 from London; containing only 5 houses and 36 inhabitants. The church is a small, plain building, having a round tower, rebuilt in 1700: the north door is of a very ancient architecture. The living is a rectory, value 5*l*. 6*s*. 8*d*.

Gunwallo, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Breague, in the hundred of Kerriar, Cornwall, 3½ miles from Kelston, and 279½ from London, on the coast not far from the Lizard Point; containing 44 houses and 216 inhabitants.

Gussage Allsaints, a parish in the hundred of Knowlton, and division of Shaston, Dorset, 3 miles from Cranburne, and 96 from London; containing 60 houses and 301 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l*. 3*s*. 9*d*. in the patronage of the archdeacon of Dorset.

Gussage St. Andrew's, a small village in the hundred of Sixpenny Handley, and division of Shaston, Dorset, 7½ miles from Blandford, and 96 from London. Population omitted to be returned.

Gussage St. Michael's, a parish in the hundred of Bradbury, and division of Shaston, Dorset, 4 miles from Cranburne, and 97 from London; containing 43 houses and 195 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 20*l*.

Guston, a parish in the hundred of Bewsborough, and lathe of St. Augustine, Kent, near the South Foreland, 2¼ miles from Dover, and 71¼ from London; containing 29 houses and 149 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Guthlaxton, the name of a hundred in Leicestershire, being the southern extremity of the county and borders of Warwickshire.

Guy's Cliff, a hamlet to the parish of St. Nicholas, Warwick, on a huge cliff on the south side of the Avon, where formerly was an oratory, and in the time of the Saxons an hermitage, whither the famous Guy earl of Warwick is said to have retired from the cares of the world. This hermitage was kept up in the reign of Henry VI. when the then earl of Warwick established a chantry on the spot, in memory of Guy, of whom he also erected a gigantic statue.

Guyting Power, a parish in the hundred of Kiftsgate, Gloucester, 6 miles from Stow, 6 from Winchcombe, and 89 from London; containing 90 houses and 430 inhabitants. The church is a very ancient fabric. The living is a vicarage, value 14*l*. 9*s*. 5*d*. with Ferncotte chapel annexed.

Guyting Temple, a parish also in the hundred of Kiftsgate, Gloucester, 7 miles from Stow, and 5 from Winchcombe; containing 59 houses and 301 inhabitants. The church is small, but very handsome, with a beautiful altar-piece. The living is a curacy, in the patronage of Christ Church college, Oxford.

Guyzance, a hamlet to the parish of Shilbottle, in Coquetdale ward, Northumberland, 12 miles from Morpeth, and 303 from London; containing 37 houses and 172 inhabitants.

Gwana, a river of Pembrokeshire, Wales, which falls into the Gwyn, near Llanacharn.

Gweger, a river of Anglesey, which falls into the Irish Sea below Llanbaderick.

Gwelly, a river of Carnarvonshire, which falls into the Irish Sea at Dinas Dynlle.

Gwenddwr, North and South, a parish in the hundred of Talgarth, Brecon, Wales, 4 miles from Builth, and 170 from London; containing 99 houses and 516 inhabitants. The living is a curacy.

Gwendrathvag, a river of Carmarthenshire, which falls into the Severn Sea, near Kidwelly.

Gwennap, a parish in the hundred of Kerrier, Cornwall, 6 miles from Truro, 4 from Redruth, and 263 from London; containing 944 houses and 4594 inhabitants, of whom 120 were returned as being employed in various trades. The living is a vicarage, value 16*l*. 18*s*. 11*d*. in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Exeter.

Gwenrow, a river of Denbighshire, which falls into the Dee, below Wrexham.

Gwernesney, a parish in the hundred of Usk, Monmouth, 2 miles from Usk, and 142 from London; containing only 13 houses and 66 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 2*l*. 18*s*. 6*d*.

Gwilly, a river of Carmarthenshire, which falls into the Towey at Abergwilly.

Gwithian, a township and chapelry to the parish of Phyllack, in the hundred of Penwith, Cornwall, near the shore of St. Ive's bay, 7 miles from Redruth, and 270 from London; containing 67 houses and 329 inhabitants.

Gwyn, a river of Pembrokeshire, which falls into the Irish Sea, near Llan'awyn.

Gwynfil, a parish in the hundred of Pennarth, Cardiganshire, 5 miles from Tregaron, and 209 from London; containing 70 houses and 326 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Gwyddelwern, a parish in the hundred of Edernion, Merioneth, Wales, 4 miles from Corwen, and 205 from London; containing 246 houses and 1143 inhabitants, of whom 49 were returned as being employed in trade. The living is a vicarage, in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

Gwynt, a river of Anglesey, which falls into the Kevenney, opposite Llangristolis.

Gwythel, a river of Radnorshire, which falls into the Arro, near Kyneton.

Gwytherin Isaled, a parish of Denbighshire, Wales, 3 miles from Llanwrst, and 223 from London; containing 69 houses and 383 inhabitants. It has a fair on the 6th May. St. Winifred is said to have been buried in this parish, and a chapel to her memory stood on the south side of the church. Here was also a convent. Its living is a rectory, value 6*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

Gyrrow, a river of Denbighshire, which falls into the Alwen, below Bettus.

Gyrvi. See Jarrow.

Haa, a small island of Sutherlandshire, Scotland, between Whiten and Farout head.

Habberley, a parish in the hundred of Ford, Salop, 9 miles from Shrewsbury, and 168 from London; containing 19 houses and 104 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 0*s.* 2*d.*

Habergham Eves, a township in the parish of Whalley, and hundred of Blackburn, Lancaster, 2 miles from Burnley, and 208 from London, near the river Colder, and the Lancaster canal; containing 363 houses and 1919 inhabitants, of whom 483 were returned as being employed in trade and manufactures.

Harborough, a parish in the hundred of Yarborough, division of Lindsay, Lincolnshire, 170 miles from London; containing 62 houses and 275 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.*

Harton Great, a hamlet to the parish of Kirby Misperton, Pickering lythe, north riding of York, 8 miles from New Malton. It is near the river Rye, is 220 miles from London, and contains 16 houses and 85 inhabitants.

Harton Little, a small hamlet in the same parish; containing 9 houses and 46 inhabitants.

Haccomb. See Huckham, Devon.

Hackensall, a small hamlet in the parish of Lancaster, and hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, 3 miles from Garstang, and 230 from London. The population is reckoned with that of Precsal, which see.

Hackford, a parish in the hundred of Forehoe, Norfolk, 3 miles from Wymondham, and 97 from London; containing 27 houses and 186 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 15*s.* 10*d.*

Hackford, a parish in the hundred of Eynesford, Norfolk, 2 miles from Reepham, and 114 from London; containing 82 houses and 467 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 4*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.* and is united with the vicarage of Whitwell.

Hackforth, a hamlet to the parish of Hornby, in East Hang wapentake, north riding of York, 3 miles from Leyburn, and 232 from London. It contains 30 houses and 135 inhabitants.

Hacking, a hamlet to the parish of Hollingbourne, hundred of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 4 miles from Maidstone, and 38 from London; containing 15 houses and 98 inhabitants.

Hackington, a parish in the hundred of Westgate, and lathe of St. Augustine, Kent, 1 mile from Canterbury, and 56 from London; containing 46 houses and 255 inhabitants. It is sometimes called St. Stephen's, and is the place where archbishop Baldwin began a college for secular priests, intending that the king and each of the suffragan bishops should have a prebend, worth 40 marks per annum; but the pope ordered the chapel to be levelled to the ground, the year after it was built. The living is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 2*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of the archdeacon of Canterbury.

Hackleston, a hamlet to the parish of Fittleton, in the hundred of Elstub and Everley, Wilts, 4 miles from Amesbury, and 78 from London. The population is included with Fittleton.

Hackleton, a hamlet to the parish of Piddington, hundred of Wymersley, Northampton, 50 miles from Northampton, and 60½ from London; containing 69 houses and 278 inhabitants.

Hackness, a parish in Whitby Strand wapentake, north riding of York, 4 miles from Scarborough, and 220 from London; containing 25 houses and 170 inhabitants. There anciently stood a monastery here. It is now a curacy.

Hackney, a very extensive parish in the hundred of Ossulton, Middlesex, 2 miles from London; containing 2050 houses and 12,730 inhabitants, viz. 5422 males and 7308 females, of whom 879 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. This parish has several hamlets, among which are Upper and Lower Clapton on the north, Dalston, Shacklewell, and Kingston on the west; and Homerton, which leads to Hackney marsh, on the east. The old parish church, of which the tower only, and part of the chancel, are remaining, was a very ancient gothic structure, adjoining to the church-yard; a new one, on a larger scale, was begun in 1791, agreeably to an act of parliament, which is a fine modern structure. This is said to have been the first village near London that was accommodated with carriages for occasional passengers, it being the principal resort of the citizens, whence the term Hackney coaches has been derived, which is now spread through the whole kingdom. When the residences of our princes and nobility were scattered round the metropolis, this place was distinguished by several capital mansions. Brooke house, now a receptacle for lunatics, was the elegant seat of the lords Brooke. St. John's palace, an ancient house in Wells-street, is supposed to have been the residence of the prior of the order of St. John of Jerusalem. In this parish, a little to the south of Lea bridge, are the Temple mills, so called from having been once the property of the knights templars: they are now used as lead mills; and at the Wick are some silk mills. At the bottom of Hackney marsh, through which runs the river Lea, have been discovered the remains of an extensive stone causeway. Here are several religious meeting-houses, a free-school in the church-yard, a charity-school, and 17 almshouses. The vicarage is valued at 20*l.* and the rectory, value 26*l.* is a sinecure.—Lysons's Environs of London.

HACKTHORNE, a parish in the hundred of Aslacoe, and division of Lindsay, Lincoln, 7¼ miles from Lincoln, and 141 from London; containing 28 houses and 218 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.*

HACKTHORPE, a hamlet to the parish of Lowther, in West ward, Westmorland, 5 miles from Penrith, and 278 from London. The population is included with Lowther.

HACONBY, a parish in the hundred of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 4 miles from Folkingham, and 103 from London; containing 57 houses and 260 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* and, united with Morton, is in the patronage of the bishop of Lincoln.

HADDENHAM, a parish in the hundred of Aylesbury, Bucks, 2¼ miles from Thame, and 46 from London; containing 180 houses and 964 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 15*l.* 17*s.* 1*d.* with Cuddington chapel annexed, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Rochester.

HADDENHAM, a parish in the Isle of Ely, Cambridge, 5 miles from Ely, and 62 from London; containing 186 houses and 1090 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the archdeacon of Ely.

HADDINGTON, a hamlet to the parish of Auborne, hundred of Boothby Graffo, in the parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 8 miles from Newark, 8 from Lincoln, and 124 from London; containing 17 houses and 93 inhabitants.

HADDINGTON, a royal borough, and the county town of Haddingtonshire, or East Lothian. It is 17 miles from Edinburgh, and the first stage on the road to London; containing 688 houses and 4049 inhabitants, viz. 1874 males and 2,175 females, of whom 376 were returned as being employed in trade and manufactures. The town is situated on the river Tyne, and consists of four streets, intersecting each other nearly at right angles. The houses are well built, and there is a neat town house here, erected in 1748, and a large and commodious school. The parish-church is a venerable structure, and formerly belonged to the Franciscan monastery, supposed to have been erected in the 12th or 13th century. The west end is used for divine service, the remainder being in ruins. It contains several marble effigies, as large as life, of the dukes of Lauderdale lying under canopies of state, besides several other handsome monuments. There is also a neat chapel here for people of the episcopal communion, which was built by private subscription. This burgh is of great antiquity, and in former times appears, from the many remaining fortifications, to have been a place of strength. The town has frequently suffered from fire; and in 1775 an inundation of the river Tyne, which rose 17 feet above its usual height, laid above half of it under water. The suburb of Nungate across that river, to which Haddington is connected by a bridge of three arches, contains about 500 inhabitants, and takes its name from the ruins of the nunnery which was founded here in 1178 by the mother of king Malcolm IV. The principal manufacture is that of coarse woollen cloth, which is carried on in the suburb. Haddington is governed by a provost, three baillies, a dean of guild, treasurer, and 12 counsellors, and has seven incorporated trades. There are two annual fairs, well attended, and a weekly market on Friday, accounted the best grain market in Scotland. At Houston mill, near Haddington, the threshing machine was invented by Mr. Andrew Meckle. This town gives title of earl to a branch of the Hamilton family. The famous John Knox, who brought about the reformation in Scotland, was born here.—Pennant's Tour in Scotland.

HADDINGTONSHIRE, or EAST LOTHIAN, a county of Scotland, bounded on the west by Edinburghshire, or Mid Lothian, on the north by the Frith of Forth, on the east by the German Ocean, and on the south by Berwick, from which it is separated by the Lammermuir hills. It is about 25 miles long and 14 broad, and contains three royal burghs, viz. Haddington, North Berwick, and Dunbar, and many populous towns and villages. It is divided into 24 parochial districts, which contain 5851 houses, inhabited by 29,986 persons, viz. 13890 males and 16096 females, of whom 3224 were returned as being chiefly employed in trade and manufacture, and 5346 in agriculture. It is intersected by numerous streams, but the Tyne is the principal river which falls into the German Ocean, between Berwick and Dunbar. It is perhaps one of the most fertile counties in Scotland, and is in general in a high state of cultivation, producing abundance of grain. Most of the farms are of considerable extent, and the land is particularly favourable to the turnip husbandry. There are several good fisheries here, and it has some foreign trade. Several branches of the linen and woollen manufacture, as well as the making of salt, are carried on in this shire. An attempt was made some years ago to introduce the manufacture of fine broad cloth and blankets, but it did not succeed. Preston Pans has a considerable manufacture of oil of vitriol and sal ammoniac. The seats of the nobility and gentry, in this county, from its rich and agreeable situation, are very numerous. It abounds with excellent coal, free-stone, and lime-stone, and produces also some iron and lead.

Haddiscoe, a parish in the hundred of Clavering, Norfolk, 3½ miles from Beccles, and 115 from London; containing 45 houses and 328 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 12*l.* united with Toft Monks, and is in the patronage of King's college, Cambridge.

Haddesley West, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Birkin, Barkston Ash wapentake, west riding of York, 6 miles from Snaith, and 180 from London, situate near the Selby canal, where it joins the river Aire; containing 37 houses and 224 inhabitants.

Haddlesey Chapel, or Middle Haddlesey, a hamlet also to the parish of Birkin, ½ mile to the east of the former, having a bridge over the river Aire, and containing 25 houses and 152 inhabitants.

Haddon, a parish in the hundred of Normancross, Hunts, 3½ miles from Stilton, and 74½ from London; containing 10 houses and 77 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 5*s.*

Haddo, a small town in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, 9 miles from Inverary, and 24 from Aberdeen. From this the earls of Aberdeen take their second title of lords Haddo.

Haddon East, a parish in the hundred of Nobottle Grove, Northampton, 7½ miles from Northampton, and 74 from London; containing 115 houses and 259 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 15*l.*

Haddon West, a parish in the hundred of Guildsborough, Northampton, 11 miles from Northampton, containing 174 houses and 806 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Hadham Great, a parish in the hundred of Edwintree, Herts, 3 miles from Bishop's Stortford, and 30 from London; containing 185 houses and 980 inhabitants. It is pleasantly situated in a vale by the river Ash, and was once the residence of the bishops of London. Its fair is on the 24th June, and the living is a rectory, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* It is in the patronage of the bishop of London, with Little Hadham chapel annexed.

Hadham Little, a chapelry to the above, 4½ miles from Bishop's Stortford, and 31½ from London; containing 115 houses and 685 inhabitants. In the chapel are buried several of the earls of Essex.

Hadleigh, a parish in the hundred of Rochford, Essex, situate on the brow of a steep hill, 3 miles from Rochford and 37 from London. It lies near the South Benfleet, being divided from Canvey Island by a branch of the Thames called Hadley Ray, and contains 44 houses and 249 inhabitants. There are some ruins here of a castle built by Hubert de Burgh. Its fair is on the 24th June, and the living is a rectory, value 11*l.* 14*s.* 7*d.*

Hadleigh, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Cosford, Suffolk, situate on the river Breton, 7 miles from Ipswich, and 64½ from London; containing 467 houses and 2486 inhabitants, being 1162 males and 1324 females, of whom 218 were returned as employed in trade and manufactures, principally that of spinning yarn for the Norwich weavers, although it was once noted for its woollen trade. The church, which stands in the middle of the town, is a handsome structure, with a spire. Here are 12 almshouses, first founded in 1497. It was anciently a corporation; but the charter being surrendered by a writ of quo warranto from James II. it has never since been incorporated. There was a monastery here in the time of the Saxons. On Oldham common Dr. Rowland Taylor was burnt in 1555, to whose memory a stone was erected, with a suitable inscription. Tradition says this place was the seat of the kings of the East Angles, and that Guthrum, the pagan king of Denmark, who, on his being conquered by Alfred, was baptized, received the government here. He died in 889. Hadleigh had formerly two markets, but now only one on Mondays. Its fairs are on Whit-Monday, and the 10th October. The living is a rectory, value 45*l.* 2*s.* 1*d.* and is in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury.

Hadley, or Monken Hadley, from the name of an hermitage here, in the hundred of Edmonton, Middlesex, 1 mile from Chipping Barnet, and 12 from London; containing 113 houses and 584 inhabitants. It lies on the borders of Enfield chace. The church is built of Flint, and has the date 1494 over the west door, with the sculptures of a rose and wing. On the top of the tower is an iron pot, which formerly served as a beacon when filled with pitch. Where the road divides, stands an obelisk, called Hadley or Barnet pillar, erected here in 1740 by sir Jeremy Sambrook, to commemorate the battle fought near this spot between the houses of York and Lancaster, in 1471.

Hadlow, a parish in the hundred of Tunbridge, and lathe of Aylesford, Kent, standing near the river Medway, before it receives the Twist, 4 miles from Tunbridge, and 26¼ from London; and containing 191 houses and 1145 inhabitants. Its fair is on Whit-Monday, and the living is a vicarage, value 13*l.*

Hadnall, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Grinshill, in Shrewsbury liberty, Salop, 5 miles from Shrewsbury, and 166 from London; containing 59 houses and 362 inhabitants.

Hadnit. See Honnil, Warwickshire.

Hadsor, a parish in Halfshire hundred, Worcester, 1 mile from Droitwich, and 119 from London; containing 11 houses and 90 inhabitants. It has a charity-school, and is a rectory, value 6*l.* 7*s.* 3*d.*

Hadstock, a parish in the hundred of Freshwell, Essex, 2½ miles from Linton, and 45½ from London; containing 46 houses and 272 inhabitants. On the door of the church is nailed a kind of skin, covered over with lattice work, which tradition says was that of a Danish chief, who was taken prisoner, and punished by flaying, for having pillaged the church. It is a rectory, value 19*l.* of which the king is patron.

Hadston, a hamlet to the parish of Warkworth, in Morpeth ward, Northumberland, 10 miles from Morpeth, and 300 from London, not far from the river Coquet; containing 12 houses and 68 inhabitants.

Hagborn East, a parish in the hundred of Moreton, Berks, 4½ miles from Wallingford, and 50 from London; containing 102 houses and 499 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 15*l.* 10*s.* 7*d.*

Hagborn West, a hamlet to the parish of East Hagborne, being half a mile farther west; containing 39 houses and 196 inhabitants.

Hagley, a parish in Halfshire hundred, Worcester, 2 miles from Stourbridge, and 123 from London; containing 104 houses and 621 inhabitants. The chancel of the church was rebuilt in 1754, and the floor paved with marble, at the expence of lord Lyttleton, who has an elegant mansion in the neighbourhood, called Hagley park.—Many Roman urns and coins have been dug up here. The living is a rectory, value 10*l.* 6*s.* 5*d.*

Hagloe, in the parish of Aure, hundred of St. Brjavell's, Gloucester, 3 miles from Newnham, and 120 from London, standing near the Purton passage of the river Severn. The population is included with Blackney.

Hagnaby, a small parish in the hundred of Calceworth, and division of Lindsay, Lincoln, 3 miles from Alford, and 143 from London; containing 14 houses and 85 inhabitants. It is a donative, but there is no church.

Haigh, a township to the parish of Wigan, and hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 2 miles from Wigan, and 202 from London; containing 118 houses and 798 inhabitants. There are some very extensive iron works here, belonging to the earl of Balcarras (who has an elegant mansion in the neighbourhood), which employs two blasts, and a number of hands, in the foundery of cannon, cannon balls, &c. Here are some of the finest cannel coal works in England, supposed to be almost inexhaustible. There is a vitriol spring in them. From the top of a mount in the park may be seen 13 counties, and the Isle of Man. Its fairs are 29th June and 22d November. Several Roman coins, medals, and rings have been found here.

Haighton, a hamlet to the parish of Preston, hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster; 3 miles from Preston, and 213 from London; containing 30 houses and 167 inhabitants.

Haile, a parish in Allerdale ward above Derwent, Cumberland, 2 miles from Egremont, and 302 from London; containing 42 houses and 220 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Hailey, a township and chapelry to Witney, in the hundred of Bampton, Oxford, 1½ mile from Witney, and 67 from London; containing 202 houses and 993 inhabitants.

Hailes, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Didbrook, hundred of Kiftsgate, Gloucester, 1¼ mile from Winchcomb, and 96 from London; containing 19 houses and 111 inhabitants. Here are the vestiges still remaining of a once famous abbey.

Hailsham, a parish and market-town in the hundred of Dill, and rape of Pevensey, Sussex, 12 miles from Lewes, and 57 from London; containing 132 houses and 897 inhabitants. At Michelham, near this town, Gilbert de Aquila founded a priory of black canons in the reign of Henry III. Its market is on Wednesday, and the living is a vicarage, value 16*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Hailweston, a hamlet to the parish of Southoe, in the hundred of Foxland, Huntingdon, 2 miles from St. Neot's, and 57 from London; containing 37 houses and 258 inhabitants. This has long been noted for a mineral spring, good for disorders in the eyes and eruptions on the skin.

Hainton, a parish in the hundred of Wraggoe, and division of Lindsay, Lincoln, 4 miles from Wragby, and 145 from London; containing 33 houses and 216 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.*

Hairsthorp, a hamlet to Carnaby, in Dickering lythe, east riding of York, 4 miles from Bridlington, and 204 from London; containing 15 houses and 89 inhabitants.

Halam, a township and chapelry to the parish of Southwell, hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, 1½ mile from Southwell, and 130 from London; containing 66 houses and 284 inhabitants.

Hainault Forest, near Barking, Essex. In this forest stands an ancient oak, known for centuries by the name of Fairlop oak. It is said to be 1800 years old, and is 66 feet in girth; under it is annually held Fairlop fair.

Halberton, a parish in the hundred to which it gives name in Devonshire, 3 miles from Tiverton, and 161 from London; containing 265 houses and 1436 inhabitants, of whom 373 were returned as employed in various trades. The living is a vicarage, value 31*l.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Bristol.

Helberton, the name of a hundred in Devonshire, on the eastern side of the county, near the borders of Somersetshire.

Halcombe Regis, a parish in the hundred of Bampton, Devon, 4 miles from Bampton, and 161 from London; containing 193 houses and 662 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 10*s.* 2*d.*

Halden, a parish in the hundred of Blackbourn, and lathe of Scray, Kent, 2 miles from Tenterden, and 57 from London; containing 75 houses and 519 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 19*l.* 4*s.* 6*d.*

Halden. See Appledurford, or Appledurcombe, Isle of Wight.

Hale, a river in Cornwall, which falls into the Irish Sea near St. Ives.

Hale, a township to Bowden, in the hundred of Bucklow, Chester, standing by the river Bollin, 2 miles from Altrincham, and 177 from London; containing 121 houses and 783 inhabitants.

Hale, a parish in the division of New-forest, West Hants, 4 miles from Fordingbridge, and 90 from London; containing 23 houses and 147 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Hale, a township and chapelry to the parish of Childwall, hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 5 miles from Prescott, and 190 from London, near the river Mersey; containing 108 houses and 537 inhabitants.

Hale Great, a parish in the hundred of Aswardhun, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 4½ miles from Folkingham, and 111 from London; containing 86 houses and 404 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 6*s.* and the patron is the king.

Hale Little, a hamlet to the above, 1 mile nearer Folkingham; containing 39 houses and 223 inhabitants.

Hales, a chapelry to the parish of Loddon, in the hundred of Clavering, Norfolk, 4½ miles from Bungay, and 111 from London; containing 23 houses and 131 inhabitants.

Halesowen, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Brimstree, Salop, 7½ miles from Birmingham, and 127 from London, on the borders of Worcester and Staffordshire. The church and monastery here appear to have been once very stately edifices. There is a considerable manufacture of nails in this town. In the church is an urn erected to the memory of that ingenious poet, Shenstone, who lies buried here; and whose beautiful retreat, called The Leasowes, is in this neighbourhood. Halesowen has a small market on Monday, and a fair on Easter and Whit Mondays. The population of this town was omitted to be returned to parliament in 1802. The living is a vicarage, value 15*l.* 18*s.* 11*d.*

Halesworth, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Blything, Suffolk, standing on the river Blyth, 8½ miles from Yexford, and 101 from London; and containing 258 houses and 1676 inhabitants, of whom 938 were returned as employed in various trades, manufacture, and spinning worsted yarn. It is a very ancient town, with a neat church and a charity school. In the neighbourhood is a mineral spring, long famed for diseases of the eyes. It has a navigable canal to Southwold, distant about 9 miles. Hemp is grown here in great quantities, and the market on Tuesday is principally for yarn. Its fairs are on Tuesday in Easter and Whitsun weeks, and 18th October. The living is a rectory, value 20*l.*, and is united with Cheston.

Halewood, a village in Lancashire, situated on the river Mersey, near Prescott.

Halford, a hamlet to the parish of Bromfield, in the hundred of Munslow, Salop, 2 miles from Ludlow, and 145 from London; containing 21 houses and 137 inhabitants.

Halford, or Hawford, a parish in the hundred of Kineton, Warwickshire, standing on the river Stour, over which it had a ford from whence its name, 3 miles from Shipton on Stour, and 66 from London. It contains 53 houses and 285 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 10*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.*

Halfshire, the name of a hundred in Worcester, at the northern extremity of the county from Droitwich, and on the borders of Stafford and Warwick.

Halgaver Moor, near Bodmin, Cornwall, famous for an annual carnival about the middle of July, which is visited by a great number of people: king Charles II. was so pleased with the diversions of it, when he touched here on his way to Scilly, that he became a brother of the jovial society. This custom is supposed to be as old as the time of the Saxons. One of the sports is to draw the unwary into a quagmire. It is customary to try persons for some trivial offence or other before one who is styled the mayor of Halgaver, who orders them to be punished in a harmless but ridiculous manner.

Halghton, a small village in the hundred of Maylar, Flintshire, Wales, 4 miles from Flint, and 315 from London; containing 72 houses and 418 inhabitants.

Halifax, a very ancient, populous, and flourishing market-town and parish in Morley wapentake, west riding of York, 195½ miles from London. It is seated on a branch of the river Calder, which falls into the Aire near Wakefield. The extent of this parish is near 60 miles in length, and from 6 to 8 in breadth; and it has 11 chapels of ease to the mother church. The town contains 1915 houses and 8886 inhabitants, viz. 3976 males and 4910 females; of whom 1840 were returned as employed in trade and manufactures. The church is an old, but venerable, building, and contains a number of monuments, of great antiquity. The town is handsome, with good streets, and the houses are built of stone. The woollen manufacture has long been established here, and from the favourable situation of the place and the many rivulets, there have, of late years, been erected numerous mills and machinery for the cotton manufactory which is daily increasing; and the great demand during war for kerseys for the army abroad, has caused an increase in the woollen trade of at least one fourth. Halifax was noted many centuries ago for the manufacture of woollen goods; it did not, however, attain any considerable importance till the reign of Henry VII. About the beginning of the 18th century the manufacture of shalloons was introduced, and about the middle of the same century the manufacture of figured and flowered stuffs. The weavers of the surrounding district bring their goods undressed to the market, and the following are the principal articles manufactured in and about Halifax: shalloons, figured and plain lastings and amens, plain and diced Russels or Florentines, superbarragans or serge imperial, quilled lasting, serge, moreens, tammies, plain calimancoes, &c. Shalloons are woven expressly for the Turkey market, and are not pressed; they are, for the most part, dyed of a scarlet colour, and are sent by the Turkey merchants of London to the Levant, where they are chiefly used for turbans. Formerly the greater part of the above goods passed through the hands of the London merchants, but now they are mostly exported directly from the port of Hull. In time of peace, large quantities of woollen stuffs have been sent to South America by way of Cadiz. There are excellent wool-cards, for combing wool, made at Halifax. For the convenience of the manufacturers, there has been erected an elegant edifice, called the Piece Hall; it is in the form of an oblong square, occupying a space of 10,000 square yards, having 315 distinct rooms for the lodgement of goods, which are open for sale once a week from 10 till 12 o'clock, of which considerable quantities are sent to Turkey and the Levant. This town in early times appears to have had the grant of a criminal jurisdiction within itself, and execution, by decollation, of such offenders as were found guilty of theft to the value of 13½*d*. It was granted over that part of the parish called the forest of Hardwicke, for the purpose of protecting the goods which were obliged to be exposed on tenters during the night; this punishment was exercised as late as the year 1632, two persons having, in that year, suffered for theft. This law, called the Halifax law, was made in the reign of Henry VII. The person so condemned was carried within a week to the scaffold and there beheaded, by an axe drawn up by a pulley to the top of a wooden engine and there fastened by a pin, which on being drawn out, the axe fell and struck off the head of the criminal. The earl of Moreton, regent of Scotland, seeing one of these executions as he passed through Halifax, took a model of it, and carried it into his own country, where after many years, during which time it was called the Maiden, his lordship's head was the first that was struck off by it, since which it has often been used, but always retained its first name. The French Guillotine was copied from the machine used at Halifax. The vicar of this town is always a justice of the peace. The market on Saturday is one of the best in the north of England. Its fairs are June 24 and October 21. The living is a vicarage, value 84*l*. 13*s*. 6*d*. and the patron is the king.—Macon's Tour.

Haling, a hamlet to the parish of Saint John's Lee, in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 1½ mile from Hexham, and 282 from London; containing 24 houses and 128 inhabitants.

Haling, an island near Gosport, Hants, separated by a narrow channel from the coast; it is of a triangular form, about 3½ miles long, and 2 miles broad; on the east coast are several creeks.

Halkin, a parish in the hundred of Coleshill, Flintshire, Wales, 205 miles from London; containing 249 houses and 1152 inhabitants, of whom 954 were returned as employed in trade and manufactures. The living is a rectory, value 14*l*. 7*s*. 11*d*. in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

Halkirk, a parish in the shire of Caithness, Scotland, 3 miles from Thurso, and 14 from Wick; containing 429 houses and 2545 inhabitants, viz. 1159 males and 1386 females, of whom 229 were returned as being employed in various trades. There are 24 large and small lochs or lakes here, which give rise to numerous streams. It produces abundance of limestone and marl. Its ancient castle of Braal, which is of massive construction, is one of the finest buildings in the county, and was the seat of the Harolds, earls of Caithness.

Hallam, a parish in the hundred of Morlestone and Litchurch, Derby, 6 miles from Derby, and 122 from London; containing 95 houses and 584 inhabitants. It is a vicarage; value 4*l*. 9*s*. 7*d*.

Hallam Nether, a township to the parish of Sheffield, in the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of York, 3 miles from Sheffield, and 164 from London; containing 382 houses and 1974 inhabitants, of whom 554 were returned as employed in various trades, mostly those common to Sheffield.

HALLAM UPPER, a township also in the same parish, ½ mile distant from the above; containing 146 houses and 794 inhabitants.

HALLATON. See HALLOUGHTON.

HALLIFORD, a hamlet to the parish of Shepperton, in the hundred of Spelthorne, Middlesex, 18 miles from London, on the banks of the Thames, a delightful situation, where are many elegant houses; this was the retirement of bishop Duppa during the civil wars.

HALLIKEUN, the name of a wapentake in the north riding of York, lying between the rivers Swale and Ure.

HALLING, a parish in the hundred of Shamwell, and lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 2½ miles from Rochester, and 30 from London; containing 41 houses and 249 inhabitants. The bishops of Rochester had formerly a palace here. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Rochester.

HALLINGBURY GREAT, a parish in the hundred of Harlow, Essex, 1¼ mile from Bishops Stortford, and 29 from London; containing 101 houses and 549 inhabitants. At Wallbury, near this place, are the traces of a Roman encampment. The living is a rectory, value 22*l.*

HALLINGBURY LITTLE, a parish in the same hundred, 1½ mile from the above, and 27¼ from London; containing 75 houses and 408 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* in the patronage of the governors of the Charterhouse.

HALLINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Louth Eske, in Lindsay division, Lincoln, 2 miles from Louth, and 154 from London; containing 7 houses and 55 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 17*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.*

HALLIWELL, a township in the parish of Deane, in the hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 3 miles from Bolton, and 199 from London; containing 258 houses and 1385 inhabitants, of whom 820 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures.

HALLOUGHTON, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 7½ miles from Market Harborough, and 99½ from London; containing 135 houses and 548 inhabitants. It has a charity school, and a small market on Thursday. Its fairs are on Holy-Thursday and the third Thursday after. The rectory is divided into two medieties, value 36*l.*

HALLOUGHTON, a parish in the hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, 2 miles from Southwell, and 129 from London; containing 17 houses and 90 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HALLOW, a township and chapelry to the parish of Grimley, in the hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 2 miles from Worcester, and 114 from London; containing 12? houses and 878 inhabitants. It stands on an eminence on the banks of the Severn, having a fine prospect of the Bredon and Cotswold hills. It has a neat chapel of Norman architecture.

HALLYSTON, or HOLYSTONE, a hamlet to the parish of Alwhinton, in Coquedale ward, Northumberland, on a branch of the Alwhine, 6 miles from Rothbury, and 312 from London; containing 29 houses and 125 inhabitants.

HALSALL, a parish in the hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 2¾ miles from Ormskirk, and 212 from London; containing 128 houses and 731 inhabitants. A kind of bituminous turf is produced here which emits a smell like the oil of amber, pieces of which are used by the country people instead of candle. The Leeds and Liverpool canal passes by this village. The living is a rectory, value 24*l.* 14*s.* 8*d.*

HALSE, a parish in the hundred of Willerton and Freemanners, Somerset, 3 miles from Wiveliscombe, and 153 from London; containing 57 houses and 383 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.*

HALSHAM, a parish in Holderness, east riding of York, 5 miles from Hedon, and 188 from London; containing 36 houses and 236 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

HALSTEAD, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Hinckford, Essex, 6 miles from Braintree, and 46 from London. It is pleasantly situated on a rising ground, at the foot of which passes the river Colne; and contains 717 houses and 3580 inhabitants, of whom 1654 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures, principally that of baize and says, for which it was formerly much noted. The church is an ancient handsome building, and was formerly collegiate. The streets are wide and spacious. At this town is a grammar-school, founded in 1594, for 40 free scholars; the trustees are the governors of Christ's hospital in London. The bridewell is an antique building. Its market is on Friday, and its fairs 6th May and 29th October for horses, cattle, and toys. The living is a vicarage, value 17*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of London.—Morant's Essex.

HALSTEAD, a hamlet to the parish of Tilton on the Hill, in the hundred of East Goscote, Leicester, 10 miles from Leicester, and 94 from London.

HALSTOCK, a township and chapelry to the parish of Lyme, in the hundred of Beaminster, division of Bridport, Dorset, 5 miles from Beaminster, and 137 from London; containing 63 houses and 397 inhabitants. It is pleasantly situated on the borders of Somersetshire. The patronage of the chapel is in the corporation of Lyme.

HALSTON, a small parish in the hundred of Stow, Suffolk, 2¾ miles from Stow Market, and 78½ from London; containing 10 houses and 87 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Halstow High, a parish in the hundred of Hoo, and lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 2½ miles from Chatham, and 29 from London; containing 56 houses and 227 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 14*l.* 5*s.* 6*d.*

Halstow, a parish in the hundred of Milton, and lathe of Scray, Kent, on the opposite side of the Medway, 5 miles from Chatham, and 36 from London; containing 23 houses and 124 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 2*s.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Canterbury.

Haltham, a parish in the hundred of Horncastle, and Lindsay division, Lincoln, 4 miles from Tattersall, and 134 from London, standing on the river Baine, and near the Tattersall navigation; containing 76 houses and 445 inhabitants. The rectory, value 8*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.* is united with Boughton.

Halton, a parish in the hundred of Aylesbury, Bucks, 2 miles from Wendover, and 37 from London; containing 31 houses and 159 inhabitants. The Wendover feeder passes here. The living is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Halton, a township in the parish of Runcorn, and hundred of Bucklow, Chester, between the rivers Mersey and Wover, 8 miles from Northwich, and 181 from London; containing 130 houses and 628 inhabitants. This is supposed to have been formerly a considerable town, having had a castle and citadel, part of the ruins of which are still remaining. This castle was built in 1071, and is a member of the dutchy of Lancaster, which maintained an extensive jurisdiction by the name of Halton fee, having a court of record, prison, &c. This manor had a particular custom, that if the driver of any cattle should suffer them to graze or taste a thistle while passing over the manor, he should forfeit a halfpenny per head to the lord of the fee, which was called Thistle-take. The castle was supposed to have been built by Hugh Lupus, earl of Chester, and was afterwards the residence of John of Gaunt. All that remains is now a prison, which still evinces it to have been a stately building. About Michaelmas a dutchy court is held here, but felons are carried to the sessions at Chester.

Halton, a township to the parish of Lancaster hundred of Lonsdale, Lancaster, 2 miles from Lancaster, and 240 from London, standing on the river Loyne; and containing 153 houses and 823 inhabitants.

Halton, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Corbridge, in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 15 miles from Newcastle, and 283 from London; containing 13 houses and 62 inhabitants.

Halton Shields, a hamlet in the same parish, near the above; containing 15 houses and 62 inhabitants.

Halton East, a hamlet to the parish of Skipton wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, in the west riding of York, 3 miles from Skipton, and 220 from London; containing 31 houses and 152 inhabitants.

Halton East, or Halton on Humber, a parish in the hundred of Yarborough Lindsay, and division of Lincoln, 6 miles from Grimsby, and 174 from London; containing 22 houses and 104 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the king.

Halton Gill, a parish in the wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, in the west riding of York, situate between Skipton and Settle; and containing 27 houses and 139 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Halton Holgate, a parish in the hundred of Bolingbroke, and division of Lindsay, Lincoln, 1 mile from Spilsby, and 135 from London; containing 66 houses and 410 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 16*l.* 17*s.* 11*d.*

Halton West, a parish in Manley wapentake, and Lindsay division, Lincoln, 2½ mile from Burton Stather, and 165 from London; containing 43 houses and 204 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 16*l.* with Coningsby chapel annexed, and is in the patronage of the bishop of Norwich.

Halton West, a hamlet to the parish of Long Preston, in the wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, in the west riding of York, 4 miles from Settle, and 228 from London; containing 53 houses and 250 inhabitants.

Haltwhistle, a market-town and parish in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 37 miles from Newcastle, and 315 from London; containing 98 houses and 453 inhabitants. It is situated on the side of the South Tyne, which runs parallel with the Picts wall. The town is well built on a lofty situation, and the church-yard commands a very extensive prospect over the vale, which is bounded by Bellester castle on one side, and Hexdon-bridge on the other. A little to the east of the church is an oval eminence, called Castle banks, in the center of which is a fine spring; on the east and west sides are four distinct gradations, one above another. Three miles north-west of the town are the remains of Thelwall castle, formerly one of the boundary fortresses between England and Scotland. It stands on the edge of a rock near the river Tippal, but has been demolished, in a great measure, for the sake of the stone. It has a small market on Thursdays, and its fairs are 14th May and 22d November. The church is a curacy.

Halvergate, a parish in the hundred of Walsham, Norfolk, 10 miles from Norwich, and 119 from London; containing 59 houses and 397 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.

Halvreseed, a parish in the hundred of Wangford, Suffolk, 3 miles from Bungay, and 104 from London; containing 21 houses and 128 inhabitants.

Halwell, a parish in the hundred of Black Torrington, Devon, 4 miles from Holdsworthy, and 219 from London; containing 21 houses and 156 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.* and the patron is the king.

HALWELL, a hamlet to the parish of Harberton, in the hundred of Coleridge, Devon, 4½ miles from Totness, and 199 from London; containing 47 houses and 358 inhabitants.

HAM, a parish in the hundred of Eastry, and lathe of St. Augustine, Kent, 3 miles from Deal, and 70½ from London; containing 5 houses and 29 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 5*l.* 6*s.* 5*d.* of which the patron is the king.

HAM, a hamlet to the parish of Kingston, in the hundred of Kingston, Surry, between Petersham and Kingston, 11 miles from London; containing 105 houses and 557 inhabitants. It lies on the banks of the Thames in a very agreeable situation, and has many handsome seats. Ham-house, erected in 1610, was originally intended as the residence of Henry prince of Wales, son of James I.; and this was the place of retirement of James II. when the prince of Orange came to England, and from which he escaped to France.

HAM, a parish in the hundred of Elstub and Everley, Wilts, lying on the borders of Berks, 3 miles from Hungerford, and 60 from London; containing 35 houses and 188 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 12*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Winchester.

HAM EAST, a parish in the hundred of Becontree, Essex, 6 miles from London; containing 156 houses and 1165 inhabitants. In this parish is a spring, called Miller's well, the water of which is exceedingly good, and has never been known to be frozen, or to vary in its height. Part of the parish of Woolwich, in Kent, lies on this side the Thames. Greensted-house, being partly ancient and partly modern, lies about 1 mile from the church, having an old brick tower in the garden 50 feet high, supposed to have been built by Henry VIII. for Anna Boleyne. The living is a vicarage, value 14. Ss. 9*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of London.

HAM WEST, also a parish in the same hundred of Essex, 2 miles from East Ham, and 4 from London; containing 306 houses and 1960 inhabitants, exclusive of Plaistow and Stratford ward in the same parish. In this parish are 12 acres of marsh land, appropriated for the placing out four apprentices, three of this, and one of East Ham parish. The living is a vicarage, value 39*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* the patron is the king.

HAMBLE, a township in the parish of Hound, and hundred of Mainbridge, in the division of Fawley, Hants, 4 miles from Southampton, and 76 from London; containing 71 houses and 327 inhabitants. Southampton water, at this place, affords an excellent retreat for shipping, and has depth of water at all times sufficient for putting to sea at any opportunity of wind. Many small craft are built here and repaired. This place is noted for producing very delicious lobsters. The views from it are beautiful beyond description.

HAMBLEDON, a parish in the hundred of Godalming, Surry, 3½ miles from Godalming, and 37 from London; containing 53 houses and 459 inhabitants. The church is a very ancient small building. The living is a vicarage, discharged from the payment of first fruits and tenths.

HAMBLEDON, a parish in the hundred of Desborough, Bucks, 4 miles from Great Marlow, and 35 from London; containing 201 houses and 1074 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 35*l.*

HAMBLEDON, or HAMBLEDOWN, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Hambledon, in the division of Portsdown, Hants, 9 miles from Petersfield, and 64 from London; containing 355 houses and 1358 inhabitants, of whom 117 were returned as being employed in various trades. The most worthy of note in this neighbourhood are Russell's delightful Serpentine walks, which are much frequented during the summer season; and Broadhalfpenny and Windmill down, commanding a most extensive view of country, and well known by the cricketers of Hants, London, and Kent. On Windmill down a building has lately been erected, in which a select club assemble annually in May, and continue their meetings weekly on Mondays till the season for partridge shooting commences. Its market is on Mondays for corn; and its fairs the 13th February, 1st Tuesday in May, and 2d October. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 17*s.* 1*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Lincoln.

HAMBLETON, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Kirkham, in the hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, 1½ mile from Kirkham, and 226 from London; containing 66 houses and 252 inhabitants.

HAMBLETON, a parish in the hundred of Martinsley, Rutland, 3½ miles from Oakham, and 93 from London; containing 65 houses and 336 inhabitants. It is a vicarage; value 10*l.* 17*s.* 1*d.*

HAMBLETON, a township in the parish of Brayton, Barkston Ash wapentake, west riding of York, 3½ miles from Selby, on the road to Leeds, and 185 from London; containing 64 houses and 386 inhabitants. This village is remarkable for a large wood growing on a considerable hill, called Hambleton Hough.

HAMBROOK, a hamlet to the parish of Winterbourne, hundred of Langley and Swineshead, Gloucester, 4 miles from Bristol, and 109 from London. Population included with Winterbourne.

HAMERTON, a parish in the hundred of Leightonstone, Hunts, 9 miles from Kimbol-ton, and 71 from London; containing 23 houses and 129 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 15*s.* 5*d.*

HAMFALLOW, a tything in the parish of King's Charlton, hundred of Berkley, Gloucester, 3 miles from Cheltenham, and 98 from London; containing 60 houses and 394 inhabitants.

HAMFORDSHOE, the name of a hundred in Northamptonshire, on the eastern side of the county, to the west of the river Nen.

HAMILTON, a hamlet, and formerly a chapelry to the parish of Barkby, hundred of East Goscote, Leicester, 4 miles from Leicester, and 100 from London; containing only 1 house and 5 inhabitants.

HAMILTON, a town and parish in the shire of Lanark, Scotland, 10 miles from Glasgow, and 136 from Edinburgh; containing 642 houses and 5908 inhabitants, viz. 2686 males and 3222 females, of whom 882 were returned as employed in trade and manufactures. The town is irregularly built, and is situated near the conflux of the Avon and the Clyde. The parish church stands on a rising ground above the town, and is a handsome building. Hamilton has a neat townhouse and prison, and a very commodious market-place. It was made a royal borough by queen Mary in 1548. A considerable trade is carried on in the cabinet line and in the manufactory of shoes; and the women are chiefly employed in spinning linen yarn, and making thread lace. This place is chiefly noted for Hamilton palace, the seat of the duke of Hamilton. The building forms three sides of a quadrangle; the rooms are very spacious, particularly the picture gallery, which contains the best collection in Scotland. In the middle of the Great Park, 1 mile from the town, on a rock overhanging the Avon stands the ruins of Cadzow-castle, the ancient manor-house. This formerly being the district of Cadzow, on the opposite side of the Avon, is the imitation of a ruin representing the castle of Chatelherault in Normandy, from whence the family takes the title of duke of Chatelherault in France. The park is well stocked with deer, and contains a number of very stately oaks. The residence of the Hamilton family contributes greatly to the support of the town; and the annual races here are amongst the best attended in the west of Scotland.

HAMMERINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Hill, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 3 miles from Horncastle, and 136 from London; containing 26 houses and 129 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 8*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.* united with Scravsield.

HAMMERSMITH, a township and chapelry in the parish of Fulham, hundred of Ossulton, Middlesex, 3½ miles from London, on the road to Brentford and Hounslow; containing 871 houses and 5600 inhabitants, viz. 2497 males and 3103 females, of whom 600 were returned as being employed in various trades. The population is daily increasing from the numerous buildings erecting here which are nearly joined in one continued street to Kensington. The modern houses are well built, and it has a number of handsome seats and villas towards the Thames. The chapel stands near the centre of the town, and the curacy is in the patronage of the bishop of London. Here are a good charity-school, a spacious workhouse, and several places of worship for dissenters, a quaker's meeting, &c. There is also a nunnery here, established originally as a boarding-school for young ladies of the Roman Catholic persuasion; and during the last century most of the fashionable females of that religion received their education here: from time to time many devotees have taken the veil, and doomed themselves to voluntary seclusion here. To this nunnery is attached a chapel, as well as one at Brook green, where there is a Roman Catholic charity school. The celebrated villa, called Brandenburgh house, belonging to the late margravé of Anspach, and now to his widow, formerly lady Craven, was erected about the beginning of the reign of Charles I. by sir Nicholas Crispe, a celebrated merchant, warrior, and royalist. It was afterwards the property of prince Rupert, who gave it to Margaret Hughes, a celebrated actress of that age. In 1748, it became the property of lord Malcomb, who modernized it, and added a magnificent gallery for statues and antiques. He gave it the name of La Trappe, from a monastery of that name in France. In 1792 it was purchased by the late margrave of Anspach, he having sold his dominions to the king of Prussia, for an annuity allowed him by that potentate. Near the water-side is a small but elegant theatre, which is connected with the dwelling-house by a conservatory of a curvilinear form, 150 feet long. The margravine entertains her friends here with concerts, dramatic exhibitions, &c. in which she assists with her own talents, both as a writer and performer. — Lysons's Environs of London.

HAMMOH, or HAMOND, a parish in the hundred of Pimperne, division of Blandford, Dorset, 1¼ mile from Stourminster Newton, and 111 from London; containing 13 houses and 59 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 7*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*

HAMOAZE, the western branch, or main river, which falls into Plymouth Sound, and is the harbour for the royal navy: it contains about 100 mooring-buoys, lying mostly in three tiers, the middle for three-deckers, that on the west side for ships of less force, and that on the east for frigates.—See PLYMOUTH.

HAMPDEN-GREAT, a parish in the hundred of Aylesbury, Bucks, 2 miles from Missenden, and 35 from London; containing 33 houses and 228 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*

HAMPDEN-LITTLE, a hamlet and chapelry

in the parish of Hartwell, hundred of Aylesbury, Bucks, 6 miles from Wendover, and 41 from London; containing 16 houses and 79 inhabitants.

HAMPNET, a small parish in the hundred of Bradley, Gloucester, 1¼ mile from Northleach, and 83 from London; containing 17 houses and 90 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 10*l.* and is united with Stowel. It is in the patronage of lord Chedworth.

HAMPOLE, a hamlet to the parish of Adwick-le-Street, wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of York, 6 miles from Doncaster, and 168½ from London; containing 18 houses and 91 inhabitants.

HAMPRESTON, a parish in the hundred of Cranborn, division of Shaston, Dorset, 2½ miles from Wimborne minster, and 98 from London; containing 128 houses and 683 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 13*l.* 10*s.*

HAMPSHIRE, HANTS, or the county of Southampton, is bounded on the north by Berkshire, on the east by Surry and Sussex, on the south by the English channel, and on the west by Dorsetshire and Wiltshire, being nearly square, excepting a projection at the south-western extremity. It is about 42 miles long and 38 broad, and contains 1,112,000 acres of land, exclusive of the Isle of Wight, having nearly 600,000 acres in a course of pasturage, and 300,000 acres arable. The county is divided into 10 divisions, viz. Alton North and South, Andover, Basingstoke, Fawley, Kingsclere, New Forest East and West, Portsdown, and the Isle of Wight, which forms two liberties, called East and West Medina. These are subdivided into 59 small hundreds, having one city, Winchester, 20 towns, and 253 parishes. Eight of the towns, viz. Andover, Christchurch, Lymington, Petersfield, Portsmouth, Southampton, Stockbridge, and Whitchurch, send each two members to parliament, which, together with six for the boroughs of Newport, Yarmouth, and Newton in the isle of Wight, two for the county, and two for the city, make 26 members returned to parliament by this county. Hampshire, including the Isle of Wight, contains 38,345 houses, inhabited by 219,656 persons, viz. 105,667 males and 113,989 females, of whom 30,303 were returned as being employed in various trades, manufactories, and handicraft businesses, and 50,696 in agriculture. It is watered by several rivers, the principal ones being the Avon, Teffe, Stour, Wye, Loddon, and Itchin. It has a great variety of soils, but the principal part is chalk. Towards the sea are great quantities of marsh land, but very fertile. Bordering on Berkshire the land is excellent, and produces good crops of corn. The Dorsetshire border has large tracts of heath land. The original Hampshire sheep are horned, and for the most part have white faces: they were formerly long legged and narrow, but the breed of late years has been much improved, both in flesh and wool. In some parts the South Down breed has been introduced with great success; but breeding is not so extensive here as formerly; the enclosures of the Downs having considerably decreased the stock of sheep. The principal forests are, the New Forest, East Bere, and Woolmer; the former stretching from Godshill to the sea, a distance of nearly 20 miles, and about 15 broad, containing about 92,000 acres of land: It has nine walks, as many keepers, a bow bearer, and a lord warden, and is divided into nine bailiwicks, and is well stocked with deer. The New Forest was so called, because it was added to the existing forests by William the Conqueror. There is an officer appointed to select the trees proper for the use of the royal navy. Alice Holt and Woolmer forests are situated on the borders of Surry and Sussex, bounded on one side by the river Wye, which is navigable to Godalming, about 10 miles from the middle of the forest, and affords an easy conveyance of timber to the river Thames. The forest of Bere lies on the south east part of Hampshire, near Portsdown, within eight miles of Portsmouth, and contains about 16,000 acres. Among these forests great quantities of sheep, and a number of small horses are bred; but the food being poor, the breed is but indifferent. The breed of cows was also very poor, but it has been somewhat improved of late by the introduction of the Welch breed; however, there are still very few dairies. This county is particularly famous for hops, which is one of its staple commodities. The hogs in the neighbourhood of the forest feed principally upon acorns and beech mast, which give them a superiority over most others in the kingdom, and they weigh from 16 to 40 score. Here are the remains of many ancient camps, and the Romans had in this county six stations. The air in the higher parts is clear and pure, and towards the sea mild, but inclined to moisture. There are but few manufactures of any consequence, and these only of cloth, shalloons, and coarse woollens. The beautiful, fertile, and pleasant Isle of Wight lies about one mile from the main land, being separated by a narrow channel, in shape something resembling a bird with expanded wings, and is about 13 miles long and 21 broad; containing about 100,000 acres of land, of which four-fifths is arable, producing sufficient corn for the consumption of ten times its own population. Hampshire was anciently inhabited by the Regni and the Belgæ, by whom the city of Winchester is supposed to have been built; it lies in the province of Canterbury and diocese of Winchester. The total amount of the property tax, as returned in 1806, was 2,105,561*l.* The amount of money raised for the maintenance of the poor, in 1803, was 183,429*l.* being at the rate of 4*s.* 11*d.* in the pound. The average of deaths in which every Parish and Place is laid down containing upwards of 40 Houses.

HAMPSHIRE

Including the Isle of Wight.

Cities	2
Boroughs	21
Market Towns	28
Parishes	353
Inhabited Houses	38,343
Inhabitants	219,656
Square Acres	1,212,000
Arable	380,000
Pasture	620,000
Members of Parliament	26.

Hundreds.

1 Pastrow.
2 Evingar.
3 Kingsclere.
4 Holdshot.
5 Andover.
6 Wherwell.
7 Overton.
8 Basingstoke.
9 Odiham.
10 Crondall.
11 Mitchelderer.
12 Bermondspit.
13 Chuteley.
14 Alton.
15 Thorngate.
16 Kings Somborne.
17 Buddlesgate.
18 Barton Stacey.
19 Bountisborough.
20 Bishops Sutton.
21 Selborne.
22 Fawley.
23 East Meon.
24 Kingsweed.
25 Redbridge.
26 Mansbridge.
27 Bishops Waltham.
28 Meon Stoke.
29 Fordingbridge.
30 Hambledon.
31 Finch Dean.
32 Christ Church.
33 Titchfield.
34 Portsdown.
35 Fremere.
36 West Meadham.
37 East Meadham.
38 Fareham.
39 New Forrest.

Published June 2 1808, by R. Phillips, Bridge Street, Blackfriars, London.

Cooper del. et sculp.

for 10 years appears to have been as 1 to 47 of the existing population.

Hampstead, a parish in the hundred of Ossulton, Middlesex, 3 miles from London, containing 691 houses and 4343 inhabitants, viz. 1799 males and 2544 females, of whom 426 were returned as employed in trade and manufacture. It is situated on the declivity of a high hill, on the summit of which is an extensive heath, whence the view of the metropolis, and the surrounding country, is beyond description beautiful. On the side of the hill, to the east of the town, is a spring of mineral water strongly impregnated with iron, and formerly much frequented, but the Wells' Rooms adjoining, once the promenade of fashion, public breakfasts, &c. are now converted into a chapel, &c. The church was considered as a chapel of ease to Hendon till 1477, when it became a perpetual curacy, in the patronage of the lord of the manor, and was rebuilt in 1747. On the side of the hill is an ancient building, called the Chicken house; in the windows of which are small portraits, in stained glass, of James I. and the duke of Buckingham: it is supposed to have been a hunting seat of James I. In the neighbourhood are many elegant mansions of the nobility and wealthy citizens.—Lysons's Environs of London.

Hampstead Marshall, a parish in the hundred of Kintbury Eagle, Berks, 3 miles from Newbury, and 59 from London; containing 49 houses and 271 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 12*l.* 14*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of lord Craven.

Hampstead Norris, a parish in the hundred of Faircross, Berks, 5 miles from East Ilsley, and 52 from London; containing 163 houses and 855 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 18*s.* 11*d.*

Hampsthwaite, a parish in Claro wapentake, west riding of York, 2 miles from Ripley, and 214 from London; containing 86 houses and 439 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 15*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Hampton, a hamlet in the parish of Malpas, hundred of Broxton, Chester, 2 miles from Malpas, and 167 from London; containing 27 houses and 159 inhabitants.

Hampton, a parish in the hundred of Spelthorne, Middlesex, situate on the Thames opposite the mouth of the river Mole, 12 miles from London; containing 134 houses and 1722 inhabitants. Amongst the number of elegant mansions in this neighbourhood, Hampton Court palace, formerly a favourite royal residence, is the principal, which stands about a mile from the entrance of Hampton town. It is situated on the north bank of the Thames, 2 miles from Kingston. This palace was built in the most costly manner by cardinal Wolsey, who set up 280 silk beds for the accommodation of visitors; but its magnificence far exceeding that of royalty at the time, he made a present of it to Henry VIII. to screen himself from the envy it had created, and received in lieu of it Richmond palace. The remains of the old palace at present are only some of the domestic offices, the principal part having been taken down in 1690, and the present building erected by king William from a plan by sir Christopher Wren. The grand façade along the Thames extends 528 feet; the portico, colonnade, and grand entrance, are executed in a magnificent style of architecture. The park and pleasure-grounds are three miles in circumference. On a pediment in the front of the palace is a bas-relief of the Triumph of Hercules over Envy, opposite to which is a large oval bason. At the entrance of the grand walk are two marble vases of exquisite workmanship, the one by Cibber, father of the poet, and the other by a foreigner, being executed as a trial of skill; the one has a bas-relief of the Triumphs of Bacchus, the other Amphitrite and the Nereids. There are also two large vases at the bottom of the walk facing the canal; on the one a representation of the Judgment of Paris; on the other, Meleager hunting the wild boar. In the parterres are four brass statues, of a Gladiator, Apollo, Diana, and Saturn. On the south side of the palace is the Privy Garden, which was sunk 10 feet to open a view to the Thames, having a fountain in the centre. The palace consists of three quadrangles; the first and second are Gothic; but in the last is a most beautiful colonnade of the Ionic order; in which are the royal apartments. These were formerly enriched by tapestry and pictures; but both were removed about 37 years ago to Windsor. At the extremity of the gardens, opposite Thames Ditton, is the Pavilion, the lodge belonging to the duke of Gloucester as ranger of the park. In this palace king Charles I. was confined for a considerable time; and in the suite of apartments, called the Prince of Wales's, the stadtholder of the United Provinces resided some time with his consort, when driven from Holland by the French in the year 1795. At Bushy park is the residence of his royal highness the duke of Clarence. The living of Hampton is a vicarage, value 10*l.* of which the king is patron.—Lysons's Environs of London.

Hampton Bishop's, a parish in the hundred of Grimsworth, Hereford, standing on the banks of the Wye, 3 miles from Hereford, and 136 from London; containing 38 houses and 225 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Hampton Charles, a hamlet to the parish of Grendon Bishop's, in the hundred of Broxash, Hereford, 5 miles from Bromyard, and 131 from London; containing 18 houses and 75 inhabitants.

Hampton Wick, a hamlet to the parish of Hampton, in the hundred of Spelthorne, Middlesex, 2¼ miles from Twickenham, situated at the foot of Kingston bridge. Here are several neat little cottages, affording a pleasant summer retreat to the citizens of the metropolis. Population included with Hampton.

HAMPTON GAY, a parish in the hundred of Ploughley, Oxford, near the river Cherwell, 2 miles from Woodstock, and 60 from London; containing 11 houses and 67 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HAMPTON POYLE, another parish in the hundred of Ploughley, Oxford, 5 miles from Oxford, and 59 from London; containing 21 houses and 100 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 3*s.* 8*d.* the patronage of which is in Queen's college, Oxford.

HAMPTON LITTLE, a parish and small seaport in the hundred of Poleing, and rape of Arundel, Sussex, situated at the mouth of the river Arun, 3 miles from Arundel, and 63 from London.; containing 112 houses and 584 inhabitants. Of late years this place has considerably increased, and is much frequented during the season for sea-bathing. In the neighbourhood formerly stood several religious houses, and the remains of a Benedictine monastery are still to be seen at Boxgrove, which shew it to have been a place of great magnificence. This village is a small curacy.

HAMPTON IN ARDEN, a parish in the hundred of Hemlingford, Warwick, standing on the river Blythe, 3½ miles from Solihull, and 108 from London; containing 64 houses and 406 inhabitants. The traces of a castle are still visible on that part called the Castle Hills. There are several considerable hamlets in the liberties of this parish. The spire of the church was struck down by lightning in 1643. Its fair commences on St. Luke's day, and continues for three days. The living is a vicarage, value 15*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

HAMPTON LUCY, a parish in the hundred of Barlichway, Warwick, 1½ mile from Warwick, and 91 from London; containing 102 houses and 514 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 51*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

HAMPTON NETHER, a hamlet in the parish of Wilton, in Cawdon and Cadworth hundred, Wilts, 1½ mile from Wilton, and 83 from London; containing 23 houses and 167 inhabitants.

HAMPTON GREAT, a parish in the hundred of Blackenhurst, Worcester, 1 mile from Evesham, and 96 from London; formerly belonging to the abbey of Evesham, and containing 58 houses and 276 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HAMPTON LITTLE, a small hamlet in the parish of Great Hampton, and adjoining thereto.

HAMPTON LOVETT, a parish in Halfshire hundred, Worcester, 3 miles from Droitwich, and 121 from London; containing 34 houses and 198 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 16*s.*

HAM EAST and WEST, two small hamlets in the parish and hundred of Wantage, Berks.

HAMSEY, a parish in the hundred of Barcombe, rape of Lewes, Sussex, 1 mile from Lewes, and 48 from London; containing houses and 567 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.*

HAMSTALL RIDGWARE, a parish in the hundred of Offlow, Stafford, 6 miles from Litchfield, and 125 from London; containing 62 houses and 349 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 1*s.*

HAMSTELLS, a hamlet in the parish of Lanchester, in Chester ward, Durham, 3½ miles from Durham, and 262 from London. Population included with Burnhope.

HAMSTERLEY, a parish in Darlington ward, Durham, 5 miles from Bishop's Auckland, and 262 from London; containing 95 houses and 491 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HANWORTHY, a hamlet, and formerly a chapelry to the parish of Sturminster Marshall, in the hundred of Cogdean, division of Shaston, Dorset: being insulated on a neck of land opposite to Poole, to which there is a ferry. It is 106 miles from London, and contains 64 houses and 330 inhabitants.

HANBURY, a parish in the hundred of Offlow, Stafford, 5 miles from Burton, and 131 from London; containing 76 houses and 374 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, in the patronage of the bishop of Litchfield.

HANBURY, a parish in the hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 10 miles from Worcester, and 120 from London; containing 165 houses and 983 inhabitants. The church is situated on a very pleasant hill; a new tower has been lately built to it, and the whole has undergone a thorough repair: it contains several elegant marble monuments. The earl of Exeter has a handsome mansion and spacious park here. The living is a rectory, value 29*l.* 16*s.* 6*d.*

HANDA, a small island on the west coast of the county of Sutherland, separated from the main land by a narrow sound, being about a mile square. It is the property of lord Ray, and affords pasturage for a few sheep. On the north side is a perpendicular rock of 100 fathoms.

HANDBOROUGH, a parish in the hundred of Wootton, Oxford, 4½ miles from Woodstock, and 62 from London; containing 100 houses and 655 inhabitants. This place is noted for producing the variety of gypsum, or sulphate of lime, called selenites, which is dug up here in great quantities. The living is a rectory, value 11*l.* 6*s.* in the patronage of St. John's college, Oxford.

HANDFORTH, a township in the parish of Cheadle, and hundred of Macclesfield, Chester, 7 miles from Macclesfield, and 173 from London; containing 187 houses and 1024 inhabitants; of whom 819 were returned as employed in trade and manufactures.

HANDLEY, a parish in the hundred of Broxton, Chester, 8 miles from Chester, and 180 from London; containing 31 houses and 203 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 6*l.* 5*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Chester.

Handley, or Sixpenny Handley, a township and chapelry in the parish of Iwerne minster, in the hundred of Sixpenny Handley, and division of Shaston, Dorset, being on the borders of Wiltshire, 10 miles from Blandford, and 93 from London; it contains 135 houses and 757 inhabitants, and was formerly much more considerable than at present, having once had a weekly market. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the dean and canons of Windsor.

Handsacre, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Armitage, in Offlow hundred, Stafford, 4 miles from Litchfield, and 123 from London. Population included with Armitage.

Handsworth, a parish in the hundred of Offlow, Stafford, on the borders of Warwick, 2 miles from Birmingham, and 119 from London; containing 418 houses and 2157 inhabitants, of whom 506 were returned as employed in trade and manufactures. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 9*s.* 2*d.*

Handsworth, a parish in the wapentake of Strafford and Tickhill, west riding of York, 4 miles from Sheffield, and 160 from London; containing 308 houses and 1424 inhabitants, of whom 289 were returned as employed in trade. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of the duke of Norfolk.

Hang East and West, the name of two wapentakes in the north riding of York, towards the northern extremity of the county, bounded on the north by the river Swale.

Hanging Houghton, a hamlet in the parish of Brixworth, hundred of Orlingbury, Northampton, 8 miles from Northampton, and 75 from London; containing 21 houses and 117 inhabitants.

Hangleton, a parish in the hundred of Fishergate, and rape of Lewes, Sussex, 4 miles from Brighton, and 52 from London; containing 7 houses and 36 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 11*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of the duke of Dorset.

Hanham, a township and chapelry in the parish of Bitton, hundred of Langley and Swineshead, Gloucester, on the borders of Somerset, 5 miles from Bristol, and 108 from London; containing 176 houses and 79 inhabitants.

Hankerton, a parish in the hundred of Malmsbury, Wilts, 3 miles from Malmsbury, and 96 from London; containing 64 houses and 286 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 10*s.*

Hanley Child, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Eastham, hundred of Doddingtree, Worcester, 5 miles from Tenbury, and 129 from London; containing 31 houses and 158 inhabitants.

Hanley William, a hamlet in the same parish, and 1 mile distant from the last; containing 28 houses and 138 inhabitants.

Hanley Castle, a parish in the hundred of Pershore, Worcester, 2 miles from Upton, and 111 from London; containing 176 houses and 986 inhabitants. It stands opposite the Malvern hills. There formerly was a castle here, but no traces of it are now to be seen. In 1787, in a field in the neighbourhood, was discovered a circular opening in the earth about six feet in diameter, leading, at about 10 feet from the surface, into a cavern extending nearly 20 feet in diameter, ending at the distance of about 40 feet in a body of water of considerable depth; but whether this was formed by a natural or artificial cause, was undetermined. The living is a vicarage, value 12*l.* 15*s.*—Nash's Worcestershire.

Hanliath, a hamlet in the parish of Kirby Malhanidale, in the wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewerosse, west riding of York, 5 miles from Settle, and 227 from London; containing 15 houses and 81 inhabitants.

Hanmer, a parish in the hundred of Maylor, Flintshire, Wales, 3 miles from St. Asaph, and 215 from London; containing 107 houses and 474 inhabitants. The church is a large Gothic building with a high tower, near which is a well-endowed free-school. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Hanney East, a hamlet in the parish of West Hanney, and hundred of Wantage, Berks, 4 miles from Wantage, and 60 from London; containing 112 houses and 535 inhabitants.

Hanney West, a parish in the hundred of Wantage, Berks, 3½ miles from Wantage, and 60 from London; containing 70 houses and 330 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 22*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Salisbury, with Lyford chapel annexed.

Hanningfield East, a parish in the hundred of Chelmsford, Essex, 6 miles from Billericay, and 29 from London; containing 52 houses and 336 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 15*s.* 7*d.*

Hanningfield South, a parish 1 mile distant from the above, and 5 from Billericay; containing 22 houses and 180 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.*

Hanningfield West, another parish also near the foregoing; containing 54 houses and 353 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Hannington, a parish in the hundred of Orlingbury, Northampton, 4 miles from Wellingborough, and 71 from London; containing 25 houses and 144 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 10*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Lincoln.

Hannington, a parish in the hundred of Chuteley, division of Kingsclere, Hants, 5 miles from Basingstoke, and 50 from London; containing 36 houses and 210 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 6*l.* 7*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Winchester.

Hannington, a parish in the hundred of Highworth, Wilts, 2 miles from Highworth, and 78 from London; containing 53 houses and 363 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 10*s.*

HANS, or HANSAY, a river in Staffordshire, which falls into the Manifold at Blore park.

HANSLOP, a parish in the hundred of Newport, Bucks, 3 miles from Newport Pagnel, and 53¼ from London; containing 243 houses and 1289 inhabitants, of whom 479 were returned as employed in trade and manufactures. The living is a rectory, value 48*l.* with Castlethorpe chapel annexed, in the patronage of the corporation of Lincoln.

HANWELL, a parish in the hundred of Elthorne, Middlesex, 8 miles from London, on the Uxbridge road; containing 126 houses and 817 inhabitants. The church is a small neat brick building, erected in 1782. It is a rectory, value 20*l.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of London.

HANWELL, a parish in the hundred of Bloxham, Oxford, 2¼ miles from Banbury, and 78 from London; containing 49 houses and 264 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 17*l.* 16*s.*

HANWOOD, a parish in the liberties of Shrewsbury, Salop, 3 miles from Shrewsbury, and 162 from London; containing 29 houses and 135 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.*

HANWORTH, a parish in the hundred of Aslacoe, division of Lindsay, Lincoln, 8 miles from Lincoln, and 134 from London; containing 7 houses and 36 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 10*s.*

HANWORTH, a parish in the hundred of Spelthorne, Middlesex, 13 miles from London; containing 68 houses and 334 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

HANWORTH, a parish in the hundred of North Erpingham, Norfolk, 5 miles from Aylsham, and 126 from London; containing 35 houses and 246 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.*

HAPPING, the name of a hundred in Norfolk, lying on the eastern coast of the county north of Wintertonness.

HAPPISBURGH, or HASBOROUGH, a parish on the sea-coast, in the hundred of Happing, Norfolk, 5 miles from North Walsham, and 127 from London; containing 93 houses and 526 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

HAPSFORD, a hamlet to Alvanley, in the hundred of Eddisbury, Chester, 7 miles from Chester, and 187 from London; it is near Delamere forest, and contains 11 houses and 76 inhabitants.

HAPTON, a parish in the hundred of Depwade, Norfolk, 8 miles from Norwich, and 101 from London; containing 20 houses and 172 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of Christ Church college, Cambridge.

HARABY, a small hamlet in the parish of St. Cuthberts, Carlisle, Cumberland, from which it is distant 1½ mile; containing 8 houses and 47 inhabitants.

HARAM, a township in the parish of Helmsley, and division of Rydall, north riding of York, 1 mile from Helmsley, and 221 from London; containing 64 houses and 375 inhabitants.

HARBERTON, a parish in the hundred of Coleridge, Devon, 1½ mile from Totnes, and 196½ from London; containing 229 houses and 1138 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 49*l.* 2*s.* 1*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Exeter, with Halwill chapel annexed.

HARBLEDOWN, a parish in the hundred of Westgate, and lathe of St. Augustine, Kent, 1 mile from Canterbury, and 44 from London; containing 95 houses and 473 inhabitants. The church is pleasantly situated on a hill, opposite to which is an hospital and chapel; the hospital is noted in history as formerly being in possession of the relic of St. Thomas à Becket's Slipper, mentioned by Erasmus as the upper leather of an old shoe, adorned with crystals set in copper. This hospital was endowed for lepers, but since the Reformation has been continued as an almshouse for poor persons, who are allowed a small yearly stipend. Here also was a monastery. The learned Hooker was rector of this place, and lies buried in the church. The rectory, value 9*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* is in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury.—Hasted's Kent.

HARBORNE, a parish in the hundred of Offlow, Stafford, 4 miles from Birmingham, and 115 from London, situated on a brook called the Bourn; containing 205 houses and 1178 inhabitants, of whom 259 were returned as employed in various trades, &c. In 1625, one James Sands died here aged 140 years: his wife lived to the age of 120. The living is a vicarage, value 4*l.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Litchfield.

HARBOROUGH MARKET, a town in the hundred of Gartre, Leicester, 15 miles from Leicester, and 82 from London; containing 331 families and 1716 inhabitants, viz. 795 males and 921 females, of whom 336 were returned as employed in trade and manufactures; and is very neatly and well built, consisting of one principal street and two short ones. At a short distance, both east and west of it, Roman urns, and other fragments of pottery, have been discovered. This town is a very great thoroughfare, the road from London to Leicester, Nottingham, Derby, Manchester, &c. running through it. The road enters the town by a ford in the river Welland, but there is a bridge, of six arches, adjoining the ford for the use of carriages when the floods render the water impassable or unsafe: at other times this bridge is only used by horse and foot passengers. The situation of Harborough is low, having hills almost on every side of it. By the register it appears to have been twice visited by the plague in the years 1641 and 1645. There is a chapel here, which is a curacy in the patronage of Christ church college, Oxford, and is estimated at somewhat more than 100*l.* a year; it is dedicated to St. Dionysius the Areopagite. There are three meeting-houses in Harborough for Presbyterians, Quakers, and Methodists. The market is on Tuesday, and is well supplied with all kinds of provisions; and the fairs are on January 6, February 16, April 29 and two following days, July 31, and on October 20 and eight following days. A considerable manufactory of tammies, shallons, plain and figured lastings, &c. employs a great number of poor families in the town and neighbourhood, and in some years it has been computed 30,000*l.* has been returned in tammies only.—Nichols's Leicestershire.

Harborough, a parish in the hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, 3¼ miles from Rugby, and 87 from London; containing 38 houses and 235 inhabitants, including the hamlet of Little Harborough adjoining. The living is a rectory, value 14*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Harbottle, a hamlet in the parish of Hallystone, Coquetdale ward, Northumberland, 7 miles from Rothbury, and 313 from London; containing 30 houses and 128 inhabitants. A very strong castle stood here formerly, where Margaret queen of Scotland retired after her second marriage to the earl of Angus, and where she was delivered of a daughter.

Harbridge, a hamlet to the parish of Ringwood, in the division of the New forest, Hants, 3 miles from Fordingbridge, and 90 from London; containing 56 houses and 320 inhabitants.

Harbury, a parish in the hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, 3 miles from Southam, and 85 from London; containing 172 houses and 857 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.*

Harby, a parish in the hundred of Framland, Leicester, 8 miles from Melton Mowbray, and 112 from London; containing 67 houses and 343 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 20*l.*

Harby, a hamlet to the parish of Thorney hundred of Newark, Notts, 6 miles from Lincoln, and 140 from London; containing 56 houses and 180 inhabitants.

Hardenhuish, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish and hundred of Chippenham, Wilts, 1 mile from Chippenham, and 94½ from London; containing 9 houses and 55 inhabitants. The chapel was erected at the expence of Jos. Colborne, esq. in 1779.

Hardham, a parish in the hundred of Bury, and rape of Arundel, Sussex, standing on the river Arun, 8 miles from Arundel, and 51 from London; containing 11 houses and 85 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.*

Hardhorne, a hamlet to the parish of Poulton, hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, 2 miles from Poulton, and 251 from London; containing 55 houses and 311 inhabitants.

Hardingham, a parish in the hundred of Mitford, Norfolk, 6 miles from Watton, and 97 from London; containing 48 houses and 244 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 15*l.* 15*s.* 4*d.*

Hardingstone, a parish in the hundred of Wymersley, Northampton, 2½ miles from Northampton, and 63 from London; containing 147 houses and 712 inhabitants. This was the native place of the rev. James Hervey, author of the Meditations, &c. It is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 5*s.* and the patron is the king.

Hardington, a parish in the hundred of Houndsborough, Somerset, 5 miles from Yeovil, and 121 from London; containing 81 houses and 489 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 15*s.* 7*d.*

Hardley, a parish in the hundred of Loddon, Norfolk, 7 miles from Bungay, and 113 from London; containing 28 houses and 202 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Hardmead, a parish in the hundred of Newport, Bucks, 3½ miles from Newport Pagnell, and 52 from London; containing 9 houses and 45 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 10*d.*

Hardress Lower and Upper, forming together a parish in the hundred of Bringe, and lathe of St. Augustine, Kent, 4 miles from Canterbury, and 59 from London; the former containing 29 houses and 215 inhabitants, and the latter 39 houses and 241 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 19*l.* 15*s.* 1*d.* with Stelling chapel annexed.

Hardwick, a parish in the hundred of Cotslow, Bucks, 3½ miles from Aylesbury, and 41 from London; containing 39 houses and 178 inhabitants, near the river Tame. The living is a rectory, value 39*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.* in the patronage of New college, Oxford.

Hardwick, a parish in the hundred of Longstow, Cambridge, 5 miles from Cambridge, and 50 from London; containing 19 houses and 152 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.

Hardwick, a hamlet to the parish of Standish, in the hundred of Whitstone, Gloucester, 3½ miles from Stroud, and 105 from London; containing 52 houses and 341 inhabitants.

Hardwick, a parish in the hundred of Depwade, Norfolk, 3½ miles from Harleston, and 103 from London; containing 29 houses and 223 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.*

Hardwick, a parish in the hundred of Orlingbury, Northampton, 2 miles from Wellingborough, and 70 from London; containing 10 houses and 68 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*

Hardwick, a parish in the hundred of Bampton, Oxford, 2 miles from Witney, and 64 from London; containing 24 houses and 121 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.*

Hardwick, or Hardwich, a hamlet in the parish of Chertsey, in the hundred of Godley and Chertsey, Surry, and distant from Chertsey 2 miles. Here the inhabitants of the hundred of Godley are summoned to choose the king's officers annually on Whit-Tuesday in the forenoon, and in the afternoon a fair is held called Hardoitch court fair.

HARDWICK, or PRIORS HARDWICK, a parish in the hundred of Kington, Warwick, 1½ miles from Warwick, and 91 from London; containing 41 houses and 228 inhabitants. This was one of the 24 towns given by Leofrick earl of Mercia to the monks of Coventry, in the time of Edward the Confessor. The living is a vicarage, value 23*l.* 16*s.* with Merston chapel annexed.

HAREBY, a parish in the hundred of Bolingbroke, and division of Lindsay, Lincoln, 3 miles from Spilsby, and 134 from London; containing 9 houses and 59 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 6*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.* united with Bolingbroke.

HAREFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Elthorne, Middlesex, 5 miles from Uxbridge, and 20 from London; containing 169 houses and 951 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the lord of the manor.

HARENOPE, a hamlet to the parish of Eglingham, in Coquetdale ward, Northumberland, 20 miles from Morpeth, and 312 from London; containing 8 houses and 44 inhabitants.

HARESFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Whitstone, Gloucester, 5 miles from Stroud, and 106 from London; containing 93 houses and 555 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HAREWOOD, a market-town in the wapentake of Skyrack, and west riding of York, 8 miles from Leeds, and 204 from London; containing 149 families and 707 inhabitants, viz. 344 males and 363 females, of whom 83 were returned as employed in trade. It has a handsome church, with five well preserved monuments of the Rithers and Bedingans, lords of the castle, and of the Gascoynes of Gawthorp adjoining, particularly one of sir William Gascoyne, who committed Henry V. when prince of Wales, to the King's Bench, for affronting him whilst he sat administering justice. Harewood castle Mr. King refers to the time of Edwards I. and III. It stands on the north side of a triple square intrenchment on the hill sloping down to the river Wharf, on the banks of which the town stands; the innermost vallum on the south and west side is intire and high. It consists of a square centre, a north wing, an oblong and two square towers, at the south-east and south-west corners, all of stone. On the east side is a porch, having a double entrance defended by a portcullis. At the conquest this castle belonged to the family of Romily, a daughter of which carried it to the Meschines. This town is surrounded by woods, and commands an extensive prospect of the adjacent country. There is a stone bridge of four arches over the river Wharf. Harewood-house, the seat of lord Harewood, is a sumptuous building, erected in 1708, of fine hewn stone. It is very large, and has two grand fronts; that to the south is ornamented with a noble portico and pediment, supported by pillars. The rooms are well arranged, and the rising ground in the front of the house, with its plantations, buildings, and the water beneath it, afford a very pleasing view. The living is a vicarage, valued at 14*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.*

HAREWOOD DALE, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Hackness, in the wapentake of Whitby Strand, north riding of York, 7 miles from Scarborough, and 256 from London; containing 35 houses and 185 inhabitants.

HARFORD, a parish in the hundred of Ermington, Devon, 2 miles from Ivybridge, and 207 from London; containing 24 houses and 142 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 14*s.* 4*d.*

HARGHAM, a parish united with Willby, in the hundred of Shropham, Norfolk, 3 miles from Harling, and 96 from London; containing 8 houses and 67 inhabitants.

HARGRAVE, a parish in the hundred of Higham Ferrers, Northampton, 4½ miles from Higham Ferrers, and 61 from London; containing 33 houses and 158 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

HARGRAVE, a parish in the hundred of Thingoe, Suffolk, 4 miles from Bury St. Edmonds, and 74 from London; containing 46 houses and 324 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*

HARLASTON, a hamlet in the parish of Elford, and hundred of Offlow, Stafford, 5 miles from Tamworth, and 120 from London; containing 31 houses and 160 inhabitants.

HARLAXTON, a parish in the soke of Grantham, and parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 4 miles from Grantham, and 110 from London; containing 65 houses and 297 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 25*l.* 6*s.* 10*d.*

HARLE LITTLE AND WEST, two small hamlets in the parish of Kirkwhelpington, Tindal ward, Northumberland, 12 miles from Corbridge, and 290 from London; containing 20 houses and 113 inhabitants.

HARLECH, a market-town in the parish of Llanvair, and hundred of Ardudwy, Merioneth, Wales, standing on the sea-coast, 27 miles from Bala, and 229 from London; the population of this town was not returned to parliament in 1801. Its castle, which is still entire, stands on a very high rock projecting into the Irish Sea, and on that side impregnable; towards the land it is secured by a deep fosse. It was built by Edward I. and is a noble square building, with a round tower at each corner, and one on either side the entrance, adorned with neat turrets. This place has frequently sustained obstinate sieges, and during the civil wars often changed its masters. It was the last fortress that held out for king Charles in North Wales. The town is a corporation, governed by a mayor. Near it is a cataract of the Rhaidsdu, whose water forms part of an elliptical curve to a pool 40 feet below. Here is a small market on Saturday. Fairs, Thursday after Trinity Sunday, June 13, August 21, and December 11.—Pennant's Tour.

Harleston, a market-town in the parish of Redenhall, hundred of Earsham, Norfolk, 8 miles from Bungay, and 99½ from London, on the river Waveney, over which it has a bridge, and, including Redenhall, contains 260 houses and 1459 inhabitants, of whom 229 were returned as employed in various trades. Its market is on Thursday, chiefly for yarn and linen cloth, and its fairs 4th May and 24th October.

Harlestone, a parish in the hundred of Nobottle Grove, Northampton, 4 miles from Northampton, and 69 from London; containing 101 houses and 437 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 20*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.*

Harley, a parish in the hundred of Condover, Salop, 2 miles from Much Wenlock, and 150 from London; containing 42 houses and 221 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.*

Harling East, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Guilteross, Norfolk, 8 miles from Thetford, and 93 from London. It is seated on a small rivulet, and contains 87 houses and 674 inhabitants. Its market is on Thursday, chiefly for yarn, and its fairs 4th May and 24th October. The living is a rectory, value 12*l.* and the patron is the king.

Harling West, a small parish near the above, and in the same hundred; containing 12 houses and 122 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.*

Harlington, a parish in the hundred of Manshead, Bedford, 6 miles from Luton, and 37 from London; containing 68 houses and 344 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 11*l.*

Harlington, anciently called Harling Down, a parish in the hundred of Elthorne, Middlesex, 3¼ miles from Colnbrook, near Hounslow heath, and 13 from London; containing 70 houses and 363 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 24*l.*

Harlow, a parish in the hundred of Harlow, Essex, 6 miles from Bishop Stortford, 6 from Epping, and 23 from London; containing 255 houses and 1514 inhabitants, of whom 173 were returned as employed in various trades. The church was burnt down in 1711; and in digging on the foundation of the vestry, an iron chest was discovered, containing a crucifix and a bottle, with the inscription of Sanguis Sete Catherine. Here are six houses, endowed for the habitation of six poor widows. Harlow was formerly a market-town. Its fairs are on the 28th and 29th November, with another on the 9th September, well known by the name of Harlow Bush fair, and much resorted to. It is held on a common 2 miles from the town. The living is a vicarage, value 15*l.* 7*s.* 11*d.*—Morant's Essex.

Harlow, the name of a hundred in Essex, on the western side of the county, divided from Hertfordshire by the river Stort.

Harlow Hill, a hamlet in the parish of Ovingham, in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 6 miles from Corbridge, and 281 from London; containing 23 houses and 115 inhabitants.

Harlsey West, a hamlet to the parish of Osmotherley, in Allertonshire, north riding of York, 11½ miles from Thirsk, and 233 from London; containing 9 houses and 79 inhabitants.

Harlsey East, a parish in Birdforth wapentake, north riding of York, 11½ miles from Thirsk, and 234 from London; containing 68 houses and 361 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Harlton, or Harleton, a parish in the hundred of Wetheriey, Cambridge; 5½ miles from Cambridge, and 45 from London; contains 36 houses and 156 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Harlthorpe, a village in the parish of Bubwith, in Holm Beacon division, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 7 miles from Howden, and 187 from London; containing 15 houses and 62 inhabitants.

Harmby, a hamlet in the parish of Spennithorne, Haug West wapentake, north riding of York, 2 miles from Middleham, and 234 from London; containing 34 houses and 176 inhabitants.

Harmondsworth, a parish in the hundred of Elthorne, Middlesex, 15 miles from London; containing 115 houses and 879 inhabitants. This village is noted for one of the largest barns in England, supported by pillars of stone, and of very great antiquity. There formerly was an alien priory here. The living is a vicarage, value 12*l.* and is united with West Drayton.

Harmon's St. a parish in the hundred of Rhayadr, Radnor, Wales, 3 miles from Rhayadr, and 181 from London; containing 128 houses and 661 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Harmston, a parish in the hundred of Boothby Graffo, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 4 miles from Lincoln, and 130 from London; containing 52 houses and 255 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Harnham, a hamlet in the parish of Bolam, Tindal ward, Northumberland, 15 miles from Newcastle, and 291 from London; containing 14 houses and 46 inhabitants.

Harnham West, a hamlet in the parish of Coombe Bisset, hundred of Cawdon and Cadworth, Wilts, 1 mile from Salisbury, and 81 from London; containing 40 houses and 186 inhabitants.

Harnhill, a hamlet in the parish of Driffield, hundred of Crowthorne, Gloucester, 3 miles from Cirencester, and 86 from London; containing 13 houses and 71 inhabitants.

HAROM. See HARAM, north riding of York.

HAROLDSTON, a parish in the hundred of Roose, Pembroke, Wales, 4 miles from Haverfordwest, and 268 from London; containing 34 houses and 185 inhabitants.

HARPENDEN, a township in the parish of Redborn, and hundred of Dacorum, Herts, 4 miles from St. Alban's, and 25 from London; containing 225 houses and 1112 inhabitants, of whom 97 were returned as employed in trade.

HARPFORD, a parish in the hundred of East Budleigh, Devon, 4 miles from Sidmouth, and 160 from London, standing on the river Ottery, and containing 33 houses and 190 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 18*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.* and is united with Fenottery.

HARPHAM, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Burton Agnes, and wapentake of Dickering, east riding of York, 5 miles from Driffield, and 202 from London; containing 35 houses and 172 inhabitants.

HARPLEY, a parish in the hundred of Freebridge, Lynn, Norfolk, 9 miles from Lynn, and 103 from London; containing 63 houses and 305 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 22*l.*

HARPOLE, a parish in the hundred of Nobottle Grove, Northampton, standing near the river Nen, 3½ miles from Northampton, and 69 from London; containing 112 houses and 545 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HARPSDEN, a parish in the hundred of Benfield, Oxford, 1½ mile from Henley, and 37 from London; containing 24 houses and 178 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.*

HARPSWELL, a parish in the hundred of Aslacoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 7½ miles from Gainsborough, and 145 from London; containing 12 houses and 59 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HARPTREE EAST, a parish in the hundred of Wintersoke, Somerset. It lies in a valley 6 miles from Wells, 2 from Chewton Mendip, and 126 from London; containing 76 houses and 467 inhabitants. On a neighbouring hill are several mines of lapis calaminaris, amongst which are found manganese, and some beautiful spurry concretions. In the Lamb hill, just above the village, is a remarkable cavern, having a perpendicular shaft about 70 fathoms deep, at the bottom of which it extends about 40 fathoms long. The bottom consists of loose rocks, but the roof is firmly vaulted with lime-stone, having stalactites hanging from it, which, from the continual dropping of the waters, have a most brilliant appearance. It is in some parts five fathoms high, and in others not above five feet: its breadth is about three fathoms. Many veins of lead ore and lapis calaminaris pass through it, and in the middle and at the ends are other vaults of a similar description, there being one still farther, about 10 fathoms high, and 100 fathoms long. In the neighbourhood formerly stood an ancient fortress, called Richmont castle, demolished in the reign of Henry VIII. It is a curacy.—Collinson's Somersetshire.

HARPTREE WEST, a small village near the above.

HARPURHEY, a hamlet in the parish of Manchester, in the hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 2 miles from Manchester, and 187 from London; containing 16 houses and 118 inhabitants.

HARRATON, a township in the parish of Chester-le-Street, in Chester ward, Durham, 8 miles from Durham, and 268 from London; containing 337 houses and 1607 inhabitants, of whom 104 were returned as employed in various trades.

HARRAY, a parish in the isle of Pomona, one of the Orkneys. It is intersected by many rivulets from the neighbouring hills, and is extremely wet and swampy.

HARRIETSHAM, a parish in the hundred of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 7 miles from Maidstone, and 41 from London; containing 64 houses and 484 inhabitants. Its fair is on the 5th July, and the living is a rectory, value 11*l.* 10*s.* in the patronage of All Souls college, Oxford.

HARRIS, or HARRIES, a district of the Hebrides, Scotland, comprehending the south part of Lewis, and the small islands which surround it. It is divided into two districts, by the East and West Loch Tarbert, which approach each other, leaving an isthmus about ¼ mile broad. On the main land are many druidical monuments. The number of inhabitants of the whole district, in 1793, was computed to be about 2536.

HARRINGTON, a parish in Allerdale ward above Derwent, Cumberland, standing on the coast, 3 miles from Workington, and 311 from London; and containing 406 houses and 1857 inhabitants, of whom 191 were returned as employed in various trades. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 7*s.* 3*d.*

HARRINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Rothwell, Northampton, 2 miles from Rothwell, and 76 from London; containing 54 houses and 148 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*

HARRINGWORTH, a parish in the hundred of Corby, Northampton, on the borders of Rutland, 5 miles from Uppingham, and 85 from London; containing 64 houses and 464 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 15*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of the dean and canons of Christ Church college, Oxford.

HARROLD, a parish in the hundred of Willey, Bedford, and 60 from London; containing 155 houses and 765 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.*

HARROW, a parish in the hundred of Gore,

Middlesex, 10 miles from London. It is called Harrow-on-the-Hill, from its situation on the highest hill in the county, which, rising out of a rich vale, affords one of the most beautiful and variegated prospects possible: the view to the east is terminated by the metropolis; that to the south by the Surry hills. The north prospect affords an extensive view of Harrow Weald, with the village of Stanmore and Bentley priory, the beautiful seat of the marquis of Abercorn. That to the south-west declines precipitately, but takes in Windsor castle, with a considerable part of Berks and Buckinghamshires. The parish contains 364 houses and 2485 inhabitants, of whom 127 were returned as employed in trade. On the top of the hill stands the church, having a very lofty spire. This place is best known for its celebrated free-school, founded in the reign of queen Elizabeth, by John Lyon, a wealthy yeoman, resident here, who required that parents having children there, should equip them with bows, arrows, &c.; and till within these few years a silver arrow used to be shot for annually on the 4th August by a select number of the scholars. It is worthy of remark, that on the top of this hill is a well of excellent spring water, never dry, even in the hottest summers. The living is a vicarage, value 33*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.* with Pinner chapel annexed. Lat. 51° 34′ 27″. Long. 20′ W. —Lysons's Environs of London.

Harrowby, a hamlet in the parish of Grantham, in the hundreds of Winnibriggs and Threw, in the parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 1½ mile from Grantham, and 110 from London; containing 7 houses and 51 inhabitants.

Harrowden, a hamlet to Bedford, in the hundred of Wixamtree, Bedfordshire, 2 miles from Bedford, and 48 from London; containing 51 houses and 314 inhabitants.

Harrowden Great, a parish in the hundred of Orlingbury, Northampton, 1½ mile from Wellingborough, and 69 from London; containing 22 houses and 95 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.*

Harrowden Little, a hamlet to the above, and nearly adjoining thereto; containing 64 houses and 284 inhabitants.

Harrowgate, a township in the parish of Knaresborough, Claro wapentake, west riding of York, 2 miles from Knaresborough, and 212 from London; containing 234 houses and 1195 inhabitants, including Bilton. This place is noted for its medicinal springs, one of which is the strongest sulphur-water in Great Britain. It is chiefly used in bathing, being good for dropsical, scorbutic, and cutaneous disorders. The old spa, opposite the Granby inn, has an elegant dome over it, built at the expence of lord Loughborough, afterwards earl of Rosslyn, in 1786. That called the Tewit well, half a mile distant, is chalybeate. The Sulphur wells are situated at Low Harrowgate, and are inclosed. These waters have a salt taste; when taken from two to four pints together they are purgative, but in smaller doses prove only an alterative. The season is from May to Michaelmas, and the company assemble and lodge in five or six large inns, on a heath about a mile from the town, each house having a long room and an ordinary. The assembly room, though not superb, is often well filled, and the master of the ceremonies is selected from the company. A new theatre was built in 1788, with a billiard-room and library. The newly-erected promenade is an elegant and commodious building, standing in the middle of a large garden, being the morning lounge for the company who assemble at the wells. About half a mile from the town stands the seat of lord Harewood, called the Hall, situated on an eminence, and from the south front overlooking a piece of water in the bottom: a gallery extends the whole length of the west end, being 78 feet long, 25 wide, and 22 high.—Guide to the Watering Places, 1806, and Mutor's Tour.

Harscombe, a parish in the hundred of Dudston and Kingsbarton, Gloucester, 3 miles from Stroud, and 105 from London; containing 23 houses and 108 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 8*s.* united with Pitchcombe.

Harston, a parish in the hundred of Thriplow, Cambridge, 5½ miles from Cambridge, and 45 from London; containing 64 houses and 412 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 10*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.

Harston, a parish in the hundred of Framland, Leicester, 6 miles from Grantham, and 114 from London; containing 29 houses and 156 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.* and the patron is the king.

Harswell, a parish in Holme Beacon division, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 5 miles from Market Weighton, and 196 from London; containing 9 houses and 73 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.*

Hart, a parish united with Hartlepool, in Stockton ward, Durham, 10 miles from Stockton, and 253 from London; containing 47 houses and 219 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 17*s.* 1*d.* in the patronage of the king, united with Hartlepool.

Hartburn, a parish in Morpeth ward, Northumberland, 5½ miles from Morpeth, and 297 from London; containing 4 houses and 25 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 20*l.* 0*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Durham.

Hartburn Grange, a hamlet in the above parish, adjoining thereto; containing 12 houses and 54 inhabitants.

Hartburn East, a hamlet in the parish of Stockton, in Stockton ward, Durham, 1½ mile from Stockton, on a small branch of the Tees, and 247 from London; containing 31 houses and 104 inhabitants.

Hartcliffe, the name of a hundred in Somerset, at the northern extremity of the county, south of the Avon, in which part of Bristol is situated.

HARTEST, a parish united with Boxted, in the hundred of Babergh, Suffolk, 7 miles from Sudbury, and 61 from London; containing 120 houses and 646 inhabitants.

HARTFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Hartfield, and rape of Pevensey, Sussex, 5 miles from East Grinstead, and 34 from London; containing 167 houses and 1050 inhabitants, of whom 62 were returned as employed in trade. Its fair is on Thursday after Whitsunday, and it is a vicarage, value 7*l.* in the patronage of the earl of Thanet.

HARTFORD, a township to the parish of Northwich, hundred of Eddisbury, Chester, 1½ mile from Northwich, and 173 from London; containing 104 houses and 472 inhabitants.

HARTFORD, a parish in the hundred of Hurstingstone, Hunts, 1 mile from Huntington, and 60 from London; containing 62 houses and 333 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 1s.

HARTFORD EAST and WEST, hamlets in the parish of Horton, in Castle ward, Northumberland, 10 miles from Newcastle, and 286 from London; containing 30 houses and 105 inhabitants.

HARTHILL, the name of a wapentake in the east riding of York, bounded on the south by the Humber, on the east by the Hull, and on the west by the Derwent.

HARTHILL, a parish in the hundred of Broxton, Chester, 4½ miles from Malpas, and 169 from London; containing 24 houses and 107 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HARTHILL, a parish in the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of York, 8 miles from Rotherham, and 152 from London; containing 128 houses and 660 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HARTING, commonly called South Harting, there being a small hamlet adjoining called West Harting, a parish in the hundred of Dumpford, and rape of Chichester, 4 miles from Midhurst, and 68 from London; containing 143 houses and 865 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 26*l.* 13s. 4*d.*

HARTINGTON, three townships, Middle, Nether, and Upper, all near each other, and forming one parish, in the hundred of Wirksworth, Derby, 7 miles from Ashborn, and 147 from London; containing 345 houses and 1718 inhabitants, of whom 100 were returned as employed in various trades. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.* in the patronage of the duke of Devonshire.

HARTINGTON, a hamlet to the parish of Hartburn, Tindal ward, Northumberland, 8 miles from Morpeth, and 298 from London; containing 20 houses and 93 inhabitants.

HARTISMERE, the name of a hundred in Suffolk, on the north side of the county, lying between the hundreds of Blackbourne and Hoxne.

HARTLAND, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Hartland, Devon, situated on the coast of the Bristol Channel, on a neck of land called Hartland point, 13 miles from Bideford, and 116 from London; containing 279 houses and 1516 inhabitants, of whom 80 were returned as employed in trade, but the greater part are employed in fishery. This headland was called by Ptolemy Herculis Promontorium. The lady of earl Godwin founded a monastery of black canons here. Its pier, as well as that at Bideford, is supported by the ancient family of the Carews, who are proprietors of the principal part of the town. From hence to Bideford the land forms a bay, called Barnstaple bay, so that these two towns have but one port between them. In the reign of queen Elizabeth it was made a sea port by act of parliament. Its market on Saturday is much frequented by the people of Cornwall. The church is a donative, in the gift of the Charter-house. Lat. 51° 6′ Lon. 4° 40′ W. —Polwhele's Devonshire.

HARTLAND, the name of a hundred in Devonshire, on the north-western side of the county, forming Hartland point in the Bristol Channel.

HARTLEBURY, a parish in the hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 3¾ miles from Kidderminster, and 122 from London, near the junction of the Severn and Stour; containing 281 houses and 1534 inhabitants, of whom 226 were returned as employed in various trades. Its ancient castle, originally erected as a palace by bishop Canteloupe, in the reign of Henry III. was taken possession of by the parliament army in 1646. The chapel was elegantly fitted up by bishop Madox, with painted windows; and being the residence of the bishops of Worcester, it has received many additions from its different possessors; bishop Hurd has fitted up a very neat library here. The living is a rectory, value 30*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Worcester.—Nash's Worcestershire.

HARTLEPOOL, a market-town and parish in Stockton ward, Durham, 12 miles from Stockton, and 261½ from London; containing 226 houses and 993 inhabitants. It is a seaport and member of Newcastle, situated on a promontory nearly encompassed by the German Ocean, and takes its name from a small village called Hart, which is united with it. The town consists chiefly of one principal street, a back street, and several little cross streets. It was anciently very strongly fortified both by nature and art, the east and south-east sides having a chain of limestone rocks, and the others being defended by a wall and strong towers, now in ruins. On the moor, near the town, are two batteries mounted with cannon, beside an intrenchment. Within the walls was formerly a fine basin of water used as a harbour, and defended by two strong round towers, but they are now decayed, and the harbour choaked up. The present harbour lies to the south of the town, and is of easy entrance, but only admits vessels of light burthen. In the center of the town stands a good hall, where the mayor is chosen, and all public business transacted. In the reign of Edward III. this place furnished five large ships to the navy, and was the next in rank to the city of Durham. The church is a neat building; and has a good free and charity-school, and a custom-house. During the summer months this place, of late years, has been much frequented for sea-bathing. It has several pleasant walks on the town-wall, the moor, and the sands; as well as some striking views from the rugged and arched rocks, particularly from the water. There is a tolerably good mineral spring here. At a small distance from the town are several extensive coal-works, and a large flour manufactory. It is governed by a mayor, aldermen, recorder, and common council, under a charter from king John. There was a monastery here, called Heorthu, founded on the first conversion of the Northumbrians in 640, as likewise a house of grey friars. It has an indifferent market on Saturday, and its fairs are 14th May, 21st August, 9th October, and 22th November. The living is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 17*s.* 1*d.* united with Hart.—Hutchinson's Durham.

HARTLEY, a river in Northumberland, which falls into the South Tyne at Featherstonehaugh.

HARTLEY, a parish in the hundred of Axton, and lathe of Sutton, Kent, 5 miles from Dartford, and 20 from London; containing 23 houses and 151 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.*

HARTLEY, or HARTLEY PANS, a sea-port and township in the parish of Earsdon, Castle ward, Northumberland, 5 miles from North Shields, and 283 from London; containing 344 houses and 1639 inhabitants, the greater part of whom were returned as employed in the extensive salt, copperas, glass, and coal-works, established here. This place is the property of lord Delaval, who has a most elegant mansion built of stone, with very extensive parks and grounds, at Seaton, about a mile distant. It has a family chapel, and near it a very elegant mausoleum to the memory of his late only son. The harbour here, which is safe and commodious, was made a few years since at the great exertions and expence of his lordship, who cut through the solid rock, making an inlet 900 feet long, 30 feet broad, and 52 feet deep, forming a basin for vessels of the largest burthen. The excellent coals shipped from hence to the metropolis are well known by the name of Delaval's Hartley main.—Pennant's Tour.

HARTLEY, a township in the parish of Kirby Stephen, in East ward, Westmoreland, on the banks of a branch of the Eden, ½ mile from Kirby Stephen, and 265 from London; containing 37 houses and 139 inhabitants.

HARTLEY DAMMER, a tything in the parish of Shinfield, and hundred of Theale, Berks, 3 miles from Reading, and 42 from London; containing 45 houses and 252 inhabitants.

HARTLEY EAST, a parish in the hundred of Armingford, Cambridge, 3½ miles from Caxton, and 46 from London; containing 15 houses and 94 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 16*s.* 7*d.*

HARTLEY ST. GEORGE, a parish united with East Hartley, in the hundred of Longstow, Cambridge, 2 miles from Potton, and 45 from London; containing 19 houses and 101 inhabitants.

HARTLEYBURN, a hamlet in the parish of Haltwhistle, Tindal ward, Northumberland, near Haltwhistle, 314 miles from London; containing 16 houses and 74 inhabitants.

HARTLEY MAUDIT, a parish in the hundred and division of Alton, Hants, 2½ miles from Alton, and 49 from London; containing 8 houses and 57 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.*

HARTLEY WESTPALL, a parish in the hundred of Holdshott, division of Basingstoke, Hants, 5 miles from Basingstoke, and 41 from London; containing 36 houses and 248 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 6*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the dean and canons of Windsor.

HARTLEY WINTNEY, a parish in the hundred of Odiham, division of Basingstoke, Hants, 9 miles from Basingstoke, and 37 from London; containing 126 houses and 761 inhabitants. There was a priory of Cistercian nuns here. It is a curacy.

HARTLEY ROW, a hamlet to the above, 36 miles from London. The population is included with the preceding village. It has a fair on Shrove-Tuesday and 29th June.

HARTLINGTON, a hamlet in the parish of Burnsall, and wapentake of Staincliffe, west riding of York, 9 miles from Skipton, and 229 from London; containing 21 houses and 105 inhabitants.

HARTLIP, a parish in the hundred of Milton, and lathe of Scray, Kent, 5 miles from Chatham, and 35 from London; containing 47 houses and 256 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Rochester.

HARTOFT, a hamlet to the parish of Middleton, in Pickering lythe, north riding of York, 2 miles from Pickering, and 227 from London; containing 17 houses and 89 inhabitants.

HARTON, a township in the parish of Jarrow, in Chester ward, Durham, 3½ miles from Gateshead, and 278 from London; containing 36 houses and 160 inhabitants.

HARTON, a hamlet in the parish of Bossall, in Bulmer wapentake, north riding of York, its fairs 12th May and 25th September.—Manning's Surry.

HASLINGDEN, a market-town and chapelry in the parish of Whalley, and hundred of Blackburn, Lancaster, 14 miles from Manchester, and 200 from London; containing 735 houses 4040 inhabitants, viz. 1978 males and 2062 females, of whom 2425 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures. The town lies in a valley, and the houses are built of stone. The church, or chapel, is a neat building, and has a square tower with three bells. Haslingden has the advantages of a canal navigation to Manchester, Bury, Leeds, Liverpool, &c. It carries on a very considerable trade, having several extensive linen, cotton, and woollen manufactories.—Aikin's Tour round Manchester.

HASLINGFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Wetherley, Cambridge, 4 miles from Cambridge, and 46 from London; containing 65 houses and 387 inhabitants. There formerly was a chapel here dedicated to the Virgin Mary, much resorted to by devotees, having, amongst other curious offerings, a pair of iron fetters, given by lord Scales on his being delivered from prison. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 10*s.* 7½.

HASLINGTON, a township and chapelry in the parish of Bartholmey, and hundred of Nantwich, Chester, 3 miles from Sandback, and 161 from London; containing 147 houses and 677 inhabitants.

HASSALL, a hamlet in the parish of Bartholmey and hundred of Nantwich, Chester, 2 miles from Sandbach, and 160 from London; containing 27 houses and 181 inhabitants.

HASSELBURY BRIANT, a parish in the hundred of Pimperne, Blandford division, Dorset, 8 miles from Blandford, and 111 from London; containing 85 houses and 454 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 19*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of the duke of Somerset.

HASSOP, a hamlet to the parish of Bakewell, and hundred of High Peak, Derby, 1 mile from Bakewell, and 151 from London; containing 27 houses and 113 inhabitants.

HASTINGS, the name of a rape in Sussex, being the eastern point of the county as far as Pevensey Bay.

HASTINGS, a borough and market-town in the hundred of Baldstow, and rape of Hastings, Sussex, 7 miles from Battle, and 64½ from London. It consists of three parishes, containing 542 houses and 2982 inhabitants, of whom 407 were returned as being employed in various trades. The town is situated between two hills, and so ancient, that in the year 924, in the reign of Athelstan, it had a mint. It is supposed to have been originally built by one Hastings, a Danish pirate, who erected a fort here to secure his men in their retreat after they had pillaged the country. It is the principal of the Cinque ports, and formerly had a noted harbour, but now a road only for small vessels, notwithstanding the vast expence that has been frequently incurred in order to clear it. The parishes are St. Clement's, Allsaints, and St. Mary's, the two first only having churches, both of them ancient fabrics. St. Clement's, or the lower church, contains several good monuments and curious inscriptions, with a neat altar piece; on the ceiling are the figures of Faith, Hope, and Charity. Allsaints, or the upper church, is spacious, and has a pulpit cloth made of the canopy used at queen Anne's coronation. St. Clement's is a rectory, value 23*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* united with the rectory of Allsaints, value 19*l.* 12*s.* 9*d.* Between the parishes of St. Clement's and Allsaints runs a fresh water stream, called the Bourne, which supplies nearly the whole town with water. Anciently there was another church, called St. Michael's, and an hospital, called St. Mary Magdalen, and in the neighbourhood was a priory of black canons. The town is commanded by a strong fort, and of late years the whole of this coast has been strongly fortified by additional batteries and martello towers. Here is also a barrack for foot soldiers. Here is a regular Custom-house, with an establishment of 12 riding officers, this place and its neighbourhood being famous for a trade in contraband goods. It has two well endowed free-schools for the instruction of 130 scholars. The appearance of the town is daily improving from the many modern buildings lately erected in it, and it is now become a very fashionable watering place. The streets are well paved, and from their inclination towards the sea are easily kept neat and clean. The herring and mackerel fisheries here give employment to a number of hands, and furnish a good supply to the London market. There is an assembly room, with a music gallery at the Swan inn; and the town, during the season, is furnished with every amusement in common with fashionable watering places. It has, however, but one indifferent inn, and no livery stables, or accommodation for horses beside what are there afforded. The town hall, with a convenient market place under it, was erected in 1700. In the hall is a shield bearing the arms of France, presented to the corporation by general Murray, who brought it from Quebec. At low water Hastings has a fine level sand, of great extent, rendering bathing safe at any time of the tide: at the parade, to the west of the town, is a convenient bathing room. At 2 miles distant is a large broad stone, on which it is said king William the Conqueror dined on his landing at this place: it is known by the name of "the Old Woman's Tap," and the stone is called "the Conqueror's Table." On a hill, westward of the town, are the remains of an ancient castle, the walls being in some places eight feet thick; it is of a triangular shape, with the angles rounded, and the base, or south side, is formed of a perpendicular craggy cliff about 400 feet long. A little to the west of the castle cliff is a farm-house, called the Priory, originally belonging to the order of black canons; some of its walls are still to be seen. Close to the farm-yard is a piece of water, which being drained off some years ago, discovered a large hole near 30 feet deep, with the remains of a sluice, gates, &c. This town was incorporated in the reign of James II. by the name of mayor, jurats, and commonalty; but the government of the borough under this charter is not attended to. Hastings sends two members to parliament, and the right of election is vested in the mayor, jurats, and freemen resident and not receiving alms, the number of whom is about forty. Here was fought that famous battle between Harold of England and William of Normandy in 1066, in which the former was defeated and killed, and the conqueror became king of England: in this battle the victors lost near 15,000 men, and the conquered many more. Its markets on Wednesday and Saturday are well supplied, and its fairs are 26th July, and 25d and 24th October.—Guide to the Watering Place, 1806.

Hastings Leigh, a parish in the hundred of Byrchoit, and lathe of Shepway, Kent, 4 miles from Ashford, and 58 from London; containing 24 houses and 152 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 10*l.* 5*s.* in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury.

Haswell, a hamlet in the parish of Easington, in Easington ward, Durham, 5 miles from Durham, and 264 from London; containing 14 houses and 93 inhabitants.

Hatcham, a hamlet to the parish of Camberwell, in the hundred of Brixton, Surry, 3¼ miles from London; containing 148 houses and 734 inhabitants.

Hatchbeauchamp, a parish in the hundred of Abdick, Somerset, 7 miles from Ilminster, and 142 from London; containing 33 houses and 196 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.*

Hatcheston, a parish in the hundred of Loes, Suffolk, 4 miles from Framlingham, and 84 from London; containing 67 houses and 543 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.* united with Parham.

Hatcliff, a parish in the hundred of Bradley Haverstoe, Lindsay division of Lincoln, 6½ miles from Grimsby, and 185 from London; containing 15 houses and 88 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 5*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of Southwell college, Notts.

Hatfield, or Bishop's Hatfield, a market-town in the hundred of Broadwater, Herts, 9 miles from Barnet, and 20 from London; containing 466 houses and 2442 inhabitants, of whom 774 were returned as being employed in various trades. It received its name as belonging to the bishops of Ely, who had a palace here, which afterwards became a royal residence, till James I. exchanged it with the earl of Salisbury for Theobalds. This magnificent seat, as it now stands, is built of brick, and is of great extent, in the form of half of the letter H; in the center is a portico of nine arches, and a lofty tower having the date 1611. The park and plantations exhibit some picturesque scenery, watered by the river Lea. The church at Hatfield is neat, and in the town are two good charity schools, one for boys, and the other for girls. Its market is on Thursday, and its fairs 23d April and 18th October. The living is a rectory, value 36*l.* 2*s.* 1*d.* with Totteridge chapel annexed, in the patronage of the earl of Salisbury.—Palmer's Herts.

Hatfield Broad Oak, or Hatfield Regis, a town and parish in the hundred of Harlow, Essex, 9 miles from Epping, and 26 from London; containing 264 houses and 1436 inhabitants, of whom 97 were returned as being employed in trade. It receives its name from the number of spreading oaks formerly in the neighbourhood, and was a royal demesne before the conquest. The church is an ancient gothic structure, with a curious monument and cross-legged effigy to the memory of Robert Vere, the first earl of Oxford, lord high chamberlain of England. A priory of black canons was founded here by his ancestors. It formerly was a market-town, and has a fair on the 5th August. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 11*s.* in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge.—Morant's Essex.

Hatfield, a parish in the hundred of Wolphy, Hereford, 5 miles from Leominster, and 131 from London; containing 31 houses and 172 inhabitants. Its fairs are 25d April and 18th October. It was formerly a chapelry to Leominster, now a curacy.

Hatfield Peverell, a parish in the hundred of Witham, Essex, 5 miles from Chelmsford, and 54 from London, on the river Witham; containing 174 houses and 1008 inhabitants. The church has a lofty spire, which is seen at a great distance; and the windows are adorned with painted glass. Here also was a priory, on whose site an elegant mansion was erected in 1764. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.*

Hatfield Great, a hamlet situate in the parishes of Sigglesthorne and Mapleton, in Holderness, east riding of York, 10 miles from Hull, and 185 from London; containing 28 houses and 127 inhabitants.

Hatfield Little, adjoining the above, in the parish of Sigglesthorne; containing only 4 houses and 24 inhabitants.

Hatfield, a parish in the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of York,

3 miles from Thorn, and 167 from London; containing 277 houses, and 1301 inhabitants. The chace here was one of the largest in England, containing above 180,000 acres of land; one half of which was a complete morass; but in the reign of Charles I. sir Cornelius Vermuyden, to whom it was sold, drained it, and brought great part of it into a state of cultivation, at the expence of 400,000*l.* There are about 5000 acres of this land now lying in common, which support great numbers of cattle and sheep, the inhabitants having an equal stray upon them. There are about 9000 acres in this township, 4000 of which are in grass, and 5000 arable; a great deal of which is in large common fields. On a small island in the middle of this morass lived William of Lindholme, a noted hermit, whose cell was remaining in the year 1747, by the side of which was a well of clear spring water; at the east end stood an altar of hewn stone, and at the west end his grave, covered with a stone, under which was found a skull, leg, and thigh bones, with a small piece of copper. Near the town are the appearances of many Roman entrenchments. There is a large church in this village which is a perpetual curacy, the patronage of which is in the earl of Portmore.—Agricultural Report.

HATFORD, a parish in the hundred of Ganfield, Berks, 2 miles from Farringdon, and 66 from London; containing 19 houses and 114 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*

HATHERLEIGH, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Blacktorrington, Devon, 7 miles from Oakhampton, and 200 from London, standing on a branch of the Towridge near its junction with the Oek; containing 206 houses and 1218 inhabitants, of whom 144 were returned as employed in trade and the woollen manufacture. It is a borough-town governed by a portreeve and two constables, with other officers chosen at the lord of the manor's annual court. The neighbourhood is extremely fertile, and abounds with much excellent game, and its rivers with plenty of fish. Its market is on Fridays, and its fairs 21st May, 22d June, 4th September, and 8th November, and a large cattle-market on the Friday nearest 21st March. The living is a vicarage, value 20*l.*—Polwhele's Devonshire.

HATHERLEY DOWN, a parish in the hundred of Dudston and Kingsbarton, Gloucester, 3 miles from Gloucester, and 102 from London; containing 22 houses and 119 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 14*s.* 4*d.*

HATHERLEY UP, a hamlet to the above, 1½ mile distant; containing 3 houses and 22 inhabitants.

HATHERN, a parish in the hundred of West Goscote, Leicester, 2½ miles from Loughborough, and 111 from London; containing 196 houses and 956 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.*

HATHEROP, a parish in the hundred of Brightwell Barrow, Gloucester, 7 miles from Northleach, 3 from Fairford, and 80 from London; containing 52 houses and 247 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 10*l.*

HATHERSAGE, a parish in the hundred of High Peake, Derby, 8 miles from Bakewell, and 160 from London; containing 106 houses and 498 inhabitants. This place is noted for the produce of mill-stones of a superior quality. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 3*d.* in the patronage of the duke of Devonshire.

HATHERTON, a township to the parish of Audlem, hundred of Nantwich, Chester, 3 miles from Sandbach, and 161 from London; containing 50 houses and 191 inhabitants.

HATHERTON, a hamlet to Cannock, in the hundred of Cuttlestone, Stafford, 7 miles from Walsall, and 133 from London; containing 49 houses and 248 inhabitants.

HATTON, a hamlet in the parish of Handley, hundred of Broxton, Chester, 6 miles from Chester, and 176 from London; containing 25 houses and 152 inhabitants.

HATTON, a hamlet in the parish of Marston on Dove, hundred of Appletree, Derby, 6 miles from Burton on Trent, and 133 from London; containing 56 houses and 299 inhabitants.

HATTON EAST, a parish in the hundred of Yarborough, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 4 miles from Barton, and 168 from London. It has a charity-school, and is a rectory, value 7*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.*

HATTON, a hamlet in the parish of Shiffnall, hundred of Brimstrey, Salop, 2 miles from Shiffnall, and 146 from London. Population included with the hamlet of Woodside.

HATTON, a parish in the hundred of Barlichway, Warwick, 2 miles from Warwick, and 93 from London, near the Warwick and Birmingham canal; containing 47 houses and 248 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HAUGHLEY, a parish in the hundred of Stow, Suffolk, 2 miles from Stowe, and 78 from London; containing 93 houses and 532 inhabitants. There are the ruins of an ancient castle here, and it has a fair 25th August. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.*

HAUGHTON, a parish in Darlington ward, Durham, stands on the river Skern, 4 miles from Darlington, and 247 from London; containing 308 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 53*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Durham.

HAUGHTON, a hamlet in the parish of Simonburn, in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 6 miles from Hexham, and 286 from London; containing 16 houses and 78 inhabitants.

HAUGHTON, a hamlet in the parish of Elksley, hundred of Basset-law, Notts, 4 miles from Retford, and 141 from London; containing 6 houses and 41 inhabitants.

Haukchurch, a parish in the hundred of Whitchurch, division of Bridport, Dorset, 4 miles from Axminster, and 147 from London; containing 122 houses and 679 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 23*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.*

Hautboys Great, a parish in the hundred of South Erpingham, Norfolk, 7 miles from Norwich, and 117 from London; containing 10 houses and 68 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Hautboys Little, a parish united with Lammas, in the hundred of South Erpingham, Norfolk, 1 mile from the above; containing only 5 houses and 30 inhabitants.

Hauxley, a hamlet in the parish of Warksworth, in Morpeth ward, Northumberland, standing on the coast, 12 miles from Morpeth, and 303 from London, running out into a point of land opposite to Coquet island. It contains 24 houses and 92 inhabitants.

Havant, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Bosmere, division of Portsdown, Hants, 6 miles from Portsmouth, and 66 from London, near the borders of Sussex, and opposite Hayling isle. The church is a very ancient building, and there are two dissenting meeting-houses here. The town contains 335 houses and 1670 inhabitants, of whom 285 were returned as employed in trade. At a mile and a half distant are the ruins of Warblington castle. Its market on Saturdays is well supplied with all kinds of grain, and by an order of privy council its corn returns are ordered to be delivered here instead of being sent to Gosport. Its fairs are 27th June and 17th October. The living is a rectory, valued 24*l.* 6*s.* in the patronage of the bishop of Winchester. The church Lat. 50° 51′ 54″. Lon. 58′ 37″ W.

Haven East and West, two small fishing villages, a mile distant, in the parish of Panbride, shire of Forfar, Scotland. East Haven contains about 120 inhabitants, and West Haven about 250.

Havengore, an island opposite to Foulness, in the parish of Great Wakering, and hundred of Rochford, Essex, on the coast, 5 miles from Rochford, and 44 from London; containing 1 house and 19 inhabitants.

Haverbrack, a township in the parish of Beetham, Kendal ward, Westmoreland, 3 miles from Burton in Kendal, and 253 from London; containing 17 houses and 92 inhabitants.

Haverfordwest, the principal town in extent, population, and trade, in Pembrokeshire, Wales, 10 miles from Pembroke, 7½ from Milford, and 264 from London; containing 593 houses and 2880 inhabitants, of whom 375 were returned as being employed in various trades. This is the assize and county town of Pembrokeshire, and is called by the Welsh Hwlffordd. It has three parish churches, beside one which stands out of the town; a commodious quay, at which vessels of large burden can unload; a custom-house, and a good stone bridge over the river. It owes its advantages principally to the circumstance of standing on the banks of the navigable part of the Dungleddy river. It is built on the steep side of a high hill, so as to be highly inconvenient, if not dangerous, for carriages and horses; and the more so as the streets are very ill paved. It has some good houses, especially in the upper part; but the irregularity of the avenues, and the narrowness of all but one or two streets, with the houses piled confusedly upon one another, the lower windows of some looking down upon the roofs of others, render it intricate and unsightly on the entrance, though the approach is striking. The market here is one of the largest and most abundant in Wales, particularly for fish. It has also a very large corn-market, and a great fair for horses and cattle of all kinds on the 7th of July, the day of St. Thomas à Becket, the tutelary saint of the upper town. The castle is a stately object from the bridge, though it has been considerably disfigured by the conversion of part of it into a county gaol. It is said to have been built by Gilbert, earl of Clare; but history is barren of events relating to it. It was formerly well fortified with towers, and the walls are of great thickness. The walk to the priory (formerly of black canons), without the town, is pleasant, and the ruins, if not highly picturesque, are at least venerable. The chapel is the most perfect part. In the year 1221, Llewellyn ap Jorwerth, in his wars with the Flemings, burned the town; but was obliged to conclude a truce with the garrison of the castle, upon equal terms, and to retire without having accomplished his object. The language of this town is English, but the Welsh from the upper part of the county come down hither to market, so that the inhabitants in general find themselves obliged to acquire some knowledge of the Welsh tongue. The Moravian brethren are very numerous in this town, and the Rev. John Gambold, one of their most eminent bishops, was a native of this county, and ended his days at Haverfordwest. There is a cotton-mill near it, which employs about 150 persons, and is the principal manufacture in the county. This town was made a county of itself by charter from Edward IV. and sends one member to parliament, having obtained that privilege in the 17th of Henry VIII. The right of election is in the freeholders who pay scot and lot, and do not receive alms. It is governed by a mayor, 24 common councilmen, sheriff, &c. The mayor is chosen out of the common council, and is admiral, coroner, escheator, and clerk of the markets, within his liberty. The markets are on Tuesdays and Saturdays, and the fairs May 12, June 12, July 7, Sept. 14 and 24, and Oct. 18; and on the 1st of May and 29th September in the adjoining precinct of Prendergrast. The living of St. Mary's is a vicarage, value 19*l.* 10*s.* and is in the patronage of the corporation; St. Thomas's is a rectory, of which the prince of Wales is patron, and St. Martin's a curacy.—Malkin's Tour in South Wales.

HAVERHILL, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Risbridge, Suffolk, 4 miles from Clare, and 58 from London, on the borders of Essex; containing 150 houses and 1104 inhabitants, of whom 487 were returned as employed in trade and in the manufactory of checks, cottons, and fustians. The principal street is very wide, but the houses are mean buildings. The church is a large, ancient structure; and there are two meeting-houses. This town was formerly of much greater extent. The ruins of another church, and of a castle, are observable. Its market is on Wednesday, and its fairs 12th May and 26th August. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 5*s.* Lat. 51° 50′. Lon. 5° W.

HAVERHILL, a hamlet in the foregoing parish, but situated in the hundred of Hinckford, Essex, adjoining thereto; and contains 36 houses and 204 inhabitants.

HAVERING AT BOWER, a parish in Havering liberty, 3 miles from Romford, in the county of Essex, and to which it was formerly a chapelry. Its name is derived from its shady and woody situation, which appears to have been a favourite retreat with several of the Saxon kings, particularly Edward the Confessor, who passed much of his time in devotion here. Part of the walls of an ancient palace are still standing; on the site of which is now an elegant villa. It was a royal seat so late as the reign of queen Elizabeth; and afterwards became the property of lord Archer. It was pulled down about 1770. Havering was anciently part of the queen's jointure. The view from hence over the adjacent country, and the winding of the river Thames, render it extremely pleasant. The village contains 36 houses and 204 inhabitants. It is a curacy.—Morant's Essex.

HAVERINGLAND, a parish in the hundred of Eynesford, Norfolk, 4 miles from Repham, and 114 from London; containing 14 houses and 143 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.*

HAVERSHAM, a parish in the hundred of Newport, Bucks, 2 miles from Newport Pagnel, and 51 from London; containing 43 houses and 223 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.*

HAVERTHWAITE, a township in the parish of Coulton, in the hundred of Lonsdale, Lancaster, 4 miles from Ulverstone, and 270 from London; containing 123 houses and 786 inhabitants.

HAWARDEN, or HARDEN, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Mold, Flintshire, Wales, 6½ miles from Chester, and 197 from London; containing 760 houses and 4071 inhabitants, viz. 2092 males and 1979 females, of whom 684 were returned as being employed in trade and manufactures, chiefly of earthenware, particularly near Buckenhill in the neighbourhood. Three different kinds of clay are used here, in consequence of their power in resisting fire; the most tenacious is that called Fire-clay, which forms the stands on which the articles are placed whilst baking; the second, or Stone-clay, is of what the pickling jars, large jugs, &c. are made; and the third, or least durable, is used for the smaller and more common glazed articles. Here is also an iron foundery for cannon. The town is large and well paved. Between the town and the river Dee, on an eminence, are the remains of the castle of Peny Llech. It was formerly of great strength, and is supposed to have been built before the Norman conquest; soon after which it was in the possession of Roger Fitz-Walerin, son of one of the followers of William the Conqueror. It is probable that this castle was destroyed about 1267, for Llewellyn prince of Wales, in restoring to Robert de Montalt, the whole of his lands at Hawarden, restrained him from building a castle there for 30 years. However, it appears to have been rebuilt before the expiration of that time; for, in 1281, David lord of Denbigh, brother of Llewellyn, surprised and took this castle, and in it Roger de Clifford, justiciary of Chester, cruelly massacreing all who resisted. In the civil wars between Charles I. and the parliament, this castle was early possessed by the parliamentarians, and was kept by them till 1643, when it was taken by the royalists, who retained it till 1645, when it was again taken by the parliament forces. Soon after which it was ordered to be dismantled, and though these orders only extended to the making it untenable, its farther destruction was effected by its owner, sir William Glynne, between 1665 and 1678. In the neighbourhood is also the remains of a double fortress, with a square area, and two round towers, called Euloe castle. Hawarden market is on Saturday, and its fairs 8th May, 1st October, and 21st December.

HAWES, a township and chapelry to the parish of Aysgarth Hang west wapentake, north riding of York, 3½ miles from Aysgarth, and 250 from London; containing 246 houses and 1223 inhabitants, of whom 787 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures.

HAWES WATER, a beautiful lake, 5 miles distant of Kendal, in Westmoreland. The narrowest part of it is 30 fathoms deep, but so narrow that a stone may be thrown across it. On the road from Penrith to Kendal is a fine cataract, and the little vale contracts into a glen strewed with the ruins of mouldered mountains.

HAWICK, a hamlet in the parish of Kirkharle, in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 4 miles from Alston Moor, and 312 from London; containing 4 houses and 23 inhabitants.

HAWICK, a town and parish in the shire of Roxburgh, Scotland, standing at the confluence of the small river Hitridge with the Teviot, 12 miles from Selkirk, and 348 from London. It is a burgh of barony, well built. The burgesses elect annually two bailies and two representatives of each of the seven incorporations, which with 15 standing counsellors elected for life, manage the affairs of the town. It contains 1147 houses and 6536 inhabitants, viz. 3077 males and 3459 females, of whom 1117 were returned as employed in various trades, and 1984 in agriculture. The town-house is a very neat building. The inhabitants are well supplied with water by means of leaden pipes through the streets. The principal manufactures are Scotch carpeting, stockings, and inkle. There is a very extensive nursery ground for fruit and foreign trees, and in the neighbourhood the remains of several military stations. It has a good weekly market, and four annual fairs, particularly one lately established for black cattle. Hawick was the birth-place of Gawin Douglas, bishop of Dunkeld, author of several poems, and a translation of Virgil's Æneid.

HAWKEDON, a parish in the hundred of Resbridge, Suffolk, 5 miles from Clare, and 60 from London; containing 35 houses and 237 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 7*l.* 10*s.*

HAWKESDALE, a township to the parish of Dalstan, in Cumberland ward, Cumberland, 6 miles from Carlisle, and 299 from London; containing 52 houses and 321 inhabitants. A little beyond this town is Rose castle, the seat of the bishop of Carlisle.

HAWKHURST, a parish in the hundred of Great Barnefield, and lathe of Scray, Kent, 5 miles from Cranbrook, and 53 from London; containing 250 houses and 1742 inhabitants, of whom 140 were returned as employed in various trades. It is a very extensive parish, and was formerly more considerable than at present. There formerly stood a beacon and watch-house here, long since taken down. The market is disused; its fair is 10th August; and the living is a rectory, value 56*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

HAWKINGE, a parish in the hundred of Folkstone, lathe of Shepway, Kent, 2 miles from Folkstone, and 70 from London; containing 16 houses and 91 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 7*s.* 10*d.*

HAWKLEY, a township and chapelry in the parish of Newton Valence, hundred of Selburne, and division of Alton, Hants, 3½ miles from Alton, and 50 from London; containing 47 houses and 248 inhabitants.

HAWKLEY, a parish in the hundred of Selbourn, division of Alton, Hants, 3 miles from Petersfield, and 55 from London; containing 47 houses and 248 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HAWKRIDGE, a parish in the hundred of Willerton and Freemanners, Somerset, 3 miles from Dulverton, and 170 from London; containing 14 houses and 72 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 13*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.*

HAWKSBURY, a parish in the hundred of Grumbalds Ash, Gloucester, 4 miles from Chipping Sodbury, and 110 from London; containing 59 houses and 335 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 20*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.*

HAWKSHEAD, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Lonsdale, Lancaster, 13 miles from Cartmel, and 277 from London; containing 152 houses and 634 inhabitants. It lies at the extremity of Lancashire near the lake Esthwaite; this lake is 2 miles in length, but of different shapes and breadth, indented with bold promontories, woods, meadows, and corn fields; its vale is exactly between the celebrated lakes of Windermere and Coningstone, and runs in the same direction, but lies much higher. Hawkshead is the principal town in what is called the district of Furness, or woody fells; the woods are chiefly charred here at the growth of about 15 years, for the uses of the numerous forges and founderies in the neighbourhood. The mountains, although of unpromising appearance, produce plenty of slate and copper ore, and their rugged sides furnish food to great numbers of sheep, whose wool produces both employment and clothing to the poorer inhabitants. There is a free grammar school here for 100 boys. Its market is on Monday, and fairs on Easter-Monday, Monday before Holy-Thursday, Whit-Monday, and October 2. The church is a curacy, in the patronage of the king as duke of Lancaster.

HAWKSTONE, a hamlet to the parish of Weston, hundred of North-Bradford, Salop, 3 miles from Wem, and 169 from London. Here are still the ruins of Castle Rem, or Red Castle, belonging anciently to lord Audley, now in the park of sir Richard Hill. Two circular towers, of surprising thickness and elegant structure, were discovered, in 1803, buried under the ruins; near which was found a square Roman encampment.

HAWKSWICK, a hamlet in the parish of Arncliff, Staincliffe wapentake, west riding of York, 7 miles from Settle, and 253 from London, on the river Wharfe; containing 14 houses and 69 inhabitants.

HAWKSWORTH, a township in the parish of Otley, Skyrack wapentake, west riding of York, 2½ miles from Otley, and 203 from London; containing 47 houses and 227 inhabitants.

HAWKSWORTH, a parish in the hundred of Bingham, Notts, 9 miles from Bingham, and 126 from London; containing 30 houses and 154 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.*

HAWKWELL, a parish in the hundred of Rochford, Essex, 1 mile from Rochford, and 39 from London; containing 50 houses and 220 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

HAWKWELL, a hamlet in the parish of Stamfordham, Tindal ward, Northumberland, 5 miles from Corbridge, and 283 from London; containing 28 houses and 125 inhabitants.

HAWLEY, a tything to the parish of Yateley, hundred of Crondall, division of Basingstoke, Hants, near Blackwater, on the borders of Surry, 14 miles from Staines, and 31 from London; containing 75 houses and 428 inhabitants.

HAWLING, a parish in the hundred of Kiftsgate, Gloucester, 6 miles from Winchcombe, and 90 from London; containing 35 houses and 192 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HAWSAY, a parish in Birlforth wapentake, north riding of York, 4 miles from Helmsley, and 226 from London, on a branch of the Rye; containing 44 houses and 274 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 7*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.*

HAWNES, a parish in the hundred of Flitt, Bedford, 4 miles from Bedford, and 46 from London; containing 82 houses and 388 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.*

HAWORTH, a township and chapelry in the parish of Bradford, Morley wapentake, west riding of York, 7 miles from Bradford, and 204 from London; containing 577 houses and 3164 inhabitants, viz. 1392 males and 1772 females, of whom only 29 were returned as being employed in trade, and 174 in agriculture. Its fairs are on the 22d July and 14th October.

HAWRIDGE, a parish in the hundred of Cotslow, Bucks, 2 miles from Chesham, and 30 from London; containing 21 houses and 121 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.*

HAWS, a river in Montgomeryshire, Wales, which falls into the Severn at the village of Aberhaws.

HAWS, a river in Radnorshire, which falls into the Ithon above Dyssart.

HAWSKER, a township in the parish of Whitby, in Whitby Strand wapentake, north riding of York, 2¼ miles from Whitby, and 246 from London, near the sea-shore; containing 122 houses and 549 inhabitants.

HAWSTEAD, or HALSTEAD, a parish in the hundred of Thingoe, Suffolk, 3 miles from Bury St. Edmunds, and 68 from London; containing 56 houses and 392 inhabitants. It is remarkable for having the bounds of the parish pass through the north and south doors of Newton church. The church is an ancient building, erected in 1521, of freestone and flint, which gives it a very pretty appearance; in it are some very old monuments of the Drurys. In the church-yard are the remains of an ancient cross. The living is a rectory, value 11*l.* 16*s.* 10*d.*

HAWTHORN, a hamlet in the parish of Easington, in Easington ward, Durham, 19 miles from Stockton, and 267 from London; containing 27 houses and 114 inhabitants.

HAWTHORNDEN, a small village, 1 mile from Roslin, in Mid Lothian, Scotland, celebrated for the romantic retreat of the poet Drummond. In the gardens are many subterraneous passages and caves cut out of the solid rock. There are various conjectures as to the original intention of these subterraneous cavities. Dr. Stukeley has given credit to a fabulous tradition, that they were a strong hold of the Pictish kings; and, accordingly, one cave is called the King's Gallery, another the King's Bed-chamber, and a third the Guard Room. Setting aside this groundless tradition, the most probable opinion is, that they were intended as places of refuge during the destructive wars between the English and Picts, or English and Scotch. Detached from the principal caves, there is a smaller one, called the Cypress Grove, where Drummond is said to have composed many of his poems. It was in these caverns that the famous sir Alexander Ramsay, one of the ancestors of the Dalhousie family, who performed such exploits of valour during the contest for the crown between Bruce and Baliol, used to conceal himself. At 2 miles distant is the elegant mansion of the marquis of Lothian, built on the site of a convent of Cistercian monks, founded by David king of Scotland in 1140.

HAWTON, a parish in the hundred of Newark, Notts, 1¾ mile from Newark, and 124 from London. This village was almost destroyed during the civil wars, and contains now only 20 houses and 107 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 17*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

HAXBY, a township in the parish of Wigginton, in the ainsty of York, 4 miles from York, and 203 from London; containing 67 houses and 325 inhabitants.

HAXEY, a parish in Manley wapentake, Lindsay division, in the Isle of Axholme, Lincoln, 4 miles from Gainsborough, and 155 from London; containing 314 houses and 1541 inhabitants, of whom 106 were returned as employed in various trades. There is the site of a castle here, which was demolished about 1173 in the Barons' wars; it belonged to the Mowbrays, who were lords of great part of the island of Axholme. The living is a vicarage, value 20*l.* 17*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the archbishop of York.

HAY, a market-town and parish in Brecknockshire, Wales, 15 miles from Brecon, 21 from Hereford, and 157 from London, near the borders of Herefordshire; and containing 257 houses and 1170 inhabitants, of whom 803 were returned as being employed in various trades. It stands on an eminence, with a precipitate descent to the banks of the Wye, over which it had a handsome bridge of seven arches, destroyed by the floods in 1795. This town, called by the Britons Trekethele, or the town among the hazles, has been in a decayed state ever since the time of Owen Glendower who burnt it. From the many antiquities found here, this town appears to have been of some consequence in the time of the Romans, and experienced its share of martial vicissitudes in the contentious struggles between the native princes and the crown of England. King John, on being disappointed in a proposed reconciliation between him and the prince of Wales, on the landing of the French in his dominions, completely destroyed Hay castle, which had been a Roman fortress, on the river's bank near the church, the only vestige of which now remaining is a mound with intrenchments. The castle on the summit of the eminence, on which the town stands, is of more modern date. A large dwelling house has been built out of the remains, but a gothic gateway is still preserved, and the large stacks of antique chimnies give it a venerable aspect. The whole town formerly belonged to the duke of Buckingham. Though small, it is populous, and not without trade. There is a manufactory of thread here. It has a market on Saturday, and its fairs are 17th May, 12th August, and 10th October. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 5*d.*—Malkin's Tour.

Hay, a hamlet in the parish of Chidiock, hundred of Whitchurch Canonicorum, division of Bridport, Dorset, 2 miles from Bridport, and 156 from London. Population included with Chidiock.

Hay, a hamlet in the parish of Filton, hundred of Berkley, Gloucester, 4 miles from Bristol, and 117 from London. Population included with Filton.

Haydock, a township in the parish of Winwick, hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 2 miles from Newton, and 190 from London; containing 138 houses and 754 inhabitants.

Haydon, a parish in the hundred and division of Sherborn, Dorset, 2½ miles from Sherborn, and 117 from London; containing 17 houses and 83 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.*

Haydon, a parish in the hundred of Uttlesford, Essex, 5 miles from Saffron Walden, and 43 from London; containing 54 houses and 246 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 18*l.*

Haydon, a parish in the hundred of South Erpingham, Norfolk, 2 miles from Aylsham, and 116 from London; containing 60 houses and 296 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 16*s.* 10*d.* united with Irmingland.

Haydon, a township and chapelry to the parish of Warden, in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 6 miles from Hexham, and 288 from London; containing 235 houses and 1084 inhabitants, of whom 143 were returned as employed in various trades. It formerly was a market-town. There is a fine bridge over the Tyne, at this place, of six arches. One mile distant is Langley castle, situated on an eminence by the side of a deep glen: it appears to have been of great strength, and was built in the form of an H, having a tower at the end of each wing. The walls are seven feet thick, and one of the towers 66 feet high; several of the vaulted rooms are still remaining, as well as a stable with an arched roof of stone, a manger, racks, &c. This castle formerly belonged to the family of Ratcliffe, and gave title of viscount and baron Langley to sir Francis Ratcliffe, created earl of Derwentwater by James II. in 1688. It was forfeited by James the last earl, and is now part of the possessions of Greenwich hospital.

Haydor, a parish in the hundred of Winnibriggs and Threw, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, near Grantham, 112 miles from London; containing 41 houses and 181 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 26*l.* united with Walton, in the patronage of the bishop of Lincoln.

Hayes, a parish in the hundred of Ruxley, lathe of Sutton, Kent, 2 miles from Bromley, and 12 from London; containing 72 houses and 372 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 6*l.* 13*s.* in the patronage of the rector of Orpington.

Hayes, a parish in the hundred of Elthorne, Middlesex, 3, miles from Uxbridge, and 11½ from London; containing 199 houses and 1026 inhabitants. The church is a very handsome structure; the chancel of which is curiously ornamented, and contains several ancient monuments The rectory is valued at 40*l.* and the vicarage 20*l.* with Norwood chapel annexed.

Hayfield, a hamlet in the parish of Glossop, hundred of High Peake, Derby, 8½ miles from Buxton, and 168 from London. Population included with Glossop.

Hayling North and South, an island in the hundred of Bosmere, Portsdown division, Hants, near Portsmouth, 2 miles from Havant, and 68 from London; North Hayling contains 42 houses and 254 inhabitants, and South Hayling 56 houses and 324 inhabitants. The united living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 10*s.*

Haylsham. See Hailsham, Sussex.

Haynford, a parish in the hundred of Faverham, Norfolk, 5½ miles from Norwich, and 115 from London; containing 66 houses and 353 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 2*s.* 1*d.*

Hayridge, the name of a hundred in Devonshire, on the eastern side of the county, and to the north of Exeter.

Hays Castle, a parish in the hundred of Dewsland, Pembrokeshire, Wales, 7 miles from Haverfordwest, and 250 from London; containing 62 houses and 282 inhabitants, It is a vicarage united with Brodey, value 3*l.* 18*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

Hayton, a hamlet in the parish of Aspatria, in Allerdale ward below Derwent, Cumberland, 5 miles from Ireby, and 302 from London; containing 34 houses and 174 inhabitants.

Hayton, a parish in Eskdale ward, Cumberland, 6 miles from Carlisle, and 304 from London; containing 79 houses and 376 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Carlisle.

Hayton, a parish in the hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, 4 miles from Southwell, and 130 from London; containing 48 houses and 236 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of the archbishop of York.

Hayton, a parish in the division of Holme Beacon, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 4 miles from Market Weighton, and 196 from London; containing 23 houses and 135 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 11*s.* in the patronage of the dean of York.

Hayton, the name of a hundred in Devonshire, on the south-eastern side of the county, between the rivers Teign and Dort, bounded by Torbay on the east.

Haywood, a hamlet in the parish of Alleusmoor, hundred of Webtree, Hereford, 4 miles from Hereford, and 136 from London; containing 9 houses and 80 inhabitants.

Haywood, a township in the parish of Burghwallis, Osgoldness wapentake, west riding of York, 5 miles from Doncaster, and 167 from London. Population included with Burghwallis.

Hazon, a hamlet in the parish of Shilbottle, in Coquerdale, Northumberland, 12 miles from Morpeth, and 305 from London; containing 24 houses and 132 inhabitants.

Hazeleigh, a parish in the hundred of Dengy, Essex, 1¼ mile from Maldon, and 57 from London; containing 13 houses and 104 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Hazeleigh Great, a parish in the hundred of Ewelme, Oxford, 9 miles from Oxford, and 48 from London; containing 81 houses and 393 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 30*l.* in the patronage of the dean of Windsor.

Hazeleigh Little, a hamlet to the above parish, nearly adjoining, containing 24 houses and 165 inhabitants.

Hazlebadge, a hamlet in the parish of Hope, hundred of High Peake, Derby, 3 miles from Tideswell, and 163 from London; containing 11 houses and 77 inhabitants.

Hazlehеath, a tything in the parish of Heckfield, hundred of Holdshot, division of Basingstoke, Hants, 1 mile from Hartford Bridge, and 36 from London; containing 42 houses and 234 inhabitants.

Hazleton, a parish in the hundred of Bradley Haverston, Gloucester, 3 miles from Northleach, and 85 from London; containing 21 houses and 98 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 19*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.* with Yanworth chapel annexed.

Hazlewood, a township in the parish of Duffield, hundred of Appletree, Derby, 6 miles from Derby, and 132 from London; containing 55 houses and 302 inhabitants.

Hazlewood, a hamlet in the parish of Aldborough, hundred of Plomsgate, Suffolk, 1½ mile from Aldborough, and 94 from London; containing 13 houses and 93 inhabitants.

Hazlewood, a township in the parish of Tadcaster, wapentake of Backston Ash, west riding of York, 4 miles from Tadcaster, and 190 from London. At this village is the residence of the ancient family of the Vavasors, situated on an eminence, from which is an extensive prospect over a fine and fertile country.

Heacham, a parish in the hundred of Smithdon, Norfolk, 6 miles from Burnham, and 120 from London, near the shore of the Walsh; containing 75 houses and 524 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Headbournworthy, a parish in the hundred of Barton Stacey, division of Andover, Hants, 1½ mile from Winchester, and 64 from London; containing 25 houses and 136 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 15*l.* 10*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Winchester.

Headcorn, a parish in the hundred of Eyhorne, and lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 9 miles from Maidstone, and 44 from London; containing 117 houses and 740 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 15*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Headge, a township and chapelry in the parish of Duffield, hundred of Appletree, Derby, 10 miles from Derby, and 136¼ from London; containing 208 houses and 979 inhabitants.

Headingly, a township in the parish of Leeds, in the liberty of that town, west riding of York, 2¼ miles from Leeds, and 198 from London; containing 256 houses and 1313 inhabitants, of whom 383 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures, principally that of woollen cloth, this village being advantageously situated near the river Air, on which are numerous mills for fulling, scowering, &c. The Leeds and Liverpool canal runs in a line with that river. In the neighbourhood are the ruins of Kirkstall abbey.

Headlam, a hamlet in the parish of Sainford, Darlington ward, Durham, near Wolsingham, and 260 miles from London; containing 20 houses and 89 inhabitants.

Headley, a parish in the hundred of Bishop's Sutton, division of Alton, Hants, 6 miles from Farnham, and 43 from London; containing 138 houses and 858 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 21*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.* in the patronage of Queen's college, Oxford.

Headley, a parish in the hundred of Copthorne, Surrey, 5 miles from Epsom, and 18 from London, to the left of Leatherhead; containing 30 houses and 217 inhabitants. On the borders of this parish, near Leatherhead Down, may be traced the Roman highway from London to Dorking. The church is a small building, and stands at some distance from the village. There are several ancient monuments in it. The living is a rectory, valued at 8*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*

HEADON, a parish in the hundred of Basset Law, Notts, 3 miles from Retford, and 148 from London; containing 53 houses and 278 inhabitants. The rectory is valued at 15*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* and the vicarage 4*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

HEADON. See HEDEN, York.

HEALAUGH, a parish in the ainsty of York, 5 miles from Tadcaster, and 192 from London, containing 39 houses and 233 inhabitants. There was a priory of regular canons here. The church is a vicarage, value 6*l.* but has no institution.

HEALING, a parish in the hundred of Bradley Haverstoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 2 miles from Grimsby, and 171 from London; containing 15 houses and 94 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*

HEALY, a hamlet in the parish of Bywell St. Peter's, Tindal ward, Northumberland, 3 miles from Corbridge, and 278 from London; containing 10 houses and 51 inhabitants.

HEALY, a hamlet in the parish of Hartburn, Morpeth ward, Northumberland, 7 miles from Morpeth, and 298 from London; containing 7 houses and 37 inhabitants.

HEALY, a hamlet in the parish of Rochdale, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 2 miles from Rochdale, and 199 from London. Population returned included with Spotland.

HEALY, a township in the parish of Marhan, Hang East wapentake, north riding of York, near the small river Burn, 2 miles from Masham, and 226 from London; containing 50 houses and 354 inhabitants.

HEANOR, a parish in the hundred of Morleston and Litchurch, Derby, 9 miles from Derby, and 135 from London; containing 425 houses and 1061 inhabitants, of whom 807 were returned employed in various trades and manufactures. The living is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 10*s.*

HEAP, a township in the parish of Bury, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 2 miles from Bury, and 194 from London: containing 652 houses and 4283 inhabitants, viz. 2007 males and 2276 females, of whom 3241 were returned as employed in trade and manufacture.

HEAPHAM, a parish in the hundred of Corringham, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 3 miles from Gainsborough, and 150 from London; containing 21 houses and 100 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.*

HEAPY, a township and chapelry in the parish of Leyland, hundred of Leyland, Lancaster, 2 miles from Chorley, and 209 from London; containing 53 houses and 341 inhabitants.

HEARLSEY, or HARLSEY, a parish in Birdforth wapentake, north riding of York, 11 miles from Thirsk, and 234 from London; containing 68 houses and 368 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HEATH, a township and chapelry in the parish of Leighton Buzzard, hundred of Manshead, Bedford, 1 mile from Leighton Buzzard, and 40 from London; containing 111 houses and 541 inhabitants.

HEATH, or LOWNE, a parish in the hundred of Scarsdale, Derby, on the borders of Buckinghamshire, 5 miles from Chesterfield, and 146 from London; containing 67 houses and 378 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 18*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of the duke of Devonshire.

HEATH, a hamlet in the parish of Clee, hundred of Munslow, Salop, 6½ miles from Ludlow, and 150 from London; containing 8 houses and 40 inhabitants.

HEATH, a hamlet in the parish of Warmfield, Agbrigg wapentake, west riding of York, 1 mile from Wakefield, and 181 from London. Population included with Warmfield. The beautiful situation here has induced a number of gentry to have elegant seats erected in the vicinity of this village.

HEATH CHARNOCK, a township in the parish of Standish, hundred of Leyland, Lancaster, 2 miles from Chorley, and 205 from London; containing 96 houses and 565 inhabitants.

HEATH POOL, a hamlet in the parish of Kirknewton, Glendale ward, Northumberland, 3 miles from Woolet, and 326 from London; containing 6 houses and 38 inhabitants.

HEATHER, a parish in the hundred of Sparkenhoe, Leicester, 3 miles from Ashby de la Zouch, and 111 from London; containing 50 houses and 314 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 17*s.* 8*d.*

HEATHFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Taunton Dean, Somerset, 4 miles from Taunton, and 149 from London; containing 20 houses and 120 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.*

HEATHFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Hawksborough, rape of Hastings, Sussex, 5 miles from Hailsham, and 52 from London; containing 200 houses and 1226 inhabitants, of whom 92 were returned as employed in trade. On the Down here was fought the battle of Hastings, which gave the English crown to William the Conqueror. It gave title of baron to the late general Elliot, and now gives it to his son, the present lord Heathfield. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.*

HEATHYLEE, a hamlet in the township of Lognor, in the parish of Alstonfield, hundred of Totmonslow, Stafford, 5 miles from Leeke, and 159 from London; containing 128 houses and 520 inhabitants.

HEATON, a hamlet in the parish of Lancaster, hundred of Lonsdale, Lancaster, 1½ mile from Lancaster, and 239 from London; containing 29 houses and 206 inhabitants.

HEATON NORRIS, a township and chapelry in the parish of Manchester, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 1½ mile from Stockport, and 179 from London; containing 422 houses and 3768 inhabitants, viz. 1848 males and 1920 females, of whom 3492 were returned as employed chiefly in the various manufactories of Manchester.

HEATON, a township in the parish of Dean, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 2½ miles from Bolton, and 198 from London; containing 113 houses and 677 inhabitants.

HEATON GREAT, a township in the parish of Prestwich, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 4 miles from Manchester, and 184 from London; containing 44 houses and 267 inhabitants.

HEATON LITTLE, a township united with the above in the same parish, being ½ mile farther from Manchester, and containing 89 houses and 494 inhabitants.

HEATON, a hamlet in the parish of All-saints, Newcastle, in Castle ward, Northumberland, 1½ mile from Newcastle, and 278 from London; containing 54 houses and 183 inhabitants.

HEATON, a hamlet in the parish of Leek, hundred of Totmanslow, Stafford, on the borders of Cheshire, 5 miles from Leek, and 159 from London; containing 57 houses and 343 inhabitants.

HEATON, a township in the parish of Bradford, Morley wapentake, west riding of York, 1 mile from Bradford, and 196 from London; containing 181 houses and 951 inhabitants.

HEATON PUNCHARDON, a parish in the hundred of Braunton, Devon, 3 miles from Barnstaple, and 196 from London; containing 77 houses and 418 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 22*l.* 7*s.* 11*d.*

HEAVITREE, a parish in the hundred of Wowford, Devon, 1½ mile without the east gate of Exeter, and 170½ from London; containing 163 houses and 833 inhabitants. This being the place of execution for the city of Exeter, it is supposed to have derived its name from thence. It is very pleasantly and healthily situated, and a number of the inhabitants of Exeter have chosen it for a favourite residence. The living is a vicarage, value 34*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Exeter. This village was distinguished by the birth of Arthur Duck, an eminent civilian, author of the Life of archbishop Chicheley; and of the learned Richard Hooker, who wrote the Ecclesiastical Polity.

HEBBURN, a township in the parish of Bothal, Morpeth ward, Northumberland, 2½ miles from Morpeth, and 294 from London; containing 25 houses and 121 inhabitants.

HEBDEN, a township in the parish of Linton, Staincliff wapentake, west riding of York, 8 miles from Skipton, and 222 from London; containing 54 houses and 341 inhabitants. There is a considerable manufactory of twist here. It is watered by the small river Hebden, which falls into the Calder.

HEBRIDES, the general name of a large cluster of islands lying on the north-west coast of Scotland. They are supposed to be about 300 in number, and to contain 50,000 inhabitants. The situation of these islands in the great Atlantic Ocean, renders the air cold and moist in the greater part of them. The soil varies in different islands, and in different parts of the same island; some are mountainous and barren, producing little else than heath, wild myrtle, fern, and a little grass; whilst others, being cultivated and manured with sea-weed, yield plentiful crops of oats and barley. Lead-mines have been discovered in some of these islands, but they have not been worked to much advantage: others have been found to contain quarries of marble, lime-stone, and free-stone, nor are these islands destitute of iron, talc, crystals, and many curious pebbles, some of which emulate the Brazilian topaz. They produce spontaneously a variety of plants; but there is hardly a shrub or tree to be seen, except in a few spots, where some gentlemen have endeavoured to rear them with more trouble than success. The people are of the same race with those who live in the Highlands of Scotland, speak the same language, wear the same habits, and observe the same customs. The commodities which may be deemed the staples of this country are black cattle, sheep, and fish, which they sell to their fellow-subjects of Scotland. Part of the wool they work up into knit stockings, coarse cloth, and that variegated stuff called Tartan. Cod, ling, mackarel, whiting, haddock, and soles, are here caught in abundance; but the greatest treasure the ocean pours forth is the prodigious quantity of herrings, which, at one season, swarm in all the creeks and bays along the western coast of Scotland. The commerce of these islands might be extended in such a manner as to render them a staple of trade, and an excellent nursery for seamen.—Pennant's Tour in Scotland.

HECK, a township in the parish of Snaith, Osgoldcross wapentake, west riding of York, 2½ miles from Snaith, and 176 from London; containing 56 houses and 194 inhabitants.

HECKDYKE, a river in Nottinghamshire, which falls into the Funt near Stokerith.

HECKFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Holdshon, division of Basingstoke, Hants, 6½ miles from Basingstoke, and 39 from London; containing 91 houses and 613 inhabitants. Its fair is on Good Friday. It is a vicarage, value 16*l.* 12*s.* 11*d.* with Mattingley chapel annexed, in the patronage of New College, Oxford.

HECKFIELD, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Hoxne, Suffolk, 4 miles from Eye, and 94 from London. Population included with Hoxne.

HECKINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Clavering, Norfolk, 6 miles from Beccles, and 114 from London; containing 104 houses and 495 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HECKINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Aswardhurn, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 5 miles from Sleaford, and 111 from London; containing 239 houses and 1042 inhabitants, of whom 91 were returned as employed in various trades. The neighbouring lands were formerly an extensive, unprofitable fen, but of late years have been mostly enclosed, drained, and brought into a state of cultivation. The living is a vicarage, value 12*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.*

HECKMONDWICK, a township in the parish of Birstall, Morley wapentake, west riding of York, 7 miles from Wakefield, and 188 from London; containing 340 houses and 1742 inhabitants, of whom 1075 were returned as employed in various trades.

HEDDINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Calne, Wilts, 3 miles from Calne, 4 from Devises, and 87 from London; containing 40 houses and 287 inhabitants. From the ruins of buildings often found here, it is supposed to have been much more considerable, and to have been a Roman station, as coins, both silver and copper, have been discovered. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 14*s.* 4*d.*

HEDDON ON THE WALLS, a parish in Castle ward, Northumberland, 7 miles from Newcastle, and 283 from London; containing 73 houses, and 253 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, and the patron is the king.

HEDDON EAST and WEST, two small hamlets in the above parish; the one containing 11 houses and 52 inhabitants, the other 9 houses and 43 inhabitants.

HEDENHAM, a parish in the hundred of Lodden, Norfolk, 3½ miles from Bungay, and 110 from London; containing 43 houses and 273 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

HEDGERLEY, a parish in the hundred of Stoke, Bucks, 2½ miles from Beaconsfield, and 21 from London; containing 23 houses and 137 inhabitants. On the right of this place is Bulstrode, the seat of the duke of Portland. It is a rectory, value 6*l.*

HEDGERLEY DEAN, a hamlet in the parish of Beaconsfield, hundred of Burnham, Bucks, 2 miles from Beaconsfield, and 21½ from London; containing 28 houses and 77 inhabitants.

HEDINGHAM CASTLE, a parish in the hundred of Hinckford, Essex, 7 miles from Braintree, and 47 from London; containing 230 houses and 1065 inhabitants, of whom 108 were returned as employed in various trades. It is a curacy.

HEDINGHAM SIBLE, a parish in the hundred of Hinckford, Essex, ½ mile from the above nearer Braintree; containing 359 houses and 1866 inhabitants, of whom 596 were returned as employed in various trades. The living is a rectory, value 22*l.*

HEDLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Chester le Street, in Chester ward, Durham, 6 miles from Durham, and 265 from London; containing 11 houses and 54 inhabitants.

HEDLEY HOPE, a hamlet in the parish of Lanchester, Darlington ward, Durham, 7 miles from Durham, and 265 from London; containing 5 houses and 47 inhabitants.

HEDLEY, a township in the parish of Ovingham, in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 4 miles from Corbridge, and 278 from London; containing 39 houses and 166 inhabitants.

HEDLEY WOODSIDE, a hamlet in the above township, 1 mile distant, and containing 17 houses and 88 inhabitants.

HEDON, or HAYDON, a borough, market-town, and parish, in Holderness, east riding of York, standing on a small creek of the Humber, 7 miles from Hull, and 178 from London; containing 136 houses and 592 inhabitants. It has now but one church, St. Austin's, though there are the remains of two more, the town formerly having been much more considerable; but the encroachments of the sea, as well as the rising opulence of Hull, have greatly tended to lessen it, and its harbour is now choaked up. There is a cut made on the south-east part of the town, which helps to secure that part of the haven which is left. In consequence of its having suffered considerably by fire, the houses in general are well built. It is a corporation governed by a mayor, recorder, 9 aldermen, and 2 bailiffs, who have the power of choosing sheriffs, and are justices of the peace. It returns two members to parliament, chosen by the burgesses, who claim their privilege either by descent, by seven years apprenticeship to a freeman, or by an honorary gift at the discretion of the corporation. The voters exceed 165 in number, and the returning officer is the mayor. Its market is on Saturday, and its fairs 13th March, 14th September, 17th November, and 6th December, besides every fortnight from Shrove Monday to Midsummer. The church is a curacy.

HEDSOR, a township and chapelry in the parish of Wickham, in the hundred of Desborough, Bucks, 1 mile from High Wickham, and 29 from London; containing 30 houses and 140 inhabitants. The neighbourhood here is exceedingly picturesque and delightful.

HEDWORTH, a hamlet to the parish of Jarrow, in Chester ward, Durham, 4 miles from Gateshead, and 280 from London. Population included with Monkton.

HEENE, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Broadwater, hundred of Brightford, Bramber rape, Sussex, 2¾ miles from Shoreham, and 56 from London; containing 16 houses and 101 inhabitants.

HEENELY SOUTH AND COLD, a township in the parish of Felkirk, in Staincross wapentake, west riding of York, 3 miles from Barnsley, and 175 from London; containing 46 houses and 265 inhabitants.

HEGBARNES, a hamlet in the parish of Aston by Birmingham, in Birmingham liberty, Warwick, 2 miles from Birmingham, and 111 from London. Population included with Aston.

HEIGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Hopping, Norfolk, 13 miles from Norwich, and 122 from London. Population omitted to be returned. It is a vicarage, value 6*l*. 13*s*. 4*d*.

HEIGHINGTON, a parish in Darlington ward, Durham, 5 miles from Darlington, and 248 from London; containing 136 houses and 543 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 12*l*. 14*s*. 9*d*.

HEIGHINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Langoe, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 4 miles from Lincoln, and 130 from London; containing 67 houses and 321 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HEIGHLEY HIGH AND LOW, two adjoining hamlets in the parish of Mitford, Castle ward, Northumberland, 2½ miles from Morpeth, and 292 from London; containing 23 houses and 106 inhabitants.

HEIGHTON, a parish in the hundred of Flexboro, rape of Pevensey, Sussex, 2 miles from Seaford, and 60 from London; containing 10 houses and 90 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l*. 8*s*. 6*d*.

HEISKER, a small island of the Hebrides, 2 leagues west of North Uist, being about 2 miles long, and very narrow. Great quantities of kelp are made here.

HEITSBURY, the name of a hundred in Wilts, near the center of the county, and westward of Salisbury Plains.

HEITSBURY, or HEVTSBURY, a borough and parish in the hundred of Heitsbury, Wilts, standing on the river Whilley, 4 miles from Warminster, and 92½ from London; containing 196 houses and 1072 inhabitants, of whom 611 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures. The church is a spacious building, having been formerly collegiate, with four prebends in it belonging to Salisbury cathedral: it is built in the form of a cross, with a tower in the center, containing six bells; and is about 400 years old. Here is an hospital, for 12 aged men and one woman, well endowed; and a house for a school master, to the free grammar school. The greater part of this town was destroyed by fire in 1766, since which the houses have been commodiously built, and have greatly added to the improvement of its appearance; it consists principally of one main street, and being on the borders of Salisbury plain, it is a remarkable open and healthy situation. It is an ancient borough by prescription, and sends two members to parliament, elected by the burgage holders, in number about 50, who are returned by the lords bailiffs. Of late years a considerable woollen manufacture has been established here, which has much increased its population. It formerly had a market, and has now a fair on May 14 for cattle. The church is a curacy.—Britton's Beauties.

HEL, a river in Cornwall, that rises in the parish of Wendron, and, after a course of 6 miles, falls into the sea, forming a haven of sufficient depth for vessels of large burthen, being about 1 mile over at its mouth.

HELBECK, a township in the parish of Brough, in East ward, Westmoreland, 1 mile from Brough, and 262 from London, situated on the small stream of the Gelt; and containing 14 houses and 74 inhabitants.

HELLEFIELD, a hamlet in the parish of Lanchester, in Chester ward, Durham, 9 miles from Durham, and 257 from London, on the left of the new road to Edinburgh; containing 30 houses and 145 inhabitants.

HELEN'S ST. a hamlet in the parish of Prescott, hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 3 miles from Prescott, and 198 from London. Population included with Prescott.

HELEN'S ST. a small town and parish in East Medina liberty, in the Isle of Wight, near Brading. It has a bay of considerable note as a rendezvous for the royal navy, and contains 100 houses and 550 inhabitants. In time of war this is a place of great traffic with shipping, and the East India fleet generally stops here, both coming in and going out, for water and provisions. At the mouth of the bay is a cluster of rocks called the Mixen. A church was erected in 1719, the old one being partly destroyed by the sea, the remains of which serve as a sea-mark.—Butler's Isle of Wight.

HELEN'S ST. one of the Scilly Isles, noted as having the remains of one of the oldest christian churches to be met with in the British dominions.

HELHOUGHTON, a parish in the hundred of Gallow, Norfolk, 3½ miles from Fakenham, and 108 from London; containing 37 houses and 273 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l*. 13*s*. 4*d*.

HELLAND, a parish in the hundred of Trigg, Cornwall, 1½ mile from Bodmin, and 236 from London; containing 33 houses and 211 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l*. 13*s*. 4*d*.

HELLESDON, a parish in the hundred of Faverham, Norfolk, 5 miles from Norwich, and 114 from London; containing only 9 houses and 45 inhabitants. It has been united with Drayton, and the living is a rectory, value 12*l*. in the patronage of the bishop of Norwich.

HELLIDON, a parish in the hundred of Fawsley, Northampton, 5 miles from Daventry, and 74 from London; containing 84 houses and 340 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HELLIFIELD, a township in the parish of Long Preston, in Staincliffe wapentake, west riding of York, 9½ miles from Skipton, and 227 from London; containing 46 houses and 237 inhabitants.

HELLINGLY, a parish in the hundred of Dill, rape of Pevensey, Sussex, 2 miles from Hailsham, and 55 from London; containing 133 houses and 906 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l*. 16*s*. 8*d*.

HELL'S SKERRIES, a cluster of small islands off the Hebrides, about 10 miles west from the Isle of Rum. They are so named from the violent current which passes through them.

HELMDON, a parish in the hundred of Kingsutton, Northampton, 4 miles from Brackley, and 67 from London; containing 89 houses and 421 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 13*l.* 11*s.* in the patronage of Corpus Christi college, Oxford.

HELMINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Bosmere and Claydon, Suffolk, between Woodbridge and Debenham, 7 miles from Ipswich, and 76 from London; containing 27 houses and 235 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 18*l.* and the patron is the king.

HELMINGTON, a hamlet in the parish of St. Andrew's Auckland, Darlington ward, Durham, 3 miles from Bishop Auckland, and 260 from London. Population included with Hunwick.

HELMSDALE, a river in the shire of Sutherland, which falls into the German Ocean, about 3 miles from the south point of Caithness. It has an excellent salmon fishery.

HELMSETT. See ELMER, Suffolk.

HELMSLEY, or HELMESLEY BLACKMOOR, a market-town and parish in Ryedall wapentake, north riding of York. It is situated in the Ry-dale or valley by the side of the river Rye, 22 miles from York, and 218 from London; and contains 247 houses and 1449 inhabitants, of whom 287 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures, principally those of linens and cottons. The houses in general are well built of stone, and covered with tiles. It formerly had a strong castle, the remains of which are still visible. It was destroyed by the army under general Fairfax, in Cromwell's wars. Near the ruins of Rivaulx abbey is now erected an elegant mansion, with grounds laid out in the most tasteful manner, adorned with a temple noted for some beautiful paintings. Its market is on Saturday, and its fairs 19th May, 16th July, 2d October, and 6th November. The living is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.*

HELMSLEY GATE. See GATE HELMSLEY, in York liberties.

HELPERBY, a township in the parish of Brafferton, in the liberties of York, east riding of York, situated on the river Swale, 4 miles from Aldborough, and 212 from London; containing 75 houses and 548 inhabitants.

HELPERTHORPE, a parish in Buckrose wapentake, east riding of York, 9 miles from Driffield, and 206 from London; containing 17 houses and 72 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of York.

HELPSTONE, a parish in the hundred of Nassaburgh, Northampton, 3½ miles from Market Deeping, and 87 from London; containing 65 houses and 301 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 5*s.* in the patronage of Christ Church college, Cambridge.

HELSBY, a township in the parish of Northwich, hundred of Eddisbury, Chester, 2 miles from Northwich, and 173 from London; containing 50 houses and 268 inhabitants.

HELSINGTON, a township and chapelry in the parish of Kendal, in Kendal ward, Westmoreland, 2 miles from Kendal, and 258 from London; containing 39 houses and 230 inhabitants.

HELSTONE, a borough and market-town in the hundred of Kerrier, Cornwall, 9½ miles from Penryn, and 276 from London, on the river Looe; containing 301 houses and 2248 inhabitants, viz. 978 males and 1270 females, of whom 415 were returned as employed in trade and manufacture. The town consists principally of four streets that meet and form a cross, with a channel of water running through each. The church is a good building, having a spire 90 feet high, and forming a conspicuous sea-mark. This is a stannary town, being one of those appointed for the stamping of tin, which creates a good trade here. There is an extensive market-house and guildhall here, and it formerly had a priory and a strong castle. It has sent two members to parliament ever since the reign of Edward. It is governed by a corporation, consisting of a mayor, 11 aldermen, and 24 common council-men, who hold the elective franchises. Vessels take in their lading at a good harbour a little below the town. In the neighbourhood was formerly one of those curiosities called Rocking stones, which was thrown down by the governor of Pendennis castle under Oliver Cromwell. Near the town is a curious heap of stones piled loosely up in the form of a circle, called Earth-castle, used anciently as a fortification. It has a market on Saturday, and its fairs are 13th March, 20th July, 9th September, 8th November, the second Saturday before St. Thomas's day, the Saturdays before Midlent and Palm Sundays, and on Whit-Monday. The living is a vicarage, value 26*l.* 19*s.* 5*d.* —Polwhele's Cornwall.

HELTON, a river in Northumberland, which falls into the Bowbent.

HELTON BACON, a hamlet in the parish of St. Michael's Appleby, East ward, Westmoreland, 2½ miles from Appleby, and 274 from London. Population included with St. Michael's Appleby.

HELTON. See HILTON, Dorset.

HELTON FLECKETT, a hamlet in the parish of Askham, West ward, Westmoreland, 5 miles from Penrith, and 280 from London. Population included with Askham.

HELVELLYN HILL, a stupendous hill near Ambleside, Westmoreland, over which passes a cataract. It is situated at the head of Ulswater, a very deep lake abounding with excellent fish.

HEMBLINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Walsham, Norfolk, 8 miles from Norwich, and 117 from London; containing 34 houses and 214 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HEMEL HEMPSTEAD, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Dacorum, Herts, 8½ miles from Watford, and 23 from London; containing 481 houses and 2722 inhabitants, viz. 1348 males and 1374 females, of whom 775 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures. It stands on the river Gade. The church has a handsome tower, with a tall spire. Henry the VIIIth incorporated it under a bailiff, granting it a common seal, and a pie powder court during its markets and fairs. The market on Thursday is one of the greatest, perhaps, in the county for grain. Its fair is on the Thursday after Trinity-Monday. The living is a vicarage, value 16*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of St. Paul's under the nomination of the bishop of Lincoln.

Helier's St. the capital of the island of Jersey, in the English Channel, near the coast of France; containing about 2000 inhabitants. The streets are wide and paved, and the houses tolerably well built. The bay of St. Austin's has a good harbour and pier, having the sea on the south-west, and hills on the north. A large hill projects, as it were, over the town, having a pleasant walk, which affords an extensive prospect. Elizabeth castle stands, as it were, upon an island, being surrounded with water from half flood to half ebb, and connected to the town by a bridge or passage formed of sand and stones. It is strongly defended, as it is the garrison, and also the residence of the governor. In the church the service is performed in the French and English languages alternately. Lat. 49° 11'. Long. 2° 10' W.

Hemesby, a parish in the hundred of West Flegg, Norfolk, 6 miles from Caistor, and 129 from London; containing 62 houses and 367 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Hemingborough, a parish in the wapentake of Ouze and Derwent, east riding of York, 6 miles from Howden, and 184 from London; containing 83 houses and 387 inhabitants. The church is a handsome building, and was formerly collegiate, having a provost and three prebendaries. It has a very high and beautiful spire, which is seen at a considerable distance all round the country. It was formerly, also, a market-town. King Charles I. granted this town a charter, with privileges which have become obsolete. The living is a vicarage, in the patronage of the king.

Hemingby, a parish in the hundred of Gartree, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 4 miles from Horncastle, and 143 from London; containing 46 houses and 231 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 17*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of King's college, Cambridge.

Hemingstone, a parish in the hundred of Bosmere and Claydon, Suffolk, 5 miles from Ipswich, and 73 from London; containing 57 houses and 253 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 8*l.* 11*s.* 5*d.*

Hemington Row, a township in the parish of Brancepeth, Darlington ward, Durham, 5 miles from Bishop Auckland, and 262 from London; containing 27 houses and 121 inhabitants.

Hemington, a township in the parish of Castle Donnington, hundred of West Goscote, Leicester, 8 miles from Loughborough, and 116 from London; containing 71 houses and 337 inhabitants.

Hemington, a parish in the hundred of Polebrooke, Northampton, 2½ miles from Oundle, and 80 from London; containing 20 houses and 100 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*

Hemington, a parish united with Hardington, in the hundred of Kilmersdon, Somerset, 3½ miles from Frome, and 108 from London; containing 70 houses and 357 inhabitants.

Hemiock, the name of a hundred in Devonshire, on the north-eastern side of the county, and borders of Somersetshire.

Hemiock, a parish in the hundred of the same name, Devon, 7 miles from Honiton, and 150 from London; containing 174 houses and 1020 inhabitants, of whom 75 were returned as employed in various trades. The living is a rectory, value 32*l.* 7*d.*

Hemley, a parish in the hundred of Colneis, Suffolk, 6½ miles from Ipswich, and 75 from London; containing only 9 houses and 66 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 19*s.* 1*d.*

Hemlingford, the name of a hundred in Warwick, being the northern extremity of the county.

Hemmingford Abbotts, a parish in the hundred of Toreland, Hants, 3 miles from St. Ive's, and 63 from London; containing 31 houses and 306 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 26*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Hemmingford Grey, a parish also in the same hundred, ½ mile nearer St. Ive's; containing 52 houses and 334 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 16*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge.

Hemholme, a hamlet in the parish of Leven, wapentake of Holderness, east riding of York, 7 miles from Beverley, and 191 from London; containing 11 houses and 57 inhabitants.

Hempnall, a parish in the hundred of Depwade, Norfolk, 9 miles from Norwich, and 101 from London; containing 114 houses and 879 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Hempstead, a township and chapelry in the parish of Great Samford, hundred of Freshwell, Essex, 6 miles from Saffron Walden, and 44 from London; containing 99 houses and 574 inhabitants.

Hempstead, a parish in the hundred of Dudston and Kingsbarton, Gloucester, 1 mile from Gloucester, and 105 from London; containing 22 houses and 159 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.*

Hempstead, a parish in the hundred of Happing, Norfolk, on the sea-coast, 17 miles from Norwich, and 122 from London; containing 33 houses and 192 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 9*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* united with Lessingham and Eccles.

Hempstead, a parish in the hundred of Holt, Norfolk, 1¼ mile from Holt, and 11½ from London; containing 40 houses and 227 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Norwich.

HEMPSTON BROAD. See BROADHEMPSTON, Devon.

HEMPSTON LITTLE, a parish in the hundred of Hayton, Devon, 1 mile from Totness, and 194 from London; containing 38 houses and 266 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 19*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.* and the patron is the king.

HEMPSWELL, a parish in the hundred of Aslacoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 6 miles from Gainsborough, and 146 from London; containing 52 houses and 258 inhabitants. It is a curacy, HEMPTON, a parish in the hundred of Langley and Swineshead, Gloucester, 3 miles from Chipping Sodbury, and 112 from London; containing 39 houses and 324 inhabitants.

HEMPTON, a parish in the hundred of Gallow, Norfolk, 2 miles from Fakenham, and 108 from London; containing 50 houses and 235 inhabitants. Its fairs are in Whitsun week, and 22d November. It has no church.

HEMPTON, a hamlet in the parish of Barford St. Michael's, hundred of Wootton, Oxford, 2 miles from Deddington, and 70 from London; containing 28 houses and 154 inhabitants.

HEMSLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Rowley, Humsley Beacon division, Harthill wapentake, east riding of York, 5 miles from Beverley, and 180 from London. Population included with Rowley.

HEMSWORTH, a parish in Staincrosse wapentake, west riding of York, 10 miles from Doncaster, and 175 from London; containing 165 houses and 803 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HENBURY, a township in the parish and hundred of Macclesfield, Chester, 1½ mile from Macclesfield, and 166½ from London; containing 54 houses and 333 inhabitants.

HENBURY HIGHER AND LOWER, two small hamlets in the parish of Sturminster Marshall, Dorset, lying in a pleasant vale, from which it is distant about 1 mile south.

HENBURY, the name of a hundred in Gloucester, being the south-western point of the county, near the mouth of the Severn.

HENBURY, a parish in the hundreds of Henbury and Berkley, Gloucester, 5 miles from Bristol, and 117 from London; containing 91 houses and 591 inhabitants. It stands in a remarkably pleasant and healthy situation, containing several good buildings, and has a free school. This parish is very extensive. The living is valued at 30*l.* and is a vicarage, with Aust and Northwick chapels annexed. Near the church, on a hill, stands Blaze castle, built in the gothic style by Thomas Farr, of Bristol, esq. Here was formerly a Roman fortification; and, in 1768, several Roman coins of Vespasian, Antoninus, Constantine, and others, were found, with a few silver ones, chiefly of Gordianus, and amongst them a brass medal of Faustina. These were the gleanings of a fuller harvest in 1707, when a great number of coins, and other Roman antiquities, were found here. It has its present name from a chapel, which stood hard by, dedicated to St. Blaze, the patron of the wool combers. —Rudge's Gloucestershire.

HENDERSKELF, a hamlet to the parish of Easingwold, Bulmer wapentake, north riding of York, 6 miles from Aldborough, and 216 from London; containing 22 houses and 137 inhabitants.

HENDON, a parish in the hundred of Goare, Middlesex, standing on a rivulet called the Brent, 7 miles from London; and containing 358 houses and 1955 inhabitants, of whom 454 were returned as employed in various trades. In the neighbourhood are many elegant villas, the situation being remarkably pleasant and airy, particularly at the hamlet of Mill Hill, at which the late Peter Collinson planted a botanical garden. Hendon place is an elegant mansion which stands on the site of the once princely residence of the abbot of Westminster. Here stood a remarkable cedar, which was blown down in 1779, said to have been planted by queen Elizabeth; it was 70 feet high, and the circumference of the trunk, at 12 feet from the ground, 20 feet. The church has nothing remarkable in it. It is a vicarage, value 15*l.*—Lysons's Environs of London.

HENDRED EAST, a parish in the hundred of Wantage, Berks, 3 miles from Wantage, and 56 from London; containing 113 houses and 683 inhabitants. It was formerly more populous, and was a market-town. It stands upon the borders of the vale of White Horse. The church is a handsome fabric, and had formerly a chapel of ease. The living is a rectory, valued at 15*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Salisbury.

HENDRED WEST, a parish also in the same hundred, and about ½ mile distant from the above; containing 62 houses and 309 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 19*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of Corpus Christi college, Oxford.

HENDRINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of North Greenhoe, Norfolk, 2 miles from Walsingham, and 113 from London; containing 83 houses and 549 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HENEGLYS, a parish in the hundred of Maltraeth, Anglesey, Wales, 8 miles from Beaumaris, and 250 from London; containing 70 houses and 322 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 9*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Bangor, with Llanfaelan chapel annexed.

HENFENIW, a parish in the hundred of Llar, Cardiganshire, Wales, 8 miles from Tregaron, and 212 from London; containing 83 houses and 386 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

Henfield, a parish in the hundred of Tipnoak, rape of Bramber, Sussex, 10½ miles from Horsham, and 45 from London; containing 127 houses and 1037 inhabitants, of whom 85 were returned as employed in various trades. Its fairs are 4th May and 1st August. The living is a vicarage, value 16*l.* 10*s.* in the patronage of the bishop of Chichester.

Hengistbury head, a headland, 2 miles south of Christ Church, forming the western boundary of Christchurch bay. Near it are the remains of some ancient entrenchments.

Hengrave, a parish in the hundred of Thingoe, Suffolk, 4 miles from Bury St. Edmund's, and 75 from London; containing 14 houses and 196 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 7*s.* 1*d.* united with Flempton.

Hengston hill, near Launceston, in Cornwall, noted for being the place where the tinners of Cornwall and Devon used to hold their septennial meetings, to consult upon their common interest.

Henham, a parish in the hundred of Uttlesford, Essex, 6½ miles from Bishop Stortford, and 37 from London; containing 113 houses and 703 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 17*l.*

Henham, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of Bitton, hundred of Langley and Swineshead, Gloucester, 7 miles from Bath, 5 from Bristol, and 110 from London. The chapel is a very neat building. Population included with Bitton. At this place are found the remains of camps and fortifications, which have been attributed to the Romans. Dr. Gale supposed Henham to be the Roman station Abone.

Henham, a hamlet in Bulcham, hundred of Blything, Suffolk, 11 miles from Saxmundham, and 101 from London; containing 13 houses and 116 inhabitants.

Henheads, a hamlet in the parish of Whalley, hundred of Blackburn, Lancaster, near Whalley, 212 miles from London; containing 22 houses and 122 inhabitants.

Henley upon Thames, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Benfield, Oxford, 7 miles from Marlow, and 35 from London; containing 625 houses and 2948 inhabitants, viz. 1319 males and 1629 females, of whom 622 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures. It is supposed to be a place of great antiquity from its name; though little of its old condition is now to be discovered, as most of the houses are modern buildings, and the streets wide, paved, and well lighted. Instead of the wooden bridge mentioned by Camden, it has now a handsome one of stone; on the key stones of the center arch of which are two well-executed heads in sculpture, representing the Thames and Isis, by the honourable Mrs. Damer. The church is an ancient spacious building, having a handsome lofty tower, said to have been erected by cardinal Wolsey, with a peal of eight bells. Here are three free-schools, almshouses for 20 poor persons, and considerable other charitable benefactions. The principal trade is in corn, flour, malt, and beech wood, sent to the metropolis by water. In the neighbourhood is produced pyrites, and a black flint used in the glass houses. It was formerly a borough, and sent members to parliament. It is now a corporate town, governed by a high steward, recorder, mayor, 10 aldermen, and 16 burgesses. It is pleasantly seated on the banks of the Thames, with the Chiltern hills running in a ridge from hence, and separating this county from Berks. The market on Thursday is always abundantly supplied with malt and grain, large quantities of which are sent by the Thames to London. Its fairs are 7th March, Holy-Thursday, first Thursday after Trinity Sunday, and after 21st September. The living is a rectory, value 21*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.*

Henley in Arden, a market-town and chapelry in the parish of Wootton Wawen, hundred of Barlichway, Warwick, 7½ miles from Stratford on Avon, and 104½ from London; containing 233 houses and 1098 inhabitants, of whom 130 were returned as employed in various trades. The town was burnt down about the time of the battle of Evesham. It is named from its situation in the ancient forest of Arden, and stands near the river Arrow. The church, or chapel of ease, is a neat building. Its market is on Tuesday, and its fairs 25th March and Whit-Tuesday.

Henley, Hampshire, near Andover. See Cold Henley.

Henley, a small village in the hundred of Bosmere and Claydon, Suffolk, between Woodbridge and Needham Market, 76 miles from London; containing 33 houses and 230 inhabitants.

Henllis, a township and chapelry to the parish of Bassaleg, hundred of Wentloodge, Monmouth, 3 miles from Newport, and 150 from London; containing 41 houses and 183 inhabitants.

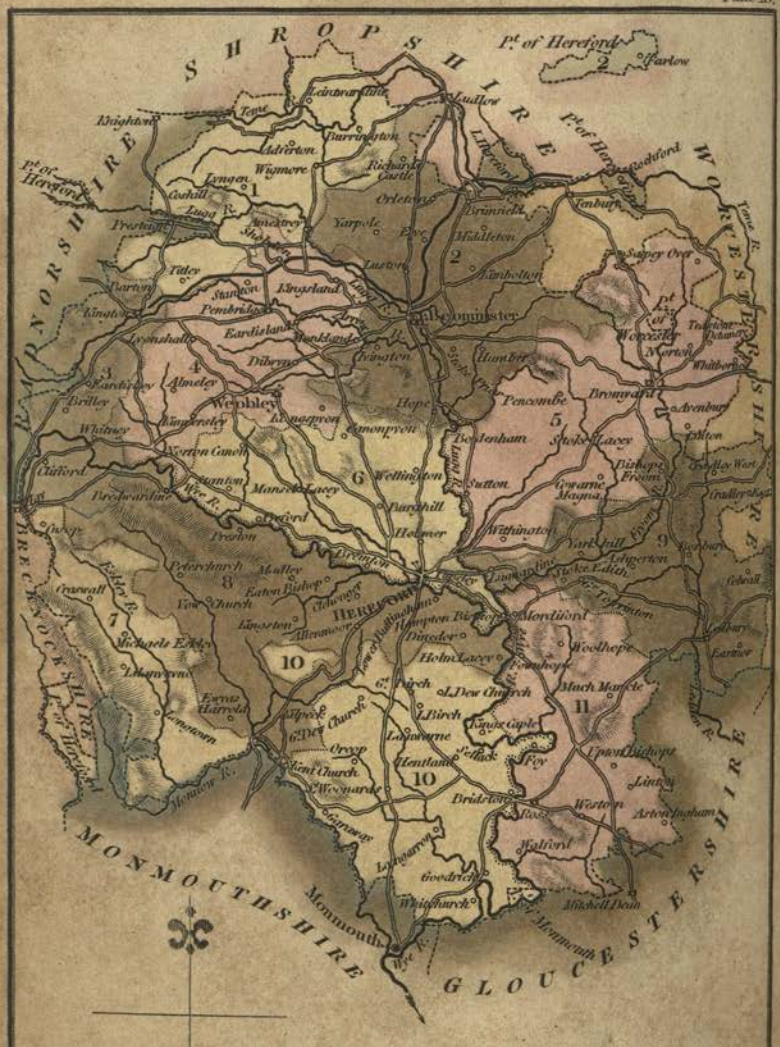
Henlow, a parish in the hundred of Clifton, Bedford, 5½ miles from Hitchin, and 39 from London; containing 99 houses and 552 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Henlys, a parish in the hundred of Geneur Glyn, Cardiganshire, Wales, 8 miles from Lampeter, and 214 from London; containing 65 houses and 367 inhabitants.

Henner, a hamlet to Leominster, in the hundred of Wolphy, Hereford, 2 miles from Leominster, and 135 from London; containing 25 houses and 140 inhabitants.

Hennock, a parish in the hundred of Teignbridge, Devon, 1½ mile from Chudleigh, and 183 from London; containing 107 houses and 537 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 16*l.*

Henny, a parish in the hundred of Hinckford, Essex, 2½ miles from Sudbury, and 53



Published June 1, 1808, by R. Phillips, Bridge Street, Blackfriars, London. Cooper del. et sculp.

from London; containing 45 houses and 357 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

HENREDDENEY, a hamlet in the parish of Eghvysilan, in the hundred of Caerphilly, Glamorgan, 5 miles from Caerphilly, and 161 from London; containing 70 houses and 332 inhabitants.

HENSALL, a township in the parish of Snaith, Osgoldness wapentake, west riding of York, 5 miles from Snaith, and 177 from London; containing 38 houses and 213 inhabitants.

HENSBURY, a high hill near Lestwithiel, Cornwall, 250 miles from London. Here is the principal beacon for the coast of Cornwall and Devon, commanding a view of both the north and south sea, as well as above 30 miles into Devonshire, and to the Land's end in Cornwall.

HENSHAW, a township in the parish of Haltwhistle, Tindal ward, Northumberland, 11 miles from Hexham, and 294 from London; containing 115 houses and 568 inhabitants.

HENSINGHAM, a township in the parish of St. Bees, in Allerdale ward, above Derwent, Cumberland, 1 mile from Whitehaven, and 300 from London; containing 124 houses and 590 inhabitants.

HENSINGTON, a hamlet to the parish of Shipton, hundred of Wootton, Oxford, 2 miles from Woodstock, and 62 from London; containing 13 houses and 64 inhabitants.

HENSTEAD, a parish in the hundred of Blything, Suffolk, 4 miles from Beccles, and 110 from London; containing 30 houses and 227 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* in the patronage of Emanuel college, Oxford.

HENSTED, the name of a hundred in Norfolk, lying to the south-east of Norwich, and bounded on the north by the river Yare.

HENSTRIDGE, a parish in the hundred of Horethorne, Somerset, 5 miles from Sherborn, and 112 from London: containing 152 houses and 827 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 2*d.*

HENTHORN, a hamlet in the parish of Whalley, hundred of Blackburn, Lancaster, 3 miles from Clitheroe, and 212 from London. Population included with Mitton.

HENTLAND, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Lugwardine, hundred of Wormelow, Hereford, 5 miles from Ross, and 126 from London; containing 63 houses and 413 inhabitants.

HENTON, a hamlet in the parish of Emmington, hundred of Lewkner, Oxford, 3 miles from Thame, and 42 from London; containing 36 houses and 195 inhabitants.

HENTON BLEWITT, a parish in the hundred of Chewton, Somerset, 5 miles from Wells, and 117 from London; containing 55 houses and 255 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 8*s.* 1*d.*

HEOLLWERMWD, a parish in the hundred of Caerphilly, Glamorgan, Wales, 5 miles from Caerphilly, and 165 from London; containing 909 houses and 5026 inhabitants, viz. 2782 males and 2244 females, of whom 442 were returned as employed in trade and manufacture, principally that of Welsh baize and serge.

HEPBURN, a township in the parish of Bothal, Morpeth ward, Northumberland, 2 miles from Morpeth, and 293 from London; containing 17 houses and 79 inhabitants.

HEPPLE, a hamlet in the parish of Rothbury, Coquetdale ward, Northumberland, standing on the river Coquet, 2 miles from Rothbury, and 308 from London; and containing 13 houses and 80 inhabitants.

HEPSCOTT, a hamlet in the parish of Morpeth, in Castle ward, Northumberland, 2 miles from Morpeth, and 293 from London; containing 32 houses and 135 inhabitants.

HEPSEY, a river in Brecknockshire, Wales, which falls into the Neath at Istrudwelthy.

HEPTONSTALL, a township in the parish of Halifax, Morley wapentake, west riding of York, 3 miles from Halifax, and 198 from London; containing 604 houses and 2983 inhabitants, viz. 1377 males and 1606 females, of whom 575 were returned as employed in the various trades and manufactures peculiar to Halifax. Here was formerly a market, and a cloth-hall, which were both swallowed up by the increasing trade of Halifax.

HERWORTH, a parish in the hundred of Blackburn, Suffolk, 4 miles from Ixworth, and 81 from London; containing 66 houses and 449 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 17*s.* 3*d.*

HERWORTH, a township in the parish of Kirkburton, Aybrigg wapentake, west riding of York, 5 miles from Huddersfield, and 182 from London; containing 141 houses and 804 inhabitants.

HERDWICK, a hamlet in the parish of Burton Dasset, hundred of Kineton, Warwick, 4 miles from Kineton, and 82 from London. Population included with Burton Dasset.

HERDAY, a hamlet in the parish of Fledborough, hundred of Thurgarton, Nottingham, 5 miles east of Thurford; and the population included therewith. This is the place where Eleanor queen of Edward I. died, and where a chantry was first erected to her memory, which was afterwards removed to Lincoln cathedral, where her bowels were interred under a grand cenotaph near the east window. Magnificent crosses were erected to her memory at Herdby, Lincoln, Newark, Leicester, Geddington, St. Alban's, Waltham, Cheapside, and Charing. Peck mentions three more, at Grantham, Stamford, and Woburn.

HEREFORD CITY OF, in the hundred of Grimsworth, Herefordshire, 13 miles from Leominster, 14 from Ross, and 135 from London; containing 1392 houses and 6828 inhabitants, viz. 3023 males and 3805 females, of whom 1515 were returned as employed in trade and manufactures. It stands on the banks of the Wye, near the center of the county. Herefordshire lying on the borders of Wales, this town became a strong station for the Saxon and English forces; and its name in Saxon signifies the ford of an army. By some it is supposed to have been derived from Ercinna, the ancient British name of the county; and by others to have been built on the site of Aricomium, an ancient town mentioned by Antonine, which was destroyed by an earthquake. This place began to flourish about 825, having a church built here by king Milfred, the Mercian, in memory of Ethelbert king of the East Angles, who was murdered by king Offa's queen whilst courting her daughter at Marden, a village in the neighbourhood, and buried here. Soon after it became a cathedral and a bishop's see, and the cathedral was rebuilt by bishop Athelstan between 1012 and 1056. At the Norman conquest Hereford was in ruins and depopulated. The Welsh, in the reign of Edward the Confessor, having destroyed the cathedral, sacked the city, and carried away the bishop prisoner, afterwards killing him and several of his clergy. The present cathedral was begun by Robert de Losin, the second Norman bishop, on the model of the church of Aix-la-Chapelle in Germany, and completed by his successor. In 1786 the large tower at the west end of the cathedral fell down, but has been since handsomely rebuilt. There were formerly six other churches, but at present there are only four, viz. All Saints, St. Peter's, St. John Baptist, and St. Nicholas, the other two being destroyed during the civil wars. Here are also several meeting-houses for dissenters, and formerly there was an hospital of the knights of St. John of Jerusalem, together with three other hospitals, a college of grey friars, and a house of black friars, on the site of which a well endowed hospital was founded in 1614, having a neat chapel, the windows adorned with painted glass; near it is a remarkably ancient stone pulpit. Here is a good free grammar school, the master and assistant of which are elected by the dean and chapter of the cathedral; this school is endowed with some scholarships and exhibitions at each of the universities. The city in general is well built, the streets clean, and spacious; but there is no manufacture of consequence at present, that of gloves, once considerable, having now much declined. In that part called the High Town, which is a kind of square, stands the shire-hall, where the assizes and quarter sessions are held. In Broad-street stands a small, but neat, theatre. There is a bridge, built of stone, over the river Wye, of six arches; but no account exists of its erection; its appearance suggests it to have been built about the end of the 15th century. The city is governed by a mayor, escheator, usually called the late mayor, six aldermen, a common-council, recorder, &c.; and returns two members to parliament, elected by the freemen of the city, in number about 1250, and the mayor is the returning officer. The ramparts and site of the ancient castle, now called Castle Green, form an agreeable promenade, having been converted into very pleasant walks. A triennial meeting is held here of the three choirs of Worcester, Hereford, and Gloucester, for the performance of oratorios, &c. for the benefit of the widows and orphans of the inferior clergy, assisted by some of the principal performers from London and Oxford. The chief beverage here is cider, all the hedges of the neighbourhood being planted with apple-trees. The city, standing on a gravelly soil, is accounted very healthy, and the inhabitants, in general, are long-lived: this appears evident from the average number of burials in the city for 10 years, from 1790 to 1800, being a proportion of 1 to 60¼ of the existing population, whilst that of the metropolis was as 1 to 31. This city gives title of viscount to the family of Devereux. It has a market on Wednesday and Saturday for poultry, butter, &c. and on Friday for live stock, and on St. Andrew's day for cattle and horses. Its fairs are the first Tuesday after February 2, Wednesday in Easter week, 1st July, and 20th October. The living of All Saints is a vicarage, value 18*l.* 10*s.* consolidated with St. Martin's, in the patronage of the dean and canons of Windsor; St. Peter's is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 2*s.* united with the rectory of St. Owen's; and St. John Baptist a vicarage, value 7*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Hereford; and St. Nicholas a rectory, value 10*l.* and the patron is the king.

HEREFORD LITTLE, a parish in the hundred of Wolphy, Hereford, on the banks of the Teme, 3 miles from Tenbury, and 137 from London; containing 72 houses and 417 inhabitants. The Kincton canal passes here. The living is a vicarage, value 16*l.* 4*s.* in the patronage of the chancellor of Hereford cathedral.

HEREFORDSHIRE, an inland county of England, in form nearly circular, and in situation between 51° 53′ 7″ and 52° 29′ 43″ north latitude, and 2° 28′ 30″ and 3° 19′ 32″ west longitude of London. It adjoins Shropshire on the north, Worcestershire on the north-east and east, Gloucestershire on the south-east, Monmouthshire on the south-west, Brecknockshire on the west, and Radnorshire on the north-west. Its length from north to south is about 38 miles, and breadth from west to east about 35, being in the diocese of Hereford. The gross number of acres in the county are estimated at 600,000; deducting 30,000 for the sites of towns, roads, water, and buildings, and 50,000 more for waste lands and woods, there remain 520,000 acres of cultivated ground. It comprehends 221 parishes, which are arranged in 11 hundreds, and include the city of Hereford, the two borough towns of Leominster and Weobley, five other market-towns, Ross, Published Jan.y 1.1808, by R. Phillips, Bridge Street, Blackfriars, London.

Ledbury, Kington, Bromyard, and Pembridge. It sends eight representatives to parliament, viz. two for the county, two for the city, two for Leominster, and two for Weobley. Ledbury, Ross, and Bromyard, anciently had representatives, but voluntarily declined the privilege, on account of the expence then attached to those who exercised the right of electors. This county contains 17,003 houses, 89,191 inhabitants, viz 43,955 males and 45,236 females, of whom 8588 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures, and 31,261 in agriculture. The air and climate vary considerably in different parts and elevations of the county, no air, generally speaking, being more harsh and unkind than that which comes from the west; this is, probably, to be attributed to the extensive tracts of mountainous country, which in that direction are seldom without snow during the winter, and often whitened with it even late in the spring. The vicinity of Ross is said to be the most early in vegetation. The soil of this county, in its general character, is a mixture of marl and clay, of great fertility, containing a certain proportion of calcareous earth. Deep beds of fine gravel are met with at the site, and in the vicinity of the city of Hereford. Below the surface are strata of limestone, often beautifully intersected with veins of red and white, somewhat resembling calcareous spar. Near Snodhill castle, in the hundred of Webtree, it becomes a species of marble, and was in considerable use and estimation as such during part of the 17th century. Iron ore was discovered in the sandy district of Wormelow hundred as early as the time of the Romans in Britain, but of late years no iron has been manufactured in Herefordshire. Small particles of lead ore have occasionally been found in the lime rocks at the north-west part of the county. Many attempts to find coal have recently been made, but without success. Red and yellow ochres, and tobacco pipe clay, have been found; and fuller's earth is occasionally dug for sale in small quantities on the estates of the late hon. Edward Foley, of Stoke Edith. The principal rivers and streams are the Wye, the Lug, the Munnow, the Arrow, the Frome, the Teme, and the Leddon. Of these the Wye is the most beneficial to the immediate purposes of agriculture, in the conveyance of wheat and flour to Bristol, of coal for burning limestone, and also in the conveyance of lime from the kiln to distant parts of the county. It rises near the summit of the mountain Plinlimmon in Montgomeryshire, and after dividing the counties of Brecknock and Radnor, and passing Hereford, Ross, Monmouth, and Chepstow, falls into the Severn. The barges used on this river are from 18 to thirty tons, but either a large or small supply of water is equally fatal to the navigation. The principal fish taken in the Wye are salmon, which are found in the river at all times, but they are only in perfection from December to August. They formerly, however, abounded so much, that it was a common clause in the indentures of children apprenticed in Hereford, that they should not be compelled to eat salmon more frequently than twice in every week. The Lug rises in Radnorshire, and running past Leominster receives near that town the Arrow, and falls into the Wye at Mordiford. The Munnow rises on the east of the Hatterel mountains, and after receiving several small streams, becomes the boundary between Herefordshire and Monmouthshire, and falls into the Wye at Monmouth. The Arrow has its source in Radnorshire, and, as just mentioned, falls into the Lug near Leominster. The Frome rises in the north part of the county, and falls into the Lug near its junction with the Wye. The Teme passes alternately through parts of this county and Shropshire, and falls into the Severn. Pearls have occasionally been found in the muscle shells of the Teme. The Leddon rises above Bosbury, and passing Ledbury, to which it gives name, enters Kington. A canal runs across the north part of the county from Shropshire, passing Leominster to Gloucestershire, and falls into the Severn. Some springs on the Herefordshire side of Malvern hills were formerly deemed medicinal, and several petrifying, or, perhaps, incrusting, springs are met with in the hilly parts of the county, that contain limestone. A small well near Richard's castle, in Wolphey hundred, discharges small bones when disturbed, resembling the vertebræ and other bones of the frog. The returns made under the act of 26 Geo. III. report the net expences for maintaining the poor throughout the county of Hereford in the year 1776 to have been 10,393*l.* 7*s.* 2*d.* and the average of the years 1783, 4, and 5, as returned under similar authority, was stated at 16,727*l.* 18*s.* 2*d.* at present they nearly amount to 20,000*l.* being double the sum raised 30 years ago. The agricultural produce of this county consists of wheat, oats, barley, and peas. Hop plantations prevail in different degrees, but abound most towards Worcestershire. The orchards of Herefordshire acquired the peculiar eminence they still retain in the reign of Charles the First, when by the noble exertions of lord Scudamore, of Hom Lacy, and other gentlemen, this county became in a manner one entire orchard. Plantations are now found in every aspect, and on soils of every quality and under every culture; and great quantities of cyder and perry are made both for provincial use, and for the various markets, both of the metropolis, and all parts of the kingdom. The cattle of Herefordshire have long been esteemed superior to most, if not to all the breeds, in the island, and the provincial breed of sheep is termed the Ryeland. Previously to the Romans landing in Britain, Herefordshire was inhabited by the Silures, and when the heptarchy was formed by the Saxons, it constituted part of the kingdom of Mercia. Being a frontier county, it became subject to the incursions of the Welsh, who frequently committed great depredations. William the Conqueror sent a great force into these parts under William Fitz-Osborn and others, who made several expeditions into Wales, and kept this county tolerably quiet. It is recorded that a Morris dance was performed before king James I. by ten men and women, whose united ages made 1000 years. The amount of the property tax, in 1806, for this county was 810,187*l.* The average number of deaths, taken from the registered burials for 10 years, appear to have been as 1 to 64 of the existing population.—Duncomb's History of Herefordshire.

Hergest, a hamlet in the parish of Kineton, hundred of Huntingdon, Hereford, 1 mile from Kineton, and 156 from London; containing 23 houses and 124 inhabitants.

Hermitage, a tything in the parish of Ryme Intrinsica, hundred of Ugglescombe, Dorset, 4 miles from Sherborne, and 123 from London; containing 21 houses and 123 inhabitants. It is recorded, that a large piece of ground in this vicinity was removed 40 roods by a violent subterraneous wind in 1585.

Herne, a parish in the hundred of Bleangate, lathe of St. Augustine's, Kent, 6 miles from Canterbury, and 60 from London; containing 199 houses and 1232 inhabitants. The church is a large and ancient structure, and is 113 feet long; has 6 stalls, and the choir is divided from the nave by a carved skreen of oak. This place was formerly much more considerable, and had a market. The living is a vicarage, value 20*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury.

Hernehill, a parish in the hundred of Boughton Bean, lathe of Scray, Kent, 2 miles from Feversham, and 50 from London; containing 68 houses and 359 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 15*l.* in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury.

Herriar, a parish in the hundred of Bermondspit, division of Basingstoke, Hants, 5½ miles from Basingstoke, and 47 from London; containing 44 houses and 330 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Herringby, a parish united with Stokesby in the hundred of East Flegg, Norfolk, 4 miles from Caistor, and 120 from London. Population included with Stokesby.

Herringfleet, a parish in the hundred of Mutford and Lothingland, Suffolk, 5 miles from Yarmouth and 119 from London; containing 30 houses and 160 inhabitants.

Herringswell, a parish in the hundred of Lackford, Suffolk, 3 miles from Mildenhall, and 67 from London; containing 23 houses and 126 inhabitants.

Herringstone, a hamlet in the parish of Charminster, in the hundred of Colliford Tree, division of Dorchester, Dorset, 2 miles from Dorchester, and 121 from London; containing 5 houses and 29 inhabitants.

Herrington, East, Middle, and West, hamlets to the parish of Houghton le Spring, Easington ward, Durham, 4 miles from Sunderland, and 271 from London; containing 75 houses and 532 inhabitants.

Hersham, a hamlet to the parish of Walton upon Thames, hundred of Elmbridge, Surry, 5 miles from Kingston, and 17 from London. Population included with Walton.

Hertford, the name of a hundred in Hertfordshire, lying around the county town, and divided from Essex by the river Lea.

Hertford, or Hartford, a borough, and the county-town of Hertfordshire, situated on the river Lea, 21 miles from London; contains 515 houses and 3360 inhabitants, viz. 1762 males and 1598 females, of whom 575 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures. In the time of the Britons its name appears to have been Durocobrwa, signifying the Red Ford, from the colour of the gravel at the bottom of the river: others derive it from Hart, a deer, there formerly being great numbers here. The arms of the town are a hart couchant in the water; but the arms are most probably derived from the name of the town. The Saxon kings often kept their court here. King Alfred erected a castle to check the depredations of the Danes, who came by water from the Thames as far as Ware, and made considerable plunder. There are two parish churches, All Saints and St. Andrew's; in the latter is the seat for the mayor and corporation, and another for the governors of Christ's Hospital in London, they having erected a gallery in the church for the accommodation of the children of their school here, which contains about 400 boys and 60 girls, chiefly the younger children. The school is a roomy building, with dwelling-houses for the master, who is always a clergyman, and for two mistresses, with apartments for 20 nurses. There are two dissenting meeting-houses, and another for the people called Quakers; a well-established Sunday-school, and a public charity-school for boys and girls, under the management of the corporation. The county gaol and penitentiary-house is a new building, very commodious and extensive. The assizes and quarter sessions are held here. This town has had several charters of incorporation, but it is now governed by a mayor, a high steward, who is generally a nobleman, a recorder, 9 aldermen, town clerk, chamberlain, 10 capital burgesses, 16 assistants, and 2 serjeants at mace. The county election is held here in the shire hall, a noble building erected by that able architect Mr. Adam in 1780. Hertford sends two members to parliament, and the electors consist of householders, and such freemen as were inhabitants at the time of their being made free. The number of voters exceeds 620, and the returning officer is the mayor. There formerly was a priory of Benedictine monks here, under the abbey of St. Alban's, founded in the reign of William the Conqueror. The remains of its ancient castle now consist of a gate-house, or lodge of brick, and an ancient wall of rubble stone with angular towers; part of it has lately been neatly fitted up as a mansion-house. The market here on Saturday is well supplied with grain, and its fairs, second Saturday before Easter-Sunday, Old May and Old Midsummer day, and November 8, all for cattle. The living of St. Andrew's is a rectory, value 12*l.* 7*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of the king as duke of Lancaster; and that of All Saints a vicarage, value 10*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* the patron of which is also the king.—Salmon's Herts.

Hertfordshire, or Herts, an inland county of England, is bounded on the north by Bedfordshire and Cambridge, on the east by Essex, on the south by Middlesex, and on the west by Buckingham and Bedford. Its shape is extremely irregular, being much indented on the western side. It is about 36 miles long, 28 broad, and 130 in circumference; and contains 302,080 acres of land, three fourths of which is in tillage, and the remainder in pasturage. It contains 2 boroughs, Hertford and St. Alban's, 17 market-towns, 170 parishes, 17,681 houses inhabited by 97,577 persons, viz. 48,063 males and 49,514 females, of whom 12,861 were returned as employed in trade, manufacture, and handicraft, and 20,611 in agriculture. Its market-towns are Baldock, Barkway, Barnet, Berkhampstead, Buntingford, Hatfield, Hempstead, Hitchin, Hoddesdon, Rickmansworth, Royston, Standon, Stevenage, Bishop's Stortford, Tring, Ware, and Watford. It is divided into 8 hundreds, viz. Braughin, Broadwater, Dacorum, Edwintree, Cashio, Hertford, Hitchin, and Odsey. It returns six members to parliament, two for each of the boroughs, and two for the county; and lies partly in the diocese of London, and partly in that of Lincoln. It is watered by the rivers Lea, Maran, Rib, Quin, whose united waters form the New River, which supplies the inhabitants of London, in a great measure, with water, the Colne, Stort, and Verlam. The principal is the Lea, which rises near Leagrave in Bedfordshire, passes Hertford and Ware, from whence it is made navigable to the Thames. The Colne, on the south-west side of the county, rises near Hatfield, passes Watford, and separating Bucks from Middlesex, falls into the Thames near Staines. The Stort, passing Bishop's Stortford, divides the county from Essex, and falls into the Lea near Hoddesdon. The Verlam passes St. Alban's, and falls into the Colne: and the New River rises near Ware, being conveyed by an artificial channel for a course of 36 miles to London. The northern skirt of the county is hilly, forming a scattered part of the chalky ridge which extends across the kingdom in this direction; and the number of streams in this part, by their clearness, shew the nature of the soil to be rather hard, and not rich. Flint stones are scattered over the whole face of the country with frequent beds of chalk, but with proper culture it is favourable to both wheat and barley. The western part is a tolerably rich soil, and in good cultivation. The chief traffic of the county is in corn and the malting trade, which is mostly sent to London by the navigation of the River Lea. In this county there are neither coal-mines nor extensive manufactures, except several paper-mills, the produce of which is sent to the metropolis. Its wholesome air and agreeable situation, with its vicinity to the metropolis, have rendered it a favourite residence both in ancient and modern times; and it contains many charming seats of the nobility, gentry, and opulent merchants of the capital. Its towns, however, are of small account, and have very few manufactures. There are the traces of many ancient camps, and near St. Alban's stood Verulam, one of the principal stations of the Romans. The ancient Durolitum is supposed to have been at Cheshunt, and Casuro magus at Braughin. Before the Roman invasion it was inhabited partly by the Cattieuchlani and Trinobantes, and the Cassii; and under the Saxons it was divided between the Mercians, and the kings of Kent. The gross amount of assessment under the property tax, in 1806, was 1,138,675*l.* amount of money raised for the maintenance of the poor, in 1803, 71,291*l.* being at the rate of 4*s.* 2¼*d.* in the pound; and the average number of deaths, taken from the registered burials for 10 years, appears to be as 1 to 51 of the existing population.—Salmon's Herts, and Agricultural Report.

Hertingfordbury, a parish in the hundred of Hertford, Herts, 1½ mile from Hertford, and 20 from London; containing only 115 houses and 625 inhabitants.

Hertley Mawdit. See Hartley Mawdit, Hants.

Hertsmonceux, a parish in the hundred of Foxearle, rape of Hastings, Sussex, 2 miles from Hailsham, and 58 from London; containing 120 houses and 961 inhabitants. Here are the remains of one of the oldest brick mansions in the kingdom; it was built early in the reign of Henry the Sixth; and gave rise to "The Drummer, or the Haunted House," by Mr. Addison.

Hesleburv, a parish in the hundred of Houndsborough, Somerset, 2½ miles from Crewkerne, and 129 from London; containing 137 houses and 677 inhabitants.

Heselden, or Hesledon, a parish in Easington ward, Durham, 12 miles from Stockton, and 260 from London; containing 34 houses and 156 inhabitants.

Heskett High, a parish in Leath ward, Cumberland, 9 miles from Penrith, and 293 from London; containing 103 houses and 617 inhabitants. This was formerly a market-town.

Hesket Newmarket, a hamlet in the parish of Colbeck, in Allerdale ward, below Derwent, Cumberland, 12 miles from Penrith, and 298 from London. Population included with Colbeck.

Hesket, a township in the parish of Croston, hundred of Leyland, Lancaster, 6 miles from Wigan, and 206 from London; containing 71 houses and 353 inhabitants.

Heskin, a hamlet in the parish of Eccleston, hundred of Leyland, Lancaster, 3 miles from Chorley, and 205 from London; containing 44 houses and 249 inhabitants.

Heslerton West, a parish in Buckrose wapentake, east riding of York, 7 miles from New Malton, and 210 from London; containing 24 houses and 139 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Heslerton East, a hamlet in the above parish, ¾ mile distant from the former; containing 22 houses and 129 inhabitants.

Heslington, a parish in the liberties of York, east riding of York, 1 mile from that city, and 199 from London; containing 39 houses and 266 inhabitants. The curacy of the parish is in the patronage of the prebend of Ampleford in York cathedral.

Hesleyhurst, a hamlet in the parish of Rothbury, in Coquetdale ward, Northumberland, 2¼ miles from Rothbury, and 308 from London; containing 15 houses and 57 inhabitants.

Hessle, a parish in the liberties of Hull, east riding of York, 3 miles from Kingston upon Hull, and 173 from London; containing 155 houses and 681 inhabitants. There is a ferry here over the Humber to Barton. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 7*s.* 1*d.* in the patronage of the king.

Hessett, a parish in the hundred of Thedwestrey, Suffolk, 3 miles from Bury St. Edmund's, and 71 from London; containing 45 houses and 323 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 17*s.* 11*d.*

Hessey, a hamlet in the parish of Moor Monkton, in the liberties of York Ainstey, east riding of York, 5 miles from York, and 204 from London; containing 26 houses and 114 inhabitants. The battle of Marston Moor, fought in 1644, near this village, is sometimes called the battle of Hessey Moor.

Hest, a hamlet in the parish of Bolton-le-Sands, in the hundred of Lonsdale, Lancaster, 4 miles from Lancaster, and 242 from London. Population included with Hyne.

Heston, a parish in the hundred of Isleworth, Middlesex, 10½ miles from London, near Hounslow; containing 284 houses and 1782 inhabitants, of whom 139 were returned as employed in trade. This includes the township of Hounslow. In the vicinity is Osterley-park, belonging to the earl of Westmoreland, formerly attached to the monastery of Sion, but pulled down and rebuilt by Mr. Child, the banker, in 1762. The church is a small old building, and the living is a vicarage, value 11*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of London.

Hethe, a parish in the hundred of Ploughley, Oxford, 4 miles from Bicester, and 59 from London; containing 88 houses and 261 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 7*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.* and the patron is the king.

Hethell, a parish in the hundred of Humbleyard, Norfolk, 6 miles from Norwich, and 103 from London; containing 18 houses and 174 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 10*l.*

Hethersett, a parish in the hundred of Humbleyard, Norfolk, near the above, 5½ miles from Norwich, and 103 from London; containing 90 houses and 696 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 8*l.* in the patronage of Gonvill and Caius college, Cambridge.

Hethersgill, a township in the parish of Kirklinton, in Eskdale ward, Cumberland, 4 miles from Longtown, and 312 from London; containing 71 houses and 665 inhabitants.

Hethfield. See Heathfield, Somerset.

Hett, a hamlet in the parish of Merrington, in Darlington ward, Durham, 4 miles from Durham, and 256 from London; containing 35 houses and 157 inhabitants.

Hetton le hole, a hamlet in the parish of Houghton le Spring, in Easington ward, Durham, 5 miles from Durham, and 261 from London; containing 43 houses and 213 inhabitants.

Hetton, a hamlet in the parish of Burnsall, in Staincliffe wapentake, west riding of York, 9 miles from Skipton, and 225 from London; containing 41 houses and 172 inhabitants.

Heugh, a township in the parish of Stamfordham, in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 11 miles from Newcastle, and 287 from London; containing 88 houses and 472 inhabitants.

Heveningham, a parish in the hundred of Blything, Suffolk, 5 miles from Halesworth, and 97 from London; containing 63 houses and 305 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* and the patron is the king.

Hever, a parish in the hundred of Somerden, lathe of Sutton at hone, Kent, 8 miles from Westerham, and 30 from London; containing 28 houses and 187 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 7*s.* 3*d.*

Heversham, or Haversham, a parish in Kendal ward, Westmoreland, situated on the river Ken, 5 miles from Burton in Kendal, and 255 from London; containing 208 houses and 968 inhabitants, including Milthorp. The living is a vicarage, value 36*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge.

Hevingham, a parish in the hundred of South Erpingham, Norfolk, 2 miles from Ailsham, and 19 from London; containing 118 houses and 610 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 16*s.*

Hevingham. See Heveningham, Suffolk.

Hewersfield, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Lydney, hundred of St. Bria-vells, Gloucester, 9 miles from Newnham, and 125 from London; containing 62 houses and 298 inhabitants.

Hewick, a hamlet to the parish of Ripon, west riding of York, near the river Ure, 1 mile from Ripon, and 221 from London; containing 33 houses and 183 inhabitants.

Hewish, a hamlet in the parish of West Overton, hundred of Swanborough, Wilts, 4 miles from Marlborough, and 76 from London; containing 19 houses and 82 inhabitants.

Heworth High and Low, two townships forming a parish in Chester ward, Durham, 2 miles from Gateshead, and 275 from London; containing 673 houses and 2887 inhabitants, of whom 412 were returned as employed in various trades, &c. It is a curacy.

Heworth, a parish in Bulmer wapentake, north riding of York, 2 miles from York, and 202 from London; containing 20 houses and 82 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Hexham, a parish and market-town in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 40 miles from Barnard Castle, and 286 from London, standing at the conflux of the North and South Tyne; and containing 712 houses and 4565 inhabitants, viz. 2014 males and 2551 females, of whom 609 were returned as employed in various trades, particularly in tanning leather, and making shoes and gloves. Its ancient and spacious church, is highly ornamented in the inside in the Gothic taste. In the choir was a beautiful oratory, now converted into a pew. On the screen, at the entrance of the choir, are several grotesque monastic paintings. At the west of the church are the remains of the priory, which was a very spacious building. There is a large room, with an oaken roof, which was the refectory, now used for public entertainment. Here are two ancient stone towers; the one used as a sessions house, formerly belonged to the priors of Hexham; the other stands on the top of a hill towards the Tyne. The streets are narrow and ill built; but have the advantage of good water, which issues from a fountain. The market place stands in a large square, near the center of the town, with a convenient piazza for the butchers-market, having moveable stalls. At the conflux of the river lies the pleasant retirement of Nether Warden, defended from the north-west by lofty eminences, with a beautiful valley towards the east; this was the retirement of St. John of Beverley, bishop of Hexham. Farther on an eminence stands the church of St. John's Lee, beneath the site of which the banks for near a mile are laid out in the most pleasant walks. In the neighbourhood is a ragged gateway, and some ruinous walls, called Steward's castle; 1 mile from which is a waterfall. Near this town, in 1461, was fought a remarkably bloody battle between the houses of York and Lancaster; wherein the latter were defeated, chiefly by the superior skill and bravery of Nevil lord Montacute, who was afterwards created earl of Northumberland. The town is not incorporated, being governed by a bailiff and the jury of the manor. It has a good charity and grammar school, and the church is a curacy, with Whitby chapel annexed.

Hexton, a parish in the hundred of Cashio, Herts, situate on the borders of Bedfordshire, 5 miles from Hitchin, and 38 from London; containing 39 houses and 239 inhabitants. Near the church-yard is a fountain, called St. Faith's Well, being at the foot of a rock from which the spring issues. In the neighbourhood are many vestiges of military stations. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Heybridge, a parish in the hundred of Thurstable, Essex, ½ mile from Malden, and 38 from London, on the river Blackwater, not far from its junction with the Chelmer. It contains 64 houses and 368 inhabitants, and is a vicarage, value 10*l.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of St. Paul's.

Heyford Nether, a parish in the hundred of Nobottle Grove, Northampton, 7 miles from Towcester, and 66 from London, on the river Nen; containing 61 houses and 264 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.*

Heyford Upper, a hamlet in the above parish, 1¼ mile distant, in the road from Northampton to Daventry, being 4½ miles from Northampton; containing 23 houses and 112 inhabitants.

Heyford Upper, a parish in the hundred of Ploughley, Oxford, 6 miles from Bicester, and 62 from London, near the Oxford canal; containing 52 houses and 217 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 10*l.* 13*s.* 1*d.* in the patronage of Corpus Christi college, Oxford.

Heyford Lower, a parish in the same hundred of Oxford, about ½ mile distant; containing 63 houses and 346 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 13*l.* 16*s.* in the patronage of New college, Oxford.

Heysham, a parish in the hundred of Lonsdale, Lancaster, 4 miles from Garstang, and 231 from London; containing 77 houses and 365 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 9*s.* 2*d.*

Heyshott, a hamlet in the parish of Midhurst, hundred of Easebourne, rape of Chichester, Sussex, 2 miles from Midhurst, and 60 from London; containing 42 houses and 275 inhabitants.

Heythorp, or Haythorpe, a parish in the hundred of Chadlington, Oxford, 3 miles from Chipping Norton, and 74 from London; containing 4 houses and 33 inhabitants, exclusive of the hamlet of Dunthorp adjoining, which contains 10 houses and 56 inhabitants. Here is a very beautiful mansion and park of the earl of Shrewsbury; the house is built in the most elegant stile of architecture, the avenue to which for 2 miles is beautifully bordered with forest trees, firs, &c. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.*

HIBALDSTOW, a parish in Manley wapentake, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 3 miles from Glamford Briggs, and 152 from London, standing on the river Ankholme; and containing 92 houses and 443 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 10*s.*

HICKHAM. See HYCKAM, Lincoln.

HICKLETON, a parish in the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of York, 5 miles from Doncaster, and 168 from London; containing 30 houses and 174 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HICKLING, a parish in the hundred of Happing, Norfolk, 8 miles from North Walsham, and 122 from London, not far from the sea; containing 114 houses and 595 inhabitants. It was formerly a market-town, and had a priory of black canons. The living is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

HICKLING, a parish in the hundred of Bingham, Notts, on the borders of Leicester, 10 miles from Nottingham, and 114 from London; containing 90 houses and 391 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 18*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of Queen's college, Cambridge.

HIDE, a hamlet in the parish of Knowle, in the Isle of Purbeck, Dorset. Population included with Knowle.

HIDE, a hamlet in the parish of Abbott's Langley, hundred of Cashio, Herts, near Abbott's Langley, 4 miles from St. Alban's, and 18 from London. Population included with Abbott's Langley.

HIGHELEY, a hamlet in the parish of Eglingham, in Coquetdale ward, Northumberland, 6 miles from Wooler, and 318 from London; containing 11 houses and 51 inhabitants.

HIEFORD NASEBY. See NASEBY, Northampton.

HIGBRAY, a parish in the hundred of Sherwill, Devon, situated on the small river Bray, 5 miles from Barnstaple, and 190 from London; containing 45 houses and 264 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

HIGHAM GOBION, a parish in the hundred of Flitt, Bedford, 7 miles from Luton, and 38 from London; containing 15 houses and 91 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*

HIGHAM, a hamlet in the city of Gloucester, in the hundred of Dudstone and Kingsbarton, Gloucester, 2 miles from Gloucester, and 108 from London; containing 52 houses and 202 inhabitants.

HIGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Shamwell, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 4 miles from Rochester, 3½ from Gravesend, and 26 from London; containing 72 houses and 365 inhabitants. The church is a very spacious building, from which, and the various foundations of buildings which have been dug up, it is presumed this place was anciently much more populous. There was formerly a nunnery here, founded in the reign of king Stephen, which, in consequence of the abandoned character and conduct of the sisterhood, was suppressed in 1524; after this, the whole of the manor, the site of the nunnery, the appropriation of the rectory of the parish, and the advowson of the vicarage, value 8*l.* 10*s.* were granted to the then newly founded college of St. John's, Cambridge.—Hasted's Kent.

HIGHAM, a township in the parish of Whalley, hundred of Blackburn, Lancaster, 3 miles from Burnley, and 215 from London; containing 122 houses and 583 inhabitants.

HIGHAM, or HECKAM, a parish in the hundred of Sparkenhoe, Leicester, 5 miles from Hinckley, and 102 from London; containing 81 houses and 451 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.*

HIGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Samford, Suffolk, 9 miles from Ipswich, and 68 from London; containing 35 houses and 203 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

HIGHAM DYKES, a hamlet in the parish of Ponteland, in Castle ward, Northumberland, 8 miles from Newcastle, and 284 from London; containing 4 houses and 15 inhabitants.

HIGHAM FERRERS, the name of a hundred in Northamptonshire, being the eastern extremity of the county, bordering on Bedford and Hunts.

HIGHAM FERRERS, a borough, market-town, and parish, in the hundred of Higham Ferrers, Northampton, 15 miles from Bedford, and 64 from London; containing 125 houses and 726 inhabitants. This town is situated on a rocky elevated ground abounding with springs. The church is dedicated to the blessed Virgin, and is a handsome building, having a lofty spire, which was erected anno 1632, the former having fallen down. It is a borough by prescription, and was made a corporation by Philip and Mary, consisting of a mayor, 7 aldermen, and 13 capital burgesses. It sends one member to parliament, and the right of election is in the mayor, aldermen, burgesses, and freemen, being housekeepers, and not receiving alms; in number about 150. Northward of the church anciently stood a castle, erected, probably, by one of the Ferrers family. Archbishop Chichele founded here a college for eight secular canons, four clerks, and six choristers; and an almshouse for twelve men and one woman. There is a free school, and the market is on Saturday; and fairs on February 5, March 7, May 3, June 25, August 5, October 10, and the Thursday before December 17. The living is a vicarage, valued at 33*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.* with Chelveston and Caldecot chapels annexed.—Bridges's Northamptonshire.

HIGHAMPTON, a parish in the hundred of Black Torrington, Devon, 3 miles from Hatherleigh, and 204 from London; containing 38 houses and 204 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.*

HIGHBICKINGTON, a parish in the hundred of North Tawton, Devon, 4 miles from Black Torrington, and 200 from London; containing 125 houses and 693 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HIGHCLERE, a parish in the hundred of Evingar, division of Andover, Hants, 12 miles from Andover, 4 from Kingsclere, and 59 from London; containing 80 houses and 321 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.*

HIGH CROSS, stands in the road from Lutterworth to Hinckley, in the hundred of Guthlaxton, Leicester, and on the borders of Warwick. It consists of four handsome Doric columns facing the four roads, having a gilded globe and cross on the top of a sun-dial, on which are some Latin inscriptions commemorating the peace of Utrecht. It is at present enclosed, and was erected in 1712 by the earl of Denbigh and the neighbouring gentry, but being built of bad stone, is in a mouldering state.

HIGH GARRET. See GARRETT, Essex.

HIGHGATE, a populous village in the vicinity of London, lies in the parishes of Hornsey and Pancras, the chapel and two-thirds of the village being in Hornsey, and the rest in Pancras. It is said to derive its name from the high gate, or the gate upon the hill, the toll-gate, belonging to the bishop of London, having stood for time immemorial on the summit of the hill. There was formerly a chapel, or hermitage, upon the hill on the same spot where the school now stands. In 1562 sir Roger Cholmeley erected a free grammar-school here, and endowed it with estates which at present produce 166*l.* per annum. The chapel adjoins to the school, and was built in 1565, and has been enlarged since its erection by sundry benefactions; and the master of the school is also reader at the chapel and afternoon preacher. In 1656 sir John Wollaston founded six almshouses at this place, but they being decayed, Edward Pauncefort, esq. in 1722, built twelve others on the same site at his own expence, and a school-house in the centre for the charity girls. There is a meeting-house of the presbyterian dissenters in this place, and a chapel for the methodists. The custom of imposing a burlesque nugatory bath on all strangers upon their first visit to Highgate is well known, and a pair of horns, on which the oath is administered, is kept at almost every inn. The population of Highgate was returned with that of Pancras. Several of the gentry, and opulent merchants of the metropolis, have very elegant seats at Highgate.—Lysons's Environs of London.

HIGH KNIPE, a hamlet in the parish of Bampton, in West ward, Westmoreland, near Shap.

HIGHLEADON, a hamlet in the parish of Hartbury, hundred of Dudston and Kingsbarton, Gloucester, 7 miles from Gloucester, and 113 from London; containing 13 houses and 78 inhabitants.

HIGHLEY, a parish in the hundred of Stoddesdon, Salop, near the river Severn, 6 miles from Bridgnorth, and 136 from London; containing 48 houses and 274 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.*

HIGHLOW, a hamlet in the parish of Hartburn, Morpeth ward, Northumberland, 7 miles from Morpeth, and 298 from London; containing 3 houses and 16 inhabitants.

HIGH WEEK, a parish in the hundred of Teignbridge, Devon, 1 mile from Newton Bushell, and 187 from London; containing 160 houses and 777 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HIGHWOOD HILL, in the parish of Hendon, Middlesex; at which is a mineral spring of a cathartic quality.

HIGHWORTH, the name of a hundred in Wilts, at the northern extremity of the county, and borders of Berks and Gloucester.

HIGHWORTH, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Highworth, Wilts, 5 miles from Swindon, and 77 from London; containing 251 houses and 1493 inhabitants, of whom 166 were returned as employed in various trades, &c. It is situated on a pleasant hill, near the vale of White horse, and was formerly a borough. It is still governed by a mayor and an alderman. It has a cattle market on Wednesday, and fairs 12th August and 10th October. The living is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* with Sevenhampton chapel annexed, in the patronage of the prebend of the same name in Salisbury cathedral.—Britton's Wilts.

HILARY ST. a parish in the hundred of Penwith, Cornwall, 1¼ mile from Marazion, and 285 from London; containing 146 houses and 990 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 6*s.*

HILARY ST the chief town in the Isle of Jersey, having a very commodious harbour. The town consists of several good streets, with very good buildings, and contains many trades and manufactures. The courts of justice for the island are held in this town, in the center of which is the court-house, a very stately structure; and near it the parish church, where the service is performed both in English and French. The corn market is a handsome building, supported by piazzas of the Tuscan order, and the shambles are enclosed with a stone wall. The harbour is defended by a very strong castle, the residence of the governor; it is surrounded by deep trenches and strong walls, and the entrance is by a draw-bridge secured by an iron gate. Here is a good market on Saturday much frequented. The inhabitants are about 2500. Lat. 50° 7′ 38″. Long. 5° 24′ 25″ W.

HILCOT, a hamlet in the parish of North Newton, hundred of Swanborough, Wilts, 6 miles from Market Lavington, and 83 from London. Population included with North Newton.

HILDERSHAM, a parish in the hundred of Chilford, Cambridge, 7 miles from Cambridge, and 49 from London; containing 25 houses and 170 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 5*d.*

HILDERSTONE, a township in the parish of Stone, hundred of Pirehill, Stafford, 2 miles from Stone, and 140 from London; containing 382 houses and 1961 inhabitants. The population of this place was not returned to parliament.

HILDERTHORNE, a hamlet in the parish of Bridlington, in Dickering lythe, east riding of York, 2 miles from Bridlington, and 208 from London; containing 5 houses and 40 inhabitants.

HILGAY, or HELGAY, a parish in the hundred of Clackclose, Norfolk, 4 miles from Downham, and 80 from London; containing 85 houses and 759 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.*

HILL, a parish in the hundred of Berkley, Gloucester, 4 miles from Thornbury, and 118 from London; containing 35 houses and 220 inhabitants. The church is a donative, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Bristol.

HILL, the name of a hundred in the division of Lindsay, Lincolnshire, towards the eastern side of the county, between Horncastle and Alford.

HILL, a hamlet in the parish of Fladbury, hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 3 miles from Pershore, and 106 from London; containing 47 houses and 235 inhabitants, so called from its situation on Fladbury hill.

HILLAM, a hamlet in the parish of Monk-fryston, in Barkston Ash wapentake, west riding of York, 7 miles from Pontefract, and 180 from London; containing 43 houses and 190 inhabitants.

HILLBURGH, or HILLBOROUGH, a parish in the hundred of South Greenhoe, Norfolk, 5 miles from Swaffham, and 89 from London; containing 42 houses and 360 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

HILL-END, a hamlet in the parish of Cumner, hundred of Hormer, Berks, 4 miles from Oxford, and 59 from London; containing 13 houses and 64 inhabitants.

HILLEND, a hamlet in the parish of Twining, hundred of Tewksbury, Gloucester, 3 miles from Tewksbury.

HILLENDON, or HILLERSDON, a parish in the hundred of Buckingham, Bucks, 3½ miles from Buckingham, and 54 from London; containing 26 houses and 183 inhabitants. The church is a curacy, in the patronage of the dean and canons of Christ church, Oxford.

HILLESLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Hawkesbury, hundred of Grumbald Ash, Gloucester, 8 miles from Wootton under Edge, and 111 from London; containing 65 houses and 333 inhabitants.

HILL DEVERILL, a parish in the hundred of Heytesbury, Wilts, 3 miles from Warminster, and 98 from London; containing 25 houses and 146 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HILLFARRANCE, a parish in the hundred of Taunton Dean, Somerset, 3 miles from Taunton, and 148 from London; containing 79 houses and 438 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HILLFIELD, a hamlet in the parish of Sydling St. Nicholas, hundred of Cerne Totcombe division of Sherborn, Dorset, 3 miles from Cerne Abbas, and 120 from London; containing 18 houses and 97 inhabitants.

HILLINGDON, a parish in the hundred of Elthorne, Middlesex, 1¼ mile from Uxbridge, and 13¾ from London; containing 336 houses and 1783 inhabitants, of whom 190 were returned as employed in various trades, &c. Uxbridge is a chapelry to this parish. On the heath is an elegant house belonging to the count De Salis. The living is a vicarage, value 16*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of London, with Uxbridge chapel annexed.

HILLINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Freebridge Lynn, Norfolk, 4 miles from Lynn, and 97 from London; containing 57 houses and 189 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

HILLINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Loddon, Norfolk, 4½ miles from Norwich, and 106 from London; containing 8 houses and 45 inhabitants.

HILLMARTON, a parish in the hundred of Kingsbridge, Wilts, 3½ miles from Calne, and 88 from London; containing 134 houses and 717 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 20*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* and the patron is the king.

HILLMORTON, a parish in the hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, standing on a rivulet which comes from Creek in Northamptonshire, and falls into the Avon, 2½ miles from Rugby. It is 82½ miles from London, and situated partly on a hill; containing 101 houses and 620 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of sir Jacob Astley.

HILLSBOROUGH, a place in Ireland situated near the canal, between Lough Neagh and Belfast, near Newry, where considerable quantities of muslins are made.

HILPERTON, a parish in the hundred of Melksham, Wilts, 1½ mile from Trowbridge, and 98 from London; containing 130 houses and 748 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 16*l.*

HILSEA, a hamlet in the parish of Portsea, in the hundred and division of Portsdown in Portsea island, 3 miles from Portsmouth, and 69 from London. On the right is a very extensive building, called Portchester castle, of considerable age; and now used for the reception of prisoners of war; here also are very extensive barracks for foot soldiers. Population returned with Portsea.

HILSLEY, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Tewkesbury, Gloucester.

HILSTON, a small parish in Holderness wapentake, east riding of York, standing on the sea shore, 15 miles from Hull, and 190 from London; containing 6 houses and 57 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.*

HILSTON, a hamlet in the parish of Walford, hundred of Greytree, Hereford, near the Wye, 2 miles from Ross, and 123 from London. Population included with Walford.

HILTON, a township and chapelry in the parish of Marston on Dove, hundred of Appletree, Derby, standing on a small branch of the Trent near Ashby de la Zouch, 4 miles from Derby, and 130 from London; containing 77 houses and 371 inhabitants. In the neighbourhood are the ruins of Tutbury castle, situated on a hill of gypsum, at the foot of which was a monastery.

HILTON, or HELTON, a parish in the hundred of Whitway, division of Shaston, Dorset, 6 miles from Blandford, and 110 from London, at the foot of a hill; containing 109 houses and 462 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Salisbury.

HILTON, a hamlet in the parish of Monkwearmouth, in Chester ward, Durham, 3 miles from Sunderland, and 279 from London, near the banks of the Wear; containing 40 houses and 312 inhabitants.

HILTON, a hamlet in the parish of Staindrop, Darlington ward, Durham, 5 miles from Bishop Auckland, and 253 from London; containing 18 houses and 88 inhabitants.

HILTON, a hamlet in the parish of Great Staunton, hundred of Toseland, Hunts, 4½ miles from Huntingdon, and 61 from London; containing 37 houses and 223 inhabitants.

HILTON, a hamlet to Wolverhampton, hundred of Cuttlestone, Stafford, 1½ mile from Wolverhampton, and 130 from London; containing 5 houses and 34 inhabitants. Here formerly stood an abbey for Cistertian monks.

HILTON, a parish in Langborough wapentake, north riding of York, 3 miles from Yarm, and 245 from London; containing 27 houses and 136 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HIMBLETON, a parish in the hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 4 miles from Droitwich, and 115 from London; containing 60 houses and 289 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 6*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Worcester.

HIMLEY, a parish in the hundred of Seisdon, Stafford, 5½ miles from Wolverhampton, and 126 from London; containing 49 houses and 267 inhabitants. This place is noted for a curious mill, at which scythe blades, reaping hooks, axes, hatchets, &c. after being forged, are ground to a fine edge. The living is a rectory, value 5*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of viscount Dudley and Ward, who has a handsome family mansion here.

HINCASTER, a hamlet to the parish of Heversham, in Kendal ward, Westmoreland, 6 miles from Kendal, and 255 from London; containing 22 houses and 102 inhabitants.

HINCKLEY, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Sparkenhoe, Leicester, 10½ miles from Lutterworth, and 100 from London, standing on an eminence on the borders of Warwickshire; containing 919 houses and 5070 inhabitants, of whom 2624 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures. Here was formerly a castle, the site of which has for a great number of years been occupied as a garden, and on the hill on which it stood a handsome house has been erected. The church is a neat large structure, with a modern built spire erected on the old tower in 1788. Besides a Roman Catholic chapel there are three other meeting-houses. Its ancient town-hall, schoolhouse, and ball-house, are very curious, and in a ruinous state. It was formerly of much greater extent, and was surrounded with a wall and deep ditch, traces of which are still to be seen: and that part called the Jewry-wall is said to have been part of the Temple of Janus. Near the river is a mount supposed to have been a Roman fortification; and near the church the ruins of a bath, with three mineral springs. Here is a considerable manufactory of the coarser and cheaper sorts of wove and knit stockings. Hinckley is also noted for the goodness of its ale. A priory of Benedictines was established here by the earl of Leicester about 1173. Its market is on Monday, and its fairs are on the 1st, 2d, and 3d Monday after the Epiphany, Easter-Monday, the Monday before Whit-Monday, 26th August, and the 1st Monday after 28th October. The living is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Westminster.—Nichols's Hist. of Hinckley.

HINCKFORD, the name of a hundred in Essex, on the northern border of the county, divided from Suffolk by the river Stour.

HINDERCLAY, a parish in the hundred of Blackburn, Suffolk, 7 miles from Ixworth, and 84 from London; containing 56 houses and 335 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.*

HINDERWELL, a parish in Langborough wapentake, north riding of York, 7 miles from Whitby, and 253 from London; containing 329 houses and 1224 inhabitants, of whom 51 were returned as employed in various trades. The living is a rectory, value 15*l.* 2*s.*

HINDLEY, a township and chapelry in the parish of Wigan, in the hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 2 miles from Wigan, and 198 from London; containing 432 houses and 2332 inhabitants, of whom 971 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture.

HINDOLVESTON, a parish in the hundred of Eynsford, Norfolk, 5 miles from Reephan, and 118 from London; containing 134 houses and 621 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 1*s.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Norwich.

HINDON, a borough and market-town in the parish of East Knowle, in the hundred of Cawden and Cadworth, Wilts, 9 miles from Barford, and 96 from London; containing 175 houses and 793 inhabitants. This town suffered greatly by fire in 1754, from which circumstance many of the houses are built in the modern taste. The chapel of ease is a neat structure. Hindon is an ancient borough by prescription, governed by a bailiff and burgesses, and returns two members to parliament, chosen by the inhabitants of houses within the borough, being housekeepers and parishioners not receiving alms. The bailiff is the returning officer, and the number of voters amounts to 210. Its market is on Thursday, and its fairs Monday before Whitsun week, and 29th October for cattle, pedlary, &c.—Britton's Wilts.

HINDRINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of North Greenhoe, Norfolk, 2 miles from Walsingham, and 111 from London; containing 83 houses and 549 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Norwich.

HINGHAM, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Forehoe, Norfolk, 5 miles from Wymondham, and 96 from London; containing 73 houses and 1203 inhabitants; of whom 137 were returned as being employed in various trades. The buildings are tolerably neat, but the streets are irregular. The church is a very large building, erected in the reign of Edward III. and had several chapels in it. In the church were held seven guilds, each having a stipendiary chaplain serving at the respective altars, constituting a choir. The tower is very high and large, and contains eight bells. The river Yare has its source near this town. At the White Hart Inn is a good assembly-room and bowling green. Its market is on Thursday, and its fairs 6th March, Whit-Tuesday, and 2d October. The living is a rectory, value 24*l.* 18*s.* 4½.—Blomfield's Norfolk.

HINKSELL, or HINXHILL, a parish in the hundred of the Chart and Longbridge, lathe of Scray, Kent, 2 miles from Ashford, and 57 from London; containing 21 houses and 133 inhabitants. In 1727, a field here commenced burning, and continued near six weeks, till it had consumed above three acres of ground, the soil being of a peatlike texture. The living is a rectory, rated at 8*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.*

HINKSEY NORTH and SOUTH, two tythings originally in the parish of Cumner, hundred of Hormer, Berks, 2 miles from Oxford, and 57 from London; containing 61 houses and 273 inhabitants.

HINLIP, a parish in the hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 3 miles from Worcester, and 115 from London; containing 23 houses and 149 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 10*s.*

HINSTOCK, a parish in the hundred of North Bradford, Salop, 6 miles from Newport, and 146 from London; containing 78 houses and 536 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 16*s.*

HINTLESHAM, a parish in the hundred of Samford, Suffolk, 5 miles from Ipswich; containing 60 houses and 419 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 33*l.* 9*s.* 6*d.*

HINTON WALDRIDGE, a parish in the hundred of Ganfield, Berks, 5 miles from Faringdon and 62 from London; containing 54 houses and 275 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 23*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*

HINTON. See CHERRY HINTON, Cambridge.

HINTON MARTELL, a parish in the hundred of Bradbury, division of Shaston, Dorset, 3 miles from Wimborne, and 100 from London; containing 45 houses and 209 inhabitants. The church is a very ancient building, and is a rectory, rated at 16*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.*

HINTON ST. MARY'S, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Iwerne minster, in the hundred of Stourminster Newton, division of Sherborne, Dorset, 6 miles from Shaftesbury, and 107 from London; containing 54 houses and 266 inhabitants.

HINTON PARVA, a parish united with Hinton Martell, hundred of Bradbury, division of Shaston, Dorset, 1 mile nearer Wimborne; containing only 5 houses and 33 inhabitants.

HINTON, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Dyrham, hundred of Grumbald's Ash, Gloucester, 3 miles from Marshfield, and 106 from London; containing 35 houses and 257 inhabitants.

HINTON ON THE GREEN, a parish in the hundred of Tibaldstone, Gloucester, 3 miles from Evesham, and 98 from London; containing 40 houses and 196 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 13*s.* 11*d.*

HINTON-ST. GEORGE, a parish in the hundred of Crewkerne, Somerset, 2 miles from Crewkerne, and 134 from London; containing 110 houses and 575 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

HINTON CHARTERHOUSE, a township and chapelry in the parish of Norton St. Philip, hundred of Wellow, Somerset, 5½ miles from Bath, and 104 from London; containing 130 houses and 619 inhabitants. It received the name of Charterhouse from a monastery of Carthusians, founded here in the reign of Henry III. by Longespée earl of Salisbury, out of the ruins of which an elegant manor-house has been erected.

HINTON AMPNET, a parish in the hundred and division of Fawley, Hants, 4 miles from Alresford, and 61 from London; containing 42 houses and 268 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 19*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.*

HINTON BROAD, a parish in the hundred of Selkley, Wilts, 6 miles from Marlborough, and 81 from London; containing 82 houses and 550 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 18*s.* 11*d.*

HINTON LITTLE, a parish in the hundred of Elstub and Everley, Wilts, 3½ miles from Swindon, and 78 from London; containing 39 houses and 239 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

HINTON GREAT and LITTLE, tythings to the parish of Kevil, hundred of Whorlsden, Wilts, 4 miles from Trowbridge, and 105 from London; containing 55 houses and 259 inhabitants.

HINTON, a parish in the hundred of Kingsutton, Northampton, 1½ mile from Brackley, and 64½ from London; containing 41 houses and 177 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* united with Steane.

HINTS, a parish in the hundred of Oflow,

Stafford, 6 miles from Litchfield and 148 from London; containing 47 houses and 245 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Hinxton, a parish in the hundred of Whittlesford, Cambridge, 4 miles from Linton, and 46 from London, at the head of the Flemsdyke, and near the river Cam; containing 45 houses and 270 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of Jesus College, Cambridge.

Hinxworth, a parish in the hundred of Odsey, Herts, 4 miles from Baldock, and 41 from London, on the borders of Bedfordshire; containing 34 houses and 228 inhabitants. In 1724 a number of Roman antiquities, urns full of ashes, and several human bodies, were discovered by some workmen, not more than a foot from the surface of the earth. The living is a rectory, rated at 16*l.*

Hippenscombe, an extra-parochial hamlet in the hundred of Kinwardstone, Wilts, near Great Bedwin, 72 miles from London; containing 5 houses and 47 inhabitants.

Hipperholme, a township in the parish of Halifax, in Morley wapentake, west riding of York, 2¼ miles from Halifax, and 197 from London; containing 552 houses and 2879 inhabitants, viz. 1474 males and 1405 females, of whom 689 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures, particularly that of linens and woollens, and 226 in agriculture.

Hipswell, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Catterick, Hang east wapentake, north riding of York, 2 miles from Richmond, and 232 from London; containing 50 houses and 240 inhabitants.

Hirgum, a river in Merionethshire, Wales, which falls into the Avon.

Histon, a parish in the hundred of Chesterton, Cambridge, 3 miles from Cambridge, and 54 from London; containing 76 houses and 523 inhabitants, being divided into St. Andrew's and Ethelred Histon. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 7*s.* 4*d.*

Hitcham, a parish in the hundred of Burnham, Bucks, near the Thames and borders of Berks, 1½ mile from Maidenhead, and 24 from London; containing 30 houses and 200 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 11*l.* 5*s.* 7*d.* in the patronage of the king, at the nomination of Eton college.

Hitcham, a parish in the hundred of Cosford, Suffolk, 2 miles from Bildeston, and 65 from London; containing 125 houses and 746 inhabitants. The church is a handsome, antient structure. Its fair is 3d August. The living is a rectory, value 26*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Hitchendon, a parish in the hundred of Desborough, Bucks, 1½ mile from High Wycomb, and 30 from London; containing 129 houses and 887 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*

Hitchin, the name of a hundred in Hertfordshire, being the north-western point of the county, bordering on Bedfordshire.

Hitchin, a market town and parish in the hundred of Hitchin and Pirton, Hertford, 4 miles from Stevenage, and 34 from London; containing 667 houses and 3161 inhabitants, of whom 288 were returned as chiefly employed in trade, principally that of malting, there being no manufacture here. The town is pleasantly seated in a valley, the houses well built, and divided into three wards, viz. Bancroft, Bridge, and Filehouse wards, under the government of a bailiff and four constables. The church is an ancient building, 153 feet long, and 67 broad, and stands nearly in the center of the town. It consists of a nave and two aisles, with two chapels. The windows are filled with painted glass, and the church contains a number of ancient monuments. Over the communion table is a good altar piece by Rubens. Here are three meeting-houses, a good free school for 45 boys, and a charity school for 36 girls, with 16 almshouses for poor men and women, and another, for six widows, near the church. It was formerly noted for its manufactures. The market on Tuesday is very considerable for wheat, which is excellent of its kind, and is sold toll free. Its fairs are on Easter and Whit Tuesdays for cattle, sheep, and pedlary. The living is a vicarage, rated at 25*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* and is in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge.—Salmon's Herts.

Hithe. See Hythe, Kent.

Hittesleigh, a parish in the hundred of Wowford, Devon, 13 miles from Exeter, and 182 from London; containing 24 houses and 124 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 2*s.* 1*d.*

Hoath, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Reculver, hundred of Blengate, lathe of St. Augustine, Kent, 5½ miles from Canterbury, and 60 from London; containing 43 houses and 271 inhabitants.

Hobbies. See Hautbois, Norfolk.

Hobkirk, a parish in the district of Jedburgh, shire of Roxburgh, Scotland, 4 miles from Hawick, and 51 from Edinburgh; containing 149 houses and 760 inhabitants. This place gave birth to the late general Elliott, created lord Heathfield, the brave defender of Gibraltar.

Hoblench, a hamlet in the parish of Church Lench, hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 6 miles from Evesham, and 103 from London; containing 17 houses and 89 inhabitants.

Hoby, a parish in the hundred of East Goscote, Leicester, on the banks of the Wreake, 6½ miles from Melton Mowbray, and 100 from London; containing 58 houses and 294 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 22*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*

Hockerton, a parish in the hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, near Southwell, 6 miles from Newark, and 131 from London; containing 24 houses and 100 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.*

Hockham, a parish in the hundred of Shropham, Norfolk, 4 miles from Harling, and 92 from London; containing 64 houses and 350 inhabitants. Its fair is Easter-Monday. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 17*s.* 11*d.*

Hockerell, a hamlet to Bishop's Stortford, Herts, 30½ miles from London.

Hockering, a parish in the hundred of Mitford, Norfolk, 5 miles from East Dereham, and 106 from London; containing 35 houses and 276 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* united with Bergh.

Hoskley, a parish in the hundred of Rochford, Essex, 3½ miles from Rochford, and 36 from London; containing 85 houses and 612 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, rated at 16*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of Wadham college.

Hockliffe, a parish in the hundred of Manshead, Bedford, 4½ miles from Dunstable, and 38 from London; containing 52 houses and 256 inhabitants. The parish is united with Chalgrave.

Hockwold, a parish in the hundred of Grimshoe, Norfolk, near the Little Ouse, 3 miles from Brandon, and 81 from London; containing 132 houses and 616 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 9*l.* 13*s.* 11*d.* united with Wilton, in the patronage of Gonvill and Caius college, Cambridge.

Hockworthy, a parish in the hundred of Bampton, Devon, 3 miles from Bampton, and 161 from London; containing 51 houses and 283 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Hodbeck, a river in Yorkshire, which falls into the Derwent near Wikeham.

Hoddam, a parish in the district of Annandale, shire of Dumfries, Scotland, 22 miles from Carlisle; containing 280 houses and 1250 inhabitants. It is composed of the united parishes of Hoddam, Line, and Ecclesfechan, the latter well known for its large fairs. It is pleasantly seated on the banks of the Annan.

Hodder, a river in Yorkshire, which falls into the Ribble at Mytton.

Hoddesdon, a market-town and chapelry in the parishes of Amwell and Broxbourn, in the hundred of Hertford, Hertfordshire, standing on the river Lea, 17 miles from London, on the north road. It consists principally of one street, about ¾ mile long; containing 224 houses and 1227 inhabitants, of whom 229 were returned as employed in trade and manufacture. An excellent fountain in the middle of the town supplies it with water. In the neighbourhood is a large cotton mill. Here is a good incorporated grammar school. Its market is on Tuesday, and fair 29th June.—Salmon's Herts.

Hodgeston, a parish in the hundred of Castle Martin, Pembrokeshire, Wales, 4 miles from Pembroke, and 254 from London; containing 12 houses and 73 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Hod Hill, near Cranbourn, in Dorset, on which is an old Roman fortification in form of a D, consisting of a double rampart and fosse. In the area, which consists of several acres, are many large circles four or five yards in diameter.

Hodnet, a parish in the hundred of North Bradford, Salop, standing on the river Terne, 10 miles from Whitchurch, and 135 from London; containing 254 houses and 1386 inhabitants, of whom 119 were returned as employed in various trades. Its fairs are 4th May and 9th October, and the living is a rectory, rated at 26*l.* 10*d.*

Hodsock, a hamlet in the parish of Blyth, in the hundred of Bassetlaw, Notts, 5 miles from Worksop, and 151 from London; containing 24 houses and 157 inhabitants.

Hoe, a hamlet in the parish of East Dereham, hundred of Launditch, Norfolk, 1¼ mile from East Dereham, and 102½ from London; containing 47 houses and 234 inhabitants.

Hofton. See Hoveton, Norfolk.

Hoghton, a township in the parish and hundred of Leyland, Lancaster, 2 miles from Chorley, and 208 from London; containing 220 houses and 1301 inhabitants, of whom 900 were returned as employed chiefly in various manufactures.

Hognaston, a parish in the hundred of Wirksworth, Derby, 4 miles from Wirksworth, and 136 from London; containing 55 houses and 262 inhabitants. The church is a curacy, in the patronage of the dean of Lincoln.

Hogshaw, a hamlet in the parish of East Claydon, hundred of Ashendon, Bucks, 2 miles from Winslow, and 50 from London; containing 7 houses and 35 inhabitants.

Hognorton. See Norton, Leicester.

Hogsthorpe, a parish in the hundred of Calceworth, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 3 miles from Alford, and 140 from London; containing 87 houses and 451 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Lincoln.

Hogston, a parish in the hundred of Cotslow, Bucks, 3 miles from Winslow, and 47 from London; containing 37 houses and 179 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.*

Hogworthingham, a parish in the hundred of Hill, parts of Lindsay, Lincoln; 2 miles from Spilsby, and 136 from London; containing 63 houses and 376 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.*

Holbeach, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Elloe, parts of Holland, Lincoln, 8 miles from Spalding, and 105 from London; containing 556 houses and 2683 inhabitants, of whom 221 were returned as employed in various trades. The town is of great antiquity, but indifferently built, and is seated in the fens. The church is a Gothic building, with a lofty tower and spire. Many ruins of walls and pavements have been dug up here. The living is a vicarage, rated at 20*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of Lincoln.

Holbeach Thurn, a small hamlet to the above, seated in the marshes, about ½ mile distant.

Holbeck, a township and chapelry in Leeds liberty, west riding of York, 1 mile from Leeds, and 196 from London; containing 882 houses and 4196 inhabitants, viz. 2084 males and 2112 females, of whom 1904 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures.

Holbeton, a parish in the hundred of Ermington, Devon, 2 miles from Modbury, and 209 from London; containing 167 houses and 869 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 24*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.* and is in the patronage of the king.

Holbrook, a parish in the hundred of Samford, Suffolk, 5 miles from Ipswich, and 67 from London, near the river Stour; containing 59 houses and 447 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.*

Holcombe Burnell, a parish in the hundred of Wowford, Devon, 5 miles from Exeter, and 173 from London, near the source of the river Ken; containing 35 houses and 176 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 9*s.* 2*d.* belonging to the prebend of the same name in the cathedral of Sarum.

Holcombe Regis. See Halcombe.

Holcombe, a parish in the hundred of Kilmersdon, Somerset, 5 miles from Frome, and 110 from London; containing 81 houses and 581 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.*

Holcott, a parish in the hundred of Manshead, Bedford, 3 miles from Woburn, and 44 from London; containing 10 houses and 65 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 15*s.*

Holcott, a parish in the hundred of Hamfordshoe, Northampton, 5 miles from Northampton, and 70½ from London; containing 60 houses and 343 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 3*d.*

Holdenby, a parish in the hundred of Nobottle Grove, Northampton, 6 miles from Northampton, and 71 from London; containing 29 houses and 119 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 20*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.*

Holdenby, a township in the parish of Adlingfleet, wapentake of Osgoldness, west riding of York, 4 miles from Burton, and 167 from London; containing 27 houses and 150 inhabitants.

Holdenhurst, a township and chapelry in the parish of Christ Church, Hants, 2 miles from Christ Church, and 99½ from London; containing 107 houses and 489 inhabitants.

Holderness, the name of a wapentake in the east riding of York, being the southern point of the county from the river Hull to the Spurnhead.

Holderness, a division of the east riding of York, stretching along the coast. It is remarkable for the richness of its soil, and for its breed of horned cattle and horses.

Holdfast, a hamlet to the parish of Ripple, hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 4 miles from Tewksbury, and 108 from London; containing 13 houses and 84 inhabitants.

Holebrook, hamlet to the parish of Duffield, hundred of Appletree, Derby, 2 miles from Duffield, and 132 from London; containing 93 houses and 559 inhabitants.

Holdsworthy, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Black Torrington, Devon, 13 miles from Hatherleigh, and 214 from London; containing 192 houses and 1045 inhabitants. It is pleasantly seated between two branches of the river Tamar. Its fairs are 27th April, 10th July, and 24 October. It is a rectory, value 32*l.* 5*d.*

Holford, a parish in the hundred of Whitley, Somerset, near Bridgewater, and 130 from London; containing 29 houses and 125 inhabitants.

Holgate, a parish in the hundred of Munslow, Salop, 6 miles from Wenlock, and 143 from London; containing 35 houses and 197 inhabitants. An ancient castle formerly stood here belonging to the duke of Norfolk. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Hereford.

Holgate, a hamlet in the parish of St. Mary's, Bishop's Hill, York, in the liberties of York, ½ mile from that city, and 200 from London; containing 10 houses and 55 inhabitants.

Holker, a township in the parish of Cartmel, hundred of Lonsdale, Lancaster, 2 miles from Cartmel, and 264 from London; containing 189 houses and 1039 inhabitants, of whom 353 were returned as employed in trade and manufacture.

Holkham, a parish in the hundred of North Greenhoe, Norfolk, 2 miles from Burnham Westgate, and 123 from London; containing 102 houses and 550 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Hollacombe, a parish in the hundred of Black Torrington, Devon, 1½ mile from Holdsworthy, and 213 from London; containing 13 houses and 74 inhabitants.

Holland, the name of a division of Lincolnshire, at the southern extremity of the county, chiefly fenny land, and intersected with numerous dykes. It reaches from Wainfleet to the isle of Ely, and, to the grounds opposite Lynn in Norfolk.

Holland Great, a parish in the hundred of Tendring, Essex, 13 miles from Colchester, and 64 from London; containing 43 houses and 300 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 17*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.*

Holland Little, a hamlet to the above, 1½ mile distant, and containing 8 houses and 59 inhabitants.

Hollesley, a parish in the hundred of Wilford, Suffolk, 5 miles from Orford, and 80 from London; containing 55 houses and 461 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Hollingborne, a parish in the hundred of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 5 miles from Maidstone, and 40 from London; containing 135 houses and 730 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* with Huckin's chapel annexed, in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury.

Hollinchill, a hamlet in the parish of Rothbury in Coquetdale ward, Northumberland, near Rothbury, 306 miles from London; containing 26 houses and 127 inhabitants.

Hollingsclough, a township in the parish of Alstonfield, hundred of Totmonslow, Stafford, 8 miles from Leeke, and 162 from London; containing 126 houses and 562 inhabitants.

Hollington, a hamlet in the parish of Longford, hundred of Appletree, Derby, 6 miles from Ashborne, and 134 from London; containing 41 houses and 219 inhabitants.

Hollington, a parish in the hundred of Baldstow, rape of Hastings, Sussex, 1½ mile from Hastings, and 63 from London; containing 30 houses and 208 inhabitants. Its fair is 2d Monday in July, and it is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 2*d.*

Hollingworth, a township in the parish of Stockport, hundred of Macclesfield, Chester, 1 mile from Stockport, and 174 from London; containing 167 houses and 910 inhabitants.

Holloway Upper and Lower, 2 hamlets belonging to the parish of Islington, Middlesex, between Islington and Highgate.

Hollowell, a hamlet in the parish of Guildsborough, hundred of Guildsborough, Northampton, 8 miles from Northampton, and 73 from London; containing 42 houses and 227 inhabitants.

Hollym, a parish in the wapentake of Holderness, east riding of York, 2½ miles from Patrington, and 195 from London; containing 48 houses and 228 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, rated at 9*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.* united with Withernsea, in the patronage of the mayor and burgesses of Beverley.

Hollyhurst, a hamlet in the parish of Bulkington, in the liberties of Coventry, Warwick, 5½ miles from Coventry, and 97 from London. Population included with Bulkington.

Holme, a hamlet in the parish of Potten, hundred of Biggleswade, Bedford, 1½ mile from Potten, and 49 from London; containing 11 houses and 80 inhabitants.

Holme East, a hamlet in the parish of Wareham, hundred of Hasilor, division of Blandford, Dorset, 2 miles from Wareham, and 112 from London; containing 4 houses and 30 inhabitants.

Holme, a hamlet and chapelry to Glatton, in the hundred of Normancross, Hunts, 12 miles from Huntingdon, and 72 from London; containing 47 houses and 218 inhabitants.

Holm, a hamlet in the parish of South Runcton, hundred of Clackclose, Norfolk, 3½ miles from Downham, and 88 from London; containing 22 houses and 180 inhabitants.

Holmhale, a parish in the hundred of South Greenhoe, Norfolk, 3 miles from Swaffham, and 93 from London; containing 68 houses and 348 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 16*s.* 5*d.*

Holm, a parish in the hundred of Smithdon, Norfolk, 4 miles from Burnham, and 120 from London; containing 29 houses and 165 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Holme, a hamlet and chapelry to the parish of North Muskham, hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, standing on the river Trent, 4 miles from Newark, and 128 from London; containing 28 houses and 111 inhabitants. The chapel at this place is as large as many parish churches.

Holme, a township in the parish of Burton, Kendal ward, Westmoreland, 1½ mile from Burton, and 252 from London; containing 46 houses and 226 inhabitants.

Holmescales, a hamlet in the township of Old Hutton, in the parish of Burton, Kendal ward, Westmoreland, near the above.

Holm on the Wolds, a parish in the division of Bainton Beacon, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 8 miles from Beverley, and 190 from London; containing 22 houses and 127 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Holme on Spalding Moor, a parish in the division of Holme Beacon, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 3 miles from Market Wighton, and 188 from London; containing 183 houses and 1024 inhabitants, of whom 156 were returned as being employed in various trades. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.* in the patronage of St. John's college, Cambridge. The church stands on a high hill, in which is a bed of gypsum. Here is a beacon ready to be lighted in case of invasion, or internal commotion.

Holme Beacon, one of the divisions of the wapentake of Harthill, east riding of the county of York.

Holme, a hamlet in the parish of Pickhill, in Allertonshire, north riding of York, 14 miles from Aldborough, and 222 from London; containing 14 houses and 72 inhabitants.

Holme, a township in the parish of Almondbury, Aybrig wapentake, west riding of York, 6 miles from Huddersfield, and 182 from London; containing 55 houses and 302 inhabitants.

Holme, a parish in the Orkney Isles, on the south-east coast of Pomona; containing 702 inhabitants. The sheep farming here is barbarous in the highest degree; instead of shearing the fleece, it is pulled off the very skin, and to undergo this cruel operation they are hunted with dogs. The word Holm, which so often occurs in Scotland, generally implies a small island surrounded with perpendicular rocks.—Allison's Stat. Report.

HOLME SOUND, a beautiful frith in the Orkneys, opposite the parish of Holme, leading from the German Ocean to Stromness, in the middle of which is Lambholme Island.

HOLME-CULTRAM, or HOLME ABBEY, a parish in Allerdale ward, below Derwent, Cumberland, standing on a small creek of the Irish Sea, 6 miles from Wigton, and 311 from London; and containing 320 houses and 2188 inhabitants, of whom 240 were returned as employed in various trades. It is called Abbey Holme from a considerable abbey of Cistercian monks founded here by David king of Scotland in 1150, the abbot of which had a seat in parliament. It was formerly a much more considerable place, and was a market-town. The church is a large Gothic building. Fair 29th October. It is a vicarage, rated at 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* united with Newton Arlosh, in the patronage of the university of Oxford.—Hutchinson's Cumberland.

HOLMES FLAT AND STEEP, two small islands in Glamorganshire and Somersetshire, about 3 leagues south from Cardiff, and to the west of Weston Super Mare, in the Bristol Channel. On the former is a light-house and a good dwelling, the residence of several pilots. The island contains about 60 acres of land well cultivated. The latter is a small island between Somerset and Wales, being a rock which rises 400 feet above the level of the sea, inaccessible except by two small passages which are even, steep, and dangerous. It has a sandy and unfruitful soil. There are a few rabbits, and in the summer great numbers of sea-fowl frequent the crevices of the rock. This was the retreat of the ancient British historian, Gildas, when the country was overrun by the Picts and Scots; but being driven away by a band of pirates, he afterwards retired to Glastonbury.

HOLMER, a parish in the hundred of Grimsworth, Hereford, 2 miles from Hereford, and 137 from London; containing 58 houses and 279 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 10*s.* 8*d.* with Huntingdon chapel annexed, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Hereford.

HOLM LACY, a parish in the hundred of Webtree, Hereford, 6 miles from Hereford, and 132 from London, on the banks of the Wye; containing 47 houses and 237 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.*

HOLMPATRICK, a small island near Dublin, said to have been the residence of St. Patrick.

HOLM PIERREPOINT, a parish in the hundred of Bingham, Notts, 4 miles from Nottingham, and 121 from London; containing 28 houses and 171 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* united with Adbolton HOLMSDALE, a rough woody tract of land, about 20 miles from London, lying beneath the south-east hills of the county, and extending into Kent. It takes its name from the Holm oak which abounds here, and formerly abounded with red deer.

HOLMPTON, a parish in Holdernesse wapentake, east riding of York, 3 miles from Patrington, and 196 from London; containing 35 houses and 165 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* and the patron is the king.

HOLMSFIELD, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Dronfield, hundred of Scarsdale, Derby, 6 miles from Chesterfield, and 157 from London; containing 76 houses and 338 inhabitants.

HOLMSIDE, a hamlet in the parish of Lanchester, in Chester ward, Durham, 6 miles from Durham, and 266 from London; containing 41 houses and 179 inhabitants.

HOLNE, a parish in the hundred of Stanborough, Devon, 3 miles from Ashburton, and 194 from London; containing 59 houses and 359 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.*

HOLNEST, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Long Burton, in the hundred and division of Sherborn, Dorset, 5 miles from Sherborn, and 121 from London; containing 28 houses and 160 inhabitants.

HOLNHAM, a parish in the hundred of Aswardhurn, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 4 miles from Sleaford, and 112 from London; containing 113 houses and 518 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 3*s.* 3*d.*

HOLSDON GREEN, a hamlet in the parish of Wilsdon, Middlesex, 5 miles from London.

HOLT, a hamlet in the parish of Medborne, hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 6 miles from Market Harborough, and 87 from London; containing 10 houses and 55 inhabitants.

HOLT, a hamlet in the parish of Abkettleby, hundred of Framland, Leicester, 3 miles from Melton Mowbray, and 107 from London. Population included with Abkettleby.

HOLT, the name of a hundred in Norfolk, at the northern extremity of the county, on the coast from Blakeney to Beeston.

HOLT, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Holt, Norfolk. It is pleasantly situated on a hill, 18 miles from East Dereham, and 121 from London; and contains 212 houses and 1004 inhabitants, of whom 120 were returned as employed in various trades. The town is neatly built, and has a good sessions house, which is used for an assembly room. The poor-house is also a handsome building, and there is an excellent free-school, founded by sir John Gresham, well endowed for 30 scholars. It is situated in the market-place, and has annexed to it a scholarship and fellowship in Sydney college, Cambridge; the patronage and government of this school is in the fishmongers company of London. The surrounding scenery is remarkably pleasant, and the air particularly healthy. Its market is on Saturday, and its fairs 25th April and 25th November, for two days each. The living is a rectory, value 11*l.* 17*s.* 3*d.*—Blomefield's Norfolk.

HOLT, a parish in the hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 5 miles from Worcester, and 117 from London; containing 56 houses and 327 inhabitants. In the neighbourhood are the remains of a tower and walls, the ruins of Holt castle, formerly belonging to the Beauchamps of Holt. The church is one of the most complete remains of Saxon architecture at this time extant. It is a rectory, rated at 15*l.* 17*s.* 8*d.* with Whitley chapel annexed.

Holt, a township and chapelry in the parish of Gressford, hundred of Bromfield, Denbigh, Wales, on the banks of the Dee, 5 miles from Wrexham, and 183 from London; containing 158 houses and 804 inhabitants. Over the river is a stone bridge of 10 arches, built in 1345. The church, or chapel, is built of red stone. Here may be seen the site of Leon's castle; its moat, and several of its outworks, are observable on the opposite side of the river. It was defended by a trench cut out of the solid rock, about 50 yards wide, over which it had a draw-bridge. This was seized and garrisoned by the parliament forces in 1643, and was recovered by the royalists in 1645, and completely demolished. It was once a considerable market-town, and according to ancient custom is still governed by a mayor and aldermen, agreeably to a charter from the earl of Arundel in 1410. Its fairs are 22d June and 29th October.—Aikin's Tour in North Wales.

Holt, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Bradford, Wilts, 3½ miles from Melkshain, and 10½ from London. Noted for its mineral waters, discovered in 1718, efficacious in the scurvy and king's evil. Population returned included with Bradford.

Holtby, a small parish in Bulmer wapentake, north riding of York, 5 miles from York, and 204 from London; containing 18 houses and 117 inhabitants.

Holton Le Bickering, a parish in the hundred of Wraggoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 2 miles from Wragby, and 146 from London; containing 22 houses and 104 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.*

Holton le Clay, a parish in the hundred of Bradley Haverstoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 4 miles from Grimsby, and 166 from London; containing 31 houses and 134 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* the patron is the king.

Holton Le Moor, a parish in the hundred of Walshcroft, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 4 miles from Market Raisin, and 154 from London; containing 15 houses and 92 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.*

Holton, a parish in the hundred of Bullington, Oxford, 6 miles from Oxford, and 50 from London; containing 47 houses and 238 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 2*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.*

Holton, a parish in the hundred of Whitley, Somerset, 2 miles from Wincanton, and 110½ from London; containing 45 houses and 179 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.*

Holton, a parish in the hundred of Blything, Suffolk, 1 mile from Halesworth, and 103 from London; containing 38 houses and 328 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 17*s.* 4*d.* and the patron is the king.

Holverstone, a hamlet in the parish of Trowse Newton, hundred of Henstead, Norfolk, 1½ mile from Norwich, and 107 from London; containing 6 houses and 33 inhabitants.

Holwell, a parish in the hundred of Clifton, Bedford, 3½ miles from Hitchin, and 37½ from London; containing 20 houses and 113 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 3*s.* 7*d.*

Holwell, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Abkettleby, hundred of Framland, Leicester, 3 miles from Melton Mowbray, and 107 from London; containing 18 houses and 85 inhabitants.

Holwell, a hamlet in the parish of Broadwell, hundred of Bampton, Oxford, 2½ miles from Burford, and 71 from London; containing 14 houses and 70 inhabitants.

Holwell, a parish in the hundred of Horethorne, Somerset, 6½ miles from Beminster, and 143 from London; containing 63 houses and 293 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Holwick, a hamlet in the parish of Rumboldkirk, Gilling west wapentake, north riding of York, 10 miles from Barnard Castle, and 256 from London, on the banks of the Tees; containing 48 houses and 199 inhabitants.

Holybourn, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish, hundred, and division of Alton, Hants, 1 mile from Alton, and 46 from London; containing 53 houses and 366 inhabitants.

Holycross, a township and chapelry in the parish of St. Andrew's Pershore, hundred of Pershore, Worcester, ¼ mile from Pershore, and 103 from London; containing 256 houses and 1198 inhabitants, of whom 139 were returned as employed in various trades.

Holyhead, a sea-port, market-town, and parish in Anglesey, Wales, 298 miles from London; containing 473 houses and 2153 inhabitants, viz. 831 males and 1301 females, of whom 63 were returned as employed in trade. It stands on a peninsula, at the western extremity of the isle, and is called by the Welsh Caer. Gwyby, from St. Gybi, a holy man who lived here about the year 380. It consists principally of one long street. The chief trade and support of the town is the intercourse of passengers to and from Ireland, it being the station of the packet-boats. The church-yard is situated on a rock close to the sea at the bottom of the harbour. Three of the sides are enclosed by strong walls 17 feet high, and 6 feet thick; the fourth side having only a parapet wall. It is defended by steep rocks, and at each corner of the wall is an oval tower. The entrance is by a rude stone gate. Along the walls are two rows of round holes, about four inches in diameter, which evidently shew it to have been a fortification. The church is dedicated to St. Gybi, and is a handsome embattled edifice in the form of a cross. The inside of the porch, and the outside of the transept, are rudely ornamented with grotesque figures. Here the service is performed in Welsh, except on Fridays and the third Sunday of every month. It is said that one of the Welsh princes founded a college here about the year 580, and that St. Gybi founded a small monastery about the year 380; but some suppose the college was not founded till the beginning of the 12th century. The head of this college was called Pendas, and was one of the three spiritual lords of Anglesea. At the dissolution it became the property of the Gwynnes, till in 1648 it was settled by Thomas Gwynne, esq. on Jesus college, Oxford, for the maintenance of two fellows and as many scholars. Here is a public school, founded in 1748; the school-house is built out of part of the ruins of an ancient Gothic chapel, called Capel Llan y Dwyddel, or the Chapel of the Irishman, from being erected over the body of Lirigi, an Irish general. In 1770 a bath and assembly room was erected here. Under the mountains which overhang the town, is a large cavern in a rock supported by natural pillars, and called the Parliament-house; it is accessible only by boats, the tide running into it. At a small distance westerly is a large hill having several natural and artificial curiosities. Within half a quarter mile of the top are part of the remains of a strong wall, which seems to have been, as well as the church-yard, formed as a defence from the many incursions of the Irish. To the west-south-west of the top, and nearly under it, in a situation awfully romantic, stand the remains of a chapel. There is a wonderful view from the top of this mountain, which commands the Isle of Man, the hill of Houth, Ireland, and part of the Highlands of Scotland. The distance from hence to Dublin is about 20 leagues, and the passage in general about 12 hours. The air is clear and salubrious. On a small island, called the Salt Island, forming one side of Holyhead harbour, is a capital light-house, which is seen four leagues at sea. To the north-north-east is the Isle of Skerries, on which is also a light-house. This island is much resorted to by a curious and beautifully plumaged bird called the Puffin, which being pickled forms a very delicate dish. During the summer season there is a regular market here well supplied with all kinds of provisions and fish, both excellent in kind and reasonable. The mutton is small, but particularly well flavoured. It has a market on Saturday, and a wake or fair beginning 25th July, which lasts three days. The living is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 15*s.* in the patronage of Jesus college, Oxford.—Pennant's Tour.

Holy Island, a parish in Islandshire, Durham, 6 miles from Belford, and 331 from London; containing 136 houses and 601 inhabitants. It belongs to that detached part of Durham which lies on the north-east side of Northumberland. At the flowing of the tide it is entirely encompassed with water, and at the ebb the passage for horses and carriages from the main land, which is about two miles distant, is almost dry; but there are so many quicksands to avoid, that the distance is rendered almost double. This was anciently called Lindisfarne, from the small river Lindi, and Fahreen, a recess of the first monks of this country; whence it was called Holy Island. It is about 2½ miles long and 1½ broad. At the south-west corner of the island is the village, its inhabitants being mostly fishermen, and near it are the remains of a monastery, founded by Oswald king of Northumberland; but on account of the incursions of the Danes, they removed to Chester le Street with the body of their saint, Cuthbert, and there fixed an episcopal see; whence they finally removed to Durham. After their flight the Danes destroyed the building, since which it appears to have been partly re-erected. Various detached buildings of this monastery, of a reddish stone, are still standing; but its chief remain is the church; the main walls of which, on the north and south sides, are still standing, but much out of the perpendicular; the west end is likewise pretty entire, but the east is almost level with the ground. The castle here was, in the beginning of the civil wars, garrisoned by the king's troops; but it was afterwards taken by the parliament army. In 1715 it was attempted to be seized for the Pretender. It is now generally garrisoned by a detachment of invalids, and stands on the southernmost point, on a rock almost perpendicular nearly 60 feet high, accessible only by a narrow winding pass. It is a curacy.—Beauties of England and Wales. — Hutchinson's Durham.

Holystone. See Hallystone, Northumberland.

Hollywell, a parish in the hundred of Hurstingstone, Hunts, 2 miles from St. Ive's, and 58 from London. It is a very ancient place, and received its name from a remarkable well, anciently supposed of great sanctity. It contains 103 houses and 623 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 30*l.* 6*s.* 3*d.* united with Needingworth, in the patronage of the duke of Manchester.

Hollywell, a hamlet to Careby, in the hundred of Betisloe, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 7 miles from Stamford, and 96 from London, on the rivulet Glen; containing 15 houses and 99 inhabitants.

Hollywell, a hamlet in the parish of Earsdon, in Castleward, Northumberland, 4½ miles from North Shields on the Seaton sluice, and 284 from London; containing 25 houses and 107 inhabitants.

Hollywell, a parish in the hundred of Wootton and liberties of Oxford city, forming a part thereof; containing 129 houses and 752 inhabitants. It is a curacy, united with St. Peter's in the East.

Holywell, a market-town and parish in Flintshire, Wales, 9 miles from Mold, and 207 from London; it consists principally of one long street, and contains 1093 houses and 5267 inhabitants, viz. 2566 males and 3001 females, of whom 2643 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures. There are several lead, calamine, and copper-mines in the neighbourhood, which are worked to great advantage, as well as an extensive cotton manufactory. The parish church is a small building, having nothing remarkable or antique about it, dedicated to St. Winifrid, the curious story of whose wonderful well is related at large in the Golden Legend published in 1512. This well lies at the bottom of three high hills, called by the Welsh Trefynnon, or the Town of the Well. It is covered by a small Gothic building, said to have been erected by the countess of Richmond, mother of Henry VII.; but from the grotesque figure about it, it seems of much more ancient date. The Gothic work on the outside of this building, which forms a canopy to the well, is very handsome; in the centre is a circular shield, with a coat of arms almost defaced. The walls were formerly painted, the portrait of St. Winifrid still remaining, and there was likewise a niche for the Virgin Mary. The water is very clear, and boils up like a cauldron, the force of which turns a mill at a little distance. In 1731 a Mr. Price, then minister, pretended to have ascertained by experiment, that this spring yields 100 tons per minute; but this is erroneous. At the bottom of the well are some stones, reported to have been spotted by the blood of St. Winifrid. The well is an oblong square about 12 feet long and 7 wide; the water passes through an arch into a small square court, under which arch the Catholics swim by way of penance, and the superstitious imagine that the moss about the well was St. Winifrid's hair. Over it is a room used for a school, and in which the justices hold their quarter sessions. About a mile to the north of the town are the ruins of Basingwerk, now called Greenfield Abbey; part of the church, the refectory, and some other offices, are still remaining. It is built of a reddish grit-stone, and is supposed to have been founded by Ranulph earl of Chester about the year 1131. This abbey is said to have been inhabited about the beginning of the 18th century; but part of it has been lately pulled down for the materials. Near the southern boundaries of the monastery part of Offas Dyke is still visible, which went from hence to Chepstow. The living is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 15*s.* in the patronage of Jesus college, Oxford.

Holywood, a parish in the district of Nithsdale, shire of Dumfries, Scotland, bounded by the rivers Nith and Cluden, and containing 123 houses and 809 inhabitants. There are the remains of a druidical temple here, about 80 yards diameter, and in the church-yard are vestiges of Holywood Abbey. At this place was born Johannes de Sacro Bosco.

Homersfield, a parish in the hundred of Wangford, Suffolk, 3¼ miles from Bungay, and 103 from London; containing 40 houses and 147 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* united with Sanderoft.

Homerton, a hamlet in the parish of Hackney, hundred of Ossulton, Middlesex, and adjoining thereto. There is an academy here for Calvinistical dissenters.

Hominoton, a parish in the hundred of Cawden and Cadworth, Wilts, 3 miles from Salisbury, and 78 from London; containing 29 houses and 148 inhabitants. In the chancel of the church is a black marble monument, to the memory of G. Stanley, gent. who died 1719, aged 151 years. It is a curacy.

Homesbury Hill, in the parish of Dorking, 24 miles from London, near Boxhill, Surry. Here are the traces of a camp of about 10 acres, from which there is a most beautiful prospect over the wilds of Kent and Sussex, as far as the sea.

Honeybourne Church. See Church Honeybourne, Worcester.

Honey Church, a parish in the hundred of Black Torrington, Devon, 4 miles from Hatherleigh, and 196 from London; containing 14 houses and 66 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 7*s.* 8*d.*

Honiley, a parish in the hundred of Barlichway, Warwick, 2 miles from Kenilworth, and 101 from London; containing 13 houses and 77 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Honing, a parish in the hundred of Tunstead, Norfolk, 3 miles from North Walsham, and 121 from London; containing 44 houses and 247 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.

Honingham, a parish in the hundred of Forehoe, Norfolk, 7¼ miles from East Dereham, and 108 from London; containing 48 houses and 261 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* united with East Tudenham.

Honiton, a borough, market-town, and parish, in the hundred of Axminster, Devon, 9½ miles from Axminster, and 159¼ from London; containing 546 houses and 2577 inhabitants, viz. 1083 males and 1294 females, of whom 1250 were returned as employed in trade and manufacture. The buildings are mostly new, the town having suffered considerably by fire at different times: in 1747 three fourths of the houses in the town were entirely burnt down, notwithstanding the convenience of water at each door. In 1765, 160 houses were destroyed; and 37 more in 1790: again, in 1797 another dreadful fire broke out, which destroyed 50 dwelling-houses, and amongst others the bank. The parish church stands about ¼ mile distant from the town on a bold eminence; the chancel, which appears much more ancient than the rest of the building, is supposed to have been a chapel of mendicant friars. The nave of the church and aisles have been added by degrees. The tower is a square embattled building, 63 feet high, containing five bells, and was built by bishop Courtney in 1480. The altar-piece is of stone, and the organ gallery and skreen are finely painted and gilt, and of excellent workmanship. The parsonage-house near it is a good building, and has an extensive glebe; and near the church are stables to accommodate those who ride from the neighbouring villages to hear divine service. The church-yard is small, and adorned with eight fine spiral yews. In the town is a neat chapel, having a tower and cupola, with six bells, built of flint, with a clock and chimes, completed in 1769: it was erected by subscription, and dedicated to Allsaints, on the site of the one that formerly stood here, but which was pulled down, from its ruinous state, in 1742. Honiton is a borough by prescription, and sends two members to parliament, the right of election being in the inhabitant-housekeepers not receiving alms, whose number is about 400. The returning officer is the portreeve. The town is in a very improved state, being paved and lighted, and the houses mostly slated. Here is a well endowed free-school, and a workhouse. It is said, that the first manufacture of serge in Devon was established here; but the principal manufacture at present is that of broad lace. Honiton supplies the London market with great quantities of butter. Before the entrance of the town is a hill which commands one of the finest prospects in the kingdom. Its market is on Saturday, and its fair, the first Wednesday after July 19. The living is a rectory, rated at 40*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.* Lat. 50° 47′ 35″. Long. 3° 10′ 18″. W.—Polwhele's Devonshire.

Honsington, a parish in the hundred of Winnibreggs and Threw, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 3 miles from Grantham, and 113 from London; containing 23 houses and 106 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 5*d.*

Honsington, a parish in the hundred of Blackburn, Suffolk, 2 miles from Ixworth, and 79½ from London; containing 20 houses and 176 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* the patron is the king.

Honsington, a parish in the hundred of Kineton, Warwick, 1½ mile from Shipston on Stour, and 64½ from London; containing 52 houses and 287 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Hoo, a parish in the hundred of Loes, Suffolk, 4 miles from Framlingham, and 83 from London; containing 16 houses and 124 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.

Hoo, a parish in the hundred of Hoo, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 3 miles from Chatham, and 30 from London; containing 127 houses and 764 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 18*l.* 6*s.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Rochester.

Hoor, a parish in the hundred of Ninfield, rape of Hastings, Sussex, 4 miles from Hailsham, and 60 from London; containing 51 houses and 424 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*

Hook, a parish in the hundred of Eggarton, division of Bridport, Dorset, 4 miles from Beaminster, and 133 from London; containing 187 houses and 1094 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 9*l.* 18*s.* 11*d.*

Hook, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Kingston, Surry, 2 miles from Kingston, and 14 from London; containing 19 houses and 88 inhabitants.

Hook, a township and chapelry in the parish of Snaith, wapentake of Osgoldness, west riding of York, 1½ mile from Howden, and 179 from London, on the banks of the Ouse; containing 50 houses and 248 inhabitants.

Hook Norton. See Hod's Norton, Oxford.

Hoole, a hamlet in the parish of Guilden Sutton, hundred of Broxton, Cheshire, 2 miles from Chester, and 182 from London; containing 36 houses and 177 inhabitants.

Hoole Great, a parish in the hundred of Leyland, Lancaster, 12 miles from Wigan, and 212 from London; containing 84 houses and 417 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 14*s.*

Hoole Little, a hamlet to the above, ½ mile distant; containing 34 houses and 179 inhabitants.

Hoon, a small hamlet in the parish of Marston on Dove, hundred of Appletree, Derby, 9 miles from Derby, and 130 from London; containing only 4 houses and 41 inhabitants.

Hooton, a hamlet in the parish of Eastham, hundred of Wirrall, Chester, 8 miles from Chester, and 188 from London; containing 19 houses and 91 inhabitants.

Hooton Lovett, a hamlet in the parish of Maltby, in the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of York, 10 miles from Worksop, and 156 from London; containing 14 houses and 73 inhabitants.

Hooton Roberts, a parish in the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of York, 7½ miles from Doncaster, and 162 from London; containing 34 houses and 158 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*

Hope, a parish in the hundred of High Peake, Derby, 5 miles from Tideswell, and 165 from London; containing 76 houses and 394 inhabitants. Its fairs are 1st May and 29th September. The living is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Litchfield.

Hope, a parish in the hundred of Wolphy, Hereford, 4 miles from Leominster, and 140 from London; containing 82 houses and 420 nhabitants. It was formerly a chapelry to Leominster, but is now a separate curacy, in the patronage of the bishop of Hereford.

Hope Mansell, a parish in the hundred of Greytree, Hereford, 4 miles from Ross, and 119 from London; containing 20 houses and 92 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 5*s.* in the patronage of the king.

Hope Bagot, a parish in the hundred of Stoddesdon, Salop, 5½ miles from Ludlow, and 158 from London; containing 17 houses and 94 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Hope Bowdler, a parish in the hundred of Munslow, Salop, 1 mile from Church Stretton, and 159 from London; containing 28 houses and 130 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Hope, a small hamlet in the parish and hundred of Thornbury, Gloucester, 122 miles from London.

Hopesay, a parish in the hundred of Purslow, Salop, 8 miles from Ludlow, and 151 from London; containing 83 houses and 469 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*

Hopen, a hamlet in the parish and ward of Balmbrough, Northumberland, 12 miles from Alnwick, and 323 from London; containing 5 houses and 32 inhabitants.

Hopton, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Wirksworth, Derby, 2 miles from Wirksworth; containing 18 houses and 99 inhabitants.

Hopton Castle, a small village in the hundred of Purslow, Salop, 5 miles from Bishop's Castle, and 154 from London; containing 21 houses and 138 inhabitants. It was formerly much more considerable, and had a castle east of Clun.

Hopton Wafers, a parish in the hundred of Stoddesdon, Salop, 2 miles from Cleobury Mortimer, and 138 from London; containing 78 houses and 392 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Hopton Cangeford, a village in the hundred of Munslow, Salop, 5 miles from Ludlow, and 146 from London; containing 6 houses and 35 inhabitants.

Hopton, a hamlet in the parish of St. Mary's Stafford, hundred of Pirehill, Stafford, 2 miles from Stafford, and 142 from London; containing 65 houses and 366 inhabitants.

Hopton, a parish in the hundred of Blackburn, Suffolk, 6 miles from Ixworth, and 83 from London; containing 63 houses and 433 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Norwich.

Hopton, a parish in the hundred of Mutford and Lothingland, Suffolk, near the coast, 4½ miles from Lowestoft, and 118 from London; containing 29 houses and 202 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Hopwas, a hamlet in the parish of Tamworth, hundred of Offlow, Stafford, standing near the river Tame, 2 miles from Tamworth, and 117 from London; and containing 37 houses and 199 inhabitants.

Hopwell, a hamlet in the parish of Wirk, hundred of Morlestone and Litchurch, Derby, 6 miles from Derby, and 120 from London; containing 4 houses and 35 inhabitants.

Hopsford, a hamlet in the parish of Withibrook, hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, 5 miles from Coventry, and 90 from London. Population included with Withibrook.

Hopwood, a township in the parish of Middleton, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 8 miles from Manchester, and 188 from London; containing 156 houses and 948 inhabitants.

Horbling, a parish in the hundred of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 2 miles from Folkingham, and 107 from London; containing 74 houses and 387 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, rated at 6*l.* 16*s.* in the patronage of the bishop of Lincoln.

Horbury, a township and chapelry in the parish of Wakefield, in Aybrig wapentake, west riding of York, 2½ miles from Wakefield, on the river Calder, and 184 from London; containing 419 houses and 2161 inhabitants, of whom 716 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures.

Horderley, an extra parochial village in the hundred of Purslow, Salop, near Bishop's Castle, 158 miles from London; containing 21 houses and 138 inhabitants.

Hordle, a township and chapelry in the parish of Milford, hundred of Christchurch, New Forest division, Hants, near Christchurch bay, 2 miles from Lymington and 97 from London; containing 79 houses and 416 inhabitants.

Hordley, a parish in the hundred of Pimhill, Salop, 4 miles from Ellesmere, and 174 from London; containing 39 houses and 247 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 3*l.* 9*s.* 2*d.*

Horethorne, the name of a hundred in Somerset, at the south-eastern extremity of the county and borders of Dorsetshire.

Horfield, a parish in the hundred of Berkley, Gloucester, 2¾ miles from Bristol, and 115 from London; containing 19 houses and 119 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the bishop of Bristol.

Horham, a parish in the hundred of Hoxne, Suffolk, 3½ miles from Eye, and 87 from London; containing 63 houses and 334 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 7*s.* 1*d.*

Horkesley Great, a parish in the hundred of Lexden, Essex, standing near the river Stour, 5 miles from Colchester, and 56 from London; containing 88 houses and 482 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.*

Horkesley Little, a parish in the same hundred and near the above; containing 53 houses and 201 inhabitants. Here was formerly a priory of Cluniac monks. It is a curacy.

Horkstow, a parish in the hundred of Yarborough, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 2 miles from Barton, and 165 from London; containing 28 houses and 144 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 4*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.*

Horley, a parish in the hundred of Bloxham, Oxford, 3 miles from Banbury, and 78 from London; containing 60 houses and 269 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* united with Hornton.

Horley, a parish in the hundred of Reigate, Surry, 6 miles from Reigate, and 27 from London; containing 140 houses and 871 inhabitants.

Hormead Great, a parish in the hundred of Edwintree, Herts, 4 miles from Standon, and 30 from London; containing 94 houses and 467 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of St. John's college, Cambridge.

Hormead Little, a parish also near the above, containing 21 houses and 103 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 10*l.* and is in the patronage of St. John's college, Cambridge.

Hormer, the name of a hundred in Berkshire, being the northern point of the county, bounded on the east, north, and west, by the Isis, which separates it from Oxfordshire.

Horn, a hamlet in the parish of Exton, hundred of Alstoe, Rutland, 6 miles from Stamford, and 92 from London; containing 2 houses and 14 inhabitants.

Hornblotон, a parish in the hundred of Whitestone, Somerset, 3 miles from Castle Carey, and 119 from London; containing 16 houses and 96 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 2*s.* 1*d.*

Hornby, a market-town and chapelry in the parish of Melling, hundred of Lonsdale, Lancaster, 10 miles from Kirby Lonsdale, and 249½ from London; containing 86 houses and 414 inhabitants. It is seated on the river Loyne, over which it has a handsome stone bridge of three arches. The church is a Gothic structure, with an octagonal tower. On an eminence, about ½ mile from the town, stands a castle, anciently belonging to the barons Monteagle. It has a large square tower, and another which is round, with a gilt eagle on the top, measuring six feet six inches from wing to wing. It has undergone a complete repair, and is now the residence of J. Marsden, esq. It has a market every other Tuesday for cattle, and a fair 30th July for two days. Here is a large cotton manufactory.

Hornby, a township in the parish of Great Smeeton, in the wapentake of Allertonshire, north riding of York, 7 miles from North Allerton, and 232 from London; containing 52 houses and 228 inhabitants.

Hornby, a parish in Hang East wapentake, north riding of York, 4 miles from Bedale, and 227 from London; containing 18 houses and 111 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Horncastle, the name of a hundred in the division of Lindsay, Lincolnshire, near the center of the county, and north of the fens.

Horncastle, a market-town and parish in Horncastle Soke, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 9 miles from Tattershall, and 136 from London. It stands on the river Bane in a valley, and is almost surrounded with water. It contains 403 houses and 2015 inhabitants, of whom 365 were returned as employed in trade and manufacture, but principally in that of tanning hides. It is a soke of 15 lordships, several of them having chapels. The river Bane was made navigable from hence to the Witham in 1792. A public dispensary was founded here by subscription in 1789, and is under admirable management. Here is also a good grammar and charity school. This is supposed to have been the Castra Hyberna of the Romans, and the walls which encompassed it are in many places visible. The town being surrounded with open fields, is rendered healthy notwithstanding its low situation, and abounds with excellent spring water; one spring is medicinal. Its market on Saturday is well supplied, and its fairs are 22d June, 21st August, and 29th October, chiefly for horses and cattle. The living is a vicarage, rated at 14*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Carlisle.—Howlett's Lincolnshire.

Hornchurch, a parish in the hundred of Romford, Essex, 14 miles from London; containing 248 houses and 1331 inhabitants, of whom 126 were returned as being employed in trade, &c. It has a church, the east end of which was formerly ornamented with a large pair of horns. It is a vicarage, without institution, in the patronage of New college, Oxford.

Horncliff, a township to the parish of Norham, in Norhamshire, Durham, on the banks of the Tweed, 4 miles from Berwick, and 337 from London; containing 69 houses and 342 inhabitants.

Horndean, a hamlet in Blendworth, hundred of Finch Dean, Hants, 7½ miles from Petersfield, on the road to Portsmouth, and 62 from London. Population included with Blendworth.

Horndon East, a parish in the hundred of Barnstaple, Essex, 3 miles from Billericay, and 22 from London; containing 51 houses and 303 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.*

Horndon West, a hamlet to the above, ¾ mile distant; containing 7 houses and 51 inhabitants.

Horndon on the Hill, a parish in the same hundred, Essex, so called from its situation to distinguish it from the other two; it lies 4 miles south of East Horndon, and 24 from London; and contains 64 houses and 359 inhabitants. It has a fair 29th June. It is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of St. Paul's.

Horne, a parish in the hundred of Tandridge, Surry, 5 miles from Godstone, and 24 from London; containing 86 houses and 476 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 17*s.* 11*d.*

HORNING, a parish in the hundred of Tunstead, Norfolk, 2½ miles from North Walsham, and 122 from London; containing 72 houses and 361 inhabitants. King Canute endowed an abbey of Benedictines here, whose superior had a seat in parliament. Its fair is on the first Monday after 2d August; and the living is a vicarage, rated at 8*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Norwich.

HORNINGHOLD, a parish in the hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 7 miles from Uppingham, and 97 from London; containing 21 houses and 76 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* united with Blaston.

HORNINGLOW, a hamlet in the parish of Burton, hundred of Offlow, Stafford, 2 miles from Burton on Trent, and 129 from London; containing 47 houses and 272 inhabitants.

HORNINGSHAM, a parish in the hundred of Heytesbury, Wilts, 6 miles from Warminster, and 102 from London; containing 200 houses and 1030 inhabitants, of whom 418 were returned as employed in trade and manufacture. The living is a prebend, belonging to the dean of Salisbury.

HORNINGSHEATH GREAT AND LITTLE, two united parishes in the hundred of Thingoe, Suffolk, 2 miles from Bury St. Edmond's, and 75 from London; containing 97 houses and 543 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 17*s.* 8*d.*

HORNINGSHED, a parish in the hundred of Flendish, Cambridge, 5 miles from Cambridge, and 55 from London; containing 39 houses and 293 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of St. John's college, Cambridge.

HORNINGTOFT, a parish in the hundred of Launditch, Norfolk, 3 miles from Fakenham, and 105 from London; containing 32 houses and 197 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 17*s.* 8*d.*

HORN LANE, a hamlet in the parish of Acton, Middlesex, hundred of Ossulton, adjoining to Acton, 5 miles from London; containing 4 houses and 22 inhabitants. It leads to Acton Wells, and to the Mitre tavern on the Paddington canal; and is named from its ancient embankment, which, till within these few years, was composed of layers of bullocks horns and earth.

HORNSEY, a parish in the hundred of Ossulton, Middlesex, 5 miles from London. It was formerly called Haringay, and the bishop of London had an elegant palace here, out of part of the materials of which, it is said, the present church was built. It contains 429 houses and 2716 inhabitants, of whom 188 were returned as employed in various trades. It is a long straggling place, situated in a low valley, but extremely pleasant, having the New River winding through it, and is a favourite retreat with the citizens of the metropolis. Between this place and Highbury Barn is a small coppice, called Hornsey Wood. The living is a rectory, rated at 22*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of London.—Lysons's Environs of London.

HORNSEY, or HORNSEA, a market-town and parish in the division of Holderness, east riding of York, 12 miles from Beverley, and 192½ from London; containing 126 houses and 533 inhabitants. It stands near a lake of fresh water well stored with fish. The church is hardly a mile from the sea, although it is recorded as having formerly stood at a considerable distance. The sea here is making almost daily encroachments. Some years since, near a whole street, called Hornsey beck, was washed away. Amber is sometimes found on the coast. Its market is on Monday, and its fairs 12th August and 17th December. The living is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* united with Riston rectory, in the patronage of the king.

HORNTON, a parish united with Horley, in the hundred of Blexham, Oxford, 4 miles from Banbury, and 79 from London; containing 99 houses and 485 inhabitants.

HORSEBRIDGE, a hamlet in the parish of Henfield, hundred of Tipnoak, rape of Bramber, Sussex, 12 miles from Horsham, and 47 from London. Population included with Henfield. Its fair is 9th May.

HORSEHEATH, a parish in the hundred of Chilford, Cambridge, 3½ miles from Linton, and 51 from London; containing 50 houses and 342 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the governors of the Charter-house.

HORSEL, a parish in the hundred of Godley and Chertsey, Surry, 14 miles from Kingston, and 26 from London; containing 84 houses and 493 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HORSELEY, a parish in the hundred of Longtrees, Gloucester, 3 miles from Minchinghampton, and 100½ from London. The church is a large building, with a handsome tower at the west end. On the north side is a small aisle, called St. George's chapel. Here formerly stood a priory, the vestiges of its chapel being still observable near the church. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 11*s.* 5*d.*

HORSELEY, a hamlet in the parish of Ovingham, in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 7 miles from Newcastle, and 283 from London; containing 46 houses and 200 inhabitants.

HORSEPATH, a parish in the hundred of Bullington, Oxford, 4 miles from Oxford, and 51½ from London; containing 47 houses and 205 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HORSEY ISLAND, formed by an inlet of the sea, on the coast of Essex, opposite Walton lights, near Kirby and Walton, and 4 miles from Harwich; abounding with game.

HORSEY, a parish in the hundred of Happing, Norfolk, 17 miles from Norwich, and 126 from London, near Winterton Ness; containing only 10 houses and 58 inhabitants. It has no church, Horsford, a parish in the hundred of Taverham, Norfolk, 4 miles from Norwich, and 114 from London; containing 59 houses and 470 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 3*s.* 2*d.*

Horsford, or Horsforth, a township and chapelry in the parish of Guiseley, in Skyrack wapentake, west riding of York, 5 miles from Leeds, and 196 from London; containing 42 houses and 2099 inhabitants, being 1045 males and 1054 females, of whom 492 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures. It stands near the river Aire, over which it has a bridge to Calverley.

Horsham, a borough, market-town, and parish, in the hundred of East Easewrith, rape of Bramber, Sussex, 11¼ miles from Dorking, and 36 from London; containing 566 houses and 3204 inhabitants, viz. 1526 males and 1678 females, of whom 1973 were returned as employed in various trades, &c. It is said to have derived its name from Horsa, the brother of Hengist the Saxon, who is supposed to have first built the town. It is a borough by prescription, and is governed by a steward, two bailiffs, and two constables, elected at the court leet of the lord of the manor; and has returned two members to parliament ever since the reign of Edward I. The right of election is in all such persons as possess an estate of inheritance, or for life, in burgage houses, or burgage lands, lying within the borough. The number of burgage holders is 25. The church is ancient. The town stands on the river Arun. Here are several meeting-houses, a good free school, and many charitable gifts to the poor parishioners. A very commodious new county gaol has of late years been erected here, built partly of stone from the neighbourhood. The assizes are frequently held here. It has also an established bank. Its market on Saturday is well supplied with poultry, which is bought up for the supply of the London market; and the last Tuesday in every month it has a good cattle market. Its fairs are the Monday before Whit-Sunday, 18th July and Saturday following, and 16th and 27th November. The living is a vicarage, value 25*l.* in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury. Lat. 51. 3. 36. Long. 0. 19. 42. W.

Horsham St. Faith's, a parish in the hundred of Taverham, Norfolk, lies in the road from Norwich to Cromer, 4 miles from Norwich, and 113½ from London; containing 189 houses and 883 inhabitants. This place is particularly noted for its large cattle fair on 20th October. It had formerly a priory of black monks. It is a curacy.

Horsingdon, a parish in the hundred of Aylesbury, Bucks, 1 mile from Princes Risborough, and 37 from London; containing 9 houses and 50 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 17*s.*

Horsington, a parish in the hundred of Gartree, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 2 miles from Horncastle, and 141 from London; containing 32 houses and 183 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 9*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of Magdalen college, Oxford.

Horsington, a parish in the hundred of Horethorne, Somerset, 4 miles from Wincanton, and 112 from London; containing 135 houses and 833 inhabitants.

Horsley, a parish in the hundred of Morleston and Litchureh, Derby, 5 miles from Derby, and 131 from London; containing 106 houses and 551 inhabitants, exclusive of the adjoining hamlet of Horsley Woodhouse, which contains 103 houses and 551 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.* in the patronage of the earl of Chesterfield.

Horsley East, a parish in the hundred of Woking, Surry, 10 miles from Ewell, and 23 from London; containing 31 houses and 223 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 12*l.* 16*s.* 5*d.* in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury.

Horsley West, a parish in the same hundred, 1 mile distant from the above; containing 98 houses and 495 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 22*l.* 17*s.* 1*d.*

Horsley. See Horkesley, Gloucester.

Horsmondrn, a parish in the hundred of Bampfield, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 10 miles from Tunbridge, and 40 from London; containing 124 houses and 852 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 26*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.*

Horstead, a parish in the hundred of Taverham, Norfolk, 6 miles from Norwich, and 115 from London; containing 60 houses and 370 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 10*s.* and in the patronage of King's college, Cambridge.

Horstead Keynes, a parish in the hundred of Rushmonden, rape of Pevensey, Sussex, 3 miles from Uckfield, and 43¾ from London; containing 88 houses and 591 inhabitants. Its fairs are 27th May and 12th September. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Horstead Little, a parish in the same hundred, Sussex, ¼ mile distant from the above; containing 25 houses and 207 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.*

Horton, a hamlet in the parish of Cheddington, hundred of Cotslow, Bucks, 2 miles from Ivinghoe, and 34 from London; containing 9 houses and 44 inhabitants.

Horton, a parish in the hundred of Stoke, Bucks, 1 mile from Colnbrook, and 17¼ from London; containing 125 houses and 647 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 22*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.*

Horton, a hamlet in the parish of Malpas, hundred of Broxton, Chester, 2 miles from Malpas, and 167 from London; containing 19 houses and 111 inhabitants.

Horton, a parish in the hundred of Bradbury, division of Shaston, Dorset, 6 miles from Ringwood, and 96 from London; containing 65 houses and 308 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 13*s.* 10*d.*

Horton, a parish in the hundred of Grumbalds Ash, Gloucester, 2¼ miles from Chipping Sodbury, and 110 from London; containing 65 houses and 366 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 16*l.*

HORTON, a parish in the hundred of Axton, lathe of Sutton at hone, Kent, 2½ miles from Dartford, and 17 from London; containing 78 houses and 356 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 7*l.* 10*s.* 8*l.* in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury.

HORTON, a parish in the hundred of Wymersley, Northampton, 4½ miles from Northampton, and 60½ from London; containing 13 houses and 79 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 17*s.* 1*d.* and the patron is the king.

HORTON, a parish in Castle ward, Northumberland, 5 miles from Morpeth, and 286 from London; containing 24 houses and 113 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HORTON GRANGE, a hamlet in the parish of Ponteland, in Castle ward, Northumberland, 7 miles from Newcastle, and 283 from London; containing 11 houses and 62 inhabitants.

HORTON, a township and chapelry in the parish of Bradford, in Morley wapentake, west riding of York, 2 miles from Bradford, and 193 from London; containing 820 houses and 3459 inhabitants, viz. 1527 males and 1932 females, of whom 655 were returned as employed in trade and manufacture.

HORTON, a hamlet in the parish of Gisburn, in the wapentake of Staincliff and Ewcross, west riding of York, 9 miles from Skipton, and 210 from London; containing 27 houses and 114 inhabitants.

HORTON, a township in the parish of Ribblesdale, in the same wapentake, 4 miles from Settle, and 236 from London; containing 116 houses and 570 inhabitants.

HORTON, a parish in the hundred of Totmonslow, Stafford, 2¼ miles from Leeke, and 156 from London; containing 145 houses and 752 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HORWICH, a township and chapelry in the parish of Dean, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 5 miles from Bolton, and 201 from London; containing 253 houses and 1268 inhabitants, of whom 622 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures.

HOSE, a parish in the hundred of Framland, Leicester, 6 miles from Melton Mowbray, and 110 from London; containing 49 houses and 264 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HOTHAM, a parish in the division of Beacon Hunsley, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 2½ miles from South Cave, and 189 from London; containing 55 houses and 250 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 10*l.* 7*d.* and the patron is the king.

HOTHLEY EAST, a parish in the hundred of Shiplake, rape of Pevensey, Sussex, 4 miles from Hailsham, and 52 from London; containing 56 houses and 395 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 6*s.* 3*d.*

HOTHLEY WEST, a parish in the hundred of Street, rape of Lewes, Sussex, 3 miles from East Grinstead, and 31 from London; containing 113 houses and 294 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 6*s.*

HOTHORPE, a hamlet in the parish of Marston Trussell, in the hundred of Rothwell, Northampton, 3 miles from Market Harborough, and 80 from London; containing 9 houses and 44 inhabitants.

HOTON, a hamlet in the parish of Prestwold, hundred of East Goscote, Leicester, 3 miles from Loughborough, and 111 from London; containing 52 houses and 294 inhabitants.

HOTTON PAGNAL, a parish in the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of York, 6 miles from Doncaster, and 168 from London; containing 70 houses and 359 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HOUGH, a parish in the hundred of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 6 miles from Grantham, and 117 from London; containing 68 houses and 385 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 15*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* and the patron is the king.

HOUGH, a hamlet in the parish of Wybunbury, hundred of Nantwich, Chester, 3 miles from Nantwich, and 151 from London; containing 31 houses and 206 inhabitants.

HOUGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Lovedon, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 3 miles from Grantham, and 116 from London; containing 39 houses and 175 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 33*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* united with Marston.

HOUGHTON CONQUEST, a parish in the hundred of Redborn Stoke, Bedford, 2 miles from Ampthill, and 47 from London; containing 100 houses and 507 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 15*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of St. John's college, Cambridge, united with the following parish.

HOUGHTON REGIS, a parish in the hundred of Manshead, Bedford, 2 miles from Dunstable, and 35 from London; containing 130 houses. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.* united with the above.

HOUGHTON, a hamlet in the parish of Stanwix in Eskdale ward, Cumberland, 1½ mile from Carlise, and 305 from London; containing 52 houses and 226 inhabitants.

HOUGHTON LE SIDE, a hamlet in the parish of Gainford, in Darlington ward, Durham, 3 miles from Darlington, and 246 from London; containing 25 houses and 102 inhabitants.

HOUGHTON LE SPRING, a parish in Easington ward, Durham, 6½ miles from Durham, and 266 from London; containing 155 houses and 996 inhabitants. There is a well-endowed grammar school here, founded by a rector of the parish, and the living is one of the richest in the county. It is a rectory, rated at 124*l.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of Durham, the real value being upwards of 1200*l.* per annum.

HOUGHTON, a parish in the hundred of Hurstingstone, Hunts, 3 miles from Huntingdon, and 60 from London; containing 44 houses and 306 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 34*l.* 17*s.* 8*d.* united with Wyton.

Houghton, a township in the parish of Manchester, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, near Manchester, 180 miles from London; containing 198 houses and 1159 inhabitants, of whom 470 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures.

Houghton, a hamlet in the parish of Winwick, hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 2 miles from Warrington, and 190 from London; containing 46 houses and 295 inhabitants.

Houghton on the Hill, a parish in the hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 6 miles from Leicester, and 91 from London; containing 72 houses and 299 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 16*l.* 1*s.*

Houghton, a parish in the hundred of Gallow, Norfolk, 3 miles from Fakenham, and 109 from London; containing 18 houses and 198 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.*

Houghton, a parish in the hundred of North Greenhoe, Norfolk, 1 mile from North Walsingham, and 112 from London; containing 25 houses and 190 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.*

Houghton, another parish also in the hundred of South Greenhoe, Norfolk, 3 miles from Swaffham, and 92 from London; containing only 4 houses and 42 inhabitants. The living is united with North Pickenham, and is a rectory, value 4*l.* 18*s.* 9*d.*

Houghton Great, a parish in the hundred of Wymersley, Northampton, 3 miles from Northampton, and 62 from London, near the river Nen, containing 48 houses and 214 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 22*l.*

Houghton Little, a parish in the same hundred, united with Brayfield, ¼ mile distant from the above; containing 75 houses and 389 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, rated at 6*l.* 9*s.* 2*d.*

Houghton Long, a parish in Bambrough ward, Northumberland, 3 miles from Alnwick, and 313 from London; containing 83 houses and 371 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Houghton Little, a hamlet in the parish of Great Houghton, in Bambrough ward, Northumberland, 3 miles from Alnwick, and 314 from London; containing 17 houses and 73 inhabitants.

Houghton, a parish in the hundred of King's Somborne, division of Andover, Hants, 1½ mile from Stockbridge, and 67½ from London; containing 53 houses and 340 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 28*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of Winchester.

Houghton Drayton, a tything in the above parish, ½ mile distant, and 2 from Stockbridge; containing 40 houses and 304 inhabitants.

Houghton, a parish in the hundred of Cuttlestone, Stafford, 4 miles from Penkridge, and 132 from London; containing 89 houses and 437 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Houghton Great, a hamlet in the parish of Darfield, in the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of York, 4 miles from Barnsley, and 166 from London; containing 41 houses and 257 inhabitants.

Houghton Little, a hamlet also in the same parish, ½ mile distant, containing 25 houses and 128 inhabitants.

Hound, a parish in the hundred of Mansbridge, Fawley division, Hants, 3 miles from Southampton, and 78 from London; containing 41 houses and 274 inhabitants. This parish is very extensive; it contains the majestic ruins of Netley Abbey, once the glory of Hampshire. The church is a poor, solitary building. The living is a vicarage, rated at 5*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.* with the chapels of Bursledon and Hamble annexed, in the patronage of Winchester college.

Houndsborough, the name of a hundred in Somerset, towards the southern extremity of the county, lying between Crewkerne and Yeovil.

Hounslow, a town standing in the parishes of Isleworth and Heston, in the hundred of Ossulton, Middlesex, 10 miles from London. It is situated at the edge of the heath which bears its name, on a branch of the Colne. The south side belongs to Isleworth, and the north, which includes the chapel, to Heston, in which the population was included in the government returns. On the Heath are many vestiges of ancient encampments; the parliament army was encamped here in 1647, and in 1686 James II. encamped here after the suppression of the duke of Monmouth's rebellion. Here are some newly-erected barracks for horse soldiers. About the middle of the Heath are powder mills, and not far distant are some copper mills.

House, a small island in Shetland, united by a bridge to the isle of Barra; containing about 150 inhabitants.

Housham, a hamlet in the parish of North Kelsey, hundred of Yarborough, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 3 miles from Caister, and 157 from London; containing 19 houses and 99 inhabitants.

Hove, a parish in the hundred of Preston, rape of Lewes, Sussex, standing on the banks of the sea, about ½ mile from Brighton; containing 18 houses and 101 inhabitants. Here of late bathing machines have been established, and a few houses opened for lodgings during the season. A little to the northwest lies the parish of Aldrington, in which there is not a single dwelling. The church is a prebendary.

Hoveringham, a parish in the hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, 5 miles from Bingham, and 129 from London; containing 53 houses and 324 inhabitants. It is a curacy belonging to Trinity college, Cambridge. There is a ferry over the Trent which is navigable here, and for several miles above.

Hoveton St. John's and St. Peter's, 2 small parishes in the hundred of Tunstead, Norfolk, about ¼ mile distant, 8 miles from Norwich, and 117 from London; containing 40 houses and 300 inhabitants. The curacies are united, in the patronage of the bishop of Norwich.

Hovingham, a parish in Rydall division, north riding of York, 6 miles from Malton, 17 from York, and 217 from London; containing 110 houses and 495 inhabitants. This was formerly a market-town. Several Roman antiquities have been dug up in the neighbourhood. It is a curacy.

How, a hamlet in the parish of Bickhill, in Hatlikeld wapentake, north riding of York, 12 miles from Aldborough, and 220 from London; containing 8 houses and 24 inhabitants.

Howsound, a township in the parish of Castlesowerby, Leath ward, Cumberland, 9 miles from Penrith, and 292 from London; containing 44 houses and 254 inhabitants.

How Caple, a parish united with Hope Sollers, in the hundred of Greytree, Hereford, on the banks of the Wye, 4½ miles from Ross, and 125 from London.

Howden, anciently called Hoveden, a market-town in the division of Howdenshire, to which it gives name, in the east riding of the county of York, 20 miles from York, 25 from Hull, and 184 from London. It stands about 1 mile from the river Ouse, and 4 from the Derwent, and contains 313 houses and 1552 inhabitants, of whom 221 were returned as employed in various trades. In the reign of Edward the Confessor this town, with the church and lands round it, belonged to the monastery of Peterborough; but being wrested from it, and in the king's hands, William the Conqueror gave them to the bishop of Durham, who soon after conferred the church on the monks of Durham; but retained the manor, which was settled on the see, and yet belongs to it. The bishops of Durham afterwards had a palace at this town, in which some of them exchanged their temporal for an eternal habitation, particularly Hugh Pudsey, who died here in 1195, Walter de Kirkham in 1260, and Walter de Skirlaw in 1405. The bowels of bishop Kirkham are interred in the church, near the north west pillar of the tower, under a coffin-shaped stone raised above the floor, on which is a crozier, and round the edge the following inscription: "Hic requiescunt viscera Walteri de Kirkham." This palace was the favourite of several of the bishops; bishop Hatfield resided here, and bishop Langley, the successor of Skirlaw, made great improvements in it; he built the west gate, over which are his arms, and some good rooms adjoining. Le land describes this palace as being built partly of timber, and partly of stone and brick. A large portion of it having been destroyed, what remains is now occupied as a farmhouse. Near it is a long range of granaries, and the ruins of several large buildings, with the remains of the ribs and groinings of an extensive vault. It appears from Madox's History of the Exchequer, that king Edward II. was on a visit to the bishop of Durham at this town, from his writing a letter, dated from Howden, June 12, 1312, and addressed to the treasurer and barons of the Exchequer, commanding them to raise certain sums of money for the support of his household. In 1346 Bishop Hatfield founded a college at Oxford, which has been since refounded by sir Thomas Pope, under the name of Trinity college, and instituted therein eight scholarships, two of which he appropriated for the use of students who should belong to this town, or the division of Howdenshire. King Henry III. granted the bishops of Durham the privilege of having within this manor the goods of all persons who died felo de se, of wrecks cast upon the shores of the river Ouse, of tollage and lastage, of having a clerk of the market, and a coroner, the power of executing writs, &c. Bishop Nevil appointed justices of the peace in Howdenshire. The town of Howden is not unpleasantly situated, and has of late years been greatly improved, as well in buildings, of which there are several good houses, as in the paving of the streets, which are inferior to those of few towns. The roads have been repaired at a great expence, and are in a good state. In the market-place stands a large building, called Moot Hall, from the Saxon Gerriot-heal, the council-house, or place for keeping courts, in which the bishop of Durham, as lord of the manor, holds four copyhold courts in the year, for the admission of surrenders, and calling the copyhold suitors; two frechold courts; and a court baron every three weeks, for causes where the value or matter in dispute is under 40*s*. He is also obliged to maintain a bull-ring in the market-place, and to find the necessary ropes for securing the animal at every bull-baiting here. There is a large workhouse built in the year 1791, principally by subscription, in which are generally between 20 and 30 paupers, who are maintained and clothed at an expence of about 300*l*. per annum. The master receives the benefit of their earnings, which are small, the paupers being chiefly old and infirm people. The old church, which is mentioned in the Domesday survey, appears to have been taken down, and the present one built partly from the materials of the former; it was at first a large rectory, but about 1265, a bull was obtained from the pope for the appropriation of Howden church for an addition of 10 monks; but the prior of Durham, at a considerable expence, procured the appointment to be converted into prebends; and, in 1287, the archbishop of York made his ordination, that it should be a collegiate church of five prebends (a sixth being afterwards added), each of them to maintain a priest and clerk in holy orders, and to administer according to the custom of the church of York. This college was dissolved by king Edward VI. in 1547, and its extensive revenues becoming vested in the crown, were granted in 1538 by queen Elizabeth to Edward Frost and John Walker, and their assigns for ever. The church is a large building in the form of a cross, erected in the first period of the pointed arch style, except the chancel, which is of a more recent date. The tower, which is square and finely proportioned, rises from the centre, and was built about 1390, under the auspices of bishop Walter Skirlaw; and it has been stated by various authors to have been built for the purpose of the inhabitants taking refuge in it, in case of inundations of the rivers Ouse and Derwent, which appear to have been in those days very frequent. Bishop Skirlaw also expended great sums in the reparation of this church, and in building the chapter-house, which is one of the finest specimens of the pointed-arch style of that period now in England, but unhappily in ruins. It is of eight equal sides, and contains 30 seats, four on each side, except the north, in which is the door way, which occupies the space of two. The seats are separated by clustered pilasters of various mombers, very small and extremely delicate, having foliated capitals of pierced work, from which rises rich tabernacle work, ornamenting a pointed arch; the seats are canopied, in imitation of a groined and ribbed arch, terminating in a knot in the centre, and the whole of the back of the seats, up to the canopies, are carved in rose-work. There are seven large windows, each under-pointed arches, adorned with tracery; the springing of the groins and rib8 of a vaulted roof also remaining. Above the door are niches for statues, canopied and garnished with tabernacle work, two for superior personages in the centre, and two smaller on each side. These close up the space which should have received the eighth window, if the chapter-house had been a detached building: behind them are the chambers in which were deposited the chapter records. Had the parish, instead of erecting a clumsy vestry-room at a great expence, laid out the same money in repairing this elegant building, and appropriated it to the same use, they would have demonstrated their taste to futurity, and preserved the finest monument of antiquity in this part of the kingdom. The chancel, though now completely in ruins, still exhibits the grandeur of its earlier days; the springing of the groined arches of the roof remain, and the east end is remarkably beautiful, containing a great number of niches, and a few statues. In a small chapel, which has lately been repaired at the expence of Philip Saltmarsh, of Saltmarsh, esq. called Metham's Chantry, and in which the families of Metham (now extinct) and Saltmarsh have their burial-place, are two effigies, representing a knight and his wife, of the family of Metham, lying cross-legged; around the sides of the monument are represented twelve small human figures, some having books in their hands, others scrolls, and others birds. On the floor lies an effigy of one of the Saltmarshes, cross-legged, in mail, his feet resting on a lion. This church formerly boasted of its organ, but a party of the commonwealth soldiers, marching from Hull to Wrepie castle, about four miles distant, pulled down the organ and broke it to pieces, playing in scornful imitation on its broken pipes. This town gave birth to the celebrated historian Roger de Hoveden, who was chaplain to king Henry II. His history begins with the year 732, and comes down to the reign of king John. In 1291, king Edward I. is said to have caused diligent search to be made in all the libraries in England for Hoveden's History, to adjust the dispute about the homage due from the crown of Scotland. This History was published in folio by Sir Henry Savil, being printed at Frankfort in 1601. Dr. Dodgson, the late bishop of Elphin in Ireland, was born at Howden. Several persons have assumed a local surname from this place, and Leland observes, that John de Hoveden, who was called a saint, was one of the first prebendaries here; another John de Hoveden was representative in five parliaments for the city of York. In the year 1200, king John granted to Philip de Poicton, bishop of Durham, a fair to be held annually at this town, on the day of St. Maurice, which was confirmed by charter to bishop Thomas Langley by Henry IV. in 1407, and is the fair now held on the 2d of October. This fair, in the 17th century, was frequented by the great tradesmen from London, and its duration was for nine or ten days, and the people of the town and adjacent neighbourhood usually bought of these merchants such a quantity of the different sorts of articles for household use, as served them in several cases the whole year; but it is now dwindled into a time of feasting. On the 25th of September commences the greatest horse fair in the kingdom, which continues till the 3d of October. There are also fairs for cattle on the second Tuesday in January, O. S. Tuesday before April 5, Saturday before May-day, O. S. and the second Tuesday in July, O. S. but they are all thinly attended. The market is on Saturday, and is plentifully supplied with provisions of every description: sea-fish is brought from Flamborough, but though there are great numbers of salmon caught in the river Ouse, yet that fish is as scarce as if it was not known here, all that are caught being sent to London. The living is a perpetual curacy, though the two last incumbents have been instituted as vicars, and is in the patronage of the king, discharged from the payment of tenths. A peal of eight bells was cast for this church in 1775. There are two chapels of ease to the mother-church, one at Barmly and the other at Laxton. In the town is a meeting-house for a congregation of independents, and another for the methodists.—Savage's Hist. of Howden Church, and Hutchinson's Durham.

Howden-dike, a hamlet in the parish of Howden, east riding of York, and 1 mile distant from that town, standing on the banks of the river Ouse, where goods are shipped to and from London, Hull, Gainsborough, &c. Here is an ancient ferry over the river to Hook. The population is included in Kilpin.

Howden Pans, a township in the parish of Wallsend, in Castle ward, Northumberland, on the banks of the Tyne, 5 miles from Newcastle, and 281 from London; containing 74 houses and 615 inhabitants.

Howdenshire, the name of a wapentake in the east riding of York, lying on the north bank of the river Ouse.

Howe, a parish in the hundred of Clavering, Norfolk, 3 miles from Beccles, and 112 from London; containing 13 houses and 87 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Houston, a parish united with Killallan, in the shire of Renfrew, Scotland, 4 miles from Paisley, and 6 from Glasgow; containing, as united, 207 houses and 1891 inhabitants, of whom 588 were returned as chiefly employed in various manufactures and an extensive bleaching ground.

Howell, a parish in the hundred of Aswardhurn, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 3 miles from Sleaford, and 114 from London; containing 11 houses and 75 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 10*s.*

Howick, a hamlet in the parish of Penwortham, hundred of Leyland, Lancaster, 2 miles from Preston, and 214 from London; containing 22 houses and 112 inhabitants.

Howick, a hamlet to Chepstow, in the hundred of Caldicott, Monmouth, 1 mile from Chepstow, and 131 from London; containing 3 houses and 25 inhabitants.

Howick, a parish in Bambrough ward, Northumberland, 5 miles from Alnwick, and 315 from London; containing 38 houses and 184 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 36*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* annexed to the archdeaconry of Northumberland.

Howsham, a hamlet in the parish of Scrayingham, wapentake of Buckrose, east riding of York, 10 miles from York, and 209 from London; containing 40 houses and 203 inhabitants.

Howtell, a hamlet in the parish of Kirknewton, in Glendale ward, Northumberland, 4 miles from Wooler, and 327 from London; containing 39 houses and 186 inhabitants.

Howth, or Howth Head, a promontory forming the north-east boundary of Dublin Bay; the shores of which are rocky. It was formerly covered with oaks, and was a seat of the Druids, one of their altars still remaining in a sequestered valley on the east side of the hill. The village of Howth is about 7 miles north-east of the metropolis. On the top of the hill is a light-house, and a few harbours on its shores have some small fishing craft.

Hoxne, the name of a hundred in Suffolk, on the north-eastern side of the county, divided from Norfolk by the river Waveney.

Hoxne, a parish in a hundred of the same name, Suffolk, 4 miles from Eye, and 94 from London; containing 132 houses and 972 inhabitants. It stands near the river Waveney, and has a fair 1st December. The living is a vicarage, value 12*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.*

Hoy, a considerable island of the Orkneys, being about 10 miles long, and 6 broad; encumbered with many huge rocks, one of which is about a mile perpendicular from the level of the sea. It contains 56 houses and 244 inhabitants, chiefly employed in rearing sheep. There is a curious relic of antiquity here, called the Dwarfie stone, about 32 feet long and 16 broad, and 7½ high, hollowed into apartments. Some time ago a lead-mine was discovered in Hoy, the ore of which contains a larger portion of silver than usual.

Hoyland High, a parish in Staincross wapentake, west riding of York, 6 miles from Barnesley, and 170 from London; containing 44 houses and 270 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Hoyland Swaine, a township in the parish of Silkstone, Staincross wapentake, west riding of York, 6¼ miles from Barnsley, and 166 from London; containing 106 houses and 562 inhabitants.

Hoyland, a township and chapelry in the parish of Wentworth, in the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of York, 6 miles from Rotherham, and 165 from London; containing 169 houses and 893 inhabitants.

Hubberstone, a parish in the hundred of Roose, Pembrokeshire, Wales, 10 miles from Haverford West, and 270 from London; containing 140 houses and 641 inhabitants. It lies near Milford Haven, and the living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the prince of Wales.

Huby, a township in the parish of Sutton on the Forest, in Bulmer wapentake, north riding of York, 9 miles from York, and 208 from London; containing 67 houses and 393 inhabitants.

Huccleycitt, a hamlet in the parish of Churchdown, in the hundred of Dudstone and Kingsbarton, Gloucester, 3 miles from Gloucester, and 103 from London; containing 52 houses and 234 inhabitants.

Hucking, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Hollingborn, in the hundred of Eyhorne, Jathe of Aylesford, Kent, 4 miles from Maidstone, and 38¼ from London. Population included with Hollingborn.

Hucklow Great and Little, two hamlets in the parish of Hope, hundred of High Peake, Derby, 2 miles from Tideswell, and 162 from London; containing 38 houses and 345 inhabitants.

Hucknall Dirty, a township to Sutton in Ashfield, hundred of Bröxtow, Notts, 4 miles from Mansfield, and 138 from London; containing 88 houses and 510 inhabitants.

Hucknall Torkard, a parish in the hundred of Bröxtow, Notts, 6 miles from Nottingham, and 130 from London; containing 271 houses and 1497 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 4*l.* 13*s.* 1*d.*

Huclescote, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Ibstock, hundred of Sparkenhoe, Leicester, 11 miles from Leicester, and 107 from London; containing 102 houses and 525 inhabitants.

Huddersfield, or Huthersfield, a market-town and parish in Aybrig wapentake, west riding of York, 14 miles from Wakefield and 187 from London, standing on the river Colne; and containing 1376 houses and 7268 inhabitants, viz. 3619 males and 3649 females, of whom 1500 were returned as principally employed in the various branches of the woollen manufactures of serges, kerseymeres, frize, and narrow and broad cloths. The church is an ancient, plain building. There is a very extensive cloth hall here, built in a circular form, two stories high, divided into two courts. Over the entrance is a bell placed in a handsome cupola. This building was erected in 1765, at the expence of sir John Ramsden, of Ferrybridge, the principal proprietor of the town; and here the cloth-market is held on Tuesday, commencing early in the morning, and closing at half past twelve at noon: it is very numerously attended by the woolstaplers, &c. from Leeds, Halifax, and Wakefield, and is the chief support of the town; it having a canal navigation for three miles to the river Calder; whence the river navigation is continued to Wakefield; and the Huddersfield canal passes to Ashton under Line, Manchester, Cheshire, and joins the Peak forest canal. Two miles south of the town, on Castle Hill, are still visible the remains of the ancient city of Canbodunum. In the neighbourhood are several medicinal springs. Its fairs are 31st March, 14th May, and 4th October, for cattle, &c. The living is a vicarage, value 17*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Huddington, a parish, formerly a chapelry to Crowle, in the hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 4 miles from Droitwich, and 115 from London; containing 21 houses and 108 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Huddlestone, a hamlet in the parish of Monkfrystone in Barkstone Ash wapentake, west riding of York, 9 miles from Pontefract, and 184 from London; containing 19 houses and 108 inhabitants. This place is rendered famous for its stone quarry, which is soft when first dug; but being exposed to the air becomes exceedingly hard and durable. King Henry VII.'s chapel at Westminster was in part built of this stone.

Hudswell, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Catterick, Hang West wapentake, north riding of York, 3 miles from Richmond, and 230 from London; containing 50 houses and 227 inhabitants.

Huggate, a parish in the division of Wilton Beacon, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 11 miles from Beverley, and 194 from London; containing 52 houses and 302 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 15*l.* and the patron is the king.

Hughlee, a parish in Wenlock franchise, Salop, 3 miles from Wenlock, and 150 from London; containing 15 houses and 83 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.*

Hugill, a township in the parish and ward of Kendal, Westmoreland, 262 miles from London; containing 41 houses and 237 inhabitants.

Huish, a hamlet in the parish of Alwhinton, hundred of Stanborough, Devon, 2½ miles from Kingsbridge, and 270 from London; containing 54 houses and 286 inhabitants.

Huish North, a parish in Stanborough hundred, Devon, 5½ miles from Totness, and 200 from London; containing 64 houses and 380 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 19*s.* 10*d.*

Huish Episcopacy, a parish in the hundred of Pitney, Somerset, 2 miles from Langport, and 128 from London; containing 60 houses and 367 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* united with Langport, belonging to the archdeacon of Wells.

Huish Champflower, a parish in the hundred of Willerton and Freemanners, Somerset, 2 miles from Wiveliscombe, and 158 from London; containing 54 houses and 321 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.*

Hulcott, a parish in the hundred of Aylesbury, Bucks, 2½ miles from Aylesbury, and 40 from London; containing 23 houses and 117 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 1*s.*

Hull, or Kingston upon Hull, a borough and sea-port in the east riding of York, 170¾ miles from London by Lincoln, and 234½ from London by York; containing 4287 houses and 27,616 inhabitants, viz. 12,127 males and 15,489 females, of whom 5104 were returned as employed in trade and manufacture, and only 21 in agriculture. This wealthy and populous town is recorded to have originally been a small village, called Wike, when the merchants settled at Ravenspurn, the utmost point of Holderness; but, by the encroachment of the sea, they were obliged to remove and establish themselves here. The town is of a triangular form, the longest side being bounded by the rivers Hull and Humber, the confluence of those rivers sweeping round its extremities, where it was formerly defended by a formidable wall, ditch, and ramparts, so strong that it was esteemed one of the chief defences of the kingdom. In the reign of Henry VI. the town was erected into a county of itself, comprising 9 villages in the environs, governed by a mayor and 12 aldermen, with a sheriff and 2 chamberlains, under the denomination of the Town and County of the Town of Kingston upon Hull. During the barons' wars it was much oppressed by the contending houses of York and Lancaster; and in 1472 it suffered so severely by the plague, that it was entirely abandoned, and grass grew in the streets. It was again visited by the above infection in 1637. In 1643 it was garrisoned for the parliament, and sustained a very vigorous siege by the royalists, to the great distress of the town and inhabitants, from 2d September to 12th October, when it was raised. Here are two parish churches; the Holy Trinity, the largest, has a fine altar-piece by Parmentier; the other, St. Mary's, had its steeple pulled down by Henry VIII. in 1541, because it stood opposite to the palace where he resided; but the inhabitants afterwards caused it to be rebuilt at their own expence. The Trinity-house is a fine building; it is a corporation composed of a society of merchants, and governed by 12 elder brethren and 6 assistants: out of the twelve are annually elected 2 wardens and 2 stewards; these have power to decide all disputes, and regulate affairs relative to masters of vessels and their crews. In the house is an excellent picture of his majesty, with the model of a drawbridge in Holland, and a ship; also the boat dress, &c. of a man taken up in the North Seas, called the Bonny Boatman, supposed to be an Esquimaux. He was taken in a leathern boat, which he sat in, and was covered with skins which drew together about his waist, so that it could not take in water. He would neither take food nor speak, and died of hunger and grief in three days. In the house 30 seamen's widows are maintained. Near the Trinity-house is an old hospital, called God's house, which, together with a chapel, were rebuilt in 1673: over the door of the hospital are placed the arms of the De la Pole family. Sir William de la Pole founded here a Carthusian monastery. It has a custom-house and excise-office, and a very handsome infirmary supported by voluntary subscriptions. The Exchange is a noble building. The poor-house, called Charity-hall, is also a good building, and well conducted. There are no manufactures of any consequence here, except what are attached to the marine, for rope, tar, block-making, &c. It has recovered a very considerable trade in the Greenland fishery, and by the canal and river navigation has a trade with the interior of the kingdom. By means of the great rivers Humber, Ouse, and Trent, it has the import and export trade of many of the northern and midland counties: its foreign trade is chiefly to the Baltic, and the coasting trade in coals, corn, wool, and manufactured goods, is very extensive. On the farther side of the river Hull are three forts, called the North and South Blockhouse, and the Castle, all built of brick, and well garrisoned: and it is the seat of a governor, lieutenant-governor, and other military officers. Here is a very excellent free school, well endowed, over which is the merchants' hall. The assizes for the town and county are held here once in three years, as well as the quarter sessions for trials of less importance. Here is also held a court for civil actions, and a court of conscience for small debts. It returns two members to parliament, the right of election being in the burgesses, which they derive either as being the sons of burgesses, having served seven years apprenticeship to a freeman, by purchase, or from donation for public service. The line which divides the courts of York from the jurisdiction of the mayor of Hull runs through the middle of the dock, and a writ from the sheriff of Yorkshire cannot be executed on the north side of it. The town itself lies low, and was formerly subject to frequent inundations; but by proper drainage, and better embankments, that complaint is now remedied. Its markets on Tuesday and Saturday are well supplied, and its fairs are 10th July and 10th December, for five days each, and on the 10th October. Both the churches are vicarages.—Pennant's Tour.

HULLAND, a hamlet in the parish of Ashborne, hundred of Appletree, Derby, 3¼ miles from Ashborne, and 137 from London; containing 66 houses and 322 inhabitants.

HULLAVINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Malmsbury, Wilts, 3¼ miles from Malmsbury, and 95 from London; containing 66 houses and 369 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 13*s.* in the patronage of Eton college.

HULME, a township in the parish of Manchester, in the hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 1 mile from Manchester, and 179 from London; containing 285 houses and 1677 inhabitants, of whom 430 were returned as employed in the various trades and manufactures peculiar to that place.

HULME WAKEFIELD, a hamlet in the parish of Allostock, hundred of Northwich, Chester, 5 miles from Knutsford, and 167 from London; containing 15 houses and 122 inhabitants.

HULTON LITTLE, a township in the parish of Deane, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 9 miles from Bolton, and 193 from London; containing 262 houses and 1488 inhabitants.

HULTON MIDDLE, a township in the same parish, ½ mile from the above; containing 130 houses and 812 inhabitants.

Hulton Over, another village in the same parish, near the foregoing; containing 111 houses and 619 inhabitants.

Humber, a river, formed by the Trent, Ouse, Derwent, and several other streams. It has a canal communication with the Mersey, Dee, Ribble, Severn, Thames, Avon, &c. It divides Yorkshire from Lincolnshire, and falls into the German Ocean near Holderness.

Humberton, a hamlet to the parish of Aldbrough, Claro wapentake, west riding of York, 1½ mile from Aldborough, and 209 from London; containing 5 houses and 28 inhabitants.

Humberstone, a parish in the hundred of East Goscote, Leicester, 2 miles from Leicester, and 98 from London; containing 89 houses and 412 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l*.

Humberstone, a parish in the hundred of Bradley Haverstoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 4 miles from Grimsby, and 166 from London; containing 38 houses and 199 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 5*l*. 18*s*. 4*d*.

Humberton, a hamlet in the parish of Kirby hill, Hallikeld wapentake, north riding of York, 2 miles from Aldborough, and 210 from London; containing 22 houses and 102 inhabitants.

Humble, a parish in the shire of Haddington, Scotland, 8 miles from Haddington, and 15 from Edinburgh; containing 187 houses and 785 inhabitants. The parish is watered by several small rivulets, which contain trout; and in several parts of it is found iron ore. There are many vestiges of Roman military stations, out of the materials of which the mansion-house of Whitebargh has been built.

Humbleby, a parish in the hundred of Bolingbroke, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 1½ mile from Spilsby, and 135 from London; containing 41 houses and 213 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l*. 19*s*. 8*d*.

Humbleton, a hamlet in the parish of Doddington, Glendale ward, Northumberland, 2 miles from Wooller, and 325 from London; containing 27 houses and 141 inhabitants. On Humbleton Haugh is a large circular entrenchment. The hill is cut into terraces about 20 feet deep, one above another. In the plain below is a stone pillar, commemorating the defeat of 10,000 Scots under earl Douglas, by Henry lord Percy, in the reign of Henry IV.

Humbleton, a parish in the wapentake of Holderness, east riding of York, 8 miles from Hull, and 183 from London; containing 15 houses and 89 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l*. 1*s*. and the patron is the king.

Humbleyard, the name of a hundred in Norfolk, in which the city of Norwich is situated, and bounded on the east by the Tase.

Humby Little, a parish united with Somerby, in the hundred of Winnibriggs and Threw, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 3 miles from Grantham, and 112 from London; containing 17 houses and 81 inhabitants.

Humshaugh, a township in the parish of Simonbourn, in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 5 miles from Hexham, and 287 from London; containing 54 houses and 267 inhabitants.

Huncote, a hamlet in the parish of Narborough, in the hundred of Sparkenhoe, Leicester, 6 miles from Leicester, and 92 from London; containing 57 houses and 250 inhabitants. It was formerly a chapelry.

Hundersfield, a township and chapelry in the parish of Rochdale, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 4 miles from Rochdale, and 201 from London; containing 1873 houses and 10,671 inhabitants, viz. 5240 males and 5431 females, of whom 3845 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture, principally the various clothing branches as at Rochdale.

Hundersthwaite, a hamlet in the parish of Romboldkirk, Gilling west wapentake, north riding of York, 6 miles from Barnard Castle, and 253 from London; containing 49 houses and 354 inhabitants.

Hunston, a parish in the hundred of Risbridge, Suffolk, 3 miles from Clare, and 58 from London; containing 160 houses and 824 inhabitants. In a building adjoining the church is a noble monument to Anethusa Vernon, daughter of lord Clifton, who died in 1728. The living is a vicarage, rated at 7*l*. 13*s*. 4*d*. and is in the patronage of Jesus college, Cambridge.

Hunslet, a hamlet in the parish of Leeds, in Leeds liberty, west riding of York, adjoining to Leeds, on the south bank of the river Aire, 190 miles from London by Doncaster. Its name signifies a dog kennel, from its once poor and dirty situation, but the clothing manufactory has made it a wealthy place; and in the reign of Charles II. it was made a corporation, on account of its excellence in the woollen manufacture.

Hungarton, a parish in the hundred of East Goscote, Leicester, 6 miles from Leicester, and 96 from London; containing 47 houses and 173 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 9*l*. 8*s*. 1*d*. united with Twyford.

Hungerford, a market-town and parish partly situate in the hundred of Kintbury Eagle, and partly in the hundred of Kinwardstone, Wilts. It stands on the banks of the Kennett, 10 miles from Marlborough, and 68 from London; containing 383 houses and 1957 inhabitants, in Berkshire, and 55 houses and 305 inhabitants in Wilts, of whom 331 were returned as employed in various trades. Its former name was Churingan Street. The church is a very ancient building. Here is a free grammar school, with a good endowment. The town is governed by a constable, who is coroner and clerk of the market; he is elected annually, and is lord of the manor for the time being: the assistant officers under him are, a portreeve, steward, town clerk, and other inferior officers. John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster, granted a charter to this town by the gift of a bugle horn made of brass, which is preserved in the town-house, and blown every Hock-Tuesday to collect the inhabitants at the election of constable. He granted the liberty of a royal fishery within certain bounds of the river, confirmed by the present of a drinking can, which is also shewn. From this town the ancient barons of Hungerford took their name and title. By means of its canal navigation, it has a considerable traffic, but has no manufacture established. The market-houses and shambles, erected in 1787, are roomy and commodious. Over the shambles is a large room, used as a town-hall. Its market is on Wednesday for pigs, corn, and provisions; and its fairs are 10th August and the last Wednesday in April, the former a statute fair, the latter for cattle. The living is a vicarage, rated at 9*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the dean and canons of Windsor.—Malon's Tour.

HUNGER-HILL NORTH AND SOUTH, two small villages opposite to each other, on the banks of the river Frome, in Dorsetshire, 1 mile from Warcham, and 114 from London. Noted for tobacco-pipe clay.

HUNGRY-HILL, a lofty, steep, and rocky, mountain in the county of Cork, province of Munster, Ireland. It is about 700 yards above the level of Bantry Bay, and near its summit is a large lake, which produces one of the finest cataracts in the kingdom.

HUNMANBY, a parish in Dickering lythe, east riding of York, standing on a rising ground, about 4 miles from the sea-shore, 8 from Bridlington, and 206¼ from London; it contains 166 houses and 757 inhabitants. On the north-west side of the town is a fine wood, where formerly stood a castle belonging to the family of the Osbaldestons. It had a market, which now is discontinued. Its fairs are 6th May and 29th October. and the living is a vicarage, rated at 20*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.*

HUNSCOT, a hamlet in the parish of Hampton upon Avon, Warwick, included therewith.

HUNSDON, a parish in the hundred of Braughin, Herts, 4 miles from Hoddesdon, and 20 from London; containing 103 houses and 569 inhabitants. It stands on the river Stort, in a fine gravelly soil. A house, which is still moated round here, was used as a royal palace under Henry VIII. and Elizabeth. The living is a rectory, value 12*l.*

HUNSHAW, a parish in the hundred of Fremington, Devon, 2¼ miles from Black Torrington, and 199 from London; containing 35 houses and 212 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 7*s.* 1*d.*

HUNSHELF, a township in the parish of Pennistone, in Staincross wapentake, west riding of York, 10 miles from Sheffield, and 172 from London; containing 72 houses and 327 inhabitants.

HUNSINGORE, a parish in Claro wapentake, west riding of York, 4 miles from Wetherby, and 198 from London; containing 39 houses and 192 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 17*s.* 3*d.*

HUNSLET, a township and chapelry in the parish of Leeds, in Leeds liberty, west riding of York, 2 miles from Leeds, and 189 from London; containing 1205 houses and 5799 inhabitants, viz. 2828 males and 2971 females, of whom 2310 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures similar to those at Leeds, and only 50 in agriculture.

HUNSONBY, a hamlet in the parish of Greystock, in Leath ward, Cumberland, 4 miles from Penrith, and 287 from London; containing 24 houses and 117 inhabitants.

HUNSTANTON, a parish in the hundred of Smithdon, Norfolk, 5 miles from Burnham, and 127 from London, on the sea-coast; containing 62 houses and 317 inhabitants. The light-house here was originally a tower, built by Edward the Confessor, where he is said to have retired for the purposes of meditation. The living is a vicarage, rated at 12*l.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.

HUNSTON, a parish in the hundred of Blackburn, Suffolk, 3 miles from Ixworth, and 73 from London; containing 21 houses and 143 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HUNSTON, a parish in the hundred of Box and Stockbridge, rape of Chichester, Sussex, 3 miles from Chichester, and 65 from London; containing 15 houses and 126 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.*

HUNSTONWORTH, a parish in Chester ward, Durham, 12 miles from Walsingham, and 272 from London; containing 42 houses and 215 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HUNSWORTH, a township in the parish of Birstall, Morley wapentake, west riding of York, 6 miles from Halifax, and 191 from London; containing 123 houses and 555 inhabitants.

HUNTINGDON, a hamlet in the parish of Holmer, hundred of Grimsworth, Hereford, 2 miles from Hereford, and 137 from London; containing 18 houses and 89 inhabitants.

HUNTINGDON, the county town of Huntingdonshire, situate near the river Ouse, over which it has a good free-stone bridge of six arches, and consists of four parishes, containing 350 houses and 2055 inhabitants, viz. 995 males and 1042 females, of whom 879 were returned as principally employed in trade and manufacture. From its ancient convenient neighbourhood for hunting, it is supposed to have derived its name from Hunton down, and it was originally built on a spot that was an entire forest. The town

Hundreds.

1. Normancross.
2. Hurstingstone.
3. Leightonstone.
4. Toreland.

HUNTINGDON

in which every Parish and Place is laid down containing upwards of 20 Houses.

British Miles.

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Boroughs	1
Market Towns	5
Parishes	78
Inhabited Houses	6,841
Inhabitants	35,563
Square Acres	240,000
Arable	100,000
Pasturage	60,000
Members to Parliament	4.

Published Janr. 1.1806, by R. Phillips, Bridge Street, Blackfriars, London.

Cooper del. et sculp.

is recorded to have formerly had 15 parish churches, but now there are only two: there are also the burying-grounds of two other parishes; in one of which is an ancient steeple. Near the church of St. Mary was anciently a priory of black canons. On an eminence near the town stood a castle, erected by Edward the Elder, and enlarged by David I. of Scotland, earl of Huntingdon. There are two places of worship for dissenters in the town, one belonging to the sect patronized by the late countess of Huntingdon, and the other to the quakers. Towards the eastern side, where the principal part of the town formerly stood, the lanes which divide the enclosures from each other still retain their ancient names; and in a piece of ground, called the Priory Close, two stone coffins were dug up during the last century. It now chiefly consists of one principal street and several lanes, well paved, and lighted during the winter. The town-hall, in which the assizes are held, is a commodious and neat building, standing on one side of a large square: it contains two courts; one for criminal and one for civil causes: it has also an elegant assembly-room, ornamented with the portraits of their late and present majesties. Here is also a good free and grammar school. The county assizes, in March and July, contribute greatly to the support of the town; and the Ouse being navigable to Bedford, it derives a great advantage from its supply of coals, wood, &c. from Lynn by barges. Huntingdon is governed by a mayor, 12 aldermen, and a common council, and sends 2 members to parliament. The number of freemen is about 250, and the returning officer is the mayor. Its market on Saturday is noted for its sale of corn, and it has a fair on 25th March. The living of Allsaints is a rectory, rated at 6*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.* and is united with St. John's, a rectory, rated at 6*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* St. Mary's is a rectory, rated at 10*l.* 5*d.* united with St. Bennet's, and being of small value they are held by sequestration by the rector of Allsaints. The patron is the king.

HUNTINGDON, a parish in Bulmer wapentake, north riding of York, 2½ miles from York, and 202 from London, standing on the river Foss navigation; containing 61 houses and 312 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, rated at 5*l.* and the patron is the king.

HUNTINGDONSHIRE, a county bounded on the north by Northamptonshire, on the east by Cambridgeshire, on the south by Bedfordshire, and on the west by Bedfordshire and Northamptonshire, being about 26 miles long and 20 broad, and containing about 240,000 acres of land, of which 100,000 acres are generally in a course of tillage, 60,000 in pasturage, and of the remainder nearly 20,000 are unfit for cultivation. It is divided into four hundreds, viz. Hurstingstone, Leightonstone, Normancross, and Toreland, containing 78 parishes, 1 borough, and 5 other market-towns, viz. St. Ive's, Kimbolton, St. Neot's, Ramsey, and Yaxley; 6841 houses inhabited by 37,568 persons, viz. 18,521 males and 19,047 females, of whom 4484 were returned as employed in trade, manufacture, and handicrafts, and 9536 in agriculture. The income of the inhabitants of this county, on which the property tax in 1806 was assessed, amounted to 395,019*l.* and the poor rates in 1803 to 30,952*l.* being 4*s.* 0½*d.* in the pound. The average scale of mortality for 10 years appears to have been to the population as 1 to 45 5-8ths. By a return made to the House of Lords in 1805, the area of this county is stated to be 345 square statute miles, equal to 220,800 statute acres; the number of inhabitants in each square mile of 640 acres, 109, and the total number of inhabitants 37,605. It returns 2 members to parliament, and 2 for the borough of Huntingdon, and lies in the diocese of Lincoln. Its principal rivers are the Ouse and the Nen; the former rising near Brackley in Northamptonshire, and, crossing the county, falls into the German Ocean near Lynn. The Nen rises in the same county, and forming several lakes in passing through Hunts, Cambridge, and Lincoln, falls into the German Ocean near Wisbeach. The face of the country has three varieties, on the borders of the Ouse is a rich tract of fertile meadows, of which Portholm Mead, near Huntingdon, enclosed by a bend of the river, is particularly celebrated. The middle and western parts are finely varied with corn and woodlands, and the upland parts were anciently an extensive forest, well adapted for the chace, whence the name of the county. The north-eastern parts consist of fens which join those of Ely, and form a large proportion of the great Bedford Level. Part of them are tolerably well drained, and afford good pasturage, and in the midst of them are some shallow pools abounding with fish. In short, the whole of the fen lands may be computed at one-fifth of the county. There is scarce any manufacture carried on, except a little woolstapling and spinning of yarn, and that chiefly by women and children. Timber is very scarce here; fish and wild fowl are in great plenty. Whittesea Mere, a lake near Peterborough, is 6 miles long and 3 broad, abounding with fish; but the air in the neighbourhood is very foggy and unwholesome, and particularly prejudicial to strangers. The neighbourhood of Stilton is noted for its rich and delicate cheese. In the earliest times Huntingdonshire is supposed to have been inhabited by the Iceni: during the heptarchy it formed a part of the kingdom of Mercia, and is now included in the Norfolk circuit, and is, together with the isle of Ely, under one sheriff. There are many remains of antiquity, particularly at Dornford, Godmanchester, and Ramsey abbey.—Marshall's General View of the Agriculture of Hunts.

HUNTINGFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Blything, Suffolk, 3 miles from Halesworth, and 99 from London; containing 44 houses and 373 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* united with Cookly.

HUNTINGFORD, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Berkley, Gloucester, and included therewith.

HUNTINGFORD, a hamlet to the parish of Wootton under Edge, Gloucester, on the borders of Radnor, also included in the above.

HUNTINGTON, the name of a hundred in Herefordshire, being the north-western side of the county and borders of Radnorshire.

HUNTINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Huntington, Hereford, 3 miles from Kineton, and 155 from London; containing 38 houses and 209 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HUNTINGTON, a hamlet to the parish of Cannock, hundred of Cuttlestone, Stafford, 8 miles from Stafford, and 132 from London; containing 21 houses and 114 inhabitants.

HUNTLEY, a parish in the liberties of the duchy of Lancaster, Gloucester, 7 miles from Gloucester, and 111½ from London; containing 84 houses and 313 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 7*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.*

HUNTLEY, a town and parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, standing on a point of land formed by the confluence of the rivers Bogie and Deveron, 36 miles from Aberdeen, and 57 from Montrose. It contains 493 houses and 2663 inhabitants, viz. 1319 males and 1514 females, of whom 883 were returned as employed in trade and manufacture, and 595 in agriculture. From the extensive linen manufactory established here it has increased considerably of late years. It is neatly built, having two principal streets crossing each other at right angles, and forming a spacious square, or market-place, on one side of which were formerly a town-house and prison. On the banks of the Deveron is Huntly Lodge, the elegant residence of the marquis of Huntly, eldest son of the duke of Gordon, and near Deveron Bridge are the ruined remains of Huntly castle. There are many beautiful views on the banks of the Deveron and Bogie. St. Mungo's Hill has the appearance of a volcano, and on the summit is a small lake, seldom dry, supposed to resemble the crater. Many pieces of hard and porous matter, similar to lava, are found about it.

HUNTON, a hamlet in the parish of Crawley, hundred of Buddlesgate, division of Fawley, Hants, 12 miles from Basingstoke, and 57 from London; containing 19 houses and 102 inhabitants.

HUNTON, a hamlet in the parish of Hornby, Hang West wapentake, north riding of York, 5 miles from Richmond, and 230 from London; containing 85 houses and 388 inhabitants.

HUNTSHAM, a parish in the hundred of Tiverton, Devon, 2½ miles from Bampton, and 161 from London; containing 23 houses and 158 inhabitants. It stands near the source of the river Loman.

HUNTSPILL, a parish in the hundred of North Petherton, Somerset, 5 miles from Bridgewater, and 135 from London, on the river Parrot, near its junction with the Severn; it contains 186 houses and 1012 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 72*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.*

HUNWORTH, a parish in the hundred of Holt, Norfolk, 2 miles from Holt, and 117 from London; containing 35 houses and 185 inhabitants. A considerable tanning business is carried on here. The living is a rectory, rated at 4*l.* and is united with Stody.

HURLERS THE, a set of monumental stones near Bodmin in Cornwall: they are oblong and unhewn, pitched upon one end on the ground, and stand on a down in three circles, the centres of which are in a right line, the middle circle being the greatest. About ½ mile distant is one called the Long Stone, more than 2½ yards high, having a cross on each side.

HURLESTON, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Nantwich, Chester, 1 mile from Nantwich, and 165 from London; containing 27 houses and 162 inhabitants.

HURLEY, a parish in the hundred of Bernhurst, Berks, 4 miles from Maidenhead, and 30 from London; containing 170 houses and 915 inhabitants. It stands on the side of the Thames, where was a priory of black monks, some traces of which are still observable. It is a vicarage, rated at 6*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.*

HURSBORNE PRIORS, a parish in the hundred of Evingar, division of Kingsclere, Hants, 1½ mile from Whitchurch, and 55 from London; containing 61 houses and 366 inhabitants. Here is the magnificent mansion of the earl of Portsmouth. The living is a vicarage, rated at 12*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Winchester.

HURSBORNE TARRANT, a parish in the hundred of Pastrow, division of Kingsclere, Hants, 7½ miles from Andover, and 65 from London; containing 144 houses and 599 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, rated at 8*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* belonging to the prebend thereof in Salisbury cathedral.

HURSLEY, a parish in the hundred of Buddlesgate, division of Fawley, Hants, 5 miles from Winchester, and 67 from London; containing 201 houses and 1105 inhabitants, of whom 61 were returned as employed in various trades.

HURST, a hamlet in the parish of Woodhorn, in Morpeth ward, Northumberland, 4 miles from Morpeth, and 295 from London; containing 9 houses and 50 inhabitants.

HURST, a hamlet in the parish of Sonning, hundred of Charlton, Berks, 4 miles from Oakingham, and 31 from London. Population returned with Whistley.

Hurst, a hamlet in the parish of Aldington, near Ashford, Kent.

Hurst, a hamlet in the parish of Lidney, Gloucester, 1 mile distant therefrom.

Hurst Castle, Hants, stands on a neck of land which runs into the sea, and makes the shortest passage to the Isle of Wight, being not more than 2 miles. It stands on the beach, and was the last prison of king Charles I. before he was removed to London. It is erected of stone, and was built in the reign of Henry VIII. It has a governor, and is always garrisoned. Lat. 50° 42′ 23″. Long. 1° 32′ 45″. W.

Hurst Courtney, a hamlet in the parish of Birkin, in Barkston Ash wapentake, west riding of York, 6 miles from Pontefract, and 183 from London; containing 23 houses and 132 inhabitants.

Hurst Old, a parish in the hundred of Hurstingstone, Hunts, 4 miles from St. Ive's, and 65 from London; containing 58 houses and 363 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Hurstmonceux. See Hertsmonceux, Sussex.

Hurstingstone, the name of a hundred in Huntingdonshire, being the eastern side of the county, bounded by the Ouse on the south, and Whittlesea Mere on the north.

Hurst Pierrepoint, a parish in the hundred of Buttinghill, rape of Lewes, Sussex, 6 miles from Cuckfield, and 46 from London; containing 172 houses and 1104 inhabitants, of whom 99 were returned as employed in various trades. Its fair is 10th August. The living is a rectory, rated at 15*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.*

Hurworth, a parish in Stockton ward, Durham, 3¼ miles from Darlington, and 240 from London; containing 147 houses and 661 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 27*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.*

Husborn Crawley, a parish in the hundred of Manshead, Bedford, 2 miles from Woburn, and 43 from London; containing 101 houses and 543 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 9*l.*

Husband Bosworth. See Bosworth, Leicester.

Husthwaite, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Carlton, in Bridforth wapentake, north riding of York, 6 miles from Thirsk, and 217 from London; containing 55 houses and 288 inhabitants.

Huthersfield. See Huddersfield, York, west riding.

Huttoft, a parish in the hundred of Calceworth, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 2 miles from Alford, and 142 from London; containing 57 houses and 286 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Hutton, a parish in Leath ward, Cumberland, 5 miles from Penrith, and 269 from London; containing 83 houses and 363 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Hutton Henry, a hamlet in the parish of Monk Hesledon, in Easington ward, Durham, 3 miles from Stockton, and 259 from London; containing 33 houses and 156 inhabitants.

Hutton, a parish in the hundred of Barnstaple, Essex, 2 miles from Billericay, and 21 from London; containing 52 houses and 280 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 8*l.* and is in the patronage of the dean and chapter of St. Paul's.

Hutton, a township in the parish of Penwortham, in the hundred of Leyland, Lancaster, 4 miles from Preston, and 212 from London; containing 64 houses and 462 inhabitants.

Hutton, a hamlet in the parish of Dalton, hundred of Lonsdale, Lancaster, 3 miles from Ulverstone, and 274 from London; containing 33 houses and 168 inhabitants.

Hutton, a parish in the hundred of Winterstoke, Somerset, 4 miles from Axbridge, and 135 from London; containing 39 houses and 244 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 14*l.*

Hutton New, a township and chapelry in the parish and ward of Kendal, Westmoreland, 3½ miles from Kendal, and 260 from London; containing 23 houses and 125 inhabitants.

Hutton Old, a township in the parish of Burton, in Kendal ward, Westmoreland, 4½ miles from Kendal, and 259 from London; containing 77 houses and 368 inhabitants.

Hutton Roof, a township and chapelry in the parish of Kirby Lonsdale, in Lonsdale ward, Westmoreland, 1 mile from Kirby Lonsdale, and 250 from London; containing 36 houses and 179 inhabitants.

Hutton Cranswick, a parish in the division of Bainton Beacon, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 3 miles from Great Driffield, and 194 from London; containing 162 houses and 662 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Hutton Wansley, or Long Marston, a parish in the liberties of York Ainstey, east riding of York, 3 miles from Wetherby, and 200 from London; containing 69 houses and 399 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 24*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.*

Hutton Bonville, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Birkby, in Allerton shire, north riding of York, 4 miles from North Allerton, and 230 from London; containing 27 houses and 150 inhabitants.

Hutton Conyers, a hamlet in the parish of Ripon, in Hallikeld wapentake, north riding of York, 2 miles from Ripon, and 224 from London; containing 25 houses and 133 inhabitants.

Hutton Hang, a hamlet in the parish of Bedale, in Hang West wapentake, north riding of York, 4 miles from Bedale, and 227 from London; containing 5 houses and 34 inhabitants.

Hutton Rushell, a parish in Pickering

lythe, north riding of York, 5 miles from Scarborough, and 220 from London; containing 75 houses and 410 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 14*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*

HUTTON LEHOLE, a township in the parish of Lastingham, in Rydall division, north riding of York, 3 miles from Kirby Moorside, and 231 from London; containing 55 houses and 238 inhabitants.

HUTTON, a township and chapelry in the parish of Gilling, in Gilling West wapentake, north riding of York, 5 miles from Barnard castle, and 242 from London; containing 39 houses and 178 inhabitants.

HUTTON RUDBY, a parish in Langborough wapentake, north riding of York, 5 miles from Yarm, and 243 from London; containing 164 houses and 707 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HUTTON SESSEY, a hamlet in the parish of Sessey, in Birdforth wapentake, north riding of York, 6 miles from Aldborough, and 214 from London; containing 15 houses and 85 inhabitants.

HUTTONS AMBO, a parish in Bulmer wapentake, north riding of York, 15 miles from York, and 214 from London; containing 75 houses and 390 inhabitants. The curacy is in the patronage of the archbishop of York.

HUTTON LOCRAS, a hamlet in the parish of Guildsborough, in Langborough wapentake, north riding of York, 1½ mile from Guildsborough, and 250 from London; containing 11 houses and 59 inhabitants.

HUTTON MULGRAVE, a hamlet to Lyth, in Langborough wapentake, north riding of York, 4 miles from Whitby, and 242 from London; containing 17 houses and 93 inhabitants.

HUTTON JOHN, a township in the parish of Graystock, in Leath ward, Cumberland, 4 miles from Penrith, and 287 from London; containing 47 houses and 252 inhabitants.

HUTTON, a parish in the shire of Berwick, Scotland, 6 miles from Dunse, and 8 from Berwick, on the banks of the Tweed; containing 186 houses and 955 inhabitants, of whom about 270 are in the hamlet of Paxton.

HUTTON, a parish united with Corrie, in the shire of Dumfries, Scotland, 10 miles from Longholm, and 10 from Moffat; containing 135 houses and 646 inhabitants. It is watered by the rivers Milk, Dryfe, and Corrie. The ancient tower of Lun, in its vicinity, was originally of great strength.

HUXLOE, the name of a hundred in Northamptonshire, on the eastern side of the county, and nearly surrounded by branches of the river Nen.

HUYTON, a parish in the hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 1½ mile from Prescott, and 199 from London; containing 168 houses and 862 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

HYCKHAM, or HACCOMBE, a parish united with Poltimore, in the hundred of Wowford, Devon, 4 miles from Exeter, and 170 from London; containing 22 houses and 135 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 8*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* united with Poltimore.

HYDLEY, a hamlet to Hargrave, in the hundred of Broxton, Cheshire, 5 miles from Chester, and 174 from London; containing 35 houses and 196 inhabitants.

HYDE, a township and chapelry in the parish of Mottram, hundred of Macclesfield, Chester, 4½ miles from Stockport, and 174 from London; containing 187 houses and 1063 inhabitants, of whom 330 were returned as employed in various trades.

HYDE, a suburb to, and forming part of the parish of St. Bartholomew Winchester, Hants, adjoining to Winchester; and containing 38 houses and 404 inhabitants. There stood an abbey of Benedictines here, supposed to have been founded by king Alfred about the beginning of the 10th century. It was burnt down during the wars in the reign of king Stephen: what remains is only a part of the precinct wall, some out-buildings, and a gateway. Out of the ruins of this abbey the church of St. Bartholomew was repaired, and the tower built, in 1541.

HYDE PARK, on the right of Knightsbridge, and at the west end of the metropolis, lying between the two great western roads. It was formerly a manor belonging to the church of Westminster, till it came to the crown in the reign of Henry VIII. in exchange for other lands. It was first enclosed by a brick wall after the restoration, before which time it was fenced with pales, and occupied what is now called Kensington Garden, containing an area of 620 acres; but by survey, in 1730, it contained only 394 acres. During the period of the commonwealth it was sold in lots for 17,068*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* including the timber and the deer. The canal, called the Serpentine River, was formed by order of queen Caroline in 1730, and is supplied by a small stream which comes from Bayswater, and falls into the Thames near Ranelagh. Hyde Park is the grand Sunday resort of the equestrians and pedestrians of the metropolis; and is used for the field days of the horse and foot guards, and other troops, and for some partial reviews.—Lysons's Environs of London.

HYKHAM NORTH, a parish in the hundred of Boothby Graffo, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 5 miles from Lincoln, and 135 from London; containing 136 houses and 254 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 19*l.* 16*s.* 2*d.*

HYKHAM, a hamlet in the parish of North Hykham, in the hundred of Boothby Graffo, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 6½ miles from Lincoln, and 132 from London; containing 15 houses and 87 inhabitants.

HYNANT, a parish in the hundred of Llanfyllin, Montgomeryshire, Wales, 3 miles from Llanfyllin, and 189 from London; containing 45 houses and 277 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 5*l.* 3*s.* 11*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

Hythe, a market-town, and one of the principal cinque ports, in the parish of Saltwood, hundred of Heane, lathe of Shepway, Kent, 11¼ miles from Ashford, and 67 from London; containing 224 houses and 1446 inhabitants, of whom 198 were returned as employed in trade. It consists chiefly of one long street, and is governed by a mayor, 12 jurats, and 24 common council-men; who, together with the freemen, the whole about 126, elect two members to parliament. Here are two hospitals, both under the direction of the mayor and jurats. It has a very strong fort and garrison, and in the neighbourhood are barracks for foot soldiers. It is recorded that there were formerly four churches here. In the reign of Henry IV. this town was greatly reduced by a pestilence, after which a fire consumed 200 houses. It lies about a mile from the sea-shore, and on the beach are some bathing machines. As a watering-place it is tolerably well frequented during the season, but the accommodations are not esteemed the best. In a vault underneath the church is a remarkable pile of dry bones, 28 feet long, 6 broad, and 8 high, consisting of several thousand head, arm, leg, and thigh bones, all curiously arranged; stated by an inscription to be the remains of Danes and Britons killed in a battle near this place before the Norman conquest. Its market is on Thursday. The church is a curacy, annexed to Saltwood.—Hasted's Kent, and Guide to the Watering Places.

Hyttington, a township to the parish of Rock, hundred of Doddingtree, Worcester, 2½ miles from Bewdley, and 129 from London; containing 148 houses and 862 inhabitants.

Hyway, a hamlet to the parish of Brimhill, or Bromble, in the hundred of Chippenham, Wilts, 3 miles from Chippenham, and 90 from London. Population included with Bromble.

Jacobstow, a parish in the hundred of Stratton, Cornwall, 9 miles from Launceston, and 222 from London; containing 82 houses and 432 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 19*l.*

Jacobstow, a parish in the hundred of Black Torrington, Devon, 3 miles from Hatherleigh, and 197 from London; containing 34 houses and 193 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

James Town, in the county of Leitrim, province of Connaught, Ireland, standing on the river Shannon, 5 miles south-east of Carrick, or Shannon, and 72 north-west of Dublin.

James Town, a hamlet in the parish of Westerkirk, in the shire of Dumfries, Scotland, 6 miles from Longholm, and 7 from Moffat. It was originally built by the mining company on the banks of the river Megget, to accommodate their labourers.

Jarrow, a parish in Chester ward, Durham, 3 miles from South Shields, and 284 from London. Population included with Monkton. It stands near the mouth of the Tyne, was formerly called Gyrvi, and is noted as the birth-place of the venerable Bede. Here was a monastery, which being destroyed by the Danes, was united to Durham; the only remains consist of a chapel, now the parish church, and some ruins of the walls. A rough-hewn oaken chair is preserved in the vestry room, which is said to have belonged to Bede. It is a curacy.

Ibber, a river in Derbyshire, which falls into the Rother at Chesterfield.

Ibberton, a parish in the hundred of Whitway, division of Sherborn, Dorset, 5 miles from Blandford, and 108 from London; containing 33 houses and 157 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 19*l.* 15*s.* 9*d.*

Ible, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Wirksworth, Derby, 2 miles from Wirksworth, and 142 from London; containing 16 houses and 80 inhabitants.

Ibsley, a township and chapelry in the parish and hundred of Fordingbridge, New forest division, Hants, standing on the river Avon, 2 miles from Ringwood and 90 from London; and containing 62 houses and 303 inhabitants.

Ibstock, a parish in the hundred of Sparkenhoe, Leicester, 10½ miles from Hinckley, and 108 from London; containing 145 houses and 763 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 19*l.* 8*s.* 11*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Rochester.

Iccomb, a parish in the hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 2 miles from Stow in the Wold, and 81 from London, being on the side of a hill entirely surrounded by Gloucestershire; it contains 24 houses and 112 inhabitants. Here is a chalybeate spring. The living is a rectory, rated at 8*l.* and is in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Worcester.

ICHENOR, a parish in the hundred of Manwood, rape of Chichester, Sussex, 6 miles from Chichester, and 66 from London; containing 33 houses and 141 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.* and the patron is the King.

ICKENHAM, a parish in the hundred of Elthorne, Middlesex, 2 miles from Uxbridge, and 15½ from London; containing 45 houses and 213 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of London.

ICKFORD GREAT, a parish in the hundred of Ashendon, Bucks, 3 miles from Thame, and 49 from London; containing 45 houses and 271 inhabitants; on the banks of the Thame.

ICKFORD LITTLE, a hamlet to the above, 1½ mile distant, nearer Thame.

ICKHAM, a parish in the hundred of Downhamford, lathe of St. Augustine, Kent, 4 miles from Canterbury, and 59½ from London; containing 84 houses and 430 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 29*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* with Weld chapel annexed.

ICKLEFORD, a parish in the hundred of Hitchin and Perton, Herts, 2 miles from Hitchin, and 36 from London; containing 57 houses and 337 inhabitants. It is said to have been formerly a market-town, and stands on the Roman road called Ickenild Street. Its fair is 2d August, and the living is a rectory, rated at 8*l.* united with Perton.

ICKLESHAM, a parish in the hundred of Guestling, rape of Hastings, Sussex, 4 miles from Hastings, 1½ from Winchelsea, and 65 from London; containing 50 houses and 384 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Chichester.

ICKLETON, a parish in the hundred of Whittlesford, Cambridge, 4 miles from Linton, and 45 from London; containing 77 houses and 407 inhabitants. Here was formerly a convent of Benedictines. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.

ICKLINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Lackford, Suffolk, standing on the river Lark, a branch of the Ouse near Mildenhall, 71 miles from London; and containing 71 houses and 335 inhabitants.

ICKWORTH, a parish in the hundred of Thingoe, Suffolk, 3 miles from Bury, and 75 from London; containing only 7 houses and 67 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 11*s.* 5½*d.* united with Chetburgh.

ICOLMKILL, one of the Hebrides separated from the Isle of Mull by a narrow channel; it belongs to the parishes of Kilfinichen and Kilviceuen. The village is a small mean place, containing about 60 houses and 336 inhabitants. This was once the retreat of learning, while the whole of Western Europe lay buried in ignorance and barbarism. The ruins of many religious edifices remain, which are said to have been established first by St. Columba, who left Ireland about the year 565. These ruins are much dilapidated, but they are now preserved by a strong wall erected round the chief parts, by the care of the Argyle family. The cathedral is 38 yards long, and 8 broad; the east window of which is a beautiful specimen of Gothic workmanship. In the middle stands a tower, three stories high, supported by four arches. Near the altar place is a beautiful tomb of black marble, with the figure of the abbot Maefingone. On the right of the cathedral are the remains of the college, of which part of the hall and cloisters remain. To the north of it are some remains of the bishop's house, and on the south is a small neat chapel, in which are many curious tombs to the memory of the lords of the isles. Here is also an enclosed burying ground, containing the tombs of 48 Scottish kings, 4 kings of Ireland, 8 of Norway, and 1 of France, all buried here from the supposed peculiar sanctity of the ground. The island is the property of the duke of Argyle; and this place, which was once so religious, has now divine service performed only four times in the year by the minister of Kilviceuen.—Johnson's Tour, and sir John Sinclair's Stat. Account.

IDBURY, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Swinbrooke, hundred of Chadlington, Oxford, 4½ miles from Burford, and 75 from London; containing 31 houses and 188 inhabitants.

IDDESLEIGH, a parish in the hundred of Shebbear, Devon, 3 miles from Hatherleigh, and 202 from London; containing 62 houses and 441 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

IDEFORD, a parish in the hundred of Exminster, Devon, 2 miles from Chudleigh, and 176 from London; containing 123 houses and 507 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 17*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.*

IDEFORD, a parish in the hundred of Teignbridge, Devon, 3 miles from Newton Bushell, and 180 from London; containing 71 houses and 339 inhabitants.

IDEN, a parish in the hundred of Goldspur, rape of Hastings, Sussex, 2 miles from Rye, and 61 from London; containing 59 houses and 289 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 18*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.*

IDERICHAY, a hamlet in the parish of Wirksworth, hundred of Appletree, Derby, 4 miles from Wirksworth, and 136 from London; containing 26 houses and 134 inhabitants.

IDLE, a township and chapelry in the parish of Calverley, in Morley wapentake, west riding of York, standing on the river Aire, 3 miles from Bradford, and 201 from London; and containing 671 houses and 3398 inhabitants, being 1648 males and 1750 females; of whom 1851 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures.

IDLE, a river in Nottinghamshire, which rises in Sherwood forest, and passing to the edge of Yorkshire and Lincolnshire, falls into the Trent, a few miles before its conflux with the Ouse.

IDLESTREE, or ELSTREE, a parish in the hundred of Cashio, Herts, 3 miles from Barnet, and 11½ from London; containing 51 houses and 286 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* and the patron is the king.

IDLICOTT, a hamlet in the parish of Halford, hundred of Kineton, Warwick, 3 miles from Shipston on Stour, and 66 from London; containing 18 houses and 106 inhabitants.

IDMINSTON, a parish in the hundred of Alderbury, Wilts, 6 miles from Salisbury, and 74 from London; containing 85 houses and 422 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 15*l.* 6*s.* with Purton chapel annexed, in the patronage of the bishop of Salisbury.

IDSALL. See SHIFFNAL.

IDSWORTH, a township and chapelry in the parish of Chalton, hundred of Finch Dean, division of Alton, Hants, 6½ miles from Petersfield, and 61 from London; containing 43 houses and 303 inhabitants.

JED, a river in the shire of Roxburgh, Scotland, which rises on the English border, and passing Jedburgh, joins the Teviot, and falls into the Tweed near Kelso.

JEDBURGH, a royal borough in the shire of Roxburgh, Scotland, on the banks of the river Jed, 11 miles from Kelso, and 45 from Edinburgh; it contains, including the parish, 648 houses and 3834 inhabitants, viz. 1770 males and 2064 females, of whom 482 were returned as employed in various trades, and 344 in agriculture. This town is of great antiquity, and the ruins of its ancient monastery, founded by William the Lion, king of Scotland, are still to be seen on the point formed by the confluence of the Jed and Teviot, and part of the abbey church is used as the parish church, the workmanship of which is extremely fine. The trade and population of this place has considerably decreased since the union. It is governed by a provost and three bailies, assisted by a council of the principal citizens. The neighbourhood is noted for its orchards. It has several well attended fairs, and a good weekly market for corn and cattle. It is the seat of a presbytery, and of a circuit court.

JEFFRESON, a parish in the hundred of Narberth, Pembrokeshire, Wales, 10 miles from Pembroke, and 242 from London; containing 138 houses and 685 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 4*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* and the patron is the king.

JERICHO, a hamlet in the parish of Little Dalby, in the hundred of Framland, Leicester, 3 miles from Melton Mowbray, and 101 from London. Population included with Little Dalby.

JERSEY ISLE OF, is accounted as a part of Hants, and situated 18 miles to the west of Normandy, and 84 to the south of Portland, in Dorsetshire, being about 12 miles long, and 6 broad; containing 2 towns, St. Helier's and St. Aubin's, and 12 parishes, in the diocese of Winchester and province of Canterbury. Its population amounts to about 20,000, of which 3000 are able to bear arms, and are formed into two regiments. The island is defended by dangerous rocks and quicksands, and on the north side the cliffs rise 40 or 50 fathoms high. The south side is almost level with the sea. The middle part of the island is mountainous, and so thick with orchards of apple trees, that it resembles a forest. It has been computed that 25,000 hogsheads of cyder have been made here in one year, insomuch as to occasion a deficiency of arable land for corn, which is imported from the Baltic, England, and, in times of peace, from France. It produces plenty of cattle, particularly sheep. The wool is manufactured into stockings and caps, of which some thousands are every week sold at the market of St. Helier. The enclosures are made by thick mounds of earth planted with quicksets. Besides the abbey of St. Helier there were formerly four priories here. It has a strong garrison of regulars, and every avenue is well fortified with batteries, with several watch towers on the head-lands; there are also round towers, with embrasures for small cannon, and loop holes for musketry; the general entrances of which are by doors in the wall, above the reach of a man, which are ascended by ladders, which are afterwards drawn up. The chief officer is the governor, who has the command of the castles and garrison. The civil government is vested in a bailiff and twelve jurats. The Jersey people are governed by their own laws, which are for the most part the ducal customs of Normandy; this island, together with Guernsey, Sark, and Alderney, being part of the duchy of Normandy, united to the crown of England by its princes of the Norman line. All the churches are handsome Gothic structures, mostly arched with stone, and covered with blue slate, being proof against fire. In different parts of the island are many remains of druidical monuments. No act of parliament made in England is binding here, unless especially named, and even then it must receive the approbation of the bailiff and jurats. The merchants employ several ships in the Newfoundland fishery. In 1781 Jersey was surprised by a body of French under the baron de Ballecourt, who paid dear for their rashness, being every one killed, wounded, or made prisoners, though with the loss of some lives, particularly of the gallant major Pierson. The general language of the island is French, which is also used in the pulpit and at the bar. Jersey is an earldom in the Villier's family. Lat. 49. 7. Long. 2. 11. W.

Jesmond, a township in the parish of St. Andrew's Newcastle, in Castle ward, Northumberland, 1 mile from Newcastle, and 277 from London; containing 41 houses and 275 inhabitants.

Jessop's Well, a sulphureous spring, 4 miles from Epsom. It is a weak chalybeate, containing a very large proportion of epsom salt, with a small quantity of sea salt.

Jevington, a parish in the hundred of Willingdon, rape of Pevensey, Sussex, 2 miles from Eastbourne, and 63 from London; containing 45 houses and 229 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 20*l.*

Ipsley, a parish in the hundred of Bullington, Oxford, standing on the banks of the Thames, 2 miles from Oxford, and 53 from London; containing 70 houses and 331 inhabitants. It has a very ancient church of Norman architecture, the west door of which is richly ornamented. It is said to have been built by a bishop of Lincoln in the twelfth century. The living is a curacy, belonging to the archdeacon of Oxford.

Ifield, a parish in the hundred of Toltintrough, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 4 miles from Rochester, and 27 from London; containing only 8 houses and 58 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 7*s.*

Ifield, a parish in the hundred of Burbeach, rape of Bramber, Sussex, 9½ miles from Rygate, and 31 from London; containing 70 houses and 657 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 6*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.*

Iford, a tything in the parish and hundred of Christ Church, division of New forest, Hants, 1½ mile from Christ Church, and 99 from London. Population included with Hurn.

Iford, a hamlet in the parish of Bradford, hundred of Elstub and Everley, Wilts, 1½ mile from Bradford, and 104 from London. Population returned included with Westwood.

Iford, a parish in the hundred of Swanborough, rape of Lewes, Sussex, 3 miles from Lewes, and 55 from London; containing 21 houses and 140 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, rated at 10*l.* 10*s.* 2*d.* united with Kingston near Lewes.

Ifton, in the hundred of Caldicot, Monmouth, situated on the shore of the Bristol Channel, 5 miles from Chepstow, and 138 from London; containing 7 houses and 43 inhabitants. It was formerly a parish, but is now united with Rogiet.

Ilburgh, or Ilkborough, a parish in the hundred of Grimshoe, Norfolk, 5 miles from Brandon, and 84 from London; containing 22 houses and 178 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 10*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.* united with Langford.

Ightenhill, a hamlet to the parish of Whalley, in the hundred of Blackburn, Lancaster, 5 miles from Burnley, and 210 from London; containing 26 houses and 125 inhabitants.

Ightfield, a parish in the hundred of North Bradford, Salop, 4 miles from Whitchurch, and 161 from London; containing 32 houses and 209 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 7*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.*

Ightham, a parish in the hundred of Wrotham, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 11½ miles from Maidstone, and 24 from London; containing 94 houses and 709 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 45*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.*

Ikes, a parish in the hundred of Plomsgate, Suffolk, 3 miles from Aldborough, and 92 from London, near the river Alde; containing 31 houses and 282 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Ila, or Islay, one of the Hebrides, in the county of Argyle, Scotland, about 25 miles long, and 18 broad. The coast is rocky, but has many small bays and safe landing places, and at Lochindale is a good harbour for large vessels, with a quay opposite the village of Boxmore. It has several lakes and streams abounding with trout and salmon. In the center is Loch Finlagan, about 3 miles in circuit: in the middle of which is a small islet, in which the M'Donalds, lords of the isles of Ila, Jurat, Colonsay, Mull, Arran, &c. lived in all the pomp of royalty. Part of the ruins of their palace is still to be seen; instead of a throne, the chieftain was placed on a square stone, in which was a hollow to receive his feet; here he took the oath, and was anointed by the bishop of Argyle: besides the castle on the island, the lords had a house and chapel at Lingamon. Ale is made here by mixing two thirds of malt with one third of the young tops of heath, a liquor much used by the Picts. The island abounds with all kind of domestic animals, as well as weasels, otters, hares, &c. with wild geese, ducks, eagles, falcons, and various kinds of fish. The produce of corn is not considerable, and consists principally in barley and oats, with a considerable quantity of flax, which is spun into coarse yarn, of which the value of 3000*l.* is annually exported. The heath swarms with vipers, whose bite the natives are said to cure with a poultice of hemlock and henbane. The mineral productions of Ila are chiefly lead, copper, and iron; some veins of quicksilver also have been found in the muirs. Limestone and marle are in abundance here. The climate is moist, agues being pretty frequent, but, on the whole, this island is tolerably healthy. The three parishes of Kilconan, Kildalton, and Killarrow, united with Kilmeny, contain 9340 inhabitants, of whom about 700 are employed in weaving and fishing.—Pennant's Tour to the Hebrides.

Ila Sound, a narrow strait between the islands of Jura and Ila, the navigation of which is dangerous, from the rapidity of the tides, sudden squalls, and foul ground.

Ilam, a parish in the hundred of Tot-monslow, Stafford, near Leek, 155 miles from London; containing 26 houses and 177 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* This place is noted for the tomb of St. Bertram, who is recorded to have performed many miracles in this county.

ILANMORE, a small island in Clew Bay, on the west coast of Ireland.

ILANMORE, a small island of the Hebrides, about ¼ mile in circuit, and ½ north of Coll.

ILANROAN, } two small islands of the ILANTERACH, } Hebrides, near the Isle of Oransay.

ILCHESTER, a borough, market-town, and parish in the hundred of Tintinhull, Somerset, 10 miles from Castle Cary, and 124 from London; containing 130 houses and 867 inhabitants. It is pleasantly seated on the river Ivel, which is not navigable. It appears to have been a strong fortified town in the time of the Romans, and at the Norman conquest was a city containing several churches; the foundations of its walls are still perceivable near the river, and Yard Lane was formerly a ditch, which entirely surrounded the town. The fosse-way retains its name, and passes through the principal street; and the pavement of the original ford, across the river, may be seen on the west side of the bridge, formed of flag stones. Upon the bridge, and at its foot, are two dwelling houses, formerly chapels. The town at present consists of four streets, has a neat church, and a meeting-house for dissenters. The county gaol also is here; and it was formerly noted for its thread lace manufactory, but that is at present much declined, as well as a silk manufactory established here some years since. The assizes for the county were fixed at Ilchester in the reign of Edward III. but they have long since been alternately held at Wells, Taunton, and Bridgewater. A court is held here every Wednesday four weeks. It is a borough by prescription, and is governed by a bailiff and 12 capital burgesses, who, together with the inhabitants not receiving alms, return two members to parliament: the returning officer is the bailiff. Here is a good almshouse for 16 poor women and a housekeeper; and it gives the title of earl to the family of Fox. The celebrated Roger Bacon was born at this town. On King's Moor horse races are held; and the neighbourhood produces great quantities of excellent grain. Many oxen are bred here for the London and Salisbury markets. Its market is on Wednesday, and its fairs 16th April, and 16th September. The living is a rectory, rated at 7*l.* 16*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Bath and Wells.—Collinson's Somersetshire.

ILDERTON, a parish in Coquetdale ward, Northumberland, 5 miles from Wooler, and 318 from London; containing 23 houses and 135 inhabitants. On a hill near the village are the remains of many ruins of buildings, and the ramparts and outworks of a strong fortification.

ILE, a river in Somersetshire, which runs into the Parrett, about a mile south from Langport.

ILEN, a river in Pembrokeshire, which runs into the sea a little to the south of St. David's.

ILERAY, one of the Hebrides, near North Uist, about 3 miles long, and 1½ broad.

ILFORD GREAT, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Barking, hundred of Becontree, Essex, 7 miles from London on the Chelmsford road, and on the river Roding; it contains 329 houses and 1794 inhabitants, of whom 167 were returned as employed in trade.

ILFORD LITTLE, a parish in the hundred of Becontree, Essex, adjoining the above, and containing 15 houses and 85 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 11*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.*

ILFRACOMBE, a sea-port, market-town, and parish, in the hundred of Braunton, Devon, 9½ miles from Barnstaple, and 202 from London; containing 435 houses and 1638 inhabitants, of whom 120 were returned as being employed in various trades. It consists principally of one street, from the church to the sea-side, a mile long, and is tolerably neat and well built. The church is a large, plain structure, and has a handsome monument, erected at the national expence, to the memory of Capt. Bowen, who was killed in the attempt upon Teneriffe under Lord Nelson. It has a very commodious haven, and a newly-erected pier and light-house, and is so conveniently situated, that vessels can run in here when they cannot make Bideford or Barnstaple; so that much of the port business of the latter place is done here. The vessels belonging to the port are chiefly employed as coasters in carrying ore, corn, &c. from Cornwall and Devonshire to Bristol, and in fishing. The parish has several extensive tythings. It is a very convenient and pleasant place for sea-bathing, and outside the pier are several coves and many convenient machines. On a high point near the bay is a summer-house, built by sir Bouchier Wray, commanding a beautiful prospect. It is a corporation governed by a mayor, bailiffs, and other officers, but never sent members to parliament. It has a market on Saturday, which is well supplied with provisions, fish, &c. and at a very reasonable rate. Packets go from hence to Bristol, Swansea, and Milford Haven. The living is a vicarage, rated at 50*l.* 4*s.* belonging to the prebend thereof in Salisbury cathedral.—Polwhele's Devonshire.

ILKESTON, a parish in the hundred of Morleston and Litchurch, Derby, 7 miles from Derby, and 126 from London; containing 487 houses and 2422 inhabitants, viz. 1237 males and 1185 females, of whom 803 were returned as being employed in various trades, and 145 in agriculture.

Ilkley, a parish in Skyrack wapentake, west riding of York, 6 miles from Otley, and 212 from London; containing 89 houses and 426 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 7*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.*

Ilketshall St. John's, a parish in the hundred of Wangford, Suffolk, 3 miles from Bungay, and 104 from London; containing 7 houses and 51 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 8*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* and the patron is the king.

Ilketshall St. Andrew's, a parish also near the above, containing 45 houses and 368 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Ilketshall St. Lawrence, another parish to the west of St. Andrew's, about ½ mile distant from each; containing 16 houses and 115 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Ilketshall St. Margaret's, another parish lying west of the above, containing 35 houses and 295 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 5*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Illington, a parish in the hundred of Shropham, Norfolk, 4 miles from Harling, and 87 from London; containing 5 houses and 71 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 6*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.*

Illogan, a parish in the hundred of Penwith, Cornwall, 3 miles from Redruth, and 266 from London; containing 529 houses and 2895 inhabitants, viz. 1434 males and 1461 females, of whom 106 were returned as employed in trade, and 174 in agriculture. The copper mine called Cook's Kitchen, in this parish, is esteemed one of the richest in the county. For several years it produced, after paying all expences, a clear profit of 80,000*l.* The parsonage is a new and elegant built house, and the living is a rectory, rated at 22*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*; but worth upwards of 300*l.* per annum.

Ilston, a hamlet in the parish of Carlton Curlieu, hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 6½ miles from Market Harborough, and 86 from London; containing 30 houses and 177 inhabitants.

Ilmer, a parish in the hundred of Ashendon, Bucks, 3 miles from Prince's Risborough, and 39 from London; containing 13 houses and 74 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 6*l.* 10*s.* 8*d.* and the patron is the earl of Chesterfield.

Ilmington, a parish in the hundred of Kington, Warwick, being on the borders of Gloucestershire, 3 miles from Shipston on Stour, and 66 from London; containing 141 houses and 656 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 30*l.* Here is a mineral spring, containing iron and a salt, concerning which authors differ.

Ilminster, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Abdick, Somerset, near the river Isle, 4 miles from Crewkerne, and 134½ from London, by Winsanton; it contains 351 houses and 2045 inhabitants, viz. 924 males and 1051 females, of whom 1267 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures, but principally in that of narrow cloths; and 451 in agriculture. The church is a handsome building, ornamented with a quadrangular glazed tower. Within is a monument erected in the beginning of the 17th century, to the memory of Nicholas Wadham and Dorothy his wife, the founders of Wadham college, Oxford. In the centre of the town stands a new-built market-house and shambles. Here is a free grammar school founded by Edward VI. with a good salary and a house for the head-master, as also for his assistant. Its market is on Saturday, and its fair the last Wednesday in August for cattle and pedlary. The living is a vicarage, rated at 25*l.* 5*s.*—Collinson's Somersetshire.

Ilsington, a parish in the hundred of Teinbridge, Devon, 4 miles from Chudleigh, and 186 from London; containing 161 houses and 866 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, rated at 17*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.* and is in the patronage of the dean and canons of Windsor.

Ilsley East, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Compton, Berks, situated to the south of Cuckhamsley hills, 8 miles from Newbury, and 54½ from London; containing 142 houses and 512 inhabitants. Its market is on Wednesday, and its fair 6th August. It is a rectory, value 22*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Ilsley West, a parish in the same hundred, adjoining the foregoing; containing 48 houses and 341 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 22*l.* 4*s.* 1*d.*

Ilston, a parish in the hundred of Swansea, Glamorganshire, Wales, 6 miles from Swansea, and 212 from London; containing 47 houses and 272 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 9*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* and the patron is the prince of Wales.

Ilton, a parish in the hundred of Abdick, Somerset, 2 miles from Ilminster, and 136 from London; containing 70 houses and 363 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.*

Ilton, a township in the parish of Masham, in Hang East wapentake, north riding of York, 2 miles from Masham, and 226 from London; containing 35 houses and 224 inhabitants.

Imber, a parish in the hundred of Heytesbury, Wilts, 4½ miles from Warminster, and 94 from London; containing 55 houses and 331 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Impington, a parish in the hundred of Northstow, Cambridge, 3 miles from Cambridge, and 53 from London; containing 18 houses and 92 inhabitants. The church is remarkable for its pulpit, which is formed like a gallery without any cover, in which the minister both reads prayers and preaches. The living is a vicarage, rated at 8*l.* 7*s.* and is in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Ely.

INCE, a parish in the hundred of Eddisbury, Chester, 2½ miles from Frodsham, and 187 from London; containing 81 houses and 445 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

INCE, a township in the parish of Wigan, hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, ½ mile from Wigan, and 199 from London; containing 161 houses and 962 inhabitants. Cannel coal is found near this village, of which vases, snuff-boxes, buttons, &c. are manufactured.

INCE BLUNDELL, a hamlet in the parish of Sophton, in the hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 4 miles from Ormskirk, and 206 from London; containing 54 houses and 419 inhabitants.

INCH and INIS, is the Gaelic name for a small island.

INCH, a parish in the shire of Wigton, Scotland, 5 miles from Port Patrick, and 24 from Newton Douglas; containing 355 houses and 1577 inhabitants, of whom 216 were returned as employed in trade. There are about 15 or 16 fresh water lakes in this parish; the two called Castle Kennedy, one a mile and the other 1½ mile long, lie parallel to each other, and have each a small island in the centre, about 600 yards in circumference, on one of which are still the vestiges of a religious edifice. Near this village are some mineral and sulphureous springs. The earl of Stair has his residence at an elegant castle here. The village of Cairn stands on the south of Loch Ryan, and has an excellent harbour from three to eight fathoms deep at low water.

INCH, an island of Ireland, in Lough Swilly, about five miles in circumference, six miles north-west of Londonderry.

INCH, a town of Scotland, in the county of Aberdeen, 40 miles north-west of Inverary.

INCH BRAYOCK, a small island at the mouth of the South Esk in Forfarshire, near Montrose, 11 miles from Aberbrothwick, the road from thence passing through this isle, a stone bridge joining it to the parish of Craig, and another of wood, with a drawbridge, connecting it with Montrose. Very convenient streets and buildings have of late been formed through the island. The population was included with Craig. Here is an excellent dry dock for ship-building, and the burial-place for the parish of Craig.

INCH CAILLOCK, or the island of Old Women, lies in Loch Lomond, about one mile long, and is covered with trees. Here was anciently a nunnery, the chapel of which was once the parish church of Buchanan; the burial-ground is still here.

INCHCOLM, or COLUMBA, a small island in the Frith of Forth, one mile from Aberdeen, in the shire of Fife, to which parish it belongs. Alexander I. king of Scotland, having been driven in a tempest on this island in the beginning of the 12th century, founded a monastery of Augustines here, which continued till the reformation. The ruins of the church, and of a square tower, are still remaining. It is the property of the earl of Moray, who has the title of Lord of St. Colomb.

INCH GARVIE, a small island in the Frith of Forth, near the middle of the passage at Queensferry. It was anciently fortified, and has still some cannon mounted with a few artillery-men resident to take care of the stores.

INCH INNAN, a parish in the shire of Renfrew, 3 miles from Renfrew, in the road from Glasgow to Greenock; it contains 71 houses and 462 inhabitants. Here is an elegant mansion of lord Semphill. The high road crosses the united streams of the Gryffe and Carl by a handsome bridge of 10 arches.

INCH KEITH, an island in the Frith of Forth, 12 miles south-east of Dunfermline.

INCH KENNETH, a small island near the west coast of Scotland, 1¼ mile west of Mull.

INCH MARNOCK, a small island near the west coast of the isle of Bute, where are the ruins of a chapel. The extent of this little isle is about a mile, has 120 acres of arable land, 40 of brush wood, near 300 of moor, with strata of coral and shells on the west side.

INCH MURRIN, the largest island in Loch Lomond, about 2 miles long and 1 broad. It is well stocked with deer, and belongs to the duke of Montrose, who has a neat hunting seat and offices here, near the ruins of the castle formerly belonging to the earls of Lenox.

INCH POINT, a cape of Ireland, between Dingle bay and Castlemain-harbour in the county of Kerry, 13 miles east of Dingle.

INCH TURR, a parish in the carse of Gowrie, Perthshire, united with Rossie, on the banks of the Tay, 9 miles from Perth; containing 190 houses and 949 inhabitants. The hamlet of Polgavie has a good pier and harbour on the Tay. It belongs to Lord Kinnaird, whose residence is at Drimmie house, in the parish of Long Forgan, but the greater part of his grounds and plantations are here.

INGATESTONE, a town in the hundred of Chelmsford, Essex, being partly a parish of itself, and partly lying in the parish of Fryerning, 23 miles from London; consisting of one principal street, and containing 115 houses and 645 inhabitants. In the church are some handsome monuments of the Petre family, whose ancient seat is here. It had formerly a market, now discontinued. Its fair, 1st December, for Scotch and Welsh cattle, is much frequented by graziers for lean stock. The church has a high embattled tower of brick, and the living is a rectory, rated at 16*l.* 15*s.* 4*d.* It was formerly called Inge Abbots, from its belonging to Barking Abbey.—Morant's Essex.

Ingborough, a hamlet in the parish of Wood Chester, hundred of Longtree, Gloucester, 2½ miles from Minchinhampton, and 101 from London. Population included with Wood Chester.

Ingbrechworth, a hamlet in the parish of Penistone, in Staincross wapentake, west riding of York, 6 miles from Barnsley, and 176 from London; containing 33 houses and 170 inhabitants.

Ingersby, a hamlet in the parish of Hungarton, hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 6 miles from Leicester, and 94 from London; containing 3 houses and 26 inhabitants.

Ingerthorpe, a hamlet in the parish and liberty of Ripon, west riding of York, 3½ miles from Ripon, and 219 from London; containing 6 houses and 46 inhabitants.

Inge Abbots. See Ingatestone, Essex.

Inge Hospital. See Fryerning, Essex.

Inge Margaret. See Margaretting, Essex.

Inge Mountney. See Mountnessing, Essex.

Ingestry, a parish in the hundred of Pirehill, Stafford, situated on the banks of the Trent, 2½ miles from Stafford, and 257 from London; containing 12 houses and 115 inhabitants. It gives the title of viscount to earl Talbot, who has a seat here. It is a rectory, rated at 10*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.*

Ingham, a parish in the hundred of Aslacoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 8 miles from Lincoln, and 142 from London; containing 42 houses and 225 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Ingham, a parish in the hundred of Happing, Norfolk, 15 miles from Norwich, and 124 from London; containing 52 houses and 329 inhabitants. Fair 10th June. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the bishop of Norwich.

Ingham, a parish united with Timworth, hundred of Blackburn, Suffolk, 3½ miles from Bury, and 74 from London; containing 25 houses and 160 inhabitants.

Ingleborough Hill, 8 miles north-west of Settle, a very singular mountain in Yorkshire, has Clapham to the south, Ingleston to the west, Chapel in the Dale to the north, and Selside to the east: the base is near 20 miles in circumference; in some parts it is rugged and perpendicular, and appears to have another hill laid upon it. It is 2380 feet above the level of the sea. Several streams rise here, which at length fall into the Irish channel.

Ingleby, a hamlet in the parish of Foremark, in the hundred of Repton and Gresshy, Derby, 6 miles from Derby, and 121 from London, on the river Soar; containing 24 houses and 132 inhabitants.

Ingleby, a hamlet in the parish of Saxilby, in the hundred of Lawress, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 6 miles from Lincoln, and 139 from London. Population included with Saxilby.

Ingleby Barwick, a hamlet in the parish of Stainton, in Langborough wapentake, north riding of York, 3 miles from Yarm, and 250 from London; containing 30 houses and 162 inhabitants.

Ingleby Arncliff, a parish in Langborough wapentake, north riding of York, 6½ miles from Stokesley, and 236 from London; containing 58 houses and 253 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Ingleby Greenhow, another parish in the same wapentake, 7 miles from Gisborough, and 246 from London; contains 39 houses and 180 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Inglefield. See Englefield, Berks.

Inglesham, a parish in the hundred of Highworth, Wilts, 3 miles from Highworth, and 130 from London; containing 18 houses and 89 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 8*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Salisbury.

Ingleton, a township in the parish of Staindrop, in Darlington ward, Durham, 7 miles from Barnard castle, and 242 from London; containing 63 houses and 236 inhabitants.

Ingleton, a township and chapelry in the parish of Bentham, in Staincliffe and Ewcross wapentake, west riding of York, 10½ miles from Settle, and 242 from London; containing 249 houses and 1106 inhabitants, of whom 246 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures.

English Coombe. See Coombe English, Somerset.

Ingoe, a hamlet in the parish of Stamfordham, in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 10 miles from Newcastle, and 280 from London; containing 45 houses and 201 inhabitants.

Ingol, a hamlet in the parish of Preston, in the hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, 3 miles from Preston, and 219 from London. Population returned included with Lea.

Ingoldisthorpe, a parish in the hundred of Smithdon, Norfolk, 7 miles from Lynn, and 110 from London; containing 30 houses and 206 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 12*l.*

Ingoldmells, a parish in the hundred of Candleshoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 6 miles from Spilsby near the sea, and 140 from London; containing 28 houses and 137 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 23*l.* 10*s.* 2*d.*

Ingoldsby, a parish in the hundred of Aswardhurn, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, near Sleaford, and 117 miles from London; containing 47 houses and 154 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 21*l.* 6*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of Christ Church college, Cambridge.

Ingram, a parish in Coquetdale ward, Northumberland, standing on the small river Bramish, 10 miles from Rothbury, and 310 from London; containing 9 houses and 86 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 24*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.*

INGRAVE, or GINGRAVE, a parish in the hundred of Barnstaple, Essex, 2 miles from Brentwood, and 20 from London; containing 55 houses and 326 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 7*l.* 15*s.* 4*d.*, with Thorndon and West Horndon annexed.

INGWORTH, a parish in the hundred of South Erpingham, Norfolk, 2 miles from Hailsham, and 123 from London; containing 43 houses and 181 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.*

INISBEG, an island on the north-west of Ireland, on the coast of Donegal, 6 miles north-east of Bloody Farland Point.

INISBEG, an island near the west coast of Ireland, in the county of Kerry, 2 miles from the Greater Blasket island.

INISBOFFIN, an island near the west coast of Ireland, and county of Donegal, 5 miles south-west of Bloody Farland point.

INISBOFFIN, an island lying on the west of Ireland, on the coast of Galway.

INISBOSIN, an island on the west coast of the county of Mayo, province of Connaught, Ireland, and lies three leagues from the main land.

INISCALTRA, an island of Ireland, in the river Shannon, 2 miles south of Mount Shannon.

INISCATTERY, an island of Ireland in the Shannon, about 7 miles from its mouth.

INISCLOCRAN, an island in Lough Ree, in the river Shannon, lying between Westmeath and Roscommon.

INISDRISRA, an island on the south-west of Ireland, on the coast of the county of Cork, in Roaring Water bay.

INISDUFF, an island on the north of Ireland, on the coast of Donegal, 6 miles north-east of Bloody Farland point.

INISFALLEN, an island in the lake of Killarney, a most beautiful lawn of about 17 acres. Round the island is a path over-arched with luxuriant trees. Here is the remains of an abbey founded in 1180, and a small building near the landing-place, formerly a chapel, is now used by visitors to dine in. A hollow rock here, called the Bed of Honour, is said to possess a charm against sterility in women.—Carr's Stranger in Ireland.

INISFREE, an island on the west of Ireland, on the coast of Donegal, 2 miles south-east of Arranmore.

INISFREE BAY, a bay of Ireland, on the west coast of the county of Donegal, 6 miles south of Bloody Farland bay.

INISGLORA ISLAND, on the west of Ireland, on the coast of Mayo, 5 miles north from North Iniskea island.

INISGOULA ISLAND, on the west of Ireland, on the coast of Mayo, in Clew bay.

INISHAE ISLAND, on the west of Ireland, on the coast of Galway.

INISHAIL, a beautiful little island in Lochaw, Argyleshire, Scotland, on which the ruins of a Cistercian monastery are still to be seen. In a chapel of that building public worship was performed, till this parish was annexed to Glenorchy. The parish of Inishail contains 132 houses and 740 inhabitants.

INISHANNON, a town in the county of Cork, province of Munster, Ireland, seated on the river Bandon, 6 miles from Kinsale, and 134 from Dublin. A considerable linen manufactory, particularly of bed-ticking for the English market, has of late years been established here, which has considerably increased the trade and population. The river is navigable to Colliers Quay ½ mile below the town.

INISHARL ISLAND, on the west of Ireland, on the coast of Galway, 7 miles east of Rinveel point.

INISHBGIL ISLAND, on the west of Ireland, on the coast of Mayo, between the island of Achill and the main land.

INISHERRIN ISLAND, on the south of Ireland, on the coast of Cork, on the west side of Baltimore harbour, 6 miles in circumference.

INISHMURRY ISLAND, in the river Shannon, 16 miles west of Limerick.

INISHURIN ISLAND, on the west of Ireland, on the coast of Galway, 1 mile west of Rinveel point.

INISHUGH ISLAND, on the west of Ireland, on the coast of Mayo, in Clew bay.

INISKEA NORTH, an island on the west of Ireland, on the coast of Mayo.

INISKEA SOUTH, an island 1 mile south-west of the preceding.

INISKEANE, a market-town in the county of Cork, province of Munster, Ireland, 144 miles from Dublin.

INISKEEL, an island on the west of Ireland, on the coast of Donegal, at the mouth of the Guibarra river.

INISKEERAH, an island on the west of Ireland, on the coast of Mayo, 5 miles north-east of North Iniskea island.

INISKERRY, an island on the west of Ireland, on the coast of Clare, north of Dunmore bay.

INISLYNE, an island on the west of Ireland, on the coast of Mayo, in Clew bay.

INISMAIN, one of the south Arran islands near the west coast of Ireland, at the entrance of Galway bay.

INISMAKEERA, an island on the west of Ireland, on the coast of Donegal, 1 mile south of Arranmore.

INISMANAN, an island on the north-west of Ireland, on the coast of Donegal, 3 miles south of Bloody Farland point.

INISMURRY, an island on the west of Ireland, on the coast of Sligo, between Sligo bay and Donegal bay.

INISHARK ISLAND, on the west of Ireland, on the coast of Galway.

INISTEEGEL, an island on the west of Ireland, on the coast of Mayo, 6 miles east-north-east of Rinveel point.

INISTIOGHE, a town of Ireland, in the county of Kilkenny; it is 10 miles south of Gowran, 13 south-west of Kilkenny, and 63 from Dublin. It sent two members to the Irish parliament.

Inistory, as its name implies, a very high island on the coast of Donegal, province of Ulster, Ireland, and lies 8 miles from the coast.

Inistuiscar, an island on the west of Ireland, on the coast of Kerry.

Inisture, an island on the west of Ireland, on the coast of Mayo.

Inisturk, an island contiguous to that of Inisclare, at the entrance of Clew bay, on the coast of Mayo, province of Connaught, Ireland.

Inkberrow, a parish in the hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 4 miles from Alcester, and 107 from London; containing 289 houses and 1335 inhabitants, of whom 153 were returned as being employed in various trades. The church is a very ancient building; the living is a vicarage, rated at 16*l.* 2*s.* 1*d.* in the patronage of lord Abergavenny.

Inken, a parish in the hundred of Kintbury Eagle, Berks, 4 miles from Hungerford, and 61 from London; containing 127 houses and 590 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 11*l.* 14*s.* 7*d.*

Inner, a Gaelic word signifying the mouth of a river, forming a part of many names of places in Scotland. It is now generally changed to Inver.

Innerkip, a parish in the shire of Renfrew, Scotland, and, as its name implies, is situated at the mouth of the river Kip, where it falls into the Frith of Clyde. It is 4 miles from Greenock, and contains 194 houses and 1367 inhabitants, of whom 101 were returned as being employed in various trades. Besides the small Kirktown of Innerkip, the parish is also composed of the hamlets of Daff and Gourock. The coast is indented with several bays, and Gourock has a very safe and commodious harbour.

Innerleithen, a parish in the shire of Peebles, Scotland, on the banks of the Tweed. The village is pleasantly situated at the mouth of a river of the same name, 5 miles from Peebles; and contains 117 houses and 542 inhabitants, a number of whom are employed in an extensive woollen manufacture lately established here, the river being capable of working the most powerful machinery. The tower of Horsburgh is a very ancient building, on the banks of the Tweed. Here is a sulphureous mineral spring, similar to that of Harrowgate; many ruins of once fortified towers, and the lines of a strong encampment.

Innerleithen, a river of Scotland, which runs into the Tweed, about 5 miles east of Peebles.

Inner Sound, a strait between the Isle of Skye, and the north-west coast of Inverness-shire, in Scotland.

Innerwick, a parish in the shire of Haddington, on the sea-coast, to the east of Dunbar, 23 miles from Berwick; containing 186 houses and 846 inhabitants. It produces limestone and thin strata of coal, but no pits have yet been wrought.

Inningham, a parish in the hundred of Yarborough, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 5 miles from Grimsby, and 172 from London; containing 44 houses and 144 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 7*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.*

Inny, a river of Ireland, in the county of Kerry, which empties itself into Ballinskellig Bay.

Inskip, a township in the parish of St. Michael's Garstang, hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, 4 miles from Garstang, and 224 from London; containing 104 houses and 635 inhabitants.

Instow, a parish in the hundred of Fremington, Devon, 4 miles from Barnstaple, and 197 from London; containing 70 houses and 347 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 12*l.* 17*s.* 3*d.*

Intwood, a parish united with Keswick, in the hundred of Humbleyard, Norfolk, 4 miles from Norwich, and 105 from London; containing only 3 houses and 39 inhabitants.

Inver, a river in Ireland, which falls into Inver Bay, in the county of Donegal.

Inver, a river in Scotland, which falls into Loch Inver, in Sutherlandshire.

Inverary, a royal borough and county town of the shire of Argyle, Scotland. It is pleasantly situated on a small bay at the head of Loch Tyne, and contains 275 houses and 2045 inhabitants, viz. 986 males and 1065 females, of whom 245 were returned as employed in various trades, and 114 in agriculture. It consists principally of one row of houses facing the lake, well built and covered with slate. At the beginning of the 14th century it was little more than a fishing village, when the proprietors, the family of Argyle, fixing their residence here, and having the hereditary sheriffship, it became the seat of the courts and the county town; and was made a royal burgh by Charles I. It is governed by a provost, two bailies, and a council nominated by the duke. The chief support of the place is its herring fishery: about 20,000 barrels of herrings being annually caught in the Loch. A linen manufacture was established here in the year 1748, and in 1776 an attempt was made to introduce the woollen manufacture on a large scale, but it did not meet with success. In 1754 a company from Lancashire, called the Argyle Furnace Company, erected a large iron work 2 miles from Inverary, which still continues, and is said to be in an increasing state. The ore is imported from the west of England, and is smelted with charcoal produced from the forests in the neighbourhood. One ship, belonging to the town, is employed in foreign trade; and about half a dozen employed in importing meal, coals, merchants goods, &c. and exporting wool, timber, and oak bark. The rivers Aray and Shira form, in their course, a large expanse of water, called the Black Lake; and at high tides, the sea flows as high as the lake, and salt water fish are frequently caught, together with trout and salmon. Near the town is Inverary castle, the seat of the duke of Argyle; a square building with a round tower at each corner. The hall is ornamented with all the trophies of an Highland castle, but the rest of the house is fitted up in the modern taste. From the lawn is a beautiful view of the bay, as well as the hill of Dunicoich, forming a pyramid 700 feet high, clothed with a thick wood, and having a Gothic watch tower on the summit.—Pennant's Tour.

INVERARITY, a parish in the shire of Forfar, 5 miles from Dundee, and 6 from Forfar; containing 160 houses and 820 inhabitants.

INVERAVEN, a parish partly in the shire of Elgin, and partly in that of Banff, on the banks of the Avon, near its conflux with the Spey; and contains 480 houses and 2107 inhabitants, being 957 males and 1150 females, of whom 67 were returned as employed in trade and manufacture, and 1461 in agriculture.

INVERBERVIE. See BERVIE.

INVERCHAOLAIN, a parish in the district of Cowal, shire of Argyle, 9 miles from Greenock across the Clyde; containing 109 houses and 626 inhabitants. The parish is intersected by Loch Streven, an arm of the sea.

INVERESK, a parish in Mid Lothian, on the bay of the Frith of Forth, where the river Esk falls therein, 4 miles from Edinburgh. The parish contains 1447 houses and 6604 inhabitants, including the town of Musselburgh, but only about 260 reside in the village, which is pleasantly situated on a hill commanding a most beautiful view of Musselburgh, the winding of the river Esk, and the Frith of Forth. The chief support of the village is in its daily supply to the metropolis with fish, vegetables, salt, &c.

INVERKEILLOR, a parish in the shire of Angus, Scotland, 6 miles from Aberbrothick, and 7 from Montrose; containing 353 houses and 1704 inhabitants, of whom 154 were returned as employed in various trades. The parish is divided by the river Lunan, and is watered by a stream called Kailor, at the mouth of which is a small fishing village called Ethiehaven. At the mouth of the Lunan are the venerable ruins of Red castle, so called from the red colour of the freestone, with which this place abounds.

INVERKEITHING, a royal borough and seaport town in Fifeshire, Scotland, on the north coast of the Frith of Forth, at the head of Inverkeithing Bay, 8 miles from Dunfermline, and 18 from Edinburgh; containing 339 houses and 2228 inhabitants, viz. 1031 males and 1197 females, of whom 177 were returned as employed in trade, and 91 in agriculture. It consists of one principal street, with lanes crossing nearly at right angles. The buildings are rather ancient. The town-house contains the prison and various public offices. Before the entrance of the harbour there is a large and safe bay, which affords excellent shelter for ships in all winds. Here his majesty's ships of war sometimes come from Leith roads, and ride at anchor, to avoid the winter storms; and merchant ships from the Mediterranean formerly used to perform quarantine here. The harbour itself is a small bay, at the mouth of which, on the west side, lies a floating lazaretto, where instead of detaining ships from foreign ports, the particular goods in which any infection may be supposed to lodge, are immediately received, aired under the inspection of a proper officer, and delivered, within a limited time, to the owners, by the orders of the custom-house. At the head of the bay is a quay, the proper place for landing and receiving goods, which has been deepened within these few years, and a narrow channel cut further down to admit ships up to it. There are here, sometimes, between 40 and 50 vessels from different places, waiting for coals, especially in the winter season. Several ships belong to this port, but none of any considerable burthen; some of them sail to foreign ports, and the others are employed in the coal and coasting trade. Not far from the town a lead-mine was discovered, which belonged to the earl of Morton, but after being wrought some time it disappeared. A herring fishery has lately been begun on the coast. Here are several salt pans and an iron foundery, and at the harbour of North Ferry, opposite to Queen's Ferry, in crossing the frith, is a village containing about 500 inhabitants. The island of Inchgarvie belongs to this parish. On the top of Lethem Hills, near this town, are several upright stones in a circular form, said to have been a druidical temple. In this parish is the castle of Rosyth, a ruinous edifice built upon a rock, and at high water is entirely surrounded by the sea. Inverkeithing is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, and a treasurer; and joins with Culross, Queen's Ferry, Stirling, and Dunfermline, in sending a member to parliament. The famous admiral Greig, in the Russian service, was born in this town.—Pennant's Tour.

INVERKEITHNEY, a parish in the shire of Banff, Scotland, on the banks of the river Deveron, 12 miles from Banff; and contains 104 houses and 503 inhabitants.

INVERLOCHY, an ancient burgh in Inverness, and in former times a most opulent city; near where it stood is now only the remains of a castle, a short distance from Fort William, which was formerly the fort and garrison of Inverlochy, but took its present name in honour of king William. It is a quadrangular building, with round towers at the angles; the towers and ramparts are of solid stone, 9 feet thick; the towers are not entire. It was anciently occupied by the Thanes of Lochaber, particularly Banquo, the predecessor of the Stuart family. Below the castle a pleasant walk is still called Banquo's walk.

INVERNESS, a royal borough and county town of Inverness-shire, Scotland, standing on both sides of the river Ness, where it falls into the Moray Frith, 32 miles from Fort Augustus, and 156 from Edinburgh; containing 1392 houses and 8702 inhabitants, viz. 3718 males and 5014 females, of whom 1389 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures, and 268 in agriculture. The town is well built, and near its center, in the High street, stands the Court-house connected with the Tolbooth, a handsome modern building, with a tower and elegant spire. The academy, built in 1790, is a neat and commodious building. Over the Ness, which runs through the town, is a fine stone bridge of seven arches, connecting the northern and southern parts, the latter being by far the most extensive. It is a royal borough, holding its first charter from Malcolm Canmore, and is governed by a provost, four bailies, and a dean of guild, assisted by 17 other counsellors. The old council annually elect the new. Here are six incorporated trades, two of whose deacons and their convener are members of the council. This town before 1745 principally consisted of granaries, kilns, barns, &c. and at the period of the rebellion was little more than a mass of ruinous houses, but within the last 40 years it has been greatly improved, being almost wholly rebuilt. The chief manufactures are of hemp and flax, and some of cotton and woollen; there are also several tanneries, brickworks, &c. The harbour is safe and commodious: vessels of 200 tons can unload at the quay, and those of 500 tons can ride at safety in the frith within 1 mile of the town. The ships belonging to it are chiefly employed in carrying salmon and the manufactures of the country to London, and in bringing back various articles of grocery, &c. The salmon fishery in the river Ness is very considerable, and is formed by several of the leading fishmongers in London. The memorable battle of Culloden was fought near this town. There are three national or Presbyterian churches, besides one of Episcopalians, a chapel for the Methodists, &c. Near this town is Tomnaheurich, the Hill of Fairies, of a singular shape, nearly resembling a ship keel turned upwards, covered with trees; it is 1984 feet long, and 250 feet above the level of the river. Near this mount is the hill of Craig Phatric, celebrated for the remains of a vitrified fort.

INVERNESS-SHIRE, one of the most extensive counties in Scotland, bounded on the north by the shire of Ross, and part of the Moray Frith; on the east by Elgin, Moray, and Aberdeen; on the south by Perth and Argyle; and on the west by the Atlantic Ocean. Several of the Hebrides are attached to this shire. It is about 92 miles long, and 58 broad; and comprehends the districts of Badenoch, Lochaber, and Glenelg, subdivided into 31 parochial districts; containing 14,337 houses inhabited by 74,292 persons, viz. 33,801 males and 40,491 females, of whom 3864 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures, and 34,068 in agriculture. The vale of Glenmore-nahalabin extends through the center of the county from east to west, having a chain of lakes, Loch Ness, Loch Oich, Loch Lochy, and an arm of the sea called Lochiel, through which is now cutting a navigable canal, to unite the Eastern and Western Oceans. On each side this extensive vale, the surface is wild, barren, and mountainous. One of the most celebrated and highest mountains in Great Britain is Ben Nevis, the summit of which is always covered with snow; it is 4570 feet above the level of the sea. A great part of it is composed of beautiful brown porphyry, amongst which is found green porphyry mixed with quartz. Its red granite found in this mountain is the most beautiful of any known in the world. There are several other mountains adjoining Ben Nevis of nearly the same elevation. The banks of the lakes and the valleys have many tracts of good arable land, and the county is every where intersected by numerous rapid currents, which unite and form rivers, the whole of them abounding with trout and salmon. The river Foyers is noted for its tremendous cataract. On the borders of the county are several extensive tracts of fir wood, the evident remains of large forests. The principal employment of the farmers is the management of black cattle and sheep, and there are numerous herds of goats; and the mountains and forests are inhabited by immense herds of red deer and roes. Alpine and the common hares, with a variety of other game, are found in abundance. The Gaelic is the general language used on the northern, western, and southern borders. The many military roads through this once impenetrable country, excite the astonishment of the traveller; they are often carried over mountains and morasses. Here were formerly very strong military stations at Fort George, Fort Augustus, and Fort William, as a check upon the inhabitants. In the district of Glenelg are seen the ruins of many of those circular towers which are so much found in the Western Isles; they are round and tapering like glass-houses; within, horizontal galleries go quite round, connected by stairs, which ascend quite to the top, the roof being open. Antiquaries have not decided for what purpose these towers were built. The vitrified fort, on the summit of Craig Phatric, near Inverness, is a very remarkable structure, and has attracted the notice of the antiquary; some maintain that the vitrification is the effect of a volcano, others the work of art. Near Fort William, in the bed of the river Nevis, is a singular vein of marble of a black ground, with a beautiful white flowering like needle work. Here are also veins of lead and iron, and one of silver has been wrought, but unsuccessfully. The want of coals is severely felt in this county.

INVERUGIE, a small village in the parish of St. Fergus, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, on the banks of the Ugie, where it falls into the ocean. Here is a considerable bleach field for thread, and a large porter and beer brewery. Near it are the ruins of Inverugie castle.

INVERURY, an ancient royal burgh in Aberdeenshire, situated on a point of land formed by the conflux of the Don and Ury, 14 miles from Aberdeen, and 51 from Dundee; containing 189 houses and 785 inhabitants. It has a very elegant new bridge over the Don, erected by public subscription. It is supposed to have been made a burgh by king Robert Bruce, and is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and 13 counsellors. It gives second title of baron to the earl of Kinfore.

INWARDLEIGH, a parish in the hundred of Black Torrington, Devon, 3 miles from Hatherleigh, and 198 from London; containing 74 houses and 384 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 16*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.*

INWORTH, a parish in the hundred of Lexden, Essex, 4 miles from Witham, and 141 from London; containing 52 houses and 269 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.*

JOCK'S LODGE, a place in Mid Lothian, about 1 mile from Edinburgh, where are some very elegant and extensive barracks for cavalry.

JOHNBY, a hamlet in the parish of Greystock, in Leath ward, Cumberland, 5 miles from Penrith, and 288 from London; containing 16 houses and 81 inhabitants.

JOHNNY GROAT'S HOUSE, the most northerly dwelling in Scotland, in the county of Caithness, 1 mile west of Duncansby Head.

JOHN'S ST. a parish in the hundred of East, Cornwall, 2 miles from Saltash, and 222 from London; containing 22 houses and 110 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 12*l.* 12*s.* 4*d.* the patron is the king.

JOHN'S ST. or ST JOHN'S CLAUCHAN, a considerable village in the parish of Dalry, in the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, 20 miles from Newton Douglas, belonging to the earl of Galloway; it contains about 400 inhabitants.

JOHN'S HAVEN, a sea-port town in the parish of Benhole, shire of Kincardine, Scotland, 9 miles from Montrose, and 4 from Bervie; it contains 1019 inhabitants, of whom a considerable number are employed in an extensive manufactory of sail cloth, the produce of which is sent to Dundee. It was formerly a considerable fishing town, but the fishery has declined.

JOHNSTON, a parish in the district of Annandale, shire of Dumfries, Scotland, on the banks of the Annan, between Annan and Dumfries; containing 150 houses and 740 inhabitants. It is the property of the earl of Hopetown. At the north end of the parish are the ruins of Lochwood castle, once of great strength, and surrounded with impassable bogs.

JOHNSTON, a hamlet in the parish of Crosthwait, in Allerdale ward, below Derwent, 2 miles from Keswick, and 283 from London; containing 101 houses and 469 inhabitants.

JOHNSTON, a parish in the hundred of Roose, Pembrokeshire, Wales, 3½ miles from Haverfordwest, and 268½ from London; containing 27 houses and 99 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 2*l.* 0*s.* 5*d.* united with Stainton.

JORDASTON, a parish in the hundred of Dewsland, Pembroke, Wales, 254 miles from London; containing 22 houses and 116 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.*

JOHN'S LEE ST. hamlet to Hexham, in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 1 mile from Hexham, and 281 from London.

IPING, a parish in the hundred of Easebourne, rape of Chichester, Sussex, 2 miles from Midhurst, and 58 from London; containing 38 houses and 209 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 7*l.* with Chichurst chapel annexed.

IPPLEPEN, a parish in the hundred of Haytor, Devon, 3 miles from Newton Abbots, and 190 from London; containing 130 houses and 821 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 26*l.* 2*s.* 3*d.* with Woodland chapel annexed, in the patronage of the dean and canons of Windsor.

IPPOLETS, a parish in the hundred of Hitchin, Herts, 2 miles from Hitchin, and 32 from London; containing 100 houses and 464 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 11*l.* united with Wymondley, in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge.

IPSDON, or IPSTONES, a parish partly situated in the hundred of Lewknor, Oxford, and partly in the hundred of Desborough, Bucks, 7 miles from Marlow, and 38 from London; containing 143 houses and 734 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 9*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of Merton college, Oxford.

IPSLEY, a parish in the hundred of Barlichway, Warwick, 6 miles from Alcester, and 109 from London; containing 82 houses and 478 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 11*l.* 10*s.* 7*d.*

IPSTONE, a parish in the hundred of Totmonslow, Stafford, 4½ miles from Cheadle, and 150 from London; containing 240 houses and 1304 inhabitants, of whom 426 were returned as employed in various trades. It is a curacy.

IPSWICH, the county town of Suffolk, situated on the river Orwell, 18 miles from Colchester, 10 from Harwich, and 69 from London. It consists of 12 parishes, containing 1934 houses and 10,045 inhabitants, viz. 4415 males and 5628 females, of whom 1669 were returned as employed in various trades and handicraft, and 292 in agriculture. This town is of great antiquity, and was formerly of more consequence and greater extent than at present, having had 21 parish churches. Many of the buildings are still ornamented with carved work. The river here has the advantage of a very high tide, and though it has been much neglected, is now rendered capable of bringing vessels of large burthen within a short distance of the town. Over the river is a stone bridge, and here is a commodious quay and custom-house. Vessels of 500 tons have been frequently built here. The town-hall is a very ancient building, having formerly been the parish church of St. Mildred's; adjoining, is a spacious council chamber, and underneath are the kitchens, formerly used at the feasts of the merchants, guilds, &c. Here is also a shire-hall, (in which the sessions are held,) a new and extensive county jail, a palace for the bishop of Norwich, a free-school, and a good library, with a work-house, or hospital, for lunatics, and where the idle and vagabonds are kept to hard labour. The houses are in general well built, and the streets all paved. In the middle of the market place is a handsome cross. Ipswich was anciently celebrated for its extensive manufactures of broad cloth and sail cloth, but they have long since fallen to decay, and now flourish in the west of England. The chief trade of the town is, at present, in malting and corn. Great quantities of ship timber are sent from hence to the different dock-yards, especially to Chatham: and regular passage boats go to Harwich every tide, similar to those at Gravesend. Cardinal Wolsey, a native of the town, built and endowed a college and grammar school, intended as a nursery for his college at Oxford, consisting of a dean, 12 secular canons, 8 clerks, and 8 choristers; but the disgrace of that great man, before it was completed, put an end to the design. There were formerly several religious houses established here in different parts of the town, but not many vestiges of them are now to be traced. Ipswich had a mint as early as the Saxon times, and a charter in the reign of John. It is now incorporated under 2 bailiffs, a recorder, 12 portmen, of whom the bailiffs are two, a town clerk, 2 chamberlains, 2 coroners, and 24 common council; and sends 2 members to parliament, the bailiffs being the returning officers. It has many rights and privileges peculiar to itself, and an admiralty jurisdiction extending on the Essex coast beyond Harwich, and on both sides the Suffolk coast. Here is a market on Tuesday and Thursday for meat, on Wednesday and Friday for fish, and on Saturday for all kinds of provisions. A mile from the town is the race course, and extensive barracks have lately been erected here for infantry and cavalry. Fairs 4th May, 25th July, and 25th September. — Oldfield's History of the Boroughs, &c.

IRBY, a hamlet in the parish of Thurstaston, hundred of Wirrall, Chester, 11 miles from Chester, and 197 from London; containing 21 houses and 105 inhabitants.

IRBY, a parish in the hundred of Bradley Haverstoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 5 miles from Caistor, and 162 from London; containing 27 houses and 192 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 18*l.*

IRBY, a parish in the hundred of Candleshoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 4 miles from Spilsby, and 134 from London; containing 16 houses and 87 inhabitants. The church is a curacy, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Lincoln.

IRCHESTER, a parish in the hundred of Higham Ferrers, Northampton, 2 miles from Wellingborough, and 65 from London; containing 103 houses and 523 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, rated at 6*l.* and is united with Wollaston.

IREBY High, a parish and market-town in Allerdale ward, below Derwent, Cumberland, 9 miles from Cockermouth, and 103 from London; containing 69 houses and 355 inhabitants. It stands near the source of the river Ellen. The market is on Thursday. Fairs on the days of St. Matthias and St. Matthew. The church is a curacy, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Carlisle.

IREBY Low, a hamlet to the above, 1 mile distant.

IREBY, a township in the parish of Tatham, in Lonsdale ward, Lancaster, 2 miles from Hornby, and 250 from London; containing 74 houses and 350 inhabitants. Fairs 24th February and 20th September.

IRELAND, one of the British islands, lying in the Atlantic Ocean to the westward of Great Britain, and separated from it by a channel called, indifferently, St. George's Channel, and the Irish Sea. It lies between 51° 19′ and 55° 23′ north latitude, and between 5° 19′ and 10° 28′ west longitude. Its greatest length, measured on a meridian, is from the Stags of Cork harbour to Blackfarland point in the county of Donegal, which may be reckoned 235 miles; and its greatest breadth, measured nearly on a parallel of latitude, is from the western point of Mayo to the mouth of Strangford Lough, 182 miles. The breadth, however, is very unequal, in consequence of the deep indentations on the western coast; so that Galway and Dublin bays, though on opposite coasts are not 120 miles distant from each other, and there is not a spot in the island more than 60 miles from the sea. The superficial contents may be computed at 30,370 square miles, or 19,436,000 acres; and the pro-

Published June 1.st 1806 by W.m Faden Geog.r Printer to the King's Most Excellent Majesty Charing Cross London.

W. of Long. W. from Greenwich

Published and Sold by R. Phillips, Bridge Street, Blackfriars London.

Engraved by W. Lang

tion being upwards of five millions, there will be about 130 inhabitants to each square mile. Ireland lying nearly in the same parallel with England, the difference of climate cannot be supposed to be very important. The mean temperature of the north is about 48, of the middle 50, and of the south 52, of Fahrenheit. Ireland is divided into four great provinces, viz. Ulster, Connaught, Leinster, and Munster, which are again divided into 32 counties, containing 3436 parishes. Ulster, which occupies the northern part of the kingdom, contains nine counties, viz. Antrim, Down, Armagh, Tyrone, Londonderry, Donegal, Fermanagh, Cavan, and Monaghan; Connaught, situated to the west, contains five counties, viz. Leitrim, Sligo, Roscommon, Mayo, and Galway; Leinster, situated to the east, contains twelve counties, viz. Louth, Meath, Dublin, Wicklow, Wexford, Kilkenny, Carlow, Kildare, Queen's County, King's County, Westmeath, and Longford; Munster, which occupies the southern part of the island, contains six counties, viz. Clare, Limerick, Kerry, Cork, Waterford, and Tipperary. The established religion is that of the English church, but a majority of the people are Roman Catholics, and in the north the greater number are Presbyterians. Ireland is divided ecclesiastically into four provinces, Armagh, Dublin, Cashel, and Tuam; over each of which presides an archbishop. The archbishop of Armagh is primate and metropolitan of all Ireland, and has under him seven bishops, viz. those of Meath, Kilmore, Dromore, Clogher, Raphoe, Down and Connor, Derry, and Ardagh. The archbishop of Dublin is primate of Ireland, and has under him three bishops, viz. those of Kildare, Leighlin and Ferns, and Ossory. The archbishopric of Cashel has under it five suffragans, viz. Waterford and Lismore, Limerick and Ardfert, Killaloe and Kilfenora, Cork and Ross, and Cloyne. The archbishopric of Tuam has under it three suffragans, viz. Clonfert and Kilmacduagh, Killalla and Achonry, and Elphin. The archbishop of Cashel is also bishop of Emly, and the archbishop of Tuam of Ardagh. These bishops are nominated by the king, and appointed under the great seal. The number of deaneries in Ireland is 33, and of archdeaconries 34. The face of the country is mostly level, fertile, and abundant in pasturage. The chains of hills, for they can hardly be called mountains, are few and unimportant. The climate being more moist than that of England, the verdure never appears parched with heat. Tillage is little understood, and even in the best corn counties, as Louth, Kildare, Carlow, and Kilkenny, turnips and clover are almost unknown. The rivers of Ireland are the Shannon, whose course may be computed at 170 miles; the Barrow, the Blackwater, the Slaney, the Liffy, the Boyne, the Bann, and the Foyle. The lakes are numerous, and some of them extensive; the chief lake of fresh water is that of Erne, which exceeds 30 English miles in length, and 12 in its greatest breadth; Lough Neagh is one vast sheet of water, about 22 miles in length, and 12 in breadth; and its waters possess a petrifying quality; the lake of Corril, in the county of Galway, is about 20 miles long, and from 2 to 5 wide; Lough Derg, in the north-west, was remarkable in superstitious times for a little island containing what was called the purgatory of St. Patrick; the beautiful and interesting lake of Killarney, in the south-west, abounds with romantic views, and is fringed with the arbutus, no where else a native of the British dominions; this is almost the only lake in the south of Ireland, and the observation may be extended to the east: the lake of Allen is a chief source of the Shannon, into which the Gara and Key also pour their waters; further to the west are two considerable lakes, the Conn and the Mask. The mountainous chains are neither numerous nor important; but an upland ridge divides the country from the north-east to the south-west, giving birth to several of the rivers. The Irish hills generally form short lines or detached groups; Mangerton, near the lake of Killarney, is 2500 feet above the level of the sea, and others extend to upwards of 2800 feet. Scarcely the semblance of a forest remains in Ireland, though several formerly existed; their place is unhappily usurped by the moors or bogs which form a remarkable feature of the country: ornaments of gold, and other relics of antiquity, have from time to time been discovered in these bogs at great depths, and there are other indications that they are of comparatively recent formation. The bogs furnish an abundant supply of good fuel, and even add to the durability of the timber which is found universally buried beneath their surfaces; and they have the property of converting to a sort of leather the skins of men and animals, who have had the misfortune of being lost, and remaining in them for any length of time. Ireland has a considerable number of sea-ports, as Londonderry on the north; Belfast, Dublin, Dundalk, Drogheda, and Wexford, on the east coast; Cork, Waterford, Kinsale, Youghall, and Dungarvan, on the south; Galway, Sligo, with Limerick on the Shannon, &c. on the west; with many noble havens, such as Kenmare river, Bantry bay, Galway bay, &c. Ireland was distinguished at an early period for her manufacture of woollen stuffs, yet the spirit of industry made little progress, and the chief Irish manufactures are of recent institution. The linen manufacture was not unknown in Ireland in more early times, as appears from acts of parliament in the reigns of Henry VIII. and Elizabeth. In that of William III. it became an object of consequence, and, in 1699, such Irish duties were imposed on Irish woollens, that the manufacture was nearly abandoned, and the efforts of industry directed to the linen trade. In 1780 the annual produce of the linen manufacture was computed at about 2,000,000*l.* sterling, and in the year ending January, 1799, the value of Irish linen exported to Great Britain exceeded 2,300,000*l.* exclusive of that sent to America and consumed at home, and it has since considerably increased. But a grand portion of the commerce of Ireland arises from her abundant stores of black cattle. From the annual average taken of the three years preceding the 5th of January 1799, it appears that the total value of exports from Ireland to Great Britain alone was 5,612,682*l.* whilst the value of imports from Great Britain was only 3,555,845*l.* leaving a balance in favour of Ireland of 2,056,844*l.* This balance is, however, turned against Ireland by upwards of two millions remitted to absentees, and by the interest of loans raised in England. Ireland only possesses one Protestant university, that of Dublin. It consists of a chancellor, vice-chancellor, provost, vice-provost, 22 fellows, and 13 professors of various sciences. The number of students is commonly about 600, including 70 scholars on the foundation, and 50 servitors or sizars. In the year 1795 the parliament of Ireland established the royal college of St. Patrick at Maynooth, a small town about 12 miles from Dublin, as a place of education of young men for the Romish church; and the Catholics have also a lay college at the same place, established by private subscriptions in 1802. Dublin is the capital city of Ireland, and its situation is delightful in a bottom between ranges of hills on the south and north, and the river Liffey running through it. The mineralogy of Ireland has been recently enabled by the discovery of considerable mines of native coal in the county of Wicklow. Copper ore is found in various parts, and many of the mines contain evident marks of having been wrought at a former period. The mines of Ireland, however, were little known till the reign of Elizabeth. Lead is found in great abundance, and yields a large proportion of silver; a mine in the county of Antrim is said to yield a pound of silver from 30 pounds of lead. White lead ore, grey cobalt ore, manganese, and blende, both brown and black, are found in various parts of the country. The beds of coal have not yet been explored to their proper extent. Marble is found near Kilkenny, and in various other parts of the island. Slate of various kinds is also abundant. The Giant's Causeway is one of the greatest curiosities of Ireland projecting into the sea to an unknown extent; this surprising collection of basaltic pillars is about 8 miles north-east of Coleraine. Ireland contains several mineral springs, chiefly chalybeate. The population of Ireland in 1731 was 2,010,221, and in 1805 5,395,456, having been more than doubled during that period. The number of Romanists in 1731 was 1,309,768, and the Protestants 700,453, being nearly two Romanists to one Protestant. The number of Romanists had increased in 1805 to 4,300,000, and the Protestants to 1,080,000, making an increase of 2,990,240 Romanists, and 379,548 Protestants. The Irish language continues to be spoken in several parts of the country, in Louth, Meath, Westmeath, Kilkenny, and in all the counties of Munster, except the large towns, it is in general use. Ireland is governed by the same laws as Great Britain, since the union, which took place on the 1st of January 1801. Before this event it had a parliament of its own, the number of members returned to the house of commons by the respective counties, cities, and towns, being 300. The viceroy, or lord lieutenant, is appointed by the king; and he is assisted by a council, consisting of the great officers of state. The ancient history of Ireland is enveloped in considerable darkness and uncertainty; it is generally thought christianity was planted here as early as the fifth century, and that St. Patrick was engaged in propagating the christian faith. In the eighth century the Danes formed a settlement in this country, and even when Henry II. crossed with a design to conquer the country, they were in possession of several towns on the coast. In the 12th century Ireland was governed by five different kings, viz. of Ulster, Leinster, Meath, Connaught, and Munster; with many other petty princes, who were, perhaps, in some degree, tributary to the others. Dermot king of Leinster, having been expelled his kingdom for carrying away the wife of O'Roisk prince of Bressiny, fled to England to solicit the friendship of Henry II. offering to hold his crown in vassalage. Henry wanted little persuasion, and in 1172 received the submission of the whole country. The title he assumed was that of lord of Ireland. His son John gave the Irish a body of laws. In 1314 the Scots excited a rebellion in Ireland; and, in 1315, Edward Bruce, king of Scotland, expelled the English from almost all the places they held there, and was proclaimed king of Ireland, but the Scots were driven out in 1318. There were still, however, frequent rebellions of the natives, so that the English did not thoroughly establish their power till 1614. The Irish Catholics revolted again in 1641, and committed a dreadful massacre of the Protestants, but were reduced by Cromwell in 1653. In 1798 another rebellion broke out, which was not suppressed without considerable bloodshed. The communication between Great Britain and Ireland is by packet-boats stationed at Dublin, Donaghadee, and Waterford; and that valuable establishment, the mail-coach, of which there were only four in 1801, has now a regular conveyance to two thirds of the post towns daily, and to the remainder three times each week. There are 304 post towns.—Wynn's Ireland.

Ireland's Eye, a small island at the entrance into Dublin harbour.

Ireton, a hamlet in the parish of Kirk Ireton, hundred of Wirksworth, Derby, 6 miles from Ashborn, and 154 from London; containing 20 houses and 126 inhabitants.

Irk, a river in Lancashire, which falls into the Irwell, near Manchester.

Irham, a parish in the hundred of Bertisloe, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 106 miles from London; containing 50 houses and 299 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 13l. 15s. 9d.

Iron Acton. See Acton Iron, Gloucester.

Iron Gray, a town in Scotland, in the county of Kirkcudbright, 16 miles from Kirkcudbright.

Irstead, a parish in the hundred of Tunstead, Norfolk, 10 miles from Norwich, and 119 from London; containing 26 houses and 117 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 6l. 13s. 4d. united with Barton Toft, in the patronage of the bishop of Norwich.

Irt, a river in Cumberland, which falls into the Irish sea, near Ravenglass.

Irthen. See Hearner, Leicester.

Irthing, a river in Cumberland, which runs into the Eden, 2 miles east of Carlisle.

Irthingborough, a parish in the hundred of Huxloe, Northampton, 2¼ miles from Higham Ferrers, and 67 from London; containing 160 houses and 811 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5l. 6s. 8d.

Irthington, a parish in Eskdale ward, Cumberland, 6 miles from Carlisle, and 310 from London; containing 45 houses and 197 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6l. 1s. 5d.

Irton, a parish in Allerdale ward, above Derwent, Cumberland, near Egremont, and 306 miles from London; containing 41 houses and 215 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Irvine, or Irwine, a sea-port and royal borough in the shire of Ayr, Scotland, standing on a river of the same name, 15 miles from Arran, and 61 from Edinburgh; and containing 710 houses and 4581 inhabitants, viz. 1830 males and 2734 females, of whom 3961 were returned as employed in trade, and 336 in agriculture. The situation is dry and airy, having a broad street the whole length of the town: there is also a good row of houses on the south side of the river, connected by a handsome bridge, but standing in the parish of Dundonald, being chiefly inhabited by seafaring people. The church stands on a rising ground, between the town and the river, and is a handsome building with an elegant spire. The harbour is commodious, and has 12 feet water at the bar at spring tides. The principal trade is in the exportation of coal to Ireland. In 1790 there were 51 vessels belonging to this port, the tonnage of which amounted to 3682 tons; the largest 160 tons, and the smallest 33; and about 24,000 chaldrons of coals are exported annually. Considerable quantities of woollen goods and carpeting, muslins, lawns, gauzes, and linen, are likewise exported from the manufacturing towns. The principal imports are hemp, iron, and deals, from Memel and Norway; ship timber and corn. There is a dock-yard for ship-building, a large tannery, a rope walk, and a bleach-field. In the neighbourhood is the ancient castle of the earl of Eglintoun, being the remains of a nunnery.

Irvine, a river in Ayrshire, rising among the mountains which form a boundary between the counties of Air and Lanark, and falling into the Clyde a little below the town of Irvine.

Irvon, a river in Brecknockshire, which falls into the Wye at Builth.

Irwell, a river in Lancashire, which falls into the Mersey 7 miles above Warrington.

Iscoed, a village in the hundred of Maylor, Flintshire, Wales, 8 miles from Whitchurch, and 198 from London; containing 80 houses and 463 inhabitants.

Isell, a parish in Allerdale ward, below Derwent, Cumberland, stands near the river Derwent, 3½ miles from Cockermouth, and 302 from London; containing 58 houses and 276 inhabitants, including the adjoining hamlet of Isell Old Park. The living is a vicarage, value 8l. 13s. 6d.

Isfield, a parish in the hundred of Lexfield, Dorset, rape of Pevensey, Sussex, 2 miles from Uckfield, and 45 from London; containing 40 houses and 344 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 9l. 12s. 8d. in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury.

Isham, a parish in the hundred of Orlingbury, Northampton, 4 miles from Wellingborough, and 72 from London; containing 55 houses and 247 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 15l. in two moieties, one of them being in the patronage of the bishop of Lincoln.

Isycoed, a village in the hundred of Llangevelach, Glamorganshire, Wales, near Swansea, 208 miles from London; containing 135 houses and 646 inhabitants.

Isis, the name given to the Thames before it joins the Thame at Dorchester.

Isis, a small river in Brecknockshire, Wales, which falls into the Usk.

Isker, a river in Wales, which runs into the Usk, miles west of Brecknock.

Island Magee, a peninsula of Ireland, in the county of Antrim, on the coast of the north channel of the Irish Sea, about 6 miles long, and 1 broad, to the north of the entrance into Belfast Lough.

Islandshire, that detached part of the county of Durham situated north of Northumberland, including the parishes of Ancroft, Holy Island, Kyloe, and Tweedmouth.

Isle Abbott. See Abbott Isle, Somersetshire.

Isle Brewers. See Brewers' Isle, Somersetshire.

Isleham, a parish in the hundred of Stajloe, Cambridge, 5 miles from Ely, and 67 from London; containing 272 houses and 1212 inhabitants, of whom 588 were returned as employed in trade. The living is a vicarage, rated at 13*l.* 3*s.* 1*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Rochester.

Isleworth, the name of a hundred in Middlesex, on the south-western side of the county, bounded on the east by the Thames, on the west by Hounslow Heath, and on the north by the Grand Junction canal.

Isleworth, a parish in the hundred of the same name, Middlesex, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Thames opposite Richmond, 8½ miles from London; and containing 733 houses and 4346 inhabitants, viz. 2069 males and 2277 females, of whom 392 were returned as employed in trade and 257 in agriculture. From its pleasant situation a variety of elegant villas have been erected here. That called Sion hill was formerly a convent; and Sion house, the seat of the duke of Northumberland, which stands in some charming grounds on the banks of the Thames, was also a nunnery of Bridgettines: at the dissolution the monastery was granted to the duke of Somerset, uncle to Edward VI. who built the present magnificent structure of white stone, with a flat roof, embattled; at each of the angles is a square turret: after the execution of the duke in 1552 it became forfeited, and was given to John duke of Northumberland: Queen Mary granted it again to the Bridgettines, who were expelled by Elizabeth, and in 1604 it was again granted to the earl of Northumberland, in whose family it has continued ever since. The grounds are divided by a cut from the Thames, which has two bridges. The green-house, having a gothic front, retains the back and end walls as they stood when part of the monastery. The gardens are laid out in a very beautiful style. The hall, dining-rooms, &c. are furnished and ornamented in the most magnificent manner with statues, paintings in chiaro scuro, tapestries, and hangings of coloured silk damask. The chimney-pieces are of stucco work, in a beautiful style, after the finest remains of antiquity, and ornamented with or molu. The principal part of these improvements were begun in 1762 by the late duke, under the direction of Robert Adam, esq. The living is a vicarage, rated at 18*l.* in the patronage of the dean and canons of Windsor. The church is a modern structure.—Lysons's Environs of London.

Isley Walton. See Walton Isley, Leicester.

Islington, a parish in the hundred of Ossulton, Middlesex, 1¼ mile from London; but, from the numerous buildings lately erected, almost a continuation of the metropolis; it contains 1665 houses and 10,212 inhabitants, viz. 4189 males and 6023 females, of whom 692 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures, and 115 in agriculture, including Upper and Lower Holloway, and part of Newington-green and Kingsland. The church is a handsome modern building erected in 1754, the old gothic one being then taken down; it is built of brick with stone quoins, and the spire, with a gallery at the base, of Portland stone. It has a neat portico in front. The height to the vane is 164 feet, and the length of the church 108 feet. The roof is supported without pillars. The tower has now three tiers of iron ties, or chain bars, placed across in different directions, and is guarded by an electric conductor from the top of the ball; the scaffolding for these improvements was the contrivance of a basket-maker of St. Alban's, and was composed of wicker-work, but capable of bearing almost any weight. Here is a good almshouse, under the government of the Brewers' company, erected by Dame Alice Owen, for 10 widows of this parish, situated at the entrance of the town, although really in the parish of St. James, Clerkenwell. On the south-west side of the village is the New River head, which supplies a great part of London with water; near which is Sadler's Wells, first called so from its spa waters, discovered in 1683 by one Sadler in a garden belonging to a house which he had opened as a music-room; after this it became an exhibition for rope-dancing, tumbling, and pantomimical interludes, which are still carried on during the summer season. A communication with the reservoir of water from the New River has been lately added to the machinery for exhibitions. The mineral water, now called Islington Spa, much resembles in quality the springs at Tunbridge Wells: it is a very light water, impregnated with iron. A gallon yields about a scruple of reddish earth. Near Highbury terrace is a neat villa of the late Alexander Aubert, esq. but now belonging to John Bentley, esq. having a lofty and spacious observatory. The site of these premises was called Jack Straw's castle. Near it is a noted tavern and tea-garden, called Highbury Barn.—Lysons's Environs of London.

Islington, a parish in the hundred of Freebridge Marshland, Norfolk, situated near the great Ouse river, 3 miles from Lynn, and 99½ from London; containing 25 houses and 177 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* united with Tylney.

Isle of Dogs, a part of Poplar Marsh, Middlesex, opposite Greenwich, formed by the winding of the river Thames. When Greenwich was a royal residence there was a hunting seat here, and the kennel for the hounds being kept in this marsh, from the noise they made, the sailors, in navigating the river, named it the Isle of Dogs. The navigation of this part of the Thames, which almost formed a circle, has been greatly improved by a canal, as well as by the completion of commodious docks and warehouses for landing, housing, and shipping goods, the produce of the West India islands.

Islip, a parish in the hundred of Huxloe, Northampton, 1 mile from Thrapston, and 76 from London; containing 72 houses and 440 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 15*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Islip, a parish in the hundred of Ploughley, Oxford, 5 miles from Oxford, and 60 from London; containing 132 houses and 537 inhabitants. This place is noted in history as the birth-place of Edward the Confessor, whose father had a palace near the church, not a trace of which is now remaining. It stands on the river Cherwell, which joins the inland navigation at Shipton upon Cherwell. The living is a rectory, rated at 16*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Westminster.—Malon's Tour.

Isselt St. a parish in the hundred of Narberth, Pembrokeshire, Wales, 3 miles from Tenby, and 258 from London; containing 212 houses and 974 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, rated at 3*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of the chanter and chapter of St. David's.

Isycaerec, a township in the parish of Cemmes, or Kemmes, in the hundred of Machynleth, Montgomeryshire, Wales, 4 miles from Machynleth, and 207 from London; containing 56 houses and 339 inhabitants.

Istwith, a river in Cardiganshire, Wales, which falls into the Irish Sea near Aberistwith.

Istrad, a river in Denbighshire, which falls into the Clyde below Whitchurch.

Itchenor West, a parish in the hundred of Manhood, rape of Chichester, Sussex, 4 miles from Chichester, on the shore of Chichester harbour, and 67 from London; containing 33 houses and 161 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Itchilhampton. See Etchilhampton, Wilts.

Itchin Abbas, a parish in the hundred of Bountisborough, Fawley division, Hants, 3 miles from Alresford, and 60 from London; containing 26 houses and 185 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 1*s.* 5*d.*

Itchin Stoke, a parish in the hundred of Bountisborough, division of Fawley, Hants, 1 mile distant from the foregoing; containing 27 houses and 125 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Itchin, a river in Northumberland and Cumberland, which falls into the Eden near Warwick.

Itchin, or Ailse, a river in Hampshire, which rises near Alresford, and runs into Southampton water a little below Southampton.

Itchingfield, a parish in the hundred of East Easwrith, rape of Bramber, Sussex, 2 miles from Horsham, and 37 from London; containing 44 houses and 249 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 8*l.*

Itchingham Bishop's, a parish in the hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, stands on the river Itchin, 4 miles from Kineton, and 84 from London. It was once a market-town, and now contains 77 houses and 370 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, rated at 10*l.*

Itchingham Long, a parish in the hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, 2¼ miles from Southam, and 84¼ from London. This also was once a considerable town, named Vehindon; it contains 143 houses and 704 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.*

Itchingham Over, a hamlet to the above, 1 mile distant. Population included therewith.

Itchingswell, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Kingsclere, hundred of Evingar, division of Kingsclere, Hants, 1½ mile from Kingsclere, and 56 from London; containing 54 houses and 354 inhabitants.

Itchington, a tything in the parish of Tytherington, hundred of Henbury, Gloucester, 2 miles from Wickwar, and 112 from London; containing 15 houses and 73 inhabitants.

Ithon, a river in Radnorshire, which falls into the Wye, 3 miles north of Builth.

Ittheringham, a parish in the hundred of South Erpingham, Norfolk, 2½ miles from Aylsham, and 119¼ from London; containing 36 houses and 299 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 5*l.* 17*s.* 1*d.*

Iver, a parish in the hundred of Stoke, Bucks, 3 miles from Uxbridge, and 18 from London; containing 223 houses and 1377 inhabitants, of whom 160 were returned as employed in trade. Here are several flour-mills, in which is carried on a considerable trade with the metropolis, and also a considerable cotton-mill. This village was greatly damaged by a violent storm in 1789. The living is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Ivegill, a hamlet in the parish of Dalston, in Cumberland ward, Cumberland, 4 miles from Carlisle, and 301 from London; containing 19 houses and 116 inhabitants.

Ivel, a river in Bedfordshire, which passes by Biggleswade, from which place it is navigable by barges, and joins the Ouse at Tempsford.

Ivel, a river which rises in Dorsetshire, and soon after entering Somersetshire, passes by Yeovil, Ilchester, &c. and joins the Parret at Langport.

Ive's St. a borough, market-town, and chapelry, in the parish of Unyielant, hundred of Penwith, Cornwall, 9 miles from Merazion, and 275½ from London; containing 540 houses and 2714 inhabitants, viz. 1156 males and 1558 females, of whom 117 were returned as employed in various trades, and 611 in agriculture. It stands on the west side of St. Ive's bay, in the Bristol Channel; but its harbour, for want of proper attention, is in a very bad condition, and almost choked up. The church is a handsome building, close to the sea. Here is a good grammar school founded by Charles I, who incorporated the town under a mayor, 12 capital, and 24 inferior burgesses, a recorder, town-clerk, &c. St. Ive's returns two members to parliament, who are elected by the inhabitants paying scot and lot, consisting of about 200. The returning officer is the mayor. The north-west wind has driven vast shoals of sand on the coast, and the rocks here are streaked with a resemblance of copper, of which there are some mines in the neighbourhood. The ancient name of this place was Pendinas. It took its present name from St. Ia, an Irish lady, who lived here in great sanctity. It is a custom of the manor here, that on the death of every person worth ten pounds, ten shillings shall be paid to the vicar. Its market is on Wednesday and Saturday. Fair Saturday before Advent Sunday.—Polwhele's Cornwall.

IVE'S ST. a parish in the hundred of East, Cornwall, 5 miles from Callington, and 220 from London; containing 77 houses and 486 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 26*l.* and is in the patronage of the king, as duke of Cornwall.

IVE'S ST. a market-town and parish in the hundred of Hurstingstone, Hunts, 5 miles from Huntingdon, and 60 from London, on the river Ouse; it contains 464 houses and 2099 inhabitants, viz. 1035 males and 1064 females, of whom 723 were returned as employed in trade, and 92 in agriculture. Here is a handsome stone bridge over the river Ouse. The buildings are mostly modern, the greater part of the town having been burnt down a few years since. Its name is derived from a Persian bishop, Ivo, who preached here about the year 600; and, being canonized, the monks of Ramsey founded a Benedictine priory at this place to his memory. Here is a good cattle market on Monday. Fairs Whit-Monday and 10th October. The living is a vicarage, rated at 5*l.* 15*s.*

IVESTON, a hamlet in the parish of Lanchester, in Chester ward, Durham, 7½ miles from Durham, and 257 from London; containing 27 houses and 251 inhabitants.

IVINGHOE, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Cotslow, Bucks, 9½ miles from Hemel Hempstead, and 35½ from London; containing 78 houses and 452 inhabitants. It is situated on the declivity of some chalk hills, having an extensive view over the adjacent country, and consists of two streets in the form of a T. The parish is very extensive, being 14 miles long, and has four hamlets attached to it. The church is a good building, with a fine peal of bells. In this town, and the adjacent hamlets, upwards of 900 persons are constantly employed in lace making. The market on Saturday was once very considerable. Fairs 6th May and 17th October for cattle, pedlary, &c. The living is a vicarage, rated at 12*l.* 16*s.* 1*d.* and the patron is the duke of Bridgewater. Lat. 51. 50. 9. Long. 0. 37. 51. W.—Malon's Tour.

IVINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Wolphy, Hereford, 2½ miles from Leominster, and 137 from London; containing 72 houses and 373 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

IVY BRIDGE, a populous little village in the hundred of Ermington, Devon, 2½ miles from Ridleford, on the road to Plymouth, and 207 from London. It is a hamlet to four parishes, being situated in Ugborough, Ermington, Harford, and Cornwall. Here are some paper and block mills; and it has a neat chapel, erected, in 1790, by subscription. The situation is particularly healthy and pleasant.

IVY CHURCH, a parish in the hundred of Longport, lathe of Shepway, Kent, 2 miles from New Romney, and 69 from London; containing 27 houses and 144 inhabitants.

JULIOTT ST. a parish in the hundred of Lesnewth, Cornwall, 4 miles from Camelford, and 224 from London; containing 42 houses and 199 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

JURA, one of the Hebrides, opposite to Argyleshire, to which county it is annexed. It is composed chiefly of huge rocks in the most disorderly and naked state, some of them being 2500 feet above the level of the sea. It contains 238 houses and 1202 inhabitants: is about 25 miles in length, and from 2 to 6 in breadth. From the thinness of the population, there is generally barley and oats enough grown for the consumption of the inhabitants, if not distilled into whiskey, as shell-fish and potatoes form the principal food of the poorer people. What are called the "Paps of Jura," are three lofty mountains of a conic form, and of stupendous height. Some black cattle are raised here, and about 300 or 400 sold annually out of the island, and about 100 horses. The wool is remarkable for its fineness, but the sheep are small and not numerous; goats are in greater plenty. Some wild deer are still remaining, but the number is continually growing less. The inhabitants all reside in the village of Jura, on the east side of the island, the western part being too rugged for cultivation. There are two good harbours on the east side of the island, but no vessels above five or six tons belonging to them. A very fine sand is found here, which is exported for the use of the glass manufacturers; and iron ore is found in abundance.—Pennant's Tour to the Hebrides.

JURA SOUND, a strait of the sea which separates the island of Jura from the main land of the county of Argyle, about 4 miles wide.

JURAY POINT, a cape on the north-west part of the Isle of Man, 5 miles west of Ramsay.

Just St. a parish in the hundred of Penwith, Cornwall, 6 miles from Penzance, and 293 from London; containing 536 houses and 2779 inhabitants, viz. 1411 males and 1368 females, of whom 2277 were returned as employed in trade and manufacture, and 379 in agriculture. It is a vicarage, rated at 11*l.* 11*s.*

Just St. a parish in the hundred of Powder, Cornwall, opposite to Falmouth, ½ mile from St. Maw's, and 269 from London; containing 165 houses and 1416 inhabitants, of whom 156 were returned as employed in various trades. This includes the population of St. Maw's borough, which is in this parish. The living is a rectory, rated at 37*l.* 10*d.*

Ivarn, a parish in the hundred of Milton, Isle of Sheppy, Kent, 7 miles from Chatham, and 37½ from London; containing 16 houses and 106 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the archdeacon of Canterbury.

Ivebne Courtney, or Shrowton, a parish in the hundred of Redlane, division of Sherborn, Dorset, 3½ miles from Blandford, and 102½ from London; containing 67 houses and 420 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 25*l.* 8*s.* with Farringdon chapel annexed.

Iwerne Minster, a parish in the hundred of Sixpenny Handley, division of Shaston, Dorset, 4 miles from Blandford, and 103 from London; containing 86 houses and 497 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, rated at 10*l.* 1*s.* in the patronage of the dean and canons of Windsor.

Ixworth, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Blackburn, Suffolk, 6 miles from Bury St. Edmund's, and 77 from London; containing 153 houses and 827 inhabitants. Here was formerly a priory of black canons. The town is neat and tolerably well built. The church is a curacy. Market on Friday.

Ixworth Thorpe, a hamlet to the above, 1½ mile distant, and divided from it by the river Thet; it contains 16 houses and 122 inhabitants.

Ixning. See Exning, Suffolk.

Kaber, a township in the parish of Kirby Stephen, East ward, Westmoreland, 2 miles from Kirby Stephen, and 263 from London; containing 37 houses and 135 inhabitants.

Kaerdeon, or Caerdeon, a parish in the hundred of Talgarth, Brecknockshire, Wales, near Talgarth, and 160 miles from London; containing 33 houses and 177 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 2*s.* 11*l.*

Kea St. a parish in the hundred of Powder, Cornwall, 3 miles from Truro, and 266 from London, containing 450 houses and 2440 inhabitants, viz. 1199 males and 1241 females, of whom 73 were returned employed in trade, and 245 in agriculture. The living is a vicarage, value 16*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Exeter.

Kear, a river in Cardiganshire, which falls into the Tyvy below Kenmarth.

Kearby, a village in the parish of Frodingham, Manley wapentake, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 7 miles from Glandford Brigg, and 164 from London; containing 36 houses and 158 inhabitants. The Stainforth and Keadby canal falls into the Trent at this village.

Keal East, a parish in the hundred of Boling-brook, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 2 miles from Spilsby, and 130 from London; containing 54 houses and 268 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 8*l.* 15*s.* 7*d.*

Keal West, a parish in the same hundred, Lincoln, 1 mile distant from the above; contains 91 houses and 447 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 20*l.*

Kean St. a parish in the hundred of West, Cornwall, 2½ miles from Leskeard, and 225 from London; containing 24 houses and 139 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.*

Kearsley, a township in the parish of Deane, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 5 miles from Bolton, and 191 from London; containing 193 houses and 1082 inhabitants, of whom 477 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture.

KERRY, a river in Monmouthshire, which falls into the Uske near Abergavenny.

KERSEK, a river in Yorkshire, which falls into the Nyd.

KESSINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Louth Eske, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 2 miles from Louth, and 155 from London; containing 29 houses and 150 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

KESSINGTON. See KEITON, Suffolk.

KEDLASTON, a parish in the hundred of Appletree, Derby, 5 miles from Derby, and 151 from London; containing 26 houses and 138 inhabitants. The seat here of lord Scarsdale is a most elegant mansion, near which is a medicinal spring, much resorted to in the summer season for various disorders. Near the park a commodious lodging-house has been erected for the accommodation of company, on the same plan as at Matlock and Buxton. The living is a rectory, rated at 3*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.*—Pilkington's View in Derbyshire.

KEELBY, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Yarborough, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 6 miles from Caistor, and 164 from London; containing 58 houses and 313 inhabitants.

KEELE, a parish in the hundred of Pirehill, Stafford, 2¼ miles from Newcastle under Lyne, and 152 from London; containing 162 houses and 904 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

KEGWORTH, a parish in the hundred of West Goscote, Leicester, 6 miles from Loughborough, and 114 from London; containing 245 houses and 1360 inhabitants, of whom 278 were returned as employed in various trades. It stands near the river Trent, over which it has a handsome stone bridge, built at the expence of the duke of Devonshire. The village is pleasantly situated on a fine airy eminence. Fairs Whit-Monday and 10th October. The living is a rectory, value 25*l.* 15*s.* 7*d.* in the patronage of Christ-Church college, Cambridge.

KEINTON MANDEVILLE, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Catash, Somerset, 6 miles from Castle Cary, and 122 from London; containing 39 houses and 206 inhabitants.

KEIR, a parish in the shire of Dumfries, Scotland, 14 miles from Dumfries; containing 143 houses and 771 inhabitants: is watered by the rivers Nith and Scarn.

KEITH, a parish in the shire of Banff, Scotland, 10 miles from Fochaber, and 46 from Aberdeen; containing 723 houses and 3284 inhabitants, viz. 1372 males and 1912 females, of whom 435 were returned as being employed in trade, and 495 in agriculture. The parish consists of four villages, viz. the old and new town of Keith, and the old and new town of New Mill. It lies on the banks of the river Isla. The new town of Keith was erected in 1750, on a barren moor, and contains about 1100 inhabitants, mostly employed in flax dressing, spinning, and weaving; and has a good weekly market. Here is also a tannery, an extensive bleach-field, and distillery. Near the village of old Keith, the Isla, falling over a high rock, forms a fine cascade, called the Linn of Keith. In the neighbourhood are several druidical circles and chalybeate springs.

KEITHALL, a parish united with Kinkell, in the district of Garioch, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, 10 miles from Inverurie; containing 195 houses and 853 inhabitants. It is watered by the rivers Don and Ury.

KEKEWICK, a hamlet in the parish of Daresbury, hundred of Bucklow, Chester, 4 miles from Warrington, and 180 from London; containing 13 houses and 69 inhabitants.

KELBY, a hamlet in the parish of Haydor, hundred of Aswardhurn, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 5 miles from Folkingham, and 112 from London; containing 13 houses and 71 inhabitants.

KELFIELD, a village in the parish of Stillingfleet, in the wapentake of Ouse and Derwent, east riding of York, 5 miles from Selby, and 186 from London; containing 32 houses and 175 inhabitants.

KELHAM, a parish in the hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, 2 miles from Newark, and 126 from London, situated between two currents of the Trent; and contains 41 houses and 227 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 19*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.*

KELK GREAT AND LITTLE, two small villages in the parish of Harpham, Dickering lythe, east riding of York, 4 miles from Driffield, and 201 from London; containing 18 houses and 82 inhabitants.

KELLAN, a parish in the hundred of Moyddyn, Cardiganshire, Wales, 4 miles from Lampeter, and 204 from London; containing 85 houses and 418 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 5*l.* 7*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

KELLET NETHER, a township in the parish of Bolton, Lonsdale ward, Lancaster, 6 miles from Lancaster, and 244 from London; containing 62 houses and 300 inhabitants.

KELLET OVER, a township and chapelry in the parish of Bolton, 1 mile distant from the above; containing 77 houses and 411 inhabitants.

KELLEY, a parish in the hundred of Lifton, Devon, 4 miles from Launceston, and 209 from London; containing 25 houses and 201 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 9*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*

KELLING, a parish in the hundred of Holt, Norfolk, 2½ miles from Holt, and 121 from London; containing 24 houses and 132 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.*

KELLINGTON. See CALLINGTON, Cornwall.

KELLINGTON, a parish in the wapentake of Osgoldness, west riding of York, 4 miles from Pontefract, and 181 from London; containing 52 houses and 253 inhabitants.

The living is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 8*s.* 11*d.* in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge.

KELLOE, a parish in Easington ward, Durham, 5 miles from Durham, and 255 from London; containing 18 houses and 80 inhabitants.

KELLMESHAM, a hamlet in the parish of Bredon, Gloucestershire, near Tewksbury.

KELLS, a parish in the stewardry of Kirkcudbright, in which is situated the royal burgh of New Galloway. The parish contains 170 houses and 778 inhabitants. It is bounded by the rivers Dee and Ken, and abounds with lead and copper.

KELL'S-RANGE, a ridge of hills in the above parish, mostly composed of granite. On one of these hills is a rocking stone of eight or ten tons weight, so equally poized on its center, that it is moveable by the pressure of a finger.

KELLS, a town in the county of Meath, province of Leinster, Ireland, pleasantly situated on the river Blackwater, 31 miles north-west of Dublin.

KELLS, a town in the county of Kilkenny, province of Leinster, Ireland, 64 miles south-west of Dublin.

KELLS, a river and village in the county of Antrim, Ulster, Ireland, 89 miles from Dublin.

KELLYSTOWN, a village in the county of Carlow, province of Leinster, Ireland, stands on the east side of the river Barrow.

KELMARSH, a parish in the hundred of Rothwell, Northampton, 12½ miles from Northampton, and 79 from London; containing 23 houses and 131 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 23*l.* 1*s.* 5*d.*

KELSALL, a township in the parish of Tarvin, hundred of Eddisbury, Chester, 7 miles from Chester, and 180 from London; containing 109 houses and 469 inhabitants.

KELSEY SOUTH, a parish in the hundred of Walshcroft, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 6 miles from Market Raisin, and 155 from London; containing 83 houses and 449 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 12*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.* and the patron is the king.

KELSEY NORTH, a parish in the hundred of Yarborough, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 3 miles from Caistor, and 154 from London; containing 97 houses and 489 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* belonging to the prebend thereof in Lincoln cathedral.

KELSHALL, or KELSHULL, a parish in the hundred of Odsey, Herts, 2 miles from Royston, and 35 from London; containing 35 houses and 179 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 21*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.

KELSO, a town in the shire of Roxburgh, Scotland, standing on the banks of the Teviot and Tweed, 20 miles from Berwick, and 42 from Edinburgh; containing 524 houses and 4196 inhabitants, viz. 1919 males and 2277 females, of whom 620 were returned as employed in trade and manufactures, principally those of woollen cloth, and dressing sheep and lamb skins, and 125 in agriculture. From 70,000 to 80,000 lamb's and sheep's skins are annually dressed here and sent to various markets, and upwards of 30,000 pairs of shoes are exported; more than 20,000 yards of flannel and 10,000 yards of linen of various qualities are also manufactured here. The town consists of a large square, with six streets branching from it at regular distances. In the square stands the town-house. It has a good bridge over the river Tweed, built in 1799; and the parish church and episcopal chapel are handsome buildings. Part of the ruins of Kelso abbey are still remaining; it was built by David king of Scotland, and had a mitred abbot. Here is a public dispensary, and a good subscription library. The town is governed by a baron bailie, appointed by the duke of Roxburgh, and 15 stent-masters, appointed by the duke and the merchants of the corporation. This town has often suffered by fire. It is a place of great gaiety, being generally the seat of the Caledonian hunt; and has some well attended races at Caver-town Edge, about 5 miles distant.—Pennant's Tour, and sir John Sinclair's Stat. Account.

KELSTERN, a parish in the hundred of Louth Eske, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 5 miles from Louth, and 158 from London; containing 30 houses and 154 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.*

KELSTON, a parish in the hundred of Bath Forum, Somerset, 3 miles from Bath, and 110 from London; containing 35 houses and 221 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.*

KELTHORPE, a hamlet in the parish of Ketton, in the hundred of East, Rutland, 90 miles from London. Population included with Ketton.

KELTON, a hamlet in the parish of Lamplugh, in Allerdale ward, above Derwent, Cumberland, 5 miles from Whitehaven, and 300 from London; containing 26 houses and 135 inhabitants.

KELTON, a parish in the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 27 miles from Newton Douglas, and 18 from Dumfries; containing 351 houses and 1905 inhabitants, of whom 166 were returned as employed in various trades.

KELTON HILL, sometimes called Rhonhouse, a village in the above parish.

KELVEDON, a parish in the hundred of Witham, Essex, 3 miles from Witham, and 40 from London, it consists of a very long street; containing 186 houses and 994 inhabitants. It is crossed by the river Pant. Fair Easter-Monday. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*

KELVEDON, or KELVEDON HATCH, a parish in the hundred of Ongar, Essex, 3 miles from Chipping Ongar, and 19 from London; containing 41 houses and 360 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 7*s.*

KELVIN, a river in Stirlingshire, Scotland, which falls into the Clyde at Goran. Over this river the great canal is carried by an aqueduct bridge on four arches fifty feet wide.

KELVIN, a river of Londonderry, in the province of Ulster, Ireland, which falls into the Roe, about 4½ miles south of Newton-Limavady.

KELYN, a river in Merionethshire, which falls into the Trowerym.

KEMBACK, a parish in the shire of Fife, Scotland, 3½ miles from Cupar, and 6 from St. Andrew's; containing 123 houses and 626 inhabitants: is watered by the river Eden.

KEMBERTON, a parish in the hundred of Brimstrey, Salop, 3 miles from Shiffnal, and 145 from London; containing 41 houses and 213 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 5*l.* 6*s.* 5*d.* united with Sutton Maddock.

KEMBLE, a parish in the hundred of Malmsbury, Wilts, 6 miles from Malmsbury, and 90 from London; containing 67 houses and 400 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.*

KEMLET, a river in Salop, which falls into the Severn below Chirbury.

KEMLET, a river in Denbighshire, which falls into the Tanot below Place Yeha.

KEMMERTON, a parish in the hundred of Tewksbury, Gloucester, 3 miles from Tewksbury, and 107 from London; containing 67 houses and 427 inhabitants. Here is an excellent quarry of free-stone, and several petrifying springs. The living is a rectory, value 17*l.* 13*s.* 1*d.* in the patronage of the corporation of Gloucester.

KEMLYN BAY, near Cemmaes, Montgomeryshire, Wales, noted for a quarry of marble common to this place and some parts of Italy, of a green, black, white, and dull purple mixed; the green parts partake of the nature of jasper.

KEMNAY, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, on the banks of the river Don, 4 miles from Kintore, and 16 from Aberdeen; containing 137 houses and 585 inhabitants.

KEMPLEY, a parish in the hundred of Botloe, Gloucester, 4 miles from Ross, and 112 from London; containing 45 houses and 218 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 6*s.* 5*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Hereford.

KEMPSEY, a parish in the hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 4 miles from Worcester, and 108 from London; containing 166 houses and 845 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 18*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Worcester.

KEMPSFORD, a parish in the hundred of Brightwell Barrow, Gloucester, 3 miles from Lechlade, and 77 from London; containing 91 houses and 456 inhabitants. The church is a large handsome building. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Gloucester.

KEMSTON, a parish in the hundred of Redbornstoke, Bedford, 3 miles from Bedford, and 48 from London; containing 180 houses and 1035 inhabitants, of whom 274 were returned as employed in various trades. The living is a vicarage, value 12*l.*

KEMSTON, a parish in the hundred of Launditch, Norfolk, 6 miles from East Dereham, and 98 from London; containing 5 houses and 30 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.*

KEMSCOTT, a small village in the hundred of Bampton, Oxford, on the borders of Gloucester, 3 miles from Bampton, and 70 from London; containing 27 houses and 132 inhabitants.

KEMSING, a parish in the hundred of Codsheath, lathe of Sutton, Kent, near Sevenoaks, and 24 miles from London; containing 61 houses and 321 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 19*l.* 15*s.* 4*d.* with Seal chapel, patron the duke of Dorset.

KEMYS COMMANDER, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Usk, Monmouth, 4 miles from Usk, and 148 from London; containing 24 houses and 163 inhabitants.

KEN, a river in Westmoreland and Lancashire, which falls into the Irish Sea.

KEN, a river in Devonshire, which falls into the Ex below Exeter.

KEN, a river in Galloway, which rises in the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, and forms a beautiful lake called Loch Ken: and joining the Dee, falls into the Solway Frith.

KENARDINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Blackburn, lathe of Scray, Kent, 7 miles from Ashford, and 62 from London; containing 29 houses and 171 inhabitants. Here are the vestiges of a Roman camp.

KENCHESTER, a parish in the hundred of Grimsworth, Hereford, 5 miles from Hereford, and 140 from London, situated on the river Lie, which joins the Wye at Hereford; it contains 17 houses and 85 inhabitants. This is supposed to have been the ancient city of Ariconium, of greater magnitude than Hereford, and where king Offa had a splendid palace. It is supposed to have been destroyed by an earthquake. The apparent ruins of a temple are to be seen here, and many large foundations near it. Some years ago a beautiful tessellated floor was discovered here, and a Roman bath, with leaden pipes, found quite entire, built of Roman brick.—Grose's Antiq.

KENCOTT, a parish in the hundred of Bampton, Oxford, 2½ miles from Bampton, and 73 from London; containing 35 houses and 191 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.*

KENDAL, the name of a ward in Westmoreland, forming the southern part of the county.

KENDAL, a market-town and parish in Kendal ward, Westmoreland; it is 22 miles from Lancaster, and 260 from London, and is sometimes called Kirby in Kendal, that is, a church in a valley, from its being situated in a pleasant valley on the banks of the river Ken; it contains 1594 houses and 6892 inhabitants, viz. 2950 males and 3942 females, of whom 3729 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures, and 151 in agriculture. The manufactures of cottons, coarse woollens, linseys, druggets, worsted stockings, flannels, and serges, are here very considerable, and there are several small manufactories of hardware. Here are seven trading companies, each having their hall, viz. Mercers, Tanners, Glovers, Sheermen, Cordwainers, Taylors, and Pewterers. The church is a large Gothic fabric, divided into five aisles, with a square tower; at the east end are four chapels. North of the church is Abbot Hall, formerly the residence of the abbot of St. Mary's at York. The Ken is crossed from the north by an ancient bridge, and the main street, leading from it, slopes toward the centre of the town, where it joins another principal street, being about one mile long, and of a spacious breadth. The entrance from the south is by another bridge, which makes a short turn into the outskirts of the town, where the street expands, and has a pleasant appearance. A new street has been built from the centre of the town toward the river, and there has lately been erected some very convenient and neat butchers' shambles. Near the church is a free school, connected with Queen's college, Oxford. Here are chapels for Quakers, Methodists, Presbyterians, and Roman Catholics. The buildings in general have a handsome appearance, being of limestone covered with blue slate. There are several charitable institutions, and the workhouse is very commodious. On the top of a high hill west of the town are the ruins of a very ancient castle, opposite to which is an artificial cone-shaped mount, called Castle Law hill. In 1788 a handsome obelisk was erected by a subscription of the inhabitants, to commemorate the revolution in 1688. The river abounds with salmon and trout, over which there are three bridges, and on the banks live a number of dyers and tanners. By the inland navigation this town has communication with the rivers Mersey, Dee, Ribble, Ouse, Trent, Severn, Humber, Thames, Avon, &c. extending above 500 miles through most of the inland counties. Here are kept the sessions for the barony of Kendal. It has a new house of correction with cells underneath. It is incorporated under a mayor, 12 aldermen, and 24 capital burgesses. Several Roman stations are observable in the neighbourhood. The living is a vicarage; value 92*l.* 5*s.* in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge.—Burn's Westmorland.

KENDERCHURCH, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Wolfree, Hereford, 11 miles from Hereford, and 140 from London; containing 12 houses and 72 inhabitants.

KENFIG, a town and parish in the hundred of Newcastle, Glamorganshire, Wales, 7 miles from Bridgend, and 186 from London; containing 141 houses and 655 inhabitants. Great part of the land near the sea side of this place is overwhelmed with hills of sand, which are continually shifting from place to place with the wind. The inhabitants have a vote for the member for the Glamorganshire borough.

KENILWORTH, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, 5 miles from Warwick, and 100 from London; containing 405 houses and 1968 inhabitants, of whom 169 were returned as employed in trade. This place was once famous for its castle, the remains of which form one of the most beautiful and picturesque objects in the kingdom. At a small distance from it stood a priory of Black Canons. The church is ancient, with a spire steeple. Here are two meeting-houses. Market on Wednesday; fair Midsummer-day. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* The patron is the king.

KENINGHALL, a parish in the hundred of Guilteross, Norfolk, 2¼ miles from Harling, and 91¼ from London; containing 123 houses and 1052 inhabitants, of whom 121 were returned as employed in various trades. Thomas Howard, the great duke of Norfolk, built a magnificent palace here; but it was pulled down about the middle of the 16th century. This manor claims the office of chief butler at the coronation of the kings of England. Fair 7th July. The living is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 17*s.* 1*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.—Bloomfield's Tour.

KENLEY, a parish in the hundred of Condover, Salop, 5 miles from Much Wenlock, and 151 from London; containing 61 houses and 300 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

KENMARE, a town in the county of Kerry, province of Munster, Ireland, stands at the mouth of a river of the same name, 12 miles south of Killarney, and 155 south-west of Dublin. The river is about 20 miles long and 3 broad, and affords a safe and capacious harbour, but little frequented.

KENMORE, a parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, lying on both sides Loch Tay, 23 miles from Dunkeld, and 14 from Inverness; the village is neatly built, containing, including the whole parish, 673 houses and 3346 inhabitants, viz. 1524 males and 1822 females, of whom 252 were returned as employed in trade and 557 in agriculture. It is pleasantly situated on an isthmus of Loch Tay, over which it has an elegant bridge of five arches. About two miles distant is Taymouth, the elegant seat of the earl of Breadalbain. One of the hills on the side of the lake Benlawers is 4015 feet above the level of the sea.

KENN, a parish in the hundred of Ex-

minster, Devon, 5 miles from Exeter, and 175 from London; containing 168 houses and 818 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 46*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

KENN, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Yatton, hundred of Winterstoke, Somerset, 9 miles from Axbridge, and 140 from London; containing 25 houses and 160 inhabitants.

KENNARTH, a parish in the hundred of Elvet, Carmarthenshire, Wales, 12 miles from Carmarthen, and 230 from London; containing 273 houses and 1309 inhabitants, of whom 94 were returned as employed in trade. The living is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* and the patron is the bishop of St. David's.

KENNERLEY, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Crediton, Devon, 5 miles from Crediton, and 185 from London; containing 15 houses and 94 inhabitants.

KENNETHMONT, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, 20 miles from Inverurie, and 40 from Aberdeen; containing 189 houses and 784 inhabitants. Here are two mineral chalybeate springs, and it was formerly noted for two fairs; one of them, at Christ's Kirk, was held in May at the hour of midnight.

KENNETT, a parish in the hundred of Staploe, Cambridge, 5 miles from Newmarket, and 66 from London; containing 17 houses and 111 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.*

KENNETT EAST, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Selkley, Wilts, 4 miles from Marlborough, and 79 from London; containing 19 houses and 102 inhabitants, near the source of the river Kennett.

KENNETT WEST, a hamlet to the above, the population of which was omitted to be returned.

KENNETT, a river in Wilts and Berks, which falls into the Thames at Sunning.

KENNINGTON, a tything in the parish of Radley, hundred of Hormer, Berks, 1 mile from Oxford, and 56 from London; containing 17 houses and 86 inhabitants.

KENNINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Chart and Langbridge, lathe of Scray, Kent, 1½ mile from Ashford, and 55 from London; containing 59 houses and 314 inhabitants. It was formerly a royal manor. Fair 5th July. The living is a vicarage, value 12*l.*

KENNINGTON, one of the extensive precincts of the parish of Lambeth, Surry, 1½ mile from the Horse Guards. This manor belonged to the dutchy of Cornwall, and in ancient times had a royal palace, which was the favourite residence of Edward the Black Prince: it was also the occasional residence of Henry IV. VI. and VII.; after which the manor was farmed out by Henry VIII. The palace being pulled down, a manor-house was built on its site, in which Charles I. resided when prince of Wales. In the survey in 1656 mention is made of part of the ruins of the palace adjoining the manor-house, being a long barn 180 feet long, built of flint and stone; and this barn, in 1709, was the receptacle of the distressed Palatine protestants: it was pulled down in 1795, and on the site arose Park Place, Kennington-cross. In digging the foundations several spacious arched vaults were discovered. The road from the cross leading to the river, is called Princes' Road, from its being the road the prince came when he landed at Lambeth stairs: in this road is still an old-fashioned public-house, called the Black Prince, formerly much resorted to when it stood alone in the country, having an assembly-room, &c.; it is taken notice of in No. 68 of the Connoisseur, and called Sot's Hole, the name of the adjacent lane. On Kennington common, where the criminals for Surry were formerly executed, are now several handsome rows of buildings; and the Horns tavern has a newly-built assembly-room, as commodious as any in London. A navigable canal, as well as a reservoir for supplying this part of the metropolis, was opened with great ceremony in June 1807. —Lysons's Environs of London.

KENNYTHORPE, a hamlet in the parish of Langton, Buckrose wapentake, east riding of York, 4 miles from New Malton, and 213 from London; containing 10 houses and 50 inhabitants.

KENSEY, a river in Corpwall, which falls into the Tamar soon after its rise.

KENSHAM, the name of a hundred in Somersetshire, in the northern part of the county, lying between Bath and Bristol.

KENSINGTON, a parish and pleasant village in the hundred of Ossulton, Middlesex, 1½ mile from Hyde-park corner; containing 1314 houses and 8556 inhabitants, viz. 3467 males and 5069 females, of whom 1165 were returned as employed in various trades, and 44 in agriculture. The royal palace here was originally purchased by king William III. and the gardens have been considerably augmented by succeeding monarchs, upwards of 350 acres being added to them from Hyde park. They are now a fashionable promenade. The palace is a brick building, very irregular, having been built at different times. Different branches of the royal family have apartments here. Until the present reign it was a favourite residence with our kings; and king William, queen Mary, queen Anne, and George II. died here. The state apartments are noble, and the different chambers, staircases, and balconies, are ornamented with one of the most curious collections of paintings in England, by the most celebrated English and foreign masters. Farther on the Brentford road, to the right, is Holland house, an old brick mansion belonging to Lord Holland. The living of Kensington is a vicarage, value 18*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* the patron is the bishop of London.—Lysons's Environs of London.

KENSINGTON GRAVEL PITS, a hamlet in the parish of Kensington, lying more to the

KENT
in which every Parish & Place is laid down containing upwards of 40 Houses.
RIVER THAMES
The Nore
Isle of Grain
Isle of Sheppey
Queenborough
Margate
Birchington
Isle of Thanet
Ramsgate Deal
Dover
Canterbury Sandwich Ashford
Maidstone
Rochester
Chatham
Gravesend
Tunbridge
Tenterden
Hythe
Romney Marsh
New Romney
Rye
Lydd
Dungeness
Beachy Head
Goodwin Sands
Laths
1. Sutton
2 Aylesford
3 Scray
4 St Augustine
5 Shepway
Cities ... 2
Boroughs ... 4
Cinque Ports ... 4
Market Towns ... 22
Parishes ... 408
Houses ... 34,585
Inhabitants ... 307,624
Acres of Land ... 848,000
Arable ... 400,000
Barbarge ... 300,000
Members of Parliament 20
British Miles

right in the Acton road, and formerly was nothing but gravel pits.

KENSWORTH, a parish in the hundred of Dacrum, Herts, 2¼ miles from Dunstable, on the borders of the county, and 31 from London; containing 97 houses and 510 inhabitants. The green here is a beautiful situation, being a fine level turf half a mile long.

KENT, a county at the south-east extremity of England, opposite to France, bounded on the north by the river Thames, the county of Essex, and the German Sea, on the east and south-east by the English Channel, on the south by the Channel and the county of Sussex, and on the west by Surry. It is about 63 miles long, and nearly 40 broad; containing 896,000 acres of land, having about 400,000 acres as arable, and about 200,000 acres as pasturage; the remainder being in woods, marshes, hop-grounds, &c. The county is divided into five lathes, viz. St. Augustine's, Aylesford, Scray, Shepway, and the lathe of Sutton at Hone; again subdivided into a number of small hundreds. It has 2 cities, Canterbury and Rochester, 2 boroughs, Maidstone and Queenborough, 4 of the Cinque Ports, Dover, Sandwich, Romney, and Hythe, and 9 market-towns, viz. Ashford, Bromley, Cranbrook, Crayford, Cray, Dartford, Eltham, Feversham, Folkstone, Goudhurst, Gravesend, Greenwich, Lenham, Lydd, Malling, Milton, Seven Oaks, Tenterden, Tunbridge, Westerham, Woolwich, and Wrotham; containing 51,585 houses, inhabited by 307,624 persons, viz. 151,374 males and 156,250 females, of whom 43,253 were returned as employed in trade, handicraft, and manufactures, and 54,124 in agriculture. The amount of assessment under the property tax, April 1806, was 3,164,645*l.* and the assessment for the maintenance of the poor, in 1803, was 255,452*l.* being at the rate of 5*s.* 2¼*d.* in the pound. The average scale of mortality for 10 years appears to have been as 1 to 41 1-3d of the population. By a return delivered to the House of Lords, and printed in 1805, it appears that the area of this county is 1462 square statute miles, equal to 935,680 statute acres; the number of inhabitants in each square mile containing 640 acres, 210; and the total number of persons 307,120. The principal river besides the Thames is the Medway, which comes from Sussex, and, joined by a number of rivulets, passes Maidstone and Rochester, and falls into the mouth of the Thames between the isles of Sheppey and Grain. The Stour is a small stream which passes Canterbury, and falls into the sea near Sandwich, and the Rother, being the boundary between Kent and Sussex, falls into the sea at Rye. The southern part, called the Weald, is a flat, woody tract, having a clayey soil, fruitful, but unhealthy from its moisture; it terminates in Romney marsh, and was formerly one immense forest, inhabited only by herds of deer and hogs belonging to the king. There are still some woodlands in their original state. The open part of East Kent betwixt Canterbury, Dover, and Deal, has a variety of soils; viz. chalk, loam, mould, and stiff clay, and some small tracts of flint, gravel, and sand. The woodland here affords fuel, timber for the dock-yards, and poles for the numerous hop plantations. The soil towards Feversham, Sandwich, and Deal, is particularly fertile, and the hop-grounds produce those fine East Kent hops so much in repute among those who brew the best ale and porter. The north-eastern part of the county towards Dover, has a hard, chalky soil, and the white cliffs which bound the island here give it that striking appearance from the sea whence it obtained anciently the name of Albion. Two chains of hills run through the middle of Kent, called the Upper and Lower Hills. The Midland and Western districts are a happy mixture of hill and vale, arable and pasture, equal in pleasantness and variety of product to any part of England. Its principal productions are large fat oxen, hops, fruit, and oak timber. The air is in general thick, foggy, and warm, from its nearness to the sea, and the marshy parts are very unhealthy, the inhabitants being much afflicted with the ague. It is included in the home circuit; lying in the province of Canterbury, and the dioceses of Canterbury and Rochester; containing 408 parishes; and returns 18 members to parliament, viz. 2 for the county, and 2 each for Canterbury, Rochester, Dover, Sandwich, Romney, Hythe, Maidstone, and Queenborough. At the landing of Cesar it was inhabited by the Cantii, and governed by four petty kings: after the conquest of the island by the Romans, it was a part of the province of Britannica Prima; and during the heptarchy was a kingdom of itself under its present name. The Saxon kings kept their court at Canterbury. At the conquest by the Normans it was the only court which retained its ancient laws and usages, of which the two principal were gavel kind, and an absolute exemption from vassalage. It may be proper to observe, that by gavel kind is meant an equal distribution of landed property among all the sons of a family. Few counties in Britain abound more with antiquities and noblemen's seats than Kent.—Hasted's Kent, and Agricultural Report.

KENTCHESTER. See KENCHESTER, Hereford.

KENTCHURCH, a parish in the hundred of Webtree, Hereford, 11 miles from Hereford, and 145 from London; containing 36 houses and 229 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 12*s.* 3*d.* and the patron is the king.

KENTFORD, a parish in the hundred of Resbridge, Suffolk, near Clare, 56 miles from London; containing 15 houses and 100 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 7*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* united with Gaysley, in the patronage of Trinity hall, Cambridge.

KENTISBEARE, a parish in the hundred of Hayridge, Devon, 2½ miles from Collumpton, and 160 from London; containing 141 houses and 1042 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 27*l.* 18*s.* 11*d.*

KENTISBURY, a parish in the hundred of Braunton, Devon, 6 miles from Barnstaple, and 193 from London; containing 41 houses and 241 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 10*s.* 7*d.*

KENTISH TOWN, a hamlet in the parish of Pancras, hundred of Ossulton, Middlesex, 2 miles from London, on the road to Highgate. It is now becoming a very populous place, and new streets are daily erecting that will very soon join it to the metropolis. Here is a chapel of ease to St. Pancras, and an assembly room.

KENTMERE, a township and chapelry in the parish and ward of Kendal, Westmoreland, near Kendal, and 260 miles from London; containing 39 houses and 166 inhabitants.

KENTON, a parish in the hundred of Exminster, Devon, 2 miles from Exmouth, and 178 from London; containing 307 houses and 1639 inhabitants, of whom 148 were returned as employed in various trades. This village stands at the confluence of the river Ken with the Ex. It is the custom of this manor, that if the issue of any of the tenants hold their tenements three descents successively, they may claim the inheritance of the tenement. The living is a vicarage, value 34*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Sarum.

KENTON, a township in the parish of Gosford, Castle ward, Northumberland, 5 miles from Newcastle, and 279 from London; containing 170 houses and 885 inhabitants.

KENTON, a parish in the hundred of Loes, Suffolk, 3 miles from Debenham, and 85 from London; containing 29 houses and 243 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.*

KENWYS, a parish in the hundred of Powder, Cornwall, adjoining to Truro, and 257 miles from London; containing 558 houses and 4017 inhabitants, viz. 1890 males and 2127 females, of whom 152 were returned as employed in trade, and 156 in agriculture. The living is a vicarage, value 16*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Exeter.

KENYON, a township in the parish of Warwick, in the hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 3 miles from Newton, and 194 from London; containing 59 houses and 384 inhabitants.

KERIOG, a river in Denbighshire, Wales, which falls into the Dee, between Chirk and Bystock, 5 miles from Wrexham.

KERIOG, a river in Merionethshire, which falls into the Dovy near Llanwe yng.

KERERA, an island of Argyleshire, in the sound of Mull, 1 mile from the main land; about 3 miles long, and 2 broad; and is included in the parish of Kilfinichen.

KERSHOPE, a small river in Roxburghshire, for several miles the boundary between England and Scotland; it falls into the Liddal, and abounds with excellent trout.

KERRY, a county of Ireland, in the province of Munster, bounded on the west by the Atlantic Ocean, on the north by the river Shannon, on the east by the counties of Limerick and Cork, and on the south by part of Cork and the Ocean. It is about 54 miles long, and from 18 to 40 broad; containing 84 parishes, and about 19,400 houses, and 107,000 inhabitants. The county town is Tralee. Its principal rivers are the Blackwater, Teale, Gale and Brick, Cash in Mang, Lea, Flesk, Laune, Carrin, Farthin, Finny, and the Roughty. It possesses many excellent harbours, and the southern district is plain and fertile; but a large part of it is full of mountains, almost inaccessible, so that little corn is produced, and grazing is the chief management of the farmer. Considerable quantities of beef, butter, hides, and tallow, are exported from hence. Most of the southern parts produce iron ore, and it contains several medicinal springs.

KERRY, a parish in the hundred of Montgomery, Montgomeryshire, Wales, 3 miles from Newtown, and 173 from London; containing 290 houses and 1758 inhabitants, of whom 352 were returned as employed mostly in manufacturing coarse woollen and Welsh baize. It is pleasantly situated on a small eminence in a beautiful vale of the same name, entirely encompassed by fertile hills. It consists of one handsome street along a gradual ascent to the opposite declivity. The church is a very venerable structure, and has a quadrangular tower, or belfry, terminating in regular turrets. It has two aisles divided by several heavy Gothic arches, and has windows of painted glass. The living is a vicarage, value 17*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

KERVENT. See CAERWENT, Monmouth.

KESGRAVE, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Carlford, Suffolk, 4 miles from Ipswich, on the road to Woodbridge, and 73 from London; containing only 9 houses and 73 inhabitants.

KESSINGLAND, a parish in the hundred of Mutford and Lothingland, Suffolk, 6 miles from Lowestoff, and 108 from London; containing 65 houses and 475 inhabitants. It was formerly a much more considerable place than at present, which may be seen from the ruins of its once beautiful church. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.*

KESTEVEN, the name of a division of Lincolnshire, on the western side of the county, bordering on Nottinghamshire, and to the south of Lincoln.

KESTON, a parish in the hundred of Ruxley, lathe of Sutton, Kent, 5 miles from Bromley, and 15 from London; containing 27 houses and 183 inhabitants. At Holwood hill are the trenches of a Roman fortification, enclosing an area of 100 acres; a path descends from his camp to the spring head of the river Ravensborne. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 10*s.*

KESWICK, a market-town in the parish of Crosthwait, in Allerdale ward, below Derwent, Cumberland, 11 miles from Cockermouth, and 291 from London; is pleasantly situated in a deep valley under vast mountains full of mines and minerals, near the rapid river Greta. The town contains 290 houses and 1350 inhabitants, of whom 318 were returned employed in various trades, particularly in the manufacture of coarse woollens and linen. A few years ago an establishment was formed for the spinning of twist. Formerly copper-mines were wrought in this neighbourhood, but were given up as unprofitable. It consists of one long street, protected from the north winds by the lofty mountain of Skiddaw. Its chief trade is from the influx of travellers on visits to the Lakes. The lake of Keswick, or as it is more generally called, the Derwent water, is a most romantic piece of scenery; on the north stands Skiddaw, rising more than a 1000 yards perpendicular above the level of the lake, the haunt of numerous birds of prey. Notwithstanding its height, it is not difficult to ascend. At the top the atmosphere is so cold as to prevent vegetation, and the mountain is covered with a loose brown slaty stone. The lake is subject to violent agitations, and often without any apparent cause. It has five islands, which being covered with verdure, add greatly to its beauty. On one is an elegant modern house. Its extent is about 3 miles by 1½ broad. It abounds with excellent trout, pike, eels, and perch. A little to the north is the lake of Bassenthwaite, and a few miles to the east Ulswater, being about 9 miles long in the shape of an S, and above 1 mile wide. About 2 miles from the town is a druidical monument, on a plain on the summit of a hill; it is composed of stones of various forms, rough and unhewn, for the most part granite. They are 50 in number, and form a circle of about 30 paces in diameter, within which are 10 stones placed in an oblong square, supposed to have been used as an altar. The stones are of various sizes, some of the largest being near 8 feet high, and 15 in circumference. In the neighbourhood are some trifling manufactures of coarse woollens and flannels. The market is on Saturday. Fairs 1st Thursday in May, which continues every fortnight for cattle, till 11th October, when it ends with a horse and cow fair; and 2d August, chiefly for woollen yarn.—Housman's Cumberland, and Guide to the Lakes.

KESWICK, a parish united with Jutwood, in the hundred of Humbleyard, Norfolk, 3 miles from Norwich, and 106 from London; containing 11 houses and 67 inhabitants.

KESWICK EAST, a township in the parish of Hatewood, Skyrack wapentake, west riding of York, 4 miles from Wetherby, and 192 from London; containing 98 houses and 535 inhabitants.

KETTERING, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Orlingbury, Northampton, 6 miles from Wellingborough, and 74½ from London; it is situated on a rising ground, and contains 641 houses and 3011 inhabitants, viz. 1400 males and 1611 females, of whom 1770 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures, principally those of lace working, wool combing, and the spinning and weaving of tammies and lastings, the latter of which are sold white, as they come from the loom; about 221 persons are employed in agriculture. The houses are in general indifferently built, and many of them small and thatched. The church is a good building, with a handsome spire, having eight bells, and a set of chimes. Here are two or three different meeting-houses, the sessions-house for the county, a well endowed free school, and an alms-house for six widows. The market is on Saturday. Fairs Thursday before Easter, Thursday before 10th October, and Thursday before St. Thomas's Day, for all kinds of beasts; and of late years there has been a fair on the Friday before Whitsuntide. The living is a rectory, rated at 34*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*—Bridges's Northamptonshire.

KETTERINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Humbleyard, Norfolk, 3 miles from Wymondham, and 103 from London; containing 28 houses and 181 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.*

KETTINS, a parish in the shire of Forfar, Scotland, lying on the north side of the Sidlaw hills, 12 miles from Perth, and 14 from Dundee; containing 241 houses and 1207 inhabitants, of whom 100 were returned as employed in various trades, and the bleaching grounds of this parish.

KETTLE, a parish in the shire of Fife, Scotland, on the banks of the river Eden, 4 miles from Falkland, and 12 from Dysart; containing 382 houses and 1889 inhabitants, of whom 912 were returned as employed in trade, about 516 of whom were resident in the village. Here are the ruins of Clatto castle, formerly of great strength.

KETTLEBASTON, a parish in the hundred of Cosford, Suffolk, 8 miles from Sudbury, and 62 from London, on the river Breton; containing 24 houses and 145 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

KETTLEBURGH, a parish in the hundred of Loes, Suffolk, 2½ miles from Framlingham, and 85 from London; containing 34 houses and 272 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.*

KETTLEBY ABBEY. See ABKETTLEBY, Leicestershire.

KETTLEBY EYE. See EYEKETTLEBY, Leicestershire.

KETTLESHULME, a township in the parish of Taxal, hundred of Macclesfield, Chester, 5 miles from Chapel in le Frith, and 170 from London; containing 72 houses and 290 inhabitants.

KETTLESTONE, a parish in the hundred of Gallow, Norfolk, 3 miles from Fakenham, and 111 from London; containing 27 houses and 166 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* patron the king.

KETTLETHORPE, a parish in the hundred of Well, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 8 miles from Lincoln, and 142 from London; containing 25 houses and 141 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 28*l.*

KETTLEWELL, a parish in the wapentake of Staincliff, west riding of York, on the banks of the river Wharfe, 10 miles from Settle, and 242 from London; containing 51 houses and 427 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.*

KETTON, a parish in the hundred of East, Rutland, 4 miles from Stamford in Lincolnshire, and 90 from London; containing 132 houses and 657 inhabitants; it stands on a small rivulet which falls into the Welland. The church is a very neat building, in the form of a cross. It is a prebend, rated at 29*l.* 10*s.* 2*d.* belonging to the church of Lincoln.

KETTON, a parish in the hundred of Risbridge, Suffolk, 3 miles from Clare, and 58 from London; containing 100 houses and 467 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 16*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.*

KEVENNY, a river in Monmouthshire, which falls into the Uske at Abergavenny.

KEVENY, a river in Anglesey, which falls into the sea on the south-west side of the island.

KEVERN ST. a parish in the hundred of Kerrier, Cornwall, 7 miles from Falmouth, and 277 from London; containing 440 houses and 2104 inhabitants, viz. 997 males and 1107 females, of whom 87 were returned as employed in trade, and 389 in agriculture. The living is a vicarage, rated at 13*l.* 11*s.* 4*d.*

KEVIL, a parish in the hundred of Whorlsdon, Wilts, 2½ miles from Trowbridge, and 95 from London; containing 95 houses and 466 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 12*l.* 7*s.* 1*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Winchester.

KEW, a parish in the hundred of Kingston, Surry, on the banks of the Thames, 6¼ miles from London; containing 72 houses and 424 inhabitants. It was formerly a hamlet to the parish of Kingston, and has a neat chapel, erected at the expence of the neighbouring gentry, on a piece of ground granted by Queen Anne. Here is also a neat stone bridge over the Thames of seven arches, compleated in 1781: being private property. Here is a royal palace, formerly the property of Samuel Molineux, esq. secretary to George II. when prince of Wales. The gardens are laid out in the most curious and judicious manner, and contain every flower and exotic plant which can be procured. In the center is a large bason of gold and silver fish, and an aviary containing a great number of birds from China, Botany Bay, &c. In various parts of the gardens are different buildings, viz. a Chinese Pagoda, 10 stories high, of an octagonal shape, the bottom story being 26 feet diameter, and 18 feet high, the next 25 feet diameter, and 17 feet high, each diminishing in proportion, and having a projecting roof; the whole height is 163 feet. On the top is a most extensive view of the surrounding country. Near this stands the Mosque, also an octagon, ornamented with a large dome; over the three entrances are, in golden characters, extracts in Arabic from the Koran. The Temple of Bellona, a handsome little building. The Temple of Pan, of the Doric order. The Temple of Eolus. The Temple of Solitude. The House of Confucius, ornamented with historical subjects relating to Confucius and the missionaries in China. In a winding walk is a Corinthian colonnade, called the Theatre of Augusta; and on an adjacent hill stands the Temple of Victory, erected in commemoration of the battle of Minden in 1759. The Temple of Arethusa is a small Ionic building of four columns, near which is a small wooden bridge thrown over the lake, leading to an island. These gardens are open to the public from Midsummer till the end of Autumn. Farther on the banks of the Thames, his present majesty is erecting a most superb new palace of brick cased with artificial stone, entirely in the Gothic taste, the various apartments intended to be fitted up in the costume of different countries. It is to be wished it was in a more agreeable situation.—Lysons's Environs of London, and sir William Chambers's Account of Kew.

KEYPAX, a parish in Skyrack wapentake, west riding of York, 8 miles from Leeds, and 187 from London; containing 164 houses and 779 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

KEYWICK, a township in the parish of Over Silton, in Birdforth wapentake, north riding of York, 6 miles from Thirsk, and 229 from London; containing 31 houses and 167 inhabitants.

KERDESTON, a hamlet in the parish of Themilthorpe, hundred of Eynesford, Norfolk, 1½ mile from Reepham, and 114 from London; containing 21 houses and 162 inhabitants.

KERESLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Folkshill, in Coventry liberties, Warwick, 2½ miles from Coventry, and 93 from London; containing 46 houses and 312 inhabitants.

KERMINGTON, a hamlet in the parish of Croxton, hundred of Yarborough, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 5 miles from Glamford Briggs, and 162 from London; containing 41 houses and 203 inhabitants.

KERSAL, a hamlet in the parish of Kneesal, hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, 8 miles from Newark, and 132 from London; containing 10 houses and 50 inhabitants.

KERSEY, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Cosford, Suffolk, 2 miles from Hadleigh, and 66 from London; containing 81 houses and 515 inhabitants. Here was a priory of Augustines.

KEYBROUCH, a township in the parish of Darton, Staincross wapentake, west riding of York, 3½ miles from Barnsley, and 171 from London; containing 73 houses and 401 inhabitants.

KEXBY, a hamlet in the parish of Upton, hundred of Well, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 5 miles from Gainsborough, and 143 from London; containing 29 houses and 142 inhabitants.

KEXBY, a village in the parish of Catton, wapentake of Ouze and Derwent, east riding of York, 10 miles from York, and 195 from London; containing 21 houses and 129 inhabitants.

KEYFENLYS, a parish in the hundred of Keyfenlys, Radnor, Wales, 10 miles from Rhayader, and 168 from London; containing 53 houses and 320 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

KEYHAM, a parish in the hundred of East Goscote, Leicester, 6 miles from Leicester, and 96 from London; containing 34 houses and 177 inhabitants.

KEYMER NORTH and SOUTH, a hamlet in the parish of Clayton, hundred of Buttinghill, rape of Lewes, Sussex, 7 miles from Cuckfield, and 47 from London; containing 68 houses and 465 inhabitants.

KEYNSHAM, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Keynsham, Somerset, 5 miles from Bristol, and 113¾ from London; it stands on the north side of the Avon, and consists principally of one street a mile long; containing 278 houses and 1591 inhabitants, of whom 183 were returned as employed in various trades. The town is built upon a rock, replete with fossil ammonite. The church is a large ancient Gothic building, and has a good stone bridge of 15 arches over the Avon leading to Gloucester, and another over the river Chew. Here formerly was a considerable woollen manufactory, but its chief trade is now in malting. Here is a good charity school. At the spring of the year the river swarms with little eels, about the size of goose quills, which are caught by the inhabitants; and by an art they have, cause them to scour off their skins, when they look very white; they are then made into cakes, or balls, and fried. Here is a good market on Thursday. Fairs 24th March and 15th August. The living is a vicarage, rated at 11*l.* 19*s.* 7½*d.*—Collinson's Somersetshire, British Tourist, &c.

KEYSOE, a parish in the hundred of Stodden, Bedford, 9 miles from Bedford, and 59 from London; containing 158 houses and 570 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge.

KEYSTON, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Leytonstone, Hunts, 4 miles from Thrapston, and 72 from London; containing 35 houses and 212 inhabitants.

KEYTHORPE, a hamlet in the parish of Billesdon, hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 8 miles from Leicester, and 93 from London. Population included with Billesdon.

KEYWORTH, a parish in the hundred of Rushcliffe, Notts, 6 miles from Nottingham, and 118 from London; containing 65 houses and 395 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 7*l.* 5*s.*

KIBBLESTONE, a township in the parish of Stone, hundred of Pirehill, Stafford, adjoining to Stone, and 140 from London; containing 144 houses and 808 inhabitants.

KIBBLESWORTH, a township in the parish of Lamesley, in Chester ward, Durham, 4 miles from Gateshead, and 272 from London; containing 202 inhabitants.

KIBWORTH BEAUCHAMP, a parish in the hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 6 miles from Market Harborough, and 89 from London; containing 106 houses and 485 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 39*l.* 15*s.*

KIBWORTH HARCOURT, a hamlet in the above parish, ½ mile distant; containing 87 houses and 382 inhabitants.

KIDDERMINSTER, a market-town and parish in Halfshire hundred, Worcester, 13 miles from Worcester, and 126 from London, on the river Stour; containing 1636 houses and 7036 inhabitants, viz. 3987 males and 4049 females, of whom 3658 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures, and 345 in agriculture. The church is a venerable Gothic structure very large, and has of late been ornamented and repaired at considerable expence. In it are several curious ancient monuments. The tower adjoining the church is a strong lofty pile containing eight bells. The town-hall is a large commodious brick building, being in part occupied by several tenements, and part by the prison; on the ground-floor are butchers' stalls; above, is the council-chamber for transacting public business. The streets are well paved, and kept very clean. Here are 12 almshouses; and beside Sunday schools, eight charity schools for boys and girls. Kidderminster was noted for its manufactories, in the reign of Henry VIII. for broad cloths, afterwards for wolseys, and at a subsequent period for bombazeens, crapes, and poplins. The Scotch and flat carpet manufacture, known by the name of Kidderminsters, was introduced here about 1735; some years since the cut carpet was wrought here with great skill; and, in 1772, the number of looms in the town and neighbourhood amounted to upwards of 250. This manufacture gives employment to more than 3000 people; of which number, about one half prepare the yarn for the manufacturers, and also supply that article, in a considerable quantity, to various parts of the kingdom. A silk manufactory was erected here in 1755, and also one in imitation of the Marseilles quilting. Woollen plush is also made here for the Portuguese market. The lord of the manor holds a court leet for the prevention of encroachments and public nuisances, and here is a court of requests for debts under 40*s*. No county magistrate has a right to exercise any judicial authority in this town, which is governed by a recorder and two magistrates, called the bailiff and justices. The bailiff, who is one of the quorum, is annually elected by his brother aldermen, 12 in number, with the concurrence of the 25 common council-men. It formerly sent members to parliament. Here is a good grammar school at the east end of the church choir, free for all the inhabitants of the town, endowed with lands and tenements producing upwards of 150*l*. for two masters. The Staffordshire and Worcester canal, which passes this place, opens a communication to Hull, Liverpool, Bristol, Manchester, and many other trading towns. It crosses the river Stour about 100 yards from the market place, at the foot of the eminence on which the church is erected, and where there is a very commodious wharf and warehouses. Market on Thursday for all kinds of grain, provisions, fish, &c. Fairs Monday in the week before Easter, Holy-Thursday, June 20th, and 4th September, for all kinds of merchandise. The living is a vicarage, rated at 50*l*. 15*s*. 7*d*. with Mitton chapel annexed, the clear annual value being rather more 500*l*. per annum.—Nash's Worcestershire.

KIDDINGTON NETHER, a parish in the hundred of Wootton, Oxford, 4 miles from Woodstock, and 66 from London; containing 37 houses and 189 inhabitants. The church is a very ancient building. In Hill Wood, in the neighbourhood, are some well preserved remains of a Roman encampment. Adjoining to this is Over Kiddington, a small hamlet separated by a branch of the Isis, in Chadlington hundred.

KIDLINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Wooton, Oxford, 3 miles from Woodstock, 5 miles from Oxford, and 59 from London; containing 120 houses and 607 inhabitants. It is a vicarage in the patronage of Exeter college, Oxford.

KIDWELLY, a market-town and parish in Carmarthenshire, Wales, 22 miles from Swansea, and 226 from London; it is situated on each side of the river Gevendraeth, at a small distance from the shore of Carmarthen bay: it is divided into the Old and New Town, joined by a bridge over the river, and contains 311 houses and 1388 inhabitants, of whom 372 were returned as employed in various trades. About ½ mile below the town this river falls into another called Gevendraeth Fawr, which junction is supposed to have given rise to its name as Cidweli, in Welch, signifies to go into one bed, to join, they both falling together into Carmarthen bay. The Old Town was formerly defended by a strong wall, and over one of its ancient gates is the present town-hall and prison. The town is in a very decayed state; on an elevated mount are the ruins of an extensive castle, remarkable for the perfect uniformity of its four round towers. The building of this castle and town, by some historians, are attributed to king John. It has an elegant church with a handsome spire steeple, being 153 feet high: here are two meeting-houses and a good grammar school. It was formerly noted for its cloth manufacture; but its chief traffic now is in coals, from a colliery about four miles distant; whence they are conveyed in barges by a canal to the vessels which lie at a commodious quay, close to which are good docks. Here is an extensive iron foundery, and about one mile from the town a tin mill, of which article Kidwelly has a good export to various parts of the kingdom. The town is within the jurisdiction of the duchy of Lancaster, and is governed by a mayor, recorder, 12 aldermen, and 12 common council: the mayor has a right to hold two courts for the recovery of debts not exceeding 10*l*. Market on Friday. Fairs 24th May, 22d July, and 20th October. The living is a vicarage, rated at 7*l*. 10*s*. patron is the prince of Wales, and the real value of the preferment is about 140*l*. per annum.—Malkin's and Pennant's Tours in South Wales.

KIFTSGATE, the name of a hundred in Gloucestershire, lying on the northern side of the county, between the hundreds of Tewksbury and Slaughter.

KIGHLEY, a market and parish in Staincliffe wapentake, west riding of York, 8 miles from Bradford, and 207 from London, standing in a valley surrounded by hills at the meeting of two brooks, which fall into the river Aire one mile below. It contains 1221 houses and 5745 inhabitants, viz. 2810 males and 2935 females, of whom 3456 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures, and 416 in agriculture. The parish is six miles long. This town is well supplied with water, which is brought to almost every door in stone troughs, from a spring on the west side of it. There is not half a mile of level ground in the whole parish, except at the west end of it, where there is a pretty even field, about a mile and a half round, on which there is a race-course. Here is a canal, which has communication with most of the principal rivers. The manufactures are those peculiar to this part of Yorkshire, woollen cloth, cottons, lindseys, and Manchester goods. Market on Wednesday. Fairs 8th May and 8th November. The living is a rectory, value 21*l*. 7*d*.

KILBAGIE, a village in the parish and shire of Clackmannan, Scotland, has an harbour on the coast of the Frith of Forth, 28 miles from Edinburgh. It was famous at one time for an extensive distillery of whiskey.

KILBARCHAN, a parish in the shire of Renfrew, Scotland; the village stands on the west side of Loch Winnoch, 3½ miles from Paisley, and 8 from Renfrew, and, with its neighbourhood, contains 421 houses and 3754 inhabitants, viz. 1437 males and 2314 females, of whom 909 were returned as employed in various trades and 215 in agriculture. In the neighbourhood are several extensive bleach fields. The houses are regular and well built of free stone brought from an adjacent quarry: a remarkable circumstance attending which is, that it has coal over the stone, and whinstone above the coal. The rocks here are all of the basaltic whin. There are many ruins of castles and encampments in the vicinity.

Kilbeggan, a town in the county of West Meath, province of Leinster, Ireland, pleasantly seated on the river Brosna, 44 miles west of Dublin.

Kilberry, a village in the county of Kildare, province of Leinster, Ireland.

Kilbirny, a parish in the shire of Ayr, Scotland, near the river Garnock, 10 miles from Ayr; containing 168 houses and 959 inhabitants, of whom the village itself contains about 350, mostly employed in the silk manufacture. On the borders of the parish is a fine loch two miles long and half a mile broad, full of pike and tench.

Kilburn, a hamlet in the parish of Hampstead, hundred of Ossulton, Middlesex, 2¼ miles from London on the Edgeware road. It had formerly a priory. Here is a spring of medicinal water, like all others of the kind near the metropolis, disregarded.

Kilburny Castle, late belonging to the earls of Crawfurd; it is now in a ruinous state.

Kilbranden, a parish in the shire of Argyle, Scotland, united with Kilchattan, opposite the sound of Mull, consisting of five farms on the main land of Lorn, and 5 islands, containing 448 houses and 2278 inhabitants, mostly employed in agriculture and fishing.

Kilbride, a parish in the Isle of Arran, shire of Bute, Scotland, lying on the Frith of Clyde, opposite Ayr; it contains 444 houses and 2183 inhabitants, viz. 1008 males and 1175 females, of whom 92 were returned as employed in trades, and 662 in agriculture. It has two safe harbours.

Kilbride East, a parish in the shire of Lanark, Scotland, united with Torrance. The parish is about 10 miles long, in the centre of which lies the village of Kilbride, 4 miles from Hamilton, and 7 from Glasgow. The parish contains 427 houses and 2330 inhabitants, viz. 1119 males and 1211 females, of whom 327 were returned as employed in various trades and 313 in agriculture. Many petrifactions are found here, and the neighbourhood abounds in subjects of curious antiquity, such as ruins of castles, sepulchral tumuli, &c. The celebrated Drs. Williams and John Hunter were both natives of this place.—Dr. Ure's History of Kilbride.

Kilbride West, a parish in the shire of Ayr, Scotland, on the Frith of Clyde, 18 miles from Glasgow; containing 154 houses and 795 inhabitants, including the island of Lesser Cambray.

Kilbucho, a parish in the shire of Peebles, Scotland, 4 miles from Biggar, 30 from Edinburgh, and 14 from Peebles; containing 64 houses and 342 inhabitants. The parish consists of two parallel ridges of hills, some of them 1400 feet above the level of the sea.

Kilburn, a parish and curacy in Birdforth wapentake, north riding of York, 4 miles from Thirsk, and 220 from London; containing 80 houses and 468 inhabitants.

Kilby, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Guthlaxton, Leicester, 6 miles from Leicester, and 90 from London; containing 52 houses and 242 inhabitants.

Kilcalmonel, a parish in the shire of Argyle, Scotland, at the northern extremity of the peninsula of Kintyre, 46 miles from Inverary; containing 615 houses and 2952 inhabitants, viz. 1401 males and 1551 females, almost the whole of whom are employed in agriculture. This includes the united parish of Kilberry.

Kilcheman, a parish in the Isle of Hay, shire of Argyle, Scotland; it has one lake, which covers 100 acres of land, on which is a small island strongly fortified. It contains 375 houses and 2050 inhabitants, viz. 925 males and 1225 females.

Kilchrenan, a parish united with Dalavich in the shire of Argyle, Scotland, lying on both sides of Loch Ow, 12 miles from Inverary. It contains 101 houses and 566 inhabitants. There are two or three expanses of water in this parish, in which are islets with castles, noted as the scenes of many Fingalian exploits.

Kilcock, a town in the county of Kildare, province of Leinster, Ireland, stands on a branch of the river Liffey, 14 miles west of Dublin.

Kilconquhar, a parish in the shire of Fife, Scotland, on the coast of the Frith of Forth, 18 miles from Kirkcaldy. The parish contains 420 houses and 2005 inhabitants, viz. 905 males and 1100 females, being four villages, a small town, viz. Collinsburgh, containing about 360 inhabitants; the ancient royal burgh of Earls Ferry, containing about 350 inhabitants; Kilconquhar, 258; and the village of Barnyards about 200. On the west of Earls Ferry is Kincraig rock, remarkable for its caves, in which it is said Macduff lay concealed when obliged to fly from Macbeth after Duncan's murder. Near the town is a fine lake, in which are two islands planted with shrubs. Rubies of a good water are found sometimes near the shore.

Kilcullen, a town in the county of Kildare, province of Leinster, Ireland, standing on the river Liffey, 21 miles south-west of Dublin on the road to Cork.

Kilda St, one of the western isles of Scotland, about 60 miles distant from the land of Harris, and 140 from the nearest point of the main land of Scotland, being about three miles long and two broad, entirely surrounded with rocks, and very dangerous of approach. The inhabitants live chiefly by fishing and the taking of wild fowl; in the latter of which they are particularly dextrous, being linked together by couples, each having the end of a cord about 30 fathoms long, made of raw cow hides fastened about his waist; they let themselves down alternately from the summit of the highest rocks, where they clamber among the cliffs for birds and eggs. St. Kilda contains about 100 inhabitants, and their houses are built in two regular rows. The walls are built of free-stone, and consist of two apartments, one for the family, and the other for the cattle in the winter season. It grows barley and oats, which ripen very early. The equinoctial gales are here very violent, and the rains excessive. Here are a number of Soland geese.

KILDALE, a parish in Langborough wapentake, north riding of York, 5 miles from Gisborough, and 248 from London; containing 27 houses and 201 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 10*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

KILDARE, a county in the province of Leinster, Ireland, bounded on the west by King and Queen's county, on the north by Meath, on the east by Dublin and Wicklow, and on the south by Carlow. It is about 33 miles long, and from 12 to 21 broad, containing 11,200 houses, about 56,000 inhabitants, and about 100 parishes. Its principal rivers are the Barrow, Liffey, and Boyne, beside several smaller ones. It is a very fine, fertile, and arable country. The assizes are held alternately at Athy and Naas. Here are several cotton manufactories.

KILDARE, the county town, is pleasantly situated on a rising ground, 27 miles south-west of Dublin: it is noted for its celebrated Curragh, the Newmarket of Ireland. This common, or lawn, contains near 5000 acres of the softest turf, lying high on a fine dry loam, covered with large flocks of sheep. It was once a forest of oaks, Chil-dedair signifying the wood of oaks. The races are held here in April, June, September, and October. Here was also a celebrated nunnery, founded by St. Brigit about the year 584, who was converted to Christianity by St. Patrick. This place is also celebrated for the remains of several other religious houses; and here is a round tower in good preservation 130 feet high, built of white granite to about 12 feet above the ground, the rest being of blue stone; the door is 14 feet above the ground.—Carr's Stranger in Ireland.

KILDORERY, a village in the county of Cork, province of Munster, Ireland.

KILDONAN, a parish in the shire of Sutherland, Scotland, lying on each side of the river Helmsale, 25 miles north from Dornoch; containing 286 houses and 1440 inhabitants, of which 800 were returned as employed in agriculture. Here are several ruins of Pictish castles, and three subterranean passages beneath the river. It has 10 small lakes, all abounding with trout.

KILDRUMMY, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, lying in a valley on each side the river Don, 30 miles from Aberdeen; containing 83 houses and 430 inhabitants. The castle here was once the seat of king Robert Bruce, and is a ruin of great antiquity.

KILDWICK, a parish in the division of Kolme Beacon, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 2 miles from Pocklington, and 197 from London; containing 6 houses and 47 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, rated at 4*l.* 1*rs.* 3*d.* in the patronage of the archbishop of York.

KILDWICK, a parish in the wapentake of Staincliff, west riding of York, 3¼ miles from Skipton, and 217 from London; containing 32 houses and 220 inhabitants. Here is a canal lately made, in which the barges ascend near 90 feet in the short space of 100 yards. The living is a vicarage, rated at 10*l.* 8*s.* in the patronage of the dean and canons of Christ Church college, Oxford.

KILFINAN, a parish in the district of Cowal, Argyleshire, Scotland, lying about 17 miles north of the Isle of Arran, and containing 291 houses and 1432 inhabitants. Here are several lakes abounding with trout, and some small vessels are fitted out here for the herring fishery.

KILFINICHEN, a parish united with Kilvicuen, in the Isle of Mull, Argyleshire, Scotland. It contained 3002 inhabitants in 1793; but the population of this parish was not returned to government in 1800.

KILGERRAN, or CILGARRAN, a parish in the hundred of Kilgerran, Pembrokeshire, Wales, standing on the side of the river Tivi, between Newcastle and Cardigan, 231¼ miles from London; containing 184 houses and 854 inhabitants. It consists of one irregular street, which stands on a steep hill at one corner of the county, and has some remains of a castle on the opposite side of the river. It had once a market, which is now discontinued; and is governed by a portreeve and bailiff. The living is a rectory, rated at 9*l.* The patron is the prince of Wales.

KILGWRROG, a parish in the hundred of Raylend, Monmouth, near Chepstow, and 136 miles from London; containing 13 houses and 56 inhabitants. The church is a curacy, in the patronage of the archdeacon of Landaff.

KILHAM, a hamlet in the parish of Kirknewton in Glendale ward, Northumberland, 6 miles from Wooller, and 329 from London; containing 41 houses and 206 inhabitants.

KILHAM, a parish in Dickering lythe, east riding of York, situated in a pleasant fertile vale, on the declivity of the Yorkshire

Wolds, 5 miles from Driffield, and 198 from London; containing 158 houses and 588 inhabitants. It is a long, irregularly built place, reaching nearly 1¼ mile in length. Here rises a branch of the river Hull. The church, a long stone building, has one aisle, a large chancel, and a lofty tower. From tradition and the vestiges of ancient foundations, it is supposed once to have been a larger place. Here is a good free grammar-school. This was an ancient market-town, but from its vicinity to Bridlington and Great Driffield has now lost its market. Here is a good mineral spring. Fairs 21st August and 12th November, chiefly for cattle, and a statute fair in November. The living is a vicarage, rated at 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the dean of York.—Pennant's Tour.

KILIAU AYRON, a parish in the hundred of Ilar, Cardigansshire, Wales, 8 miles from Lampeter, and 212 from London; containing 60 houses and 248 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 5*l.* and in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

KILKENNY, a county of Ireland, in the province of Leinster, bounded on the west by Tipperary, on the north by Queen's county, on the east by Carlow and Wexford, and on the south by Waterford; it is about 35 miles long and 18 broad, contains 127 parishes, about 17,750 houses and 100,000 inhabitants. Its principal rivers are the Barrow, which bounds it on the east, the Suir, which forms its southern boundary, and the Nore, which crosses it north to south. The surface is in general level, and the soil fertile, producing good corn. Wool is a considerable branch of trade here. Kilkenny is particularly noted for the production of its coal, which makes no smoke in burning, and when completely ignited resembles a mass of melted glass: it is carried to distant parts of the kingdom. This county abounds with fine plantations, and is from the purity of the air esteemed very healthful. The county town is KILKENNY, seated on the river Nore, 26 miles north of Waterford, 65 from Cork, and 64 south-west of Dublin. It is one of the nearest and most pleasant towns in the kingdom, and consists of two towns, called the Irish and the English town, both joined together; and containing about 17,000 inhabitants. The houses are decorated with a beautiful black and white marble, dug in the neighbourhood, and polished by mills worked by water, with which the streets of the town are also paved. Over the river are two handsome bridges. The walks along the side of the river are singularly beautiful, and have a handsome view of the college, originally founded by James duke of Ormond in 1682. The present building was erected in 1784, at the expence of 5000*l.* granted by parliament. The number of students is about 70, 50 of whom are boarded in the house. The presentation of the master was originally in the Ormond family, but it has now devolved to the provost and senior fellow of Trinity college, Dublin. At the top of the town is a very handsome asylum for 20 decayed female housekeepers, who are allowed coals, candles, and 10*l.* per annum each. Ormond castle, on the banks of the river, is an ancient noble mansion, having two large unequal round towers flanking the entrances. The stables on the opposite side of the road are very fine. The little cathedral is a fine old Gothic structure, with a curious round tower. Here are the ancient ruins of three monasteries, St. John's, St. Francis's, and the Black abbey; the windows of the latter are very curious. Here is a neat little theatre, which is private property, and is opened annually for about a month, where amateurs of the first rank perform; and the proceeds, after paying the expences, are applied to charitable uses. The female performers are engaged from Dublin. The manufactures carried on here are chiefly those of coarse woollens, blankets of extraordinary fine quality, and starch.—Carr's Stranger in Ireland.

KILKEN, a parish in the hundred of Coleshill, Flint, Wales, 4 miles from Mold, and 207 from London; containing 180 houses and 987 inhabitants.

KILKHAMPTON, a parish in the hundred of Stratton, Cornwall, 3 miles from Stratton, and 223 from London; containing 158 houses and 808 inhabitants. Fair Holy-Thursday and three succeeding weeks. The living is a rectory, value 26*l.* 3*s.* 10*d.*

KILL, a village in the county of Dublin, province of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles from Dublin.

KILLALA, a small sea-port town in the county of Mayo, province of Connaught, Ireland, situated on a fine bay of the Atlantic Ocean, to which it gives name, but it is of little consequence; it lies 21 miles north of Castlebar, and 127 north-west of Dublin.

KILLALOE, a city in the county of Clare, province of Munster, Ireland, stands on the river Shannon, 10 miles north of Limerick, and 86 south-west of Dublin. Over the river is a good bridge of 19 arches. It has a very considerable salmon and eel fishery.

KILLAMARSH, a township and chapelry in the parish of Eckington, hundred of Scarsdale, Derby, 9 miles from Chesterfield, and 156 from London; containing 125 houses and 576 inhabitants.

KILLARBY, a hamlet in the parish of Heighington, Darlington ward, Durham, 6 miles from Darlington, and 249 from London; containing 13 houses and 66 inhabitants.

KILLARNEY, a town in the county of Kerry, province of Munster, Ireland, situated on the side of a lake of the same name, 36 miles west of Cork, 50 south-west of Limerick, and 143 south-west of Dublin. In the town are many handsome houses, and a noble public school for Catholic children. In the neighbourhood are the venerable ruins of Mucruss abbey, lying near a lake of the same name. In this lake there is a curious rock resembling a horse in the act of drinking. The lake of Killarney, otherwise called Lough Lean, from its being surrounded by high mountains, is divided into three parts, called the Lower, Middle, and Upper lakes. The lower one is about 6 miles long, and 3 broad. The eastern side is diversified with the most beautiful scenery, the south side is composed of immense mountains covered with woods of the finest timber. On the south side of one of these mountains is O'Sullivan's cascade, which falls into the lake with a tremendous roar; opposite to this cascade is the island of Innisfallen. In going to the upper lake, round the extremity of Mucruss, is that celebrated rock called the Eagles' Nest, a place wonderful for its echoes; the sound of a bugle horn producing tones equal to 100 instruments, and the discharge of a musket causing a succession of peals equal to the loudest thunder. The upper lake is about 4 miles long, and from 2 to 3 broad, entirely surrounded by mountains, from which descend a number of beautiful cascades. The shores are, however, indented with small bays, and small groves of wood, which form a very picturesque scene from the water. The steep hill of Mangerton is its eastern boundary, down which falls a beautiful cascade from a circular lake near the summit of the mountain called the Devil's Punch Bowl, which from its immense depth, and continual overflow of water, is considered as one of the principal curiosities of Killarney. In the several mountains in the neighbourhood are vestiges of ancient mines of iron, lead, and copper.—Carr's Stranger in Ireland.

KILLAROW, a parish in the isle of Ilay, Argyleshire, Scotland. It is united with Kilmony, and frequently called Bowmore, from the name of the village in which the church is situate. It stands on the banks of an arm of the sea called Lochindaal. The parish contains, exclusive of Kilmony, 507 houses and 2781 inhabitants, viz. 1310 males and 1471 females, of whom 213 were returned as employed in trade, and 519 in agriculture. The village of Bowmore itself contains 500 inhabitants.

KILLEAN and KILCKENZIE, an united parish in the district of Kintyre, Argyleshire, Scotland, 56 miles from Inverary; containing 497 houses and 2520 inhabitants, viz. 1198 males and 1322 females, of whom 126 were returned as employed in trade, and 314 in agriculture. In these parishes are several remains of antiquity, as Danish forts, obelisks, and the remains of a vitrified tower.

KILLEARN, a parish in the shire of Stirling, Scotland, 10 miles from Dumbarton; containing 173 houses and 1079 inhabitants, of whom 284 were returned as employed in trade. The village of Killearn, which stands on the banks of the Endrick, contains about 240 inhabitants. In the neighbourhood are a number of elegant seats. Here is a pyramid of white freestone, 19 feet square at the base, and 103 feet high; it was erected, in 1788, to the memory of George Buchannan, the celebrated poet and historian, who was a native of this village.

KILLEARNAN, a parish in the shire of Ross, Scotland, containing 246 houses and 1131 inhabitants, nearly the whole of whom are employed in agriculture.

KILLESANDRA, in the county of Cavan, Ireland, where is a good market for the sale of linen, buchaback, &c. manufactured in the neighbourhood.

KILLIECRANKIE, a noted pass in the Highlands of Scotland, formerly of difficult passage, having only a foot path hanging over a tremendous precipice; but it has now a good military road.

KILLIN, a parish in the district of Breadalbane, Perthshire, Scotland, lying along the banks of Loch Tay, at the west end of which this village is pleasantly seated. The parish contains 414 houses and 2048 inhabitants, viz. 920 males and 1128 females, of whom 116 were returned as employed in trade, and 406 in agriculture.

KILLINAULE, a town in the county of Tipperary, province of Munster, Ireland, 14 miles north of Clonmell.

KILLINGHOLME NORTH and SOUTH, a parish united with Hawburgh, in the hundred of Yarborough, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 9 miles from Caistor, and 166 from London; containing 72 houses and 343 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, valued at 7*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.* united with Hawburgh.

KILLINGHALL, a hamlet in the parish and liberties of Rippon, west riding of York, adjoining to Rippon. Population included with Nioid.

KILLINGTON, a township in the parish of Kirby Lonsdale, Lonsdale ward, Westmoreland, 6 miles from Kirby Lonsdale, and 255 from London; containing 59 houses and 314 inhabitants.

KILLMACDUAGH, a small village in the county of Galway, province of Connaught, Ireland, 2 miles west of Gort, and 18 from Galway. Here are the ruins of a stately cathedral, a monastery, and several chapels, and part of a large round tower of very ancient and rude masonry, which show this village once to have been a place of far different appearance.

KILPECK, a parish in the hundred of Wormelow, Hereford, 7 miles from Hereford, and 130 from London; containing 49 houses and 279 inhabitants. The church is a curacy, rated at 4*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of Gloucester.

KILSBY, a parish in the hundred of Fawsley, Northampton, 6 miles from Daventry, and 78 from London; containing 148 houses and 703 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 14*l.* belonging to the prebend thereof in Lincoln cathedral.

KILLWORTH NORTH, a parish in the hundred of Guthlaxton, Leicester, 5 miles from Lutterworth, and 79 from London; containing 73 houses and 298 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 15*l.* 5*d.*

KILLWORTH SOUTH, another parish in the same hundred, 1 mile distant from the above; containing 77 houses and 397 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 10*l.* 8*s.* 11*d.* and the patron is the king.

KILLOUGH, or PORT ST. ANN'S, a town in the county of Down, province of Ulster, Ireland, lying to the north of St. John's Point. It has a good quay, and is 76 miles north by east of Dublin. Here is a very considerable salt work. On the sea-shore, at a small distance from the town, here is a rock, in a hole of which a remarkable noise is heard at the ebbing and flowing of the tide. At the coming in of the tide, whilst the waters are beating up under the rock, a cold air is produced with a mixture of spray bursting from it, and as the water retires, a strong draught of air sets in at the hole. In an open field, about ¼ mile from the town, is a curious cave 27 yards long, with a winding passage 2½ feet broad, having three doors in it besides the entrance leading to a circular chamber, in which is a well of good water.

KILLOW, a village in the county of Derry, province of Ulster, Ireland.

KILLOWEN POINT, a good natural harbour, about 2 miles south of Restrevor, in Down, Ulster.

KILLYBEGS, a town in the county of Donegal, province of Ulster, Ireland. It has an excellent harbour on the north side of Donegal bay. Lies 12 miles north-west of Balyshannon, 13 south-west of Donegal, and 123 north-west of Dublin. The harbour is very safe, and so capacious as to be able to hold a large fleet, and may be entered any time of the tide. The herring fishery is the principal business of the place. Long. 8. 6. W. Lat. 54. 40.

KILLY LEAGH, a town in the county of Down, province of Ulster, Ireland, standing on an arm of Strangford lake, 15 miles south-east of Belfast, and 89 north-east of Dublin. It is much improved of late years, and fast recovering from the deplorable state it was thrown into by the calamities of 1641. It has a very considerable linen and thread manufactory, the thread being very much in repute. At the upper end of the main street is a castle, formerly the seat of the Hamilton family; and at the bottom is a small bay, affording a very commodious shelter for vessels. At this town the celebrated sir Hans Sloane was born.

KILMACTHOMAS, a town in the county of Waterford, province of Munster, Ireland, 10 miles south-west of Waterford. Long. 7. 10. W. Lat. 52. 14.

KILMADOCK, a parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, otherwise Doune, from the name of the village in which the church stands; besides which there are two other small villages, Buchany and Burn of Cambus nearly adjoining, being 8 miles from Stirling. It contains 450 houses and 3044 inhabitants, viz. 1435 males and 1609 females, of whom 503 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures, and 574 in agriculture. Here are the ruins of six small chapels, once dependent on an extensive monastery here.

KILMAINHAM, a decayed town standing on the western extremity of the city of Dublin, in a pleasant valley on the great western road. It was for a considerable time the seat of government before Dublin castle was appropriated to that purpose. In the bottom runs a good stream of water, which turns several mills; and on the banks of which are also many tan-yards. On the hill, on one side, stands an elegant building for invalid soldiers, called Kilmainham hospital; on the opposite side is another handsome building, the Foundling hospital. Here is a gaol, and a good sessions house, where the quarter sessions for the county of Dublin are held; it is also the place of election for knights of the shire.—Carr's Ireland.

KILMALIE, a very extensive parish in the shires of Argyle and Inverness, Scotland, intersected by three arms of the sea, extending 60 miles. Fort William and Maryburgh are in this parish; and it contains 758 houses and 4524 inhabitants, viz. 2064 males and 2456 females, of whom 209 were returned as employed in trade, and 3156 in agriculture. The lakes abound with salmon, and along the shore are several very extensive caves. Down the steep side of Ben Nevis, one of the highest mountains in Britain, is a beautiful cascade. On the summit of a green hill, 1200 feet high, is the remains of a vitrified castle, called Dundhairghall, supposed to have been a sort of out-work to Inverlochy castle.

KILMANIVAIG, a parish in the shire of Inverness, Scotland, 6 miles from Fort William; containing 497 houses and 2541 inhabitants, being 1177 males and 1364 females, of whom 66 were returned as employed in trade, and 975 in agriculture. Here is the ancient castle of Inverlochy, the only remnant of the ancient city of that name. Another curious antiquity in this parish, are the remains of the famous parallel roads, supposed to have been made to facilitate the exercise of hunting, along the steep declivities of the mountains, and through the vallies of wood.—Ross's Stat. Account.

KILMANY, a parish in the shire of Fife, Scotland, lying in a valley watered by the river Notray; containing 171 houses and 787 inhabitants. The village is pleasantly situated on a small eminence, 5 miles from Cupar, and 3½ from Balmerino on the Tay.

KILMARNOCK, a town in the shire of Ayr, Scotland, 13 miles from Ayr. It contains 1091 houses and 8079 inhabitants, viz. 3716 males and 4365 females, of whom 6757 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures, and 1140 in agriculture. It is pleasantly seated on both sides of a branch of the Irvine. The town is very irregularly built. Its manufactures of Scotch carpeting, serges, woollen cloths, and saddlery, are very considerable; and in the neighbourhood is an extensive coal-mine. It is a burgh of barony, governed by two bailies, a council of twelve of the merchants, and the deacons of the five incorporated trades. A short distance from the town are the remains of Dean castle, a very ancient edifice, in the same desolate condition in which it was reduced by fire in 1735. This was the seat of the Boyds earls of Kilmarnock. Besides the parish church, which is collegiate, there are four other places of religious worship. In one of the areas of the town stands a stone pillar of elegant workmanship, to the memory of lord Soules, who was killed on the spot, in 1444, by an arrow shot by one of the Boyd family.—Crutwell's Tour.

KILMARNOCK, a parish in the shire of Dumbarton, Scotland, 8 miles from Dumbarton; containing 168 houses and 879 inhabitants. It is watered by the river Endrick.

KILMARTIN, a parish in the shire of Argyle, Scotland, on the banks of Loch Ow. The village is beautifully seated in a valley, the rocks covered to their summits on each side with lofty trees. This village is a stage on the road from Kintyre to Fortwilliam, 20 miles from Inverary. The principal harbour is Loch Crinan. The navigable canal, which is opened from Loch Tyne to the Atlantic Ocean, is of the greatest advantage to this part of the country. Here is a rich copper-mine, which has been wrought to considerable advantage for some years. The parish contains 291 houses and 1501 inhabitants, of whom 76 were returned as employed in trade.

KILMAURS, a parish in the shire of Ayr, Scotland, 2 miles from Kilmarnock, and 14 from Ayr; containing 237 houses and 1288 inhabitants, of whom 463 were returned as employed in trade, and was once particularly noted for cutlery. The town is a burgh of barony, situated on a gentle ascent, consisting of one handsome street, with a small town-house in the middle; it is governed by two bailies.

KILMERSDON, a parish in the hundred of Kilmersdon, Somerset, 6 miles from Froome, and 111 from London; containing 272 houses and 1721 inhabitants, of whom 82 were returned as employed in various trades. It has a good charity school. The living is a vicarage, rated at 6*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.* with Ashwick chapel annexed.

KILMINGTON, a township in the parish and hundred of Axminster, Devon, 2 miles from Axminster, and 149 from London; containing 84 houses and 444 inhabitants.

KILMINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Ferris Norton, Somerset, 6 miles from Bruton, and 105 from London; containing 104 houses and 504 inhabitants. About two miles from the church is erected a stately tower, on a tablet over the entrance is the following inscription: "Alfred the Great, A. D. 879, on this summit erected his standard against Danish invaders. To him we owe the origin of juries, and the creation of a naval force; Alfred, the light of the benighted age, was a philosopher and a christian; the father of his people, and the founder of the English monarchy and liberties." This was erected some years since at the expence of Henry Hoare, esq. of Stourhead, adjoining this parish. The church is a curacy.

KILLICRACK, a parish in the shire of Inverness, Scotland, 10 miles from Inverness; containing 519 houses and 2366 inhabitants, viz. 1075 males and 1291 females, of whom 145 were returned as employed in trade, and 503 in agriculture. Among the numerous lakes of this district, the one called Lochan Uain, or the green lake, has the curious phenomenon of being covered with ice both winter and summer; and in the middle of June, when the sun is vertical, only a little of the ice in the center of the lake is dissolved. On the summit of many of the mountains are the ruins of watch towers, and here are the ruins of Beaulieu priory. —Fraser's Stat. Account.

KILMERSDON, the name of a hundred in Somersetshire, on the eastern side of the county, between the hundreds of Frome and Chewton.

KILMORE, a parish in the shire of Argyle, Scotland, united with the parish of Kilbride, stands on the coast of the Atlantic, comprehending the island of Kerera, 20 miles from Inverary; it contains 313 houses and 1854 inhabitants. Here are several remarkable caves, one of which has not yet been penetrated to its further end.

KILMORY, a parish in the isle of Arran, shire of Bute, Scotland; containing 618 houses and 2996 inhabitants, mostly employed in agriculture and fishing. The high hill, Beinnbharfhionn, has its top covered with snow nearly the whole of the year.

KILMUIR, a parish in the shire of Inverness, at the northern extremity of the isle of Sky. The shores in general are high and rocky. In the mountains is a singular concealed valley surrounded on all sides by steep rocks, and the lake Shiant, or Sacred lake, has long been famed for the cure of many diseases. Near the church is a weak chalybeate spring. The parish contains 484 houses and 2555 inhabitants.

KILMUIR EASTER, a parish partly situate in the shire of Ross, and partly in that of Cromarty, pleasantly situated on the Frith.

of Cromarty, 18 miles from Dingwall; containing 390 houses and 1703 inhabitants.

KILNSEA, a parish in Holderness, east riding of York, 6 miles from Patrington, and 199 from London, near the Spurn head; containing 18 houses and 93 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.*

KILNINIAN, a parish in the isle of Mull, Argyleshire, Scotland; containing, together with the isles of Ulva, Gometra, Little Colonsay, and Staffa, 672 houses and 3601 inhabitants, viz. 1710 males and 1891 females, mostly employed in agriculture and fishing. It has an excellent harbour at Tobermory, where a small village has lately been erected by the British Society for improving the coasts and encouraging the fisheries. At Aros, on the sound, is another harbour, and near it a large castle, formerly the residence of the lords of the isles.

KILNINVER, a parish in the district of Lorn, Argyleshire, Scotland, united with Kilmelfort, bounded by the sound of Mull, Loch Feechan, and Loch Melfort, two arms of the sea; it is 20 miles from Inverary, and contains 223 houses and 1173 inhabitants.

KILNWICK, a parish in the division of Bainton Beacon, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 8 miles from Beverley, and 192 from London; containing 42 houses and 189 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

KILPATRICK NEW, or EAST, a parish situated in the shires of Stirling and Dumbarton, Scotland, 11 miles from Glasgow, and 6 from Dumbarton; containing 263 houses and 2312 inhabitants, of whom 1556 were returned as employed in trade and manufacture. The river Kelvin runs through the parish, and here the grand canal passes the river by an aqueduct bridge of four arches, each 50 feet wide. The only village is Millguy. Here are six bleachfields, and eight mills for corn, paper, and snuff.

KILPATRICK OLD, or WEST, a parish in the shire of Dumbarton, on the north bank of the Clyde, 10 miles from Glasgow; it contains 577 houses and 2844 inhabitants, viz. 1390 males and 1454 females, of whom 2050 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures. Here are large manufactories of iron, woollen, and paper; and a spacious bleach field, and printing grounds. On a promontory, above the Clyde, are the ruins of the once strongly fortified castle of Dunglass, which was blown up in the year 1640 by the treachery of a page to the earl of Haddington; and at which was the termination of Antonine's wall, vestiges of which are still discernible.

KILPESHAM. See CLIPSHAM, Rutland.

KILPIN, a hamlet in the parish of Howden, in the division of Howdenshire, east riding of York, 1 mile from Howden, and 181 from London; containing 36 houses and 183 inhabitants.

KILRENNY, a royal burgh in the shire of Fife, Scotland, on the north coast of the Frith of Forth, 2 miles from Anstruther. It has much decreased since the Union, and the decay of its once considerable fishery. It contains 205 houses and 1043 inhabitants. Jointly with Anstruther, Pittenweim, and Crail, it sends one member to parliament.

KILSPENDIE, a parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, lying half way between Perth and Dundee, and 7 miles from St. Andrew's; containing 153 houses and 762 inhabitants.

KILRUSH, a town in the county of Clare, province of Munster, Ireland, 142 miles from Dublin.

KILSYTH, a parish in the shire of Stirling, Scotland, about 15 miles from Glasgow, Falkirk, Hamilton, and Stirling; containing 545 houses and 1762 inhabitants, of whom 1264 were returned as employed in trade and manufactures. It is watered by the rivers Carron and Kelvin, and the whole parish abounds with minerals. From this place the Carron company are furnished with about 5000 tons of iron annually. It also abounds with coal and freestone, and has many specimens of beautiful jaspers and agates. It is a burgh of barony, empowered to hold a weekly market and four annual fairs, and formerly gave title of viscount to the family of Livingstone.—Rennie's Stat. Account.

KILTARLITY, a mountainous parish in the shire of Inverness, 8 miles from Inverness; it contains 557 houses and 2588 inhabitants, of whom 611 were returned as employed in agriculture. Here are to be seen the remains of several druidical temples, a watch tower, and a vitrified fort. On the river Beaulieu, is an extensive fishery.

KILTEARN, a parish in the shire of Ross, Scotland, on the north side of the Frith of Cromarty, 6 miles from Dingwall; containing 361 houses and 1525 inhabitants. Benvaish, a very lofty mountain here, is constantly covered with snow; and the tenure of part of the estate of the barons of Fowlis was by the payment of a snow-ball to his majesty on any day of the year required. Several rivers take their rise among the hills near this place, and descending with astonishing rapidity form some beautiful cascades.

KILTON, a parish in the hundred of Williton and Freemanners, Somerset, 9 miles from Bridgewater, and 150 from London, standing near Bridgewater bay. It contains 24 houses and 114 inhabitants, and is a vicarage, rated at 7*l.* 6*s.* 10*d.* the patronage of which is with the king.

KILTON, a hamlet to Brotton, in Langbourgh wapentake, north riding of York, 4 miles from Gisborough, and 255 from London; containing 21 houses and 129 inhabitants.

KILVE, a parish in the hundred of Williton and Freemanners, Somerset, 10 miles from Bridgewater, and 151 from London, on the shore of Bridgewater bay. It contains 32 houses and 176 inhabitants, and is a rectory, rated at 9*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.*

KILVERSTONE, a parish in the hundred of Shropham, Norfolk, 1½ mile from Thetford, and 81½ from London; containing 6 houses and 70 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 7*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.* and the patron is the king.

Kilvington, a parish in the hundred of Newark, Notts, on a branch of the river Devon, 6 miles from Newark, 6 from Bingham, and 118 from London. Population omitted to be returned. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.*

Kilvington South, a parish and curacy in Birdforth wapentake, north riding of York, 1 mile from Thirsk, and 219½ from London; containing 50 houses and 229 inhabitants.

Kilvington North, a hamlet in the parish of Thornton le Street, in the division of Allertonshire, north riding of York, 2 miles from Thirsk, and 220½ from London; containing 13 houses and 57 inhabitants.

Kilwalsey, a hamlet in the parish of Hampton in Arden, hundred of Hemlingford, Warwick, 8 miles from Birmingham. Population included with Hampton.

Kilworth, a town in the county of Cork, province of Munster, Ireland, standing at the foot of the Kilworth mountains, below which runs the river Funcheon, well stored with trout and salmon; it discharges itself into the Blackwater. It lies 108 miles south-west of Dublin.

Kilmore, a town in the county of Cavan, province of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles south-west of Cavan. It is the see of a bishop.

Kilwinning, a town and parish in the shire of Ayr, Scotland, 5 miles north-west of Irvine; containing 496 houses and 2700 inhabitants, viz. 1340 males and 1360 females, of whom 1290 were returned as employed in trade, and 1090 in agriculture. The parish is watered by the river Garnoch. About 1 mile from the town are the ruins of its once famous monastery; the steeple and part of the church have been lately repaired at the expence of the earl of Eglintoun. This place is also noted as the seat of the first masonic lodge in Scotland, said to have been first established by the architects and masons employed in building the monastery. Archery was early practised in this town, and a prize is still annually shot for by the burgesses. This parish abounds with freestone, limestone, and coal.

Kimberley, a parish united with Barnham Broom, in the hundred of Forehoe, Norfolk, 11 miles from Norwich, and 100 from London; containing 16 houses and 156 inhabitants.

Kimberley, a hamlet to Greaseley, in the hundred of Broxtow, Notts, lying between the Erwash and the Leen, 7 miles from Nottingham, and 131 from London.

Kimberworth, a township in the parish of Rotherham, wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of York, 1½ mile from Rotherham, and 159 from London; containing 562 houses and 3326 inhabitants, viz. 1658 males and 1668 females, of whom 928 were returned as being principally employed in various woollen and linen manufactures.

Kimble Great, a parish in the hundred of Aylesbury, Bucks, 3½ miles from Wendover, and 38 from London; containing 42 houses and 316 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 6*l.* 10*s.* 8*d.*

Kimble Little, a parish near the above; containing 32 houses and 142 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 6*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.*

Kimblesworth, a hamlet in the parish of Chester le Street, in Chester ward, Durham, 3 miles from Durham, and 262 from London; containing 3 houses and 22 inhabitants.

Kimbolton, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Wolphy, Hereford, 3 miles from Leominster, and 140 from London; containing 100 houses and 504 inhabitants.

Kimbolton, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Leightonstone, Hunts, 65 miles from London; containing 250 houses and 1266 inhabitants, of whom 140 were returned as employed in trade. The only place of note in this town is Kimbolton castle, the magnificent seat of the duke of Manchester; it is a quadrangular building, the inside most superbly fitted up, and decorated with handsome paintings. It was the residence of queen Catherine after her divorce from Henry VIII. The market is on Friday; fair 11th December. The living is a vicarage, rated at 5*l.* and is in the patronage of the duke of Manchester.

Kimcot, or Kincott, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Guthlaxton, Leicester, 2¼ miles from Lutterworth, and 82 from London; containing 133 houses and 645 inhabitants.

Kimeridge, a village in the hundred of Hasilor, division of Blandford, Dorset, in the isle of Purbeck, 3 miles from Corfe Castle, and 119 from London, lies on the north of Kimeridge bay, is defended on the east and west by two high cliffs, and has a strong battery; it contains 20 houses and 115 inhabitants. In the neighbourhood is an alum mine.

Kimpton, a parish in the hundred and division of Andover, Hants, 5 miles from Andover, and 68 from London; containing 62 houses and 292 inhabitants.

Kimpton, a parish in the hundred of Hitchin, Herts, 7 miles from Hitchin, and 27 from London; containing 128 houses and 644 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 12*l.*

Kincardineshire, or the county of Mearns, Scotland, is bounded on the north by Aberdeen, on the east by the Ocean, and on the south and west by the county of Angus. It is of a triangular form, being about 30 miles long, and 20 broad. It contains 5688 houses, inhabited by 26,349 persons, viz. 12,104 males and 14,245 females, of whom 6023 were returned as employed in various trades, handicrafts, and manufactures, and 7924 in agriculture. The name of Kincardine is derived from a small village in the parish of Fordoun, which was anciently the county town, but the courts have long since been removed to Stonehaven. The sea-coast is partly flat and partly rocky, rising inwards to a fine level, about 100 feet above the level of the sea. It is watered by the rivers Bervie, Cowie, Carron, and North Eske. Part of the Grampian ridge runs through this county, south of which it is very fertile, and where many improvements in agriculture have of late years been introduced. The north-west part of the shire is mountainous, and chiefly adapted for pasturage. The shire contains only one royal borough, viz. Inverbervie or Bervie, but it has many populous towns and villages, the chief of which are Stonehaven, Johnshaven, and Laurencekirk; the latter, from an inconsiderable village, is now become a handsome town, with extensive manufactures. There are many good quarries of limestone, and near the shore of St. Cyrus are found jaspers. It contains several vestiges of antiquity. This county sends one member to parliament.

KINCARDINE, a parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, in the strath of Montieth, surrounded on all sides, except the south, by the Grampian and Ochill hills. Of late a considerable improvement has been effected here by clearing a moss of 2000 acres, in some parts 12 feet thick, by raising the waters of the Teith. The parish contains 460 houses and 2212 inhabitants, viz. 1019 males and 1193 females, of whom 151 were returned as employed in trade, and 447 in agriculture. The two villages, now nearly united, are called Morrirstown and Thornhill.

KINCARDINE, a parish lying in the shires of Ross and Cromarty; it is bounded by the Frith of Dornoch, and lies about 14 miles west of Tain. It contains 395 houses and 1865 inhabitants, of whom only 56 were returned as employed in trade, &c. notwithstanding its excellent situation with convenient harbours. On the Frith are several salmon fishings.

KINCARDINE, a town in the parish of Tullialan, shire of Perth, Scotland, on the banks of the Forth, 4 miles from Alloa, and 22 south of Perth. It contains about 900 inhabitants. The houses are well built, the streets regular, and remarkably dry. It was formerly noted for its number of salt pans. Here are two weekly markets, and the harbour is very commodious, vessels of 100 tons being able to ride here in perfect safety. There is much ship-building at this place, and about 75 vessels belong to the town, which are chiefly engaged in the Baltic trade. It is an appendage to the port of Alloa.

KINCARDINE, a decayed village in the parish of Fordoun, Kincardineshire, and anciently the county town. It contains only 79 inhabitants.

KINCARDINE O'NEIL, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, 25 miles from Aberdeen, containing 401 houses and 1710 inhabitants, of whom 357 were returned as employed in various trades, &c. The hamlet which surrounds the church is finely situated on the banks of the Dee, and is much resorted to during the summer season by invalids.

KINCLAVEN, a parish in the shire of Perth, lying on the south and west banks of the river Tay, on the banks of which are the ruins of Kinclaven castle. It is 9 miles from Perth, and 8 from Dunkeld, and contains 229 houses and 1035 inhabitants.

KINDERTON, a hamlet in the parish of Middlewich, hundred of Northwich, Chester, 1 mile from Middlewich, and 167 from London; containing 83 houses and 404 inhabitants.

KINETON, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Kington, Warwick, 12¼ miles from Banbury, and 84 from London; containing 156 houses and 779 inhabitants. Camden supposes its name to have been derived from its ancient market for cows; but it is more probable that it is a corruption of Kingstown, it having had once a royal residence. It had a castle erected by king John. The market is on Tuesday. Fairs 24th June and 21st September. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* with Cumbrook chapel annexed.

KINETON. See KINGTON, Hereford.

KINGERBY, a parish in the hundred of Walsheroft, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 6 miles from Market Raisin, and 156 from London; containing 4 houses and 30 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.*

KINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Chadlington, Oxford, 4 miles from Chipping Norton, and 75 from London; containing 80 houses and 428 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 17*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*

KINGMOOR, an extra-parochial village in Eskdale ward, Cumberland, 1 mile from Carlisle, and 306 from London; containing 21 houses and 103 inhabitants.

KINFAUNS, a parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, at the extremity of the carse of Gowrie, 5 miles from Perth; containing 123 houses and 646 inhabitants. The castle, the seat of lord Gray, stands on an elevated situation, commanding a view of the carse and river Tay. In it is preserved an antique sword 5 feet 9 inches long, said to have belonged to the noted Thomas de Longueville, the friend of sir William Wallace.

KINGARTH, a parish in the isle and shire of Bute, Scotland; containing 165 houses and 875 inhabitants.

KING EDWARD AT KEN. EDAR, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, on the banks of the Deveron, 4 miles from Banff; containing 386 houses and 1723 inhabitants, of whom 564 were returned as employed in trade.

KINGHORN, a royal borough in the shire of Fife, Scotland, pleasantly situated on a hill on the coast of the Frith of Forth, opposite to Leith, and contains 316 houses and 2303 inhabitants, viz. 1056 males and 1252 females, of whom 423 were returned as employed in trade, and 275 in agriculture. It consists of one main street intersected by lanes; in the centre of the town is an ancient court-house and prison, called St. Leonard's Tower. The principal manufactures here are thread stockings, and the spinning of cotton and flax. It has two harbours; one below the town, and the other above half a mile distant at Pettycur, for the convenience of the passage-boats to Leith. The waters of Kinghorn Spa are of great celebrity. Lat. 56° 8'. Long. 3° 10'. W.

KINGLASSIE, a parish in the shire of Fife, Scotland, on the banks of the river Leven, 6 miles from Dysart, and 14 from Cupar; contains 185 houses and 908 inhabitants.

KINGOLDRUM, a parish in the shire of Forfar, at the foot of the Grampian hills, 10 miles from Forfar, and 21 from Dundee; containing 125 houses and 577 inhabitants. On the top of the hill Schurrock are the vestiges of a druidical temple, and on the top of Cutlaw, 2260 feet above the level of the sea, is a large cairn. The castle of Baltour is a very ancient Gothic building.

KINGSBARNS, a parish in the shire of Fife, Scotland, 6 miles from St. Andrew's; containing 165 houses and 832 inhabitants, mostly weavers of osnaburgins, shirting, &c. for the Dundee market. Here is a very copious mineral spring.

KINGSBRIDGE, the name of a hundred in Wilts, in the northern part of the county, lying between the hundreds of Highworth and Selkley.

KINGSBRIDGE, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Stanborough, Devon, stands on an inlet of the English Channel, called Salcomb river, 10 miles from Dartmouth, and 207 from London; containing 153 houses and 1117 inhabitants, of whom 216 were returned as employed in various trades. It has a bridge over the river to Dodbrooke. In general it is neat and well built, and has a free school. Market on Saturday. Fair 20th July. It is a vicarage, value 16*l*. 16*s*. 11*d*. and is in the patronage of the king.

KING'S BROMLEY. See BROMLEY KING'S, Stafford.

KINGSBURY, the name of a hundred in Somerset, on the south-western side of the county around Wellington.

KINGSBURY, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Gore, Middlesex, 8 miles from London; containing 45 houses and 209 inhabitants. The curacy is in the patronage of the dean and chapter of St. Paul's.

KINGSBURY, a parish in the hundred of East Kingsbury, Somerset, 5 miles from Ilchester, and 128 from London; containing 200 houses and 1134 inhabitants, of whom 100 were returned as employed in trade. The living is a vicarage, rated at 17*l*. 18*s*. 1*d*. in the patronage of the chancellor of Wells.

KINGSBURY, a parish in the hundred of Hemlingford, Warwick, 6 miles from Tamworth, and 110 from London; containing 213 houses and 1111 inhabitants, of whom 67 were employed in trade. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l*. 10*s*.

KINGSCLERE, a market-town and parish in the hundred and division of Kingsclere, Hants, situated on the edge of a delightful chain of hills, 17 miles from Reading, and 54 from London; containing 388 houses and 1939 inhabitants, of whom 492 were returned as employed in trade, principally that of malting, with which it has a great traffic to the London market. The church is a large, well-built structure, and here is a free school handsomely endowed. Market on Tuesday. Fairs first Monday in April, first Tuesday in June and October. It is a vicarage, value 17*l*. 19*s*. 7*d*. united with Itchingswell and Sidmanton chapels annexed, in the patronage of the duke of Bolton.

KING'S COUNTY, a county in the province of Leinster, Ireland, so called after Philip of Spain, the husband of queen Mary, bounded on the north by Westmeath, on the east by Kildare and Queen's County, on the south by Queen's County and Tipperary, and on the west by part of Tipperary and the river Shannon; being about 30 miles long and 20 broad, and contains 32 parishes, 13,536 houses and 74,500 inhabitants. The capital of the county is Philipstown. The soil is tolerably fertile, but in general improvements in agriculture have not made so conspicuous a progress in this as in some of the neighbouring counties. The principal manufacture carried on here is that of linen, consisting of dowlas, sheeting, &c. which is in an increasing state.

KINGSCLIFF, a parish in the hundred of Willybrooke, Northampton, 6 miles from Stamford, and 85 from London; containing 204 houses and 876 inhabitants. Fair 29th October. It is a rectory, rated at 13*l*. 16*s*. 3*d*. and is in the patronage of the earl of Westmoreland.

KINGSCHAPEL, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Wormelow, Hereford, 4 miles from Ross, on the banks of the Wye, and 125 from London; containing 43 houses and 230 inhabitants.

KINGSCOT, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Beverstone, hundred of Berkley, Gloucester, 4 miles from Tetbury, and 105 from London. This place is the site of a Roman station; it contains 47 houses and 271 inhabitants.

KINGSHOLME, a hamlet to Gloucester, hundred of Dudstone and Kingsbarton, in Gloucestershire, 106 miles from London; containing 50 houses and 139 inhabitants.

KINGSTANLEY, a parish in the hundred of Whitestone, Gloucester, 3 miles from Stroud, and 105 from London. It was formerly a borough, and the residence of one of the Kings of Mercia; it contains 321 houses and 1434 inhabitants, of whom 1170 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures. It is a rectory, rated at 18*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of Jesus college, Cambridge.

KINGSDOWN, a parish in the hundred of Milton, lathe of Scray, Kent, 4 miles from Milton, and 43 from London; containing 7 houses and 60 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 9*l.* 1*s.* 8½ united with Mapiscomb, the patronage of which is in the dean and chapter of Rochester.

KINGSDOWN, a parish in the hundred of Axton, lathe of Sutton, Kent, near Wrotham, 21½ miles from London; containing 43 houses and 3.7 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 5*l.* 9*s.* 2*d.*

KINGSDOWN, a hamlet to Walmer hundred of Cornilo, lathe of St. Augustine, Kent, 2½ miles from Deal, and lying on the coast; it has long been the principal village for supplying Deal with fish.

KINGSDOWN, a parish in the hundred of Somerton, Somersetshire, 2 miles from Somerton, and 124 from London; containing 87 houses and 455 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 27*l.* 5*s.* 1*d.*

KINGSEY, a parish in the hundred of Ashendon, Bucks, 3 miles from Thame, and 44 from London; containing 21 houses and 165 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 8*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.*

KINGSFERRY, in the parish of Iwade, the common passage into the Isle of Sheppey, Kent; it is 41½ miles from London. A cable of about 140 fathoms is fastened across the water from shore to shore, and the ferryman pulls the boat over by hand: on the main side of the ferry is a small stone building, which will hold about 10 persons, built to shelter passengers waiting to pass the ferry. It is maintained by the occupiers of land paying 1*d.* per acre of fresh marsh land, and 1*d.* per 10 acres of salt marsh, which, together with some bequeathed land, keeps the boats, cables, and the causeway and wall against the sea in good repair. The ferryman is obliged to take all travellers over free, except on Palm-Monday, Whit-Monday, St. James and Michaelmas Days, and on Sundays after 8 o'clock at night; besides which he is allowed 24*l.* per annum, and to dredge for oysters within 60 fathoms on each side.

KINGSLAND, a parish in the hundred of Stretford, Hereford, 4½ miles from Leominster, and 141 from London; containing 175 houses and 948 inhabitants. Here is a free school. Fair 10th October. It is a rectory, value 31*l.* 3*s.* 0*d.*

KINGSLAND, a hamlet situated in the parishes of Hackney and Islington, Middlesex, 1½ mile from London. Here was formerly an hospital for lepers, called Les Loques, from the French word rags, whence the word Lock was used for a lazar, or poor-house. It was long an appendage to St. Bartholomew's in London, and used as an outer ward till 1761, when the patients were removed, and the ground let on a building lease; but the chapel was left for the benefit of the inhabitants, and the minister is appointed by the governors of St. Bartholomew's Hospital.

KING'S LANGLEY, a parish in the hundred of Dacorum, Herts, 4½ miles from Watford, and 19¾ from London. It obtained its name from being a royal residence; king Henry III. having occasionally resided here: it contains 181 houses and 978 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 8*l.* the patron is the bishop of Ely.

KINGSLEY, a township in the parish of Frodsham, hundred of Eddisbury, Chester, on the borders of Delamere forest, 5 miles from Northwich, and 178 from London; containing 102 houses and 661 inhabitants.

KINGSLEY, a parish and curacy in the hundred and division of Alton, Hants, 3 miles from Alton, and 44 from London; containing 48 houses and 274 inhabitants.

KINGSLEY, a parish in the hundred of Totmonslow, Stafford, 2 miles from Cheadle, and 147 from London; containing 159 houses and 673 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 16*l.* 15*s.*

KING'S LYNN. See LYNN REGIS.

KING'S KERSWELL, a township in the parish of St. Mary Church, hundred of Hayton, Devon, 4 miles from Newton Abbas, and 191 from London; containing 112 houses and 532 inhabitants.

KING'S MEABURN, a township in the parish of Morland, west ward, Westmorland, 8 miles from Appleby, and 273 from London; containing 34 houses and 178 inhabitants.

KING'S NEWNHAM, a hamlet in the parish of Church Lawford, hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, near the river Dove, 4 miles from Rugby, and 88 from London; containing 25 houses and 117 inhabitants.

KING'S NORTON, a parish in the hundred of Halfshire, Worcester, near the Stratford and Avon canal, 4 miles from Birmingham, and 116 from London; containing 524 houses and 2607 inhabitants, viz. 1268 males and 1439 females, of whom 946 were returned as employed in various trades. This parish is about 34 miles in circuit. It was formerly a market-town. The church is a good building, and contains several handsome monuments; it has also a chapel of ease, and has a good charity school. Fairs 25th April and 5th September. It is a vicarage, rated at 5*l.* 17*s.* 8*d.*

KING'S NORTH, a parish in the hundred of Longbridge, lathe of Scray, Kent, 2 miles from Ashford, and 57 from London; containing 43 houses and 295 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 11*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.* and is in the patronage of lord Romney.

KING'S NYMPTON, or KING'S NYMET, a parish in the hundred of Witheridge, Devon, 6 miles from South Moulton, and 187 from London; containing 94 houses and 510 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 28*l.* 6*s.* 3*d.*

KINGSTON, a parish in the hundred of Stretford, Hereford, 8 miles from Hereford, and 143 from London; containing 67 houses and 303 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 5*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*

KING'S SUTTON, the name of a hundred in Northamptonshire, forming the southern angle of the county, bordering on Oxfordshire.

KING'S TEIGNTON, a parish in the hundred of Teignbridge, Devon, 2 miles from Newton Bushel, and 185 from London; containing 167 houses and 856 inhabitants. The people here used to be infested with agues, but by draining the marshes the place has become tolerably healthy. The church-yard has a grove of tall elms, which have a good effect. It is a vicarage, rated at 28*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.* with Hewish chapel annexed, belonging to the prebend of Salisbury.

KING'S OMBORNE, a parish in the hundred of King's Omborne, division of Andover, Hants, 3 miles from Stockbridge, and 67 from London; containing 152 houses and 778 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 21*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.*

KING'S RIVER, a river in the county of Wicklow, province of Leinster, Ireland, which falls into the Liffey about a mile and a half from Blessington.

KINGSTHORPE, a parish in the hundred of Spelloe, Northampton, 2 miles from Northampton, and 67 from London; containing 208 houses and 909 inhabitants.

KINGSTON, the name of a hundred in Surry, on the northern side of the county, divided from Middlesex by the Thames, stretching from Kew to East Moulsey.

KINGSTON, a parish in the hundred of Longstow, Cambridge, 3 miles from Caxton, and 46 from London; containing 51 houses and 225 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 11*l.* 15*s.* 5*d.* and is in the patronage of King's college, Cambridge.

KINGSTON, a township and chapelry in the parish and hundred of Ermington, Devon, 2½ miles from Modbury, and 169 from London; containing 52 houses and 354 inhabitants.

KINGSTON, a hamlet in the parish of Corfe Castle, hundred of Cogdean, division of Shaston, Dorset, 1 mile from Corfe Castle, and 117 from London; containing 96 houses and 497 inhabitants.

KINGSTON LACEY, a hamlet in the parish of Canford Magna, hundred of Cogdean, division of Shaston, Dorset, 3 miles from Wimborn Minster, and 97 from London.

KINGSTON MAGNA, a parish in the hundred of Redlane, division of Sherborn, Dorset, 6 miles from Shaftesbury, and 107 from London; containing 71 houses and 413 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 13*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.*

KINGSTON NORTH, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Bere Regis, Dorset, 2 miles from Bere Regis, and 114 from London.

KINGSTON RUSSELL, a small village in the hundred of Ugglescombe, Dorset, near Dorchester. It was formerly a market-town, and appears to have been a considerable Roman station. It now contains only 7 houses and 59 inhabitants.

KINGSTON, a parish in the hundred of Kinghamford, lathe of St. Augustine, Kent, 5 miles from Canterbury, and 60 from London; containing 56 houses and 197 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 16*l.*

KINGSTON, a hamlet in the parish of Hackney, Middlesex.

KINGSTON, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Radliffe, hundred of Rushcliffe, Notts, 9 miles from Nottingham, and 118 from London; containing 26 houses and 152 inhabitants.

KINGSTON BLOUNT, a township in the parish of Aston Rowant, hundred of Lewknor, Oxford, 2 miles from Stoken Church, and 39 from London; containing 90 houses and 429 inhabitants.

KINGSTON, a parish in the hundred of Taunton Dean, Somerset, 4 miles from Taunton, and 148 from London; containing 156 houses and 834 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, rated at 18*l.* 7*s.* 11*d.* with Cutsdean chapel annexed, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Bristol.

KINGSTON, a parish in the hundred of Tintinhull, Somerset, 2 miles from Ilchester, and 123 from London; containing 28 houses and 197 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 27*l.* 3*s.* 1*d.*

KINGSTON SEYMOUR, a parish in the hundred of Chewton, Somerset, 11 miles from Bristol, and 124 from London; containing 41 houses and 267 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 29*l.* 3*s.* 11*d.*

KINGSTON, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Totmonslow, Stafford, 2¼ miles from Uttoxeter, and 133 from London; containing 53 houses and 276 inhabitants.

KINGSTON, a parish in the liberty of West Medina, Isle of Wight, Hants, 5 miles from Newport, and 97 from London; containing 4 houses and 34 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

KINGSTON, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Kingston, Surry, 10 miles from London, on the banks of the Thames, over which it has a wooden bridge. It contains 676 houses and 3793 inhabitants, viz. 1803 males and 1990 females, of whom 447 were returned as being employed in various trades. This town was either a royal residence or demesne as early as the union of the Saxon heptarchy; some of the Saxon kings were crowned here, and close to the north side of the church is a large stone, on which, tradition says, they sat during the ceremony. On the same side was formerly a chapel, adorned with the figures of different kings who had been crowned here. By the inscriptions over these figures some appear to have been crowned in the market-place, and others in the chapel. But this building fell down in 1730, at which time the sexton, who was digging a grave, was buried in the ruins, together with two other persons. The sexton's daughter was one of the sufferers, but, though buried seven hours, she survived, and was her father's successor. The church is a spacious handsome building, and the tower contains eight bells. In 1769 an act of parliament was obtained for separating the parish church of Kingston and its dependent chapels of Richmond, Moulsey, Thames Ditton, Petersham, and Kew, and forming the whole parish into two vicarages and two perpetual curacies. Here are held the Lent assizes for the county, but the town hall is in a very ruinous state. The corporation consists of bailiffs, high steward, recorder, town clerk, justices, &c.; and it sent members to parliament in the reigns of Edward II. and III. but ceased to possess the privilege by a petition from the corporation. Here is a free school, founded by queen Elizabeth, the school room of which was an ancient chapel to the hospital of St. Mary Magdalen. Here is also a bridge built of brick over a stream which comes from a spring in a cellar about 4 miles above the town, and is of sufficient force to turn two mills. The corporation has a revenue for keeping the ancient timber bridge in repair. During the civil wars this town was alternately in the hands of the parliament and of the royalists. In the neighbourhood are several handsome mansions, particularly Canbury and Coombehouse. The market is on Saturday. Fairs Whit-Thursday, 2d August, and 13th November. All Hallows tide fair lasts nine days.—Lysons's Environs of London.

KINGSTON, a parish in the hundred of Poleing, Arundel rape, Sussex, 4 miles from Arundel, and 60 from London; containing 7 houses and 53 inhabitants.

KINGSTON BY THE SEA, a parish in the hundred of Fishergate, rape of Bramber, Sussex, on the sea shore, 1 mile from Shoreham, and 55 from London; containing 11 houses and 77 inhabitants. The people are mostly employed in fishing and boat-building. It is a rectory, rated at 12*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.*

KINGSTON, a small village in the hundred of Swanborough, rape of Lewes, Sussex, 1¼ mile from Lewes, and 51 from London; containing 23 houses and 124 inhabitants.

KINGSTON DEVERILL, a parish in the hundred of Amesbury, Wilts, 5¼ miles from Hindon, and 101 from London; containing 54 houses and 292 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 19*l.* 15*s.*

KINGSTON BAGPUZE, a parish in the hundred of Ock, Berks, 6½ miles from Abingdon, and 61 from London; containing 56 houses and 280 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 10*l.* 6*s.* 5*d.* in the patronage of St. John's college, Oxford.

KINGSTON LISLE, a tything in the parish of Sparsholt, hundred of Shrivenham, Berks, 5 miles from Wantage, and 64 from London; containing 34 houses and 261 inhabitants. Fair 25th July.

KINGSTON ON HULL. See HULL, York, east riding.

KINGSWARE, a hamlet in the parish of Brixham, hundred of Hayton, Devon, near Torbay, and 205 miles from London. It is divided from Dartmouth by the river Dart, and contains 52 houses and 300 inhabitants.

KING SWINFORD, a parish in the hundred of Leisdon, Stafford, 3 miles from Stourbridge, and 124 from London; containing 1242 houses and 5164 inhabitants, viz. 3198 males and 3266 females, of whom 2077 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures, particularly that of glass and earthen ware, for which this part of the county is celebrated, from the advantage of the adjacent canals to Dudley, Stourbridge, Wolverhampton, Stafford, and its communication with most of the principal rivers in the kingdom. It has of late years become a place of great opulence and trade. It is a rectory, value 17*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

KING'S WOLDEN, a parish in the hundred of Hitchin, Herts, 5 miles from Hitchin, and 30 from London; containing 134 houses and 727 inhabitants.

KINGSWOOD, a hamlet in the parish of Wootton, hundred of Ashendon, Bucks, 8 miles from Aylesbury, and 48 from London; containing 9 houses and 37 inhabitants.

KINGSWOOD, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Chippenham, Wilts, 2 miles from Wooton under Edge, and 106 from London, entirely surrounded by Gloucestershire, being 7 miles from the borders of Wilts; it contains 173 houses and 901 inhabitants.

KINGSWOOD FOREST, in Gloucestershire, near Bristol. It contains above 5000 acres in extent. The ground is full of coal mines.

KINGSUTTON, a parish in the hundred of Kingsutton, Northampton, 4 miles from Banbury, and 68 from London; containing 221 houses and 1021 inhabitants, of whom 379 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures.

KINGTON, or KINETON, the name of a hundred in Warwickshire, forming the southern angle of the county.

KINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Webtree, Hereford, 5 miles from Hereford, and 136 from London; containing 65 houses and 372 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* united with Thruxton, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Hereford.

KINGTON, or KINETON, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Huntingdon, Herefordshire, standing on the river Arrow, 19 miles from Hereford, and 154½ from London; it contains 289 houses and 1424 inhabitants, of whom 559 were returned as employed in trade and manufacture, principally in that of woollen cloth. The town, in general, is well built; and has a good free and a charity school. Market on Wednesday. Fairs Wednesday before Easter, Whit-Monday, July 22, and September 13th. The markets on Wednesday before Easter, Whitsuntide, and Christmas, are very considerable for corn, cattle, and cloth, and are equal to most fairs. The living is a vicarage, rated at 25*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.* with Brilley, Huntingdon, and Michael church chapels annexed.

KINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Halfshire, Worcester, 3 miles from Droitwich, and 121 from London; containing 26 houses and 110 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.*

KINGTON, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Thornbury, Gloucester, 1 mile from Thornbury, and 122 from London; containing 90 houses and 464 inhabitants.

KINGTON WEST, a parish in the hundred of Chippenham, Wilts, 2 miles from Chippenham, and 95¼ from London; containing 47 houses and 221 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.*

KINGTON ST. MICHAEL'S, a parish in the hundred of North Damerham, Wilts, 2¼ miles from Chippenham, and 96 from London; containing 78 houses and 358 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.*

KINGUSSIE, a parish united with Inch in the shire of Inverness, Scotland, intersected by the winding of the river Spey, 114 miles from Edinburgh. It contains 382 houses and 1306 inhabitants, of whom 58 were returned as employed in trade. From its elevated situation it is cold, and much subject to storms. A mine from which some silver was procured was opened here some years since, but was soon discontinued.

KINGWATER, a hamlet in the parish of Laner Cost, in Eskdale ward, Cumberland, 9 miles from Carlisle, and 313 from London; containing 73 houses and 374 inhabitants.

KINGWESTON, a parish in the hundred of Catash, Somerset, 3 miles from Somerton, and 126 from London; containing 20 houses and 90 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 10*l.* 6*s.* 3*d.*

KINGWOOD, a hamlet in the parish of Gatton, hundred of Reigate, Surry, 3 miles from Reigate, and 18 from London; containing 28 houses and 112 inhabitants.

KINLET, a parish in the hundred of Stoddesdon, Salop, 6 miles from Bridgnorth, and 137 from London; containing 85 houses and 602 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*

KINLOCH, a parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, 9 miles from Dunkeld; containing 81 houses and 367 inhabitants. It is very diversified with hill, dale, river, lakes, woods, &c.

KINLOSS, a parish in the shire of Elgin, Scotland, 4 miles from Forres, at the head of Findhorn bay, having a village of the name of Findhorn at the head of a river of the same name. It contains 197 houses and 917 inhabitants.

KINNAIRD, a parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, lying in the carse braes of Gowrie, between Perth and Dundee. It contains 92 houses and 455 inhabitants.

KINNAIRD HEAD, a promontory in the shire of Aberdeen, 1 mile north of Fraserburgh, on the top of which is a castle four stories high, built in 1680, and in good repair. On the top of this castle a light-house has been erected, which is of considerable use to vessels coming from the North Sea to the east coast of Scotland, and from the Baltic to the Moray and Pentland Friths.

KINNEFF, a parish in the shire of Kincardine, Scotland, 3 miles from Inverberrie, at the mouth of the river Bervie, and containing 190 houses and 937 inhabitants. On the coast, in this parish, are three old castles.

KINNELL, a parish in the shire of Angus, Scotland, 6 miles from Aberbrothwick; containing 165 houses and 783 inhabitants.

KINNELL, a river in Dumfries, which falls into the river Annan near the royal burgh of Lochmabon.

KINNELLAR, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, 10 miles from Aberdeen; containing 64 houses and 309 inhabitants.

KINNERLEY, a parish in the hundred of Oswestry, Salop, 6 miles from Oswestry, and 173 from London; containing 214 houses and 1110 inhabitants, of whom 61 were returned as employed in trade. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* and is in the patronage of the prince of Wales.

KINNERSLEY, a parish in the hundred of Stretford, Hereford, 12 miles from Hereford, and 147 from London; containing 45 houses and 198 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 13*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.*

KINNERSLEY, a parish in the hundred of South Bradford, Salop, 4 miles from Newport, and 144 from London, lying near the Shrewsbury canal. It contains 41 houses and 210 inhabitants, and is a rectory, value 6*l.* 18*s.* in the patronage of earl Gower.

KINNERTON, a hamlet to Doddleston, in the hundred of Broxton, Cheshire, 4 miles from Chester, and 184 from London; containing 16 houses and 97 inhabitants.

KINNERTON, a hamlet to the town of New Radnor, Radnorshire, Wales, adjoining to Radnor, 150 miles from London, and containing 25 houses and 153 inhabitants.

KINNERTON, a small village in the hundred of Maylor, Flintshire, Wales, near Bangor, 8 miles from Wrexham, and containing 61 houses and 182 inhabitants.

KINNISIDE, a hamlet in the parish of Enerdale, in Allerdale ward above Derwent, Cumberland, 4 miles from Egremont, and 300 from London; containing 36 houses and 172 inhabitants.

KINNOLTON, a parish in the hundred of Bingham, Notts, 8 miles from Nottingham, and 118 from London; containing 53 houses and 275 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 7*l.* 18*s.* 11*d.* in the patronage of the archbishop of York.

KINNOUL, a parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, on the east side of the Tay, nearly opposite Perth. It is generally called Bridcind, from its situation at the end of Perth bridge. It contains 272 houses, and 1927 inhabitants, of whom 307 were returned as employed in various trades. It is a burgh of barony under the earl of Kinnoul, having a weekly market and four fairs. Many elegant seats are on the sides of the hills, and along the banks of the river; and the ruins of the ancient castle of Kinnoul are still to be seen. In the hill of Kinnoul is a deep cave, called Dragon's Hole, where it is said sir William Wallace was long secreted. This hill is a mineralogical curiosity, the greater part of it being composed of lava, of which there are about 20 different kinds, besides veins of sulphurat of barytes, zeolyte, and rock crystal; it is also famous for its fine agates: and produces many scarce botanical articles.

KINPURNIE, a hill in the parish of Meigle, shire of Perth, with a fine tower on its summit, which is fitted up as an observatory, and is 1151 feet above the level of the sea, 9 miles from Belmont castle.

KINROSS, the capital of the shire of the same name, lying at the west end of Loch Leven, on the road from Queensferry to Perth, distant from each 15 miles; it contains 379 houses and 2124 inhabitants, viz. 1001 males and 1123 females, of whom 398 were returned as being principally employed in the manufacture of Silesia and coarse cottons. It is watered by three small streams, the North and South Quieset, and the Gairney, which falls into the loch.

KINROSS-SHIRE, a county of Scotland, bounded on the north-north-east and south by the shire of Fife, and on the other sides by Perth; it is almost circular, and is about 30 miles in circumference, containing 7 parishes, 1372 houses, inhabited by 6725 persons, viz. 3116 males and 3609 females, of whom 888 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures, and 667 in agriculture. The middle part of this county is occupied by that beautiful expanse of water Loch Leven. The face of the country has a very rich appearance, and on the sides of the lake are many handsome seats. It alternately divides with Clackmanan in sending one member to parliament.

KINSALE, a town in the county of Cork, province of Munster, Ireland, seated on the river Bandon, 14 miles south of Cork. It is a very populous and commercial place, particularly in the making up of all sorts of ship-provisions. It has a very deep, commodious, and secure harbour. Ships of war are sometimes repaired at the docks at this port, and there is a crane for the loading and shipping of heavy artillery. In time of war it is much resorted to by ships coming from the colonies. On the opposite shore of the river lie Cove and Scilly, two well-built villages, and near Cove is the usual anchoring place: a strong fort, called Charles's Fort, begun by Charles II. and finished at the expence of 73,000*l.* defends the entrance of the harbour. Kinsale may be called the Plymouth of Ireland. Considerable quantities of grain are exported from this place. Lat. 51° 41′ 30″. Long. 8° 28′ 15″ W.

KINSHAM, a small village in the hundred of Wigmore, Hereford, near Presteign; containing 20 houses and 112 inhabitants.

KINTAIL, a parish in the shire of Ross, Scotland, intersected by the arms of the sea, Loch Long, and Loch Duich; it lies about 36 miles from Fort Augustus, and contains 211 houses and 1038 inhabitants. The cascade of Glommach is a remarkable waterfall, rendered truly awful from the gloom of the impending hills and woods.

KINTBURY EAGLE, the name of a hundred in Berkshire, towards the western side of the county, and south of Wantage.

KINTBURY, a parish in the hundred of Kintbury Eagle Berks, 4 miles from Hungerford, and 61 from London; containing 282 houses and 1430 inhabitants, of whom 162 were returned as employed in trade and manufacture. It is a vicarage, value 20*l.*

KINTORE, a small borough in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, seated on the river Don, 15 miles west from the county town, and containing 196 houses and 846 inhabitants. The town is small, but well built, and has a neat town-house and prison. It gives title of earl to the ancient family of Keith, is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, and a council of eight from the burgesses. The earls of Kintore have been provosts for a century past.

KINTYRE, or CANTYRE, the south division of Argyleshire, and is a peninsula lying between the Frith of Clyde and the Atlantic Ocean. It is principally inhabited by Highlanders. The chief town is the royal burgh of Campbell Town. Among the rocks, on the coast, are some remarkable caves. There is a considerable herring fishery here; upwards of 500 busses belonging to Campbell Town alone.

KINTYRE MULL OF the south point of the above peninsula. It has a light-house, 235 feet above high water mark, situated on the rocks called the Merchants, the sound of Ilay bearing north by west 27 miles, and the Copland light south by west ½ west, 31 miles.

KINVASTON, a hamlet to Wolverhampton, hundred of Seisdon, Stafford, near Wolverhampton; containing 3 houses and 19 inhabitants.

KINVER, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Seisdon, Stafford, 2 miles from Stourbridge, and 122 from London; containing 318 houses and 1655 inhabitants, of whom 254 were returned as employed in various trades, &c. There are several fulling and sheering mills on the banks of the river Stour at this place. There are also some manufactories for narrow cloth, the produce of which almost equals that of the western counties in point of fineness. Here are the remains of an ancient fortification.

KINVEN, a river in Cardiganshire, which falls into the Dovy after running a short distance.

KINWARDSTONE, the name of a hundred in Wilts, on the eastern side of the county, adjoining Hungerford in Berks.

KINWARTON, a parish in the hundred of Barlichway, Warwick, 1¼ mile from Alcester, and 104 from London; containing 5 houses and 26 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 17*l.* 11*s.* in the patronage of the bishop of Worcester.

KIPLIN, a hamlet in the parish of Catterick, Gilling East wapentake, north riding of York, 5 miles from North Allerton, and 230 from London; containing 17 houses and 95 inhabitants.

KIPPEN, a parish lying on the south bank of the Frith of Forth, partly in the shire of Perth, and partly in the shire of Stirling. It contains the villages of Kippen and Bucklyvie, both having weekly markets, and each having five fairs in the year. The parish contains 405 houses and 1722 inhabitants, of whom 184 were returned as employed in trade.

KIRKBY, a parish in the hundred of Tendring, Essex, 12½ miles from Colchester, and 64 from London; containing 91 houses and 664 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, rated at 10*l.* united with Thorpe and Walton.

KIRKBY BELLERS, a parish and curacy on the river Wreake, hundred of Framland, Leicester, 3½ miles from Melton Mowbray, and 107 from London; containing 32 houses and 173 inhabitants.

KIRKBY MALLERY, a parish in the hundred of Sparkenhoe, Leicester, 4 miles from Hinckley, and 103 from London; containing 49 houses and 243 inhabitants.

KIRKBY MACKLOE, a hamlet in the parish of Glenfield, hundred of Sparkenhoe, Leicester, 4 miles from Leicester, and 101 from London; containing 26 houses and 167 inhabitants.

KIRKBY MOORSIDE, a market-town and parish in Rydall division, north riding of York, so called from its situation, on the edge of Blackmoor, 28 miles from York, and 228 from London; containing 373 houses and 1396 inhabitants, of whom 757 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures. An abbey of Cistercian nuns formerly stood at Kedholm, about a mile from the town; and about 1 mile west, in a small valley, stands Kirkdale church, a place of note to the curious on account of its antiquity. The market is on Wednesdays. It is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 10*d.* and the patron is the king.

KIRKBY CAIN, a parish in the hundred of Clavering, Norfolk, 4 miles from Brooxy, and 118 from London; containing 50 houses and 215 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 16*l.*

KIRKBY EDEN, a parish in the hundred of Henstead, Norfolk, 3 miles from Norwich, and 107 from London; containing 34 houses and 198 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 6*l.* 6*s.* 9*d.*

KIRKBY KENDAL. See KENDAL, Westmoreland.

KIRKBY MONKS, or KIRKBY MONACHORUM, a parish in the hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, 6 miles from Rugby, and 89 from London; containing 129 houses and 674 inhabitants, including the hamlet of Copston. The church is very large, and had a spire, which served as a land mark, till about 20 feet of it were taken down to save repairs. Here are marks of a Roman station. The living is a vicarage, value 22*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.* in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge.

KIRKBY LONSDALE, a market-town and parish in Lonsdale ward, Westmoreland, 12 miles from Kendal, and 251 from London, pleasantly seated in a valley; and containing 254 houses and 1283 inhabitants, of whom 751 were returned as employed in various trades. It is supposed to have been named from Kirby or Kirkby, bishop of Carlisle, who routed the Scots here in their incursions, and was a native of the town. It is a neat place, and next to Kendal, the largest in the county. The houses are covered with slate. The church is a noble structure, 120 feet long, and 102 broad; it has a square tower 61 feet high, and a peal of six bells. In the library of the church is the following inscription: "This library, pulpit, and new loft, with the school-house, were founded by Henry Wilson of Underby, who gave 1000*l.* to the college, besides 35*l.* yearly to seven poor scholars going to Queen's college, Oxford; to this church and school 240*l.* and to the poor of Kirkdale Lonsdale lordship 500*l.* beside many other gifts to pious uses in other places, by all which he being dead, yet speaks." Here is a bridge of freestone of three arches founded on a rock over the river Lune, and along its banks are many pleasant walks and arbours commanding a very picturesque view. The river abounds with excellent salmon and trout. The market is on Thursday, and is well supplied with all kinds of provisions. Fairs 9th and 30th of May for cattle, and 21st December chiefly for cloth. The living is a vicarage, value 20*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge.—Housman's Tour.

KIRKBY STEPHEN, a market-town and parish in East ward, Westmoreland, 4 miles from Brough, and 265 from London; containing 200 houses and 1141 inhabitants, of whom 285 were returned as employed in various trades, &c. It is seated on the west bank of the river Eden, and consists chiefly of one large street, indifferently built, opening to Helbec mountain at one extremity, and Wildbore at the other. The parish church is large and handsome, having a lofty tower, and several ancient monuments; adjoining it a large and elegant parsonage house, and a good free school that has two exhibitions. It formerly had a large open market place, 70 yards wide, and nearly 100 long, but it has been lately built upon. The market has a very good connection with the surrounding country, although the situation is bleak and mountainous. The stocking manufacture is carried on here, but the chief traffic of the inhabitants consists in grazing and supplying the Liverpool market with cattle. Near the town are the ruins of Penpragon castle, anciently the seat of the Cliffords. It was of amazing strength, the walls being four yards thick, with embattlements; but little remains at present, except a square tower, apparently of more modern date, as it appears to have been repaired by the countess of Pembroke after it had lain in ruins for nearly two centuries. Its situation, as a place of strength, was badly chosen, being in a deep dell entirely overlooked by mountains; on the opposite side of the dell are the traces of an intrenchment and fortification. Market on Monday. Fair St. Luke's Day. The living is a vicarage value 4*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.*—Burn's Westmoreland.

KIRKBY THORE, a parish in East ward, Westmoreland, 4½ miles from Appleby, and 274½ from London; containing 97 houses and 247 inhabitants, exclusive of the townships of Wilburn and Temple Sowerby. This is supposed to have been the ancient Brovonacæ. Most of the houses appear to have been built out of the ruins of Whelp castle, near the site of which many Roman antiquities have been dug up. It is a rectory, value 37*l.* 17*s.* 11*d.* patron the earl of Thanet.

KIRKBY GRINDILYTH, a parish in Buckrose wapentake, east riding of York, 10 miles from Driffield, and 207 from London; containing 21 houses and 144 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*

KIRKBY UNDERDALE, a parish in Buckrose wapentake, east riding of York, 14 miles from York, and 214 from London; containing 36 houses and 230 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 6*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* patron the king.

KIRKBY COLD, a township and chapelry to the parish of Easingwold, Birdforth wapentake, north riding of York, 7 miles from Thirsk, and 228 from London; containing 26 houses and 150 inhabitants.

KIRKBY KNOWLE, a parish in Birdforth wapentake, north riding of York, 5 miles from Thirsk, and 228 from London; containing 21 houses and 129 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 2*s.* 1*d.*

KIRKBY WISKE, a parish in Gilling East wapentake, north riding of York, 4 miles from Thirsk, and 223 from London; containing 36 houses and 150 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 27*l.* 16*s.* 5*d.*

KIRKBY RAVENSWORTH, a parish in Gilling West wapentake, north riding of York, 5 miles from Richmond, and 239 from London; containing 13 houses and 143 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 25*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of Chester.

KIRKBY FLEETHAM, a parish in Hang East wapentake, north riding of York, 6 miles from Richmond, and 231 from London; containing 104 houses and 443 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 18*s.* 2*d.* the patronage of which is in the king.

KIRKBY MALZEARD, a parish in Claro wapentake, west riding of York, 5 miles from Ripon, and 227 from London; containing 134 houses and 524 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 30*l.* united with Marsham, in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge.

KIRKBY NETHERBY, a village in Claro wapentake, west riding of York, 5 miles from Wetherby, and 199 from London; containing 42 houses and 220 inhabitants.

KIRKCUBBIN, a village in the county of Down, province of Ulster, Ireland.

KIRDFORD, a parish in the hundred of Rotherbridge, rape of Arundel, Sussex, 3 miles from Petworth, and 47 from London; containing 193 houses and 1340 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 14*l.*

KIRKANDREWS UPON EDEN, a parish in Cumberland ward, Cumberland, 4 miles from Carlisle, and 308 from London; containing 21 houses and 98 inhabitants. Here is no church. The living is a rectory, value 9*l.* 9*s.* 8*d.* and is united with Beaumont. There is a burial ground here, but not a church.

KIRKANDREWS MIDDLE, a parish in Eskdale ward, Cumberland, 3 miles from Longtown, and 315 from London, near the river Liddel; containing 124 houses and 573 inhabitants. The rectory, value 5*l.* 11*s.* 5*d.* is united with Nichol forest.

KIRKANDREWS NETHER, a township to the above, about 1 mile distant, containing 76 houses and 245 inhabitants.

KIRKBAMPTON, a parish in Cumberland ward, Cumberland, 5 miles from Carlisle, and 306 from London; containing 33 houses and 149 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 17*s.* 10*d.*

KIRKBEAN, a parish in the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, 10 miles from Dumfries; containing 142 houses and 696 inhabitants. It consists of three villages, Kirkbean, Preston, and Salterness; the latter has a good harbour and bay. The noted Paul Jones was born here.

KIRKBORN, a small island of the Hebrides, about a mile long, and very narrow.

KIRKBRIDE, a parish in Cumberland ward, Cumberland, 6 miles from Wigton, and 310 from London; containing 23 houses and 249 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.*

KIRKBURN, a parish in the division of Bainton Beacon, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 3 miles from Driffield, and 196 from London; containing 16 houses and 92 inhabitants. The church is a curacy, in the patronage of the king.

KIRKBURTON, a parish in Agbrigg wapentake, west riding of York, 9 miles from Wakefield, and 184 from London; containing 365 houses and 1045 inhabitants, of whom 200 were returned as being employed in various trades. It is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* the patronage of which is in the king, as duke of Lancaster.

KIRKBY, a township and chapelry in the parish of Walton, hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 6 miles from Liverpool, and 203 from London; containing 124 houses and 833 inhabitants.

KIRKBY BELLARS. See KIRBY, hundred of Framland, Leicester.

KIRKBY, or KIRKBY IRELITH, a parish in the hundred of Lonsdale, Lancaster, stands near the Dudden sands, 3 miles from Ulverstone, and 273 from London; containing 201 houses and 1041 inhabitants, of whom 91 were returned as employed in various trades.

KIRKBY LAYTHORPE, a parish in the hundred of Aswardun, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 2 miles from Sleaford; containing 30 houses and 160 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 6*s.* 1*d.*

KIRKBY GREEN, a parish in the hundred of Langoe, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 5 miles from Sleaford, and 121 from London; containing 14 houses and 62 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 7*s.* 4*d.*

KIRKBY UNDERWOOD, a parish in the hundred of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 4 miles from Folkingham, and 103 from London; containing 32 houses and 181 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

KIRKBY ON BAINE, a parish in the hundred of Gartree, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 2½ miles from Tattershall, and 132 from London; containing 41 houses and 185 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.* the patronage of which is in the king.

KIRKBY IN ASHFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Broxtow, Notts, 4 miles from Mansfield, and 134 from London; containing 185 houses and 1002 inhabitants, of whom 136 were returned as employed in trade. It is a rectory, value 18*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.*

KIRKBY SOUTH, a parish in the wapentake of Osgoldcross, west riding of York, 6 miles from Barnsley, and 170 from London; containing 115 houses and 509 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 15*l.* 10*s.*

KIRKBY MALHAMDALE, a parish in Staincliff wapentake, west riding of York, 5 miles from Settle, and 228 from London; containing 40 houses and 167 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the duke of Devonshire.

KIRKCALDY, a borough and sea port town in the shire of Fife, Scotland, on the Frith of Forth, 3 miles from Kinghorn, and 13 from Edinburgh; containing 554 houses and 3248 inhabitants, viz. 1464 males and 1784 females, of whom 700 were returned as being principally employed in the manufacture of checks and tickings, and of leather and cotton. It is supposed to have derived its name from the Culdees, who had a cell here. It consists chiefly of one long, narrow, winding, dirty irregular street, along the foot of a bank, with some narrow lanes on each side; and the houses, except those that are modern, are ill built. Near the centre of the town stands the town-house, having a tower and spire. The church is a gothic building, on an eminence at the back of the town. The harbour is much improved of late, and there are about 40 vessels belonging to the port. The town is governed by a provost, 2 bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and a council of 21 members. It joins with Kinghorn, Dysart, and Burntisland, in sending one member to parliament. Here is a custom-house. This place gave birth to Dr. Adam Smith, author of the Wealth of Nations, and to Michael Scott, a man of somewhat similar talents to Roger Bacon of England.—Cruttwell's Tour and Statist. Account.

KIRKCOLM, a parish in the shire of Wigton, being a peninsula formed by the bay of Lochryan and the Atlantic Ocean, lying 30 miles from Newton Douglas, and containing 227 houses and 1191 inhabitants. At a place called the Wig is good anchorage.

KIRKCONNEL, a parish in the shire of Dumfries, Scotland, 3 miles from Sanquhar, and 24 from Dumfries, containing 209 houses and 1096 inhabitants. In the parish are several mineral springs.

KIRKCUDBRIGHT, a shire of Scotland, or more frequently termed a stewartry, bounded on the north-east and east by Dumfries, from which it is separated by the rivers Cairn and Nith, on the south by the Solway Frith and the Irish Sea, on the west by Wigtonshire, and on the north-west by the county of Ayr, being about 45 miles long and 30 broad. It contains two royal boroughs, Kirkcudbright and New Galloway, and several considerable villages; is divided into 28 parishes, containing 5600 houses, inhabited by 29,211 persons, viz. 13,619 males, and 15 592 females, of whom 2532 were returned as employed in various trades, and 5856 in agriculture. The face of the country is one continued heath, producing nothing but pasture for sheep and black cattle; but it is intersected by several pleasant and fertile valleys, and is watered by numerous streams, which unite and form the four rivers Cree, Fleet, Dee, and Urr, all of which rise in the north, and fall into the Solway Frith and Irish Sea. Of late years agriculture has been much improved, and manufactures of cotton and linens have been established, although it wants all the natural advantages of the neighbouring counties. There are several small lakes in this county, but Loch Kenmure is the largest, being 10 miles long: in this loch large pikes are caught, weighing from 20 to 30 pounds; and instances have been known of their exceeding 50. The growth of potatoes has been much attended to, so that besides supplying their own consumption, great quantities are exported to England. The Galloway cattle are principally sent to the English markets, and the breed of horses is said to be descended from some of those animals which escaped shipwreck in the vessels which belonged to the Spanish armada. In the parish of Carrick there is a considerable mine of iron ore, which was worked for some time by an English company, but afterwards given up. Considerable quantities of kelp are prepared on the coast. This stewartry sends one member to the imperial parliament.

KIRKCUDBRIGHT, a borough and the county town of the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, stands on the river Dee, about 4 miles from its entrance into the Frith, and 28 from Dumfries: it contains 365 houses and 2380 inhabitants, viz. 1042 males and 1338 females, of whom 285 were returned as employed in trade and manufacture, principally in that of cotton, established about 1793, and 356 in agriculture. It consists of two streets meeting at right angles, and the buildings in general neat and regular. Near the centre is a large and elegant court-house. The harbour is safe and well sheltered being from 16 to 18 feet deep at low water, and 40 at high water. To the port belong about 28 different-sized vessels. The government is vested in a provost, 3 bailies, a treasurer, and 11 counsellors. Two miles to the south is St. Mary's Isle, the beautiful seat of the earl of Selkirk, built on the site of an ancient priory, founded by the lords of Galloway in the reign of David I. Here also is a large artificial lake, called Loch Fergus, in which are two small islands, on both of which are traces of fortifications, the remains of the ancient castles of the lords of Galloway. Lat. 54° 58′. Long. 4° 5′ W.

KIRKDALE, a hamlet in the parish of Walton, hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 2 miles from Liverpool, and 207 from London; containing 73 houses and 393 inhabitants.

KIRKDEN, a parish in the shire of Forfar, Scotland, 6 miles from Forfar; containing 135 houses and 674 inhabitants. It is watered by the rivers Lunan and Vinny. The castle of Gardyne, which was erected in 1568, is still entire, and is romantically situated on the verge of a precipice, at the foot of which runs a small stream.

KIRK EATON, a parish in Agbrigg wapentake, west riding of York, 2 miles from Huddersfield, and 187 from London; containing 446 houses and 1469 inhabitants, of whom 713 were returned as employed in various trades. It is a rectory, rated at 25*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.*

KIRK FENTON, a parish and curacy in Barkston Ash wapentake, west riding of York, 5 miles from Tadcaster, and 184 from London; containing 57 houses and 291 inhabitants.

KIRKGUNZEON, a parish in the stewarty of Kirkcudbright, 10 miles from Dumfries; containing 115 houses and 545 inhabitants.

KIRKHALLAM, a parish in the hundred of Morleston and Litchurch, Derby, 5 miles from Derby, and 126 from London; containing 13 houses and 83 inhabitants.

KIRKHAM, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, 226 miles from London; containing 345 houses and 1561 inhabitants, of whom 416 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures, principally that of sail cloth: it is seated on a tract of land called the Fylands, between the Ribble and another small river. Here is a good free school and charity school. Market on Thursday. Fairs 24th June and 18th October. At Bunkers' Hill, 3 miles distant, there is a guide who conducts travellers across the sands and the river Ribble, in the nearest way to Tarleton. The living is a vicarage, value 21*l.* 1*s.* in the patronage of the dean and canons of Christ Church, Oxford. The Lancaster canal passes by this town from Liverpool and Wigan.

KIRKHAMMERTON, a parish and curacy in Claro wapentake, west riding of York, 9 miles from York, and 207 from London; containing 42 houses and 216 inhabitants.

KIRKHILL, a parish in the shire of Inverness, Scotland, lying along the Moray Frith, consisting of the villages of Wardlaw and Farnua. It contains 359 houses and 1588 inhabitants.

KIRKINNER, a parish in the shire of Wigton, Scotland, on the west coast of Wigton bay, and bounded by the river Badenoch; it lies 2 miles from Wigton, and contains 243 houses and 1160 inhabitants, chiefly employed in agriculture.

KIRKINTILLOCH, a parish and burgh in the shire of Dumbarton, Scotland, 7 miles from Glasgow, containing 618 houses and 3210 inhabitants, viz. 1477 males and 1733 females, of whom 1785 were returned as employed in trade, and in the manufacture of linen and cotton goods, and 1315 in agriculture. The Clyde canal passes through the parish, and close by it are distinct vestiges of Antoninus's wall. The town itself is pleasantly seated on the banks of the river Luggie, near its junction with the Kelvin, and is neatly built. It is governed by two baillies, elected annually by the freemen.

KIRKLAND, a township in the parish of Garstang, hundred of Amounderness, Lancashire, 1 mile from Garstang, and 227 from London; containing 88 houses and 426 inhabitants.

KIRKLAND, a township in the parish of Kendal, Kendal ward, Westmoreland, adjoining to Kendal. The mother-church of Kendal stands in this township. It contains 205 houses and 1086 inhabitants, of whom 532 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures.

KIRKLAND, a parish in Leath ward, Cumberland, 6 miles from Penrith, and 290 from London; containing 33 houses and 188 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 8*l.* 10*s.* Patron the dean and chapter of Carlisle.

KIRKLANGLEY, a parish in the hundred of Morleston, Derby, 6 miles from Derby, and 126 from London; containing 87 houses and 483 inhabitants.

KIRKLEATHAM, a parish in Langborough wapentake, north riding of York, 6 miles from Gisborough, and 257 from London, standing near the mouth of the Tees. It contains 159 houses and 680 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

KIRKLEAVINGTON, a parish in Langbo-rough wapentake, north riding of York, 2½ miles from Yarm, and 246 from London; containing 49 houses and 239 inhabitants. It is a curacy in the patronage of the archbishop of York.

KIRK IRETON, a parish in the hundred of Wirksworth, Derby, 6 miles from Ashborn, and 140 from London; containing 107 houses and 512 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 7*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.* and is in the patronage of the dean of Lincoln.

KIRKLEY GRANGE, a hamlet in the parish of Ponteland, Castle ward, Northumberland, 10 miles from Newcastle, and 286 from London; containing 28 houses and 143 inhabitants.

KIRKHARLE, a parish in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 12 miles from Hexham, and 294 from London; containing 28 houses and 166 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, rated at 3*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.*

KIRKHEATON, a township in the parish of Stamfordham, Tindal ward, Northumberland, 10 miles from Hexham, and 292 from London; containing 24 houses and 149 inhabitants.

KIRKWHELPHINGTON, a parish and curacy in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 20 miles from Newcastle, and 296 from London; containing 58 houses and 277 inhabitants.

KIRKHAUGH, a parish in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 3 miles from Aldstone, and 296 from London; containing 52 houses and 275 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 4*l.* 7*s.* 8*d.*

KIRKLEY, a parish united with Thirkley, in the hundred of Mutford and Lothingland, Suffolk, 2 miles from Lowestoffe, and 112 from London; containing 42 houses and 177 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 10*s.* The church in 1749 was a heap of ruins, which were then cleared away, and the south aisle rebuilt by the assistance of the Rev. J. Tanner, vicar of Lowestoffe, and the neighbouring gentry. It has a good tower, but contains only one bell.

KIRKLISTOUN, a parish lying on each side the river Amound, partly in Edinburgh, and partly in Linlithgow, Scotland. It is 5¼ miles west of Edinburgh, and contains 283 houses and 1647 inhabitants, of whom 300 were returned as employed in various trades. The seat of the earl of Stair at this place is on a delightful spot. The church formerly belonged to the knights of St. John of Jerusalem.

KIRKLINTON, a parish in Eskdale ward, Cumberland, 3 miles from Longtown, and 311 from London; containing 75 houses and 389 inhabitants. The church is a rectory discharged.

KIRKLINTON, a parish in the hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, 4 miles from Southwell, and 132 from London; containing 43 houses and 140 inhabitants.

KIRKLINTON, a parish in Hallikeld wapentake, north riding of York, 6 miles from Ripon, and 228 from London; containing 55 houses and 273 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 25*l.* 7*s.* 5*d.*

KIRKMABRECK, a parish in the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, lying on the east side of Wigton Bay, and the river Cree, 12 miles from Kirkcudbright, and 10 from Newton Douglas; containing 231 houses and 1212 inhabitants. The ferry-town of Cree or Cree Town, is situated in this parish. A beautiful granite, and veins of coarse limestone, are found here.

KIRKMAHOE, a parish in the shire of Dumfries, Scotland, 5 miles from Dumfries; containing 4 or 5 villages, and 280 houses and 1515 inhabitants.

KIRKMAIDEN, a parish in the shire of Wigton, Scotland. It is the most south-western district in the kingdom, and is termed the Rinns of Galloway, extending about 10 miles from the Mull of Galloway, and contains 328 houses and 1613 inhabitants, mostly employed in agriculture. The coast is bold and rocky, but it has several places of good anchorage: in one of the caves of the rocks is a petrifying spring.

KIRKMICHAEL, or KIRKMICHAL, a river in the Isle of Man, which falls into the Irish Sea at a small village of the same name.

KIRKMICHAEL, a parish in the shire of Ayr, Scotland, 10 miles from Ayr; containing 203 houses and 1119 inhabitants. It is watered by the Girvan and Doon. The parish is in general hilly and mountainous.

KIRKMICHAEL, a parish in the western extremity of Banff, Scotland, about 35 miles from the county town; containing 119 houses and 1332 inhabitants. Tammtoul is the only village, which contains about 200 inhabitants. To the west the mountain of Cairngorme raises its head 4050 feet above the level of the sea.

KIRKMICHAEL, a parish in the shire of Dumfries, Scotland, 6 miles from Dumfries; containing 200 houses and 904 inhabitants. It is a hilly district, chiefly covered with heath.

KIRKMICHAEL, a parish in the north-east corner of Perth, 14 miles from Blairgowrie; containing 387 houses and 1568 inhabitants, of whom 193 were returned as being employed in trade. The great military road from Cupar Angus to Fort George passes along the river Ardle, and through Glenshee.

KIRKMICHAEL, a parish in the shire of Ross and Cromarty, lying along the south coast of the Frith of Cromarty, 5 miles from Cromarty; containing about 1254 inhabitants. The population of this parish was not returned to parliament in 1801. There are many remains of encampments and castles in this parish, supposed to have been erected by the Danes. The mountains here are mentioned in the poems of Ossian as connected with the exploits of Fingal.

Kirknewton, a parish in Mid Lothian, united with East Calder, lying between the river Amond and the water of Leith, 12 miles from Edinburgh. It contains 193 houses and 1071 inhabitants.

Kirk Oswald, a market-town and parish, in Leath ward, Cumberland, 7 miles from Penrith, and 292 from London; containing 139 houses and 634 inhabitants. It lies on the east side of the river Eden, near which stands the remains of a castle, once a magnificent residence. In the reign of Henry VIII. a college was founded here for 12 priests. The church is a very irregular, old building, but the belfry stands on the top of a hill away from the church, in order that the bells may be the better heard by the neighbouring villages. Near the west end of the church issues a spring. Here is a dissenting meeting-house and a charity school. Market on Thursday. Fairs Thursday before Whitsunday and 5th August. The living is a vicarage, rated at 8*l*. Patron the king.

Kirk Oswald, a parish in the district of Carrick, shire of Ayr, Scotland, extending about 6 miles along the coast, 12 miles from Ayr. It contains 284 houses and 1679 inhabitants. The ruins of the famous castle of Turnberry, the seat of Robert Bruce, earl of Carrick, and now the property of the earl of Cassilis, stand upon a small promontory near this place. About 2 miles east of the church are part of the cloisters and abbot's house of the abbey of Crossrequill. The modern castle of Culzean is the seat of the earl of Cassilis.

Kirkowen, a parish in the shire of Wigton, Scotland, 6 miles from Newton Douglas; containing 172 houses and 787 inhabitants. It is watered by the rivers Badenoch and Turf.

Kirk Patrick Durham, a parish in the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, on the banks of the river Urr, 10 miles from Dumfries; containing 218 houses and 1007 inhabitants. It has a considerable fair annually, and of late years some races have been established here, which are very well attended. It has a very elegant assembly room.

Kirk Patrick Fleming, a parish in the shire of Dumfries, 4 miles from Gretna Green; containing 303 houses and 1544 inhabitants. There are several mineral springs at this place.

Kirk Patrick Irongray, a parish in the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, the eastern part of which is 2 miles from Dumfries; and contains 150 houses and 730 inhabitants. On the river Cairn there is a bridge over the romantic waterfall called the Routing bridge, from the noise made by the water under it.

Kirk Patrick Juxta, a parish in the shire of Dumfries, on the banks of the Annan, 4 miles from Moffat, and 20 from Dumfries; containing 114 houses and 596 inhabitants. Queensberry hill, near this place, is 3000 feet above the level of the sea; and there are several ruins of fortified towers in the parish.

Kirk Patrick East and West. See Kilpatrick East and West.

Kirksandall, a parish in the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of York, 4 miles from Doncaster, and 166 from London; containing 32 houses and 156 inhabitants.

Kirksmeaton, a parish in the wapentake of Osgoldcross, west riding of York, 9 miles from Doncaster, and 171 from London; containing 42 houses and 248 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l*. 1*s*.

Kirkstall, a village in Yorkshire, 3 miles from Leeds, and 191½ from London; consisting of a few straggling farm-houses and cottages. This village is celebrated for the remains of an abbey, founded in the reign of king Stephen, for Cistercian monks; a few cloisters, some walls and gateways, and part of a very high tower, are yet standing, which sufficiently evince its former magnitude. These ruins belong to the earl of Cardigan, who allows a mason 10*l*. a year for keeping them up. There is a stone bridge over the river Aire at this village, and near it passes the Leeds canal.

Kirkstead, a parish in the hundred of Gartree, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 2 miles from Tattershall, and 132 from London, near the river Witham. It contains 26 houses and 131 inhabitants.

Kirkstead, a parish united with Longhall, in the hundred of Loddon, Norfolk, 7 miles from Bungay, and 113 from London; containing 26 houses and 168 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l*.

Kirkton, a small village in the hundred of Basset Law, Notts, 2 miles from Ollerton, and 138 from London; containing 33 houses and 172 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l*. 14*s*. 9½ patron the duke of Newcastle.

Kirktoun, a parish in the shire of Roxburgh, 3 miles from Hawick; containing 61 houses and 320 inhabitants. It is watered by several small rivulets.

Kirkurd, a parish in the shire of Peebles, on the borders of East and Mid Lothian, on the banks of the Tarth, 8 miles from Peebles. It contains 64 houses and 327 inhabitants. Near Kirkurd house is a copious sulphureous spring similar to Harrowgate, and the neighbourhood abounds with many religious and military remains of antiquity.

Kirkwall, a royal burgh and chief town of the Orkney Isles, in the parish of Kirkwall and St. Ola, in the island of Pomona. It stands on a neck of land washed on one side by the road and bay of Kirkwall, and on the other by a pleasant inlet of the sea, which flows at high water by the back of the houses. It consists of one street, about a mile long, very narrow, and badly paved; and the ends of the houses are placed next the street, giving it an awkward appearance.

It contains 417 houses and 2621 inhabitants, viz. 1078 males and 1543 females, of whom 365 were returned as being employed in trade. The cathedral of St. Magnus, supposed to be named after Magnus king of Norway, the founder of the town, is a large Gothic pile built in 1138 by Rognwald earl of Orkney; it is still entire, and part of it is occupied as the parish church. It is 226 feet long, and 56 broad; and the height of the steeple is 133 feet. The roof is supported by 14 pillars and arches, besides 4 which support the steeple. The gates are decorated with a kind of Mosaic work. Here are also the ruins of King's castle, and the earls and bishops palaces, which appear to have been formerly very extensive and elegant buildings. Kirkwall is governed by a provost, four bailies, a treasurer, dean and guild, and a council elected annually. The harbour is excellent, with good anchorage in the outer road, and the whole commanded by a fortification erected in the time of Oliver Cromwell, surrounded by a ditch and rampart mounted with cannon. The principal articles of exportation are beef, pork, butter, tallow, hides, calve skins, rabbit skins, salt fish, oil, feathers, linen yarn, coarse linen cloth, kelp, and, in years of fruitfulness, corn in considerable quantities. The chief commodities imported are wood, flax, coal, sugar, spirits, wines, snuff, tobacco, flour, biscuit, soap, leather, hardware, broad cloth, printed linens, and printed cottons. The manufacture of linen yarn was introduced here in the year 1747, and about the year 1730 the manufacture of kelp. As the price of the latter for the first ten years was very low, the quantity made was but trifling. From the year 1740 to 1760, the price is reported to have been 45*s.* per ton, and the money which it is believed to have brought into the country during that period about 2000*l.* per annum. The average price for the subsequent ten years amounted to about four guineas per ton, and the whole value to the place, to above 6000*l.* sterling per annum. Of each ton at the market from 1770 to 1780 the price rose at a medium to about 5*l.* and the gross sum which the proprietors in that time received for it was not less than 10,000*l.* per annum. For 13 years preceding 1791, the value of a ton was nearly 6*l.* and the quantity each year amounted to 17,000*l.* sterling. Thus in the space of 50 years, the proprietors of these islands, where the seasons are very deceitful, and the crops can by no means be depended on for subsisting the inhabitants, have received in addition to their estates the enormous sum of 370,000*l.* sterling. Kirkwall joins with the boroughs of Wick, Dornoch, Dingwall, and Tain, in returning one member to parliament. Lat. 58° 59′. Long. 2° 57′ W.

KIRKINCHAM, a township in the parish of Sandbach, hundred of Northwich, Chester, 5 miles from Congleton, and 167 from London; containing 22 houses and 179 inhabitants.

KIRRIAR, or KERSIAR, the name of a hundred in Cornwall, forming the southern angle of the county, and running to the Lizard Point.

KIRRIEMUIR, or KILLAMUIR, a considerable town and parish in the shire of Angus, Scotland, at the foot of the Braes of Angus, 6 miles from Forfar, and 16 from Dundee; containing 916 houses and 4421 inhabitants, viz. 2109 males and 2312 females, of whom 942 were returned as employed in trade and manufacture, and 351 in agriculture. The town consists of several streets branching out somewhat in the shape of an anchor. Here are several extensive manufactures of osnaburghs and coarse linens. It is watered by the rivers Esk, Carity, Gairie, and Prosk. At Invercarity, where the Carity falls into the Esk, is a large Gothic castle of hewn stone in good repair, consisting of four stories, the walls being nine feet thick, terminating in a projecting parapet about 12 inches thick; between the parapet and roof is a space sufficient for two or three men to walk abreast: to the east are some vestige of a wing. It has a good weekly market, and is governed by a baron bailie, appointed by lord Douglas the superior.

KIRTLE, a river in the shire of Dumfries, Scotland, which rises in the parish of Middlebie, and passing Kirk Patrick Fleming, falls into the Solway Frith a few miles below Gretna Green.

KIRTLING, a parish in the hundred of Cheveley, Cambridge, 2½ miles from Newmarket, and 63 from London; containing 78 houses and 458 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.*

KIRTLINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Ploughley, Oxford, 4 miles from Woodstock, and 65 from London; containing 124 houses and 525 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of St. John's college, Oxford.

KIRTON, the name of a hundred in Lincolnshire, lying in the division of Holland, between Boston and Spalding.

KIRTON, a parish in the hundred of Kirton, parts of Holland, Lincoln, 4 miles from Boston, and 109 from London; containing 269 houses and 1238 inhabitants, of whom 68 were returned as employed in various trades. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* belonging to the subdean of Lincoln.

KIRTON LINDSAY, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Corringham, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 20 miles from Lincoln and 147 from London; containing 241 houses and 1092 inhabitants, of whom 307 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures. Its church is a handsome building. The market is on Saturday. Fairs 18th July and December 11. The living is a vicarage, value 21*l.* 17*s.* 10½*d.* with Manton chapel annexed, in the patronage of the merchants' company, London.

KIRTON. See KIRKTON, Notts.

KIRTON, a parish in the hundred of Colneis, Suffolk, 4 miles from Harwich, and 75 from London; containing 47 houses and 376 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 10*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* patron the king.

KISH, a sand bank in the Irish Sea, about 6 miles long, and hardly 1 wide: it is 7 miles from the coast of the county of Dublin. Long. 5. 54. W. Greenwich. Lat. 53. 15. N.

KISHKORRAN MOUNTAINS, mountains of Ireland, in the county of Sligo, 13 miles south of that place.

KISLINGBURY, a parish in the hundred of Nobottle Grove, Northampton, 3 miles from Northampton, and 65 from London; containing 104 houses and 482 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 18*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*

KITTISFORD, a parish in the hundred of Milverton, Somerset, 4 miles from Wellington, and 152 from London; containing 24 houses and 143 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.*

KITTS COTTY HOUSE, near Aylesford, Kent, a monument of loose stones, certainly druidical, and supposed to have been the burial place of some of the British chiefs.

KNAITH, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Well, Lindsay division, Lincoln, standing on the river Trent, 3 miles from Gainsborough, and 148 from London. It contains 9 houses and 53 inhabitants.

KNAP, a tything in the parish of Thornefalcon, hundred of North Curry, Somerset, 4 miles from Taunton, and 141 from London; containing 46 houses and 238 inhabitants.

KNAPTOFT, a parish united with Mowsley, in the hundred of Guthlaxton, Leicester, 10 miles from Leicester, and 86 from London, near the source of the river Swife. Population included with Mowsley.

KNAPTON, a parish in the hundred of North Erpingham, Norfolk, 3 miles from North Walsham, and 127 from London; containing 60 houses and 277 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 7*s.* 1*d.*

KNAYTON, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Wintringham, Buckrose wapentake, east riding of York, 6 miles from Malton, and 198 from London; containing 24 houses and 139 inhabitants.

KNAYTON, a hamlet in the parish of Acomb, in the Liberty of the Ainsty, York, 2 miles from York, and 200 from London; containing 1 house and 120 inhabitants.

KNAPDALE, a division of Argyleshire, lying between the isthmus of Crinan and Tarberth. The name signifies the inequality of its surface, Cnap dale being the Gaelic for hill and dale.

KNAPDALE NORTH, a parish in the district of the same name, on the coast of the Atlantic, 70 miles from Inverary; containing 4753 houses and 2401 inhabitants, chiefly employed in agriculture.

KNAPDALE SOUTH, a parish adjoining the above, lying along the coast of Loch Tyne. It is chiefly occupied as sheep walks, and in the culture of potatoes, which, with the fish caught in the neighbouring lakes, constitute the principal food of the people here. It contains 332 houses and 1716 inhabitants. In the neighbourhood of Inverneil is a lead mine.

KNAPWELL, a parish in the hundred of Papworth, Cambridge, 3 miles from Caxton, and 52 from London; containing 21 houses and 97 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 6*l.* 17*s.* 11*d.*

KNARESBOROUGH, a borough, market-town, and parish, in Claro wapentake, west riding of York, 215 miles from London by Nottingham, 202 by Newark, and 13 distant from York; containing 747 houses and 3388 inhabitants, viz. 1512 males and 1876 females, of whom 3128 were returned as being employed in various handicraft trades and manufactures. It stands on the side of a hill, almost encompassed by the river Nidd, which issues from the bottom of the Craven hills; and on an abrupt bank overlooking the river are the remains of a castle, said to have been built by Serlo de Burgh soon after the conquest: during the troubles of Charles I. after a brave resistance, it fell into the hands of the parliament army, who demolished it, and sold the materials; many of the houses in the town were built out of its ruins. Over the river is a good stone bridge; and it has a very spacious market place. Although a borough, sending two members to parliament, it is not incorporated; and is governed only by a bailiff, who is the returning officer. The right of election is in the possessors of 84 burgage holds. The principal peace officer is a constable. There is an extensive manufactory of linen cloth here, in which about 1000 yards are woven weekly. Knaresborough has long been noted for its four medicinal springs lying near each other, but of different qualities. That called the Sweet Spa, or Vitriolic Well, is situated in Knaresborough forest, about 3 miles from the town, and was discovered in 1620. The Stinking Spa, or Sulphur Well, is very fœtid, the water changing silver to the colour of copper: it is only used for bathing. That called St. Mungo's is a cold bath, situated about 4 miles from the town. The Dropping Well, in the town, is the most celebrated petrifying spring in England, and is so called from its dropping from the spungy rock that overhangs it. The ground that receives it, before it joins the well, is for the length of 12 yards become a solid rock; from the well it runs into the Nidd, where the spring water has formed a rock some yards into the river. Since the Scarborough waters have been brought into such great repute, these baths have not been so much frequented as formerly. About a mile from the town, near Grimble bridge, is a place called St. Robert's cave, from a hermit who retired here in the time of king John; it is dug in the rock above the river Nid, and, within the memory of man, has been remarkable by the discovery of a murder committed in it by Eugene Aram, a schoolmaster, a man of extraordinary acquirements, who possessed sufficient powers to plead his own cause in the most able manner. He was, however, found guilty chiefly on the evidence of his wife and an accomplice, and was afterwards executed. The market on Wednesday is well supplied. Fairs first Wednesday after January 13, first Wednesday after March 12, May 6th, first Wednesday after 12th August, first Tuesday after October 10, and first Wednesday after 10th December; and on the Wednesday before 22d November is a statute fair for hiring servants. It is a vicarage, rated at 9*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.* —Grose's Antiq. and the Guide to the Watering Places.

KNARESDALE, a parish in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 4 miles from Aldstone Moor, and 312 from London; containing 106 houses and 481 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 19*s.* 1*d.*

KNAYTON, or KNATON, a township in the parish of Leeke, in the wapentake of Allertonshire, north riding of York, 5½ miles from Thirsk, and 226 from London; containing 75 houses and 321 inhabitants.

KNEBWORTH, a parish in the hundred of Broadwater, Herts, 2 miles from Stevenage, and 27½ from London; containing 36 houses and 225 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.*

KNELLINGTON, a township in the parish of Howden, in Howdenshire, east riding of York, 1 mile from Howden, and 183 from London; containing 17 houses and 90 inhabitants.

KNEESALL, a parish in the hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, 9 miles from Newark, and 130 from London; containing 67 houses and 368 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.*

KNEESWORTH, a parish in the hundred of Armingford, Cambridge, 2 miles from Royston, and 40 from London; containing 24 houses and 220 inhabitants.

KNEETON. See KNIGHTON, Notts.

KNETSHALL, or KNETTISHALL, a parish in the hundred of Blackburn, Suffolk, 6 miles from Ixworth, and 83 from London; containing 5 houses and 49 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 7*s.* 11*d.*

KNIACK, a small river in the shire of Perth, Scotland, which rises in the parish of Muthill, and falls into the Erne.

KNIGHTCOT, a hamlet in the parish of Burton Dasset, hundred of Kineton, Warwick, 3 miles from Kineton, and 87 from London. Population included with Burton Dasset.

KNIGHTLOW, the name of a hundred in Warwickshire, forming the eastern side of the county, and stretching to Warwick.

KNIGHTON WEST, a parish in the hundred of Colliford tree, division of Dorchester, Dorset, 7 miles from Wareham, and 117 from London; containing 28 houses and 180 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 15*s.* 5*d.*

KNIGHTON, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of St. Margaret's, Leicester, hundred of Guthlaxton, Leicester, 2 miles from Leicester, and 94½ from London; containing 65 houses and 337 inhabitants.

KNIGHTON, a parish in the hundred of Bingham, Notts, 5 miles from Bingham, and 129 from London; containing 15 houses and 88 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.*

KNIGHTON, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Knighton, Radnor, Wales, is agreeably situated on a valley near the river Teme, on the borders of Salop, 6 miles from Presteign, and 156 from London; containing 203 houses and 785 inhabitants. It is also called Tref-y-clawdd, from Offa's dyke which runs below the town, and extends from the mouth of the Dee to the Wye. This fosse was made as a separation between the Britons and the Saxons. Harold made a law, that if any Welchman passed this boundary, he should lose his right hand. The town is very well built, composed of several steep streets, commanding a pleasant view of the adjacent country. The market is on Thursday. Fair 6th May. It is a curacy. The church has a singular appearance, being very irregular in its form, with a detached tower, surmounted by a spire, resembling three distinguishers placed one above the other. At the entrance of the town is a free grammar school well endowed.—Lipscombe's Tour in South Wales.

KNIGHTON, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Lindridge, hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 3 miles from Tenbury, and 150 from London; containing 103 houses and 531 inhabitants.

KNIGHTSBRIDGE, a hamlet lying partly in the parish of St. Margaret's, Westminster, and partly in that of St. George's, Hanover Square, Middlesex, ½ mile from Hyde Park Corner, on the road to Kensington; the population of which was returned with the respective parishes. The most remarkable building here is St. George's hospital, standing on the south side of the road adjoining the turnpike. It is supported by the voluntary contribution of the nobility and gentry, and was formerly the seat of lord Lansborough.

KNIGHTLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Gnossall, hundred of Cuttlestone, Stafford, 4 miles from Eccleshall, and 140 from London; containing 59 houses and 328 inhabitants.

KNIGHTWICK, a parish in the hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 8 miles from Worcester, and 120 from London; containing 25 houses and 158 inhabitants. It is pleasantly seated on a rising ground, near the borders of Herefordshire. The church is a rectory, rated at 13*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* with Dodderham chapel annexed, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Worcester.

KNILL, a parish in the hundred of Wigmore, Hereford, 4 miles from Presteign, and 152 from London; containing 13 houses and 72 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 4*l.* 10*s.*

KNIPTON, a parish in the hundred of Framland, Leicester, 7 miles from Grantham, and 118 from London; containing 43 houses and 262 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 16*l.* 12*s.* 5*d.* and is in the patronage of the duke of Rutland.

KNIVETON, a parish in the hundred of Wirksworth, Derby, 3 miles from Ashborn, and 138 from London; containing 60 houses and 285 inhabitants.

KNOCK, a hill in the shire of Banff, Scotland, of a conical shape, where the parishes of Grange, Fordyce, and Ordiquhill, meet in a point at its top. It is 2500 feet above the level of the sea, and is an excellent land mark in navigating the Moray Frith.

KNOCK HEAD, a cape of Scotland, 2½ miles west-north-west of Banff.

KNOCKANDOW, a parish in the shire of Moray, Scotland, on the banks of the river Spey, 20 miles from Fochaber; containing 210 houses and 1432 inhabitants, of whom 230 were employed in various trades.

KNOCKANY, a village in the county of Limerick, province of Leinster, Ireland.

KNOCKARDING, a village in the county of Tipperary, province of Munster, Ireland.

KNOCKBRACH, a mountain of Ireland, 10 miles north of Cork.

KNOCKCLOGHAN, a mountain of Ireland in the county of Londonderry, 4 miles north of Lough Neagh.

KNOCKDUACH, a mountain of Ireland in the county of Galway, 18 miles west of Galway.

KNOCKLADE, a village in the county of Antrim, province of Ulster, Ireland.

KNOCKLOFTY, a village in the county of Tipperary, province of Munster, on the banks of the Suir.

KNOCKBAIN, a parish in the shire of Ross, Scotland, formed by the united parishes of Kilmuir Wester and Suddy, divided by a branch of the Moray Frith; it is 6 miles from Inverness, and contains 430 houses and 1839 inhabitants, chiefly employed in agriculture.

KNOCKDOLIAN and KNOCKDORS, two hills in the parish of Colmonel, shire of Ayr, Scotland: the former rises in a conical shape 1950 feet above the level of the sea, and is a land mark to mariners entering the Frith of Clyde; the latter is 1554 feet above the level of the sea.

KNOCKIN, a parish in the hundred of Oswestry, Salop. It contains 58 houses and 21 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.*

KNOCKHOLT, a parish in the hundred of Rokley, lathe of Sutton, Kent, 2½ miles from Westerham, and 19 from London; containing 55 houses and 257 inhabitants.

KNOCKMELEDOWN, mountains of Ireland, between the counties of Tipperary and Waterford, 24 miles west of Waterford.

KNOCKMYLAND, a village in the county of Kilkenny, province of Leinster, Ireland.

KNOCKNAREA, a promontory or cape of Ireland, in Sligo bay, 6 miles west of that town.

KNOCKNASHEE, mountains of Ireland, in the county of Sligo, 13 miles south-west of that town.

KNOCKSUINAN, a hamlet in the parish of Kinclaven, Perthshire, Scotland.

KNOCKTOPHER, a town in the county of Kilkenny, province of Leinster, Ireland, 63 miles from Dublin. It sent two members to the Irish parliament.

KNODDISHALL, a parish in the hundred of Blything, Suffolk, 3 miles from Saxmundham, and 92 from London; containing 39 houses and 286 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.*

KNOOK, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Heytsbury, Wilts, 5 miles from Warminster, and 94 from London; containing 30 houses and 194 inhabitants.

KNOSSINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Guthlaxton, Leicester, 5 miles from Oakham, and 93 from London; containing 26 houses and 125 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 6*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*

KNOTTING, a parish united with Souldrop, hundred of Stodden, Bedford, 10 miles from Bedford, and 60 from London; containing 22 houses and 105 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 10*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

KNOTTINGLEY, a township and chapelry to Pontefract, wapentake of Osgoldcross, west riding of York, 2 miles from Pontefract, and 180 from London; containing 531 houses and 2602 inhabitants, viz. 1324 males and 1278 females, of whom 472 were returned as employed in various trades, and 50 in agriculture. It is pleasantly situated on the banks of the river Aire, and is particularly noted for its trade in lime, which is burnt here in great quantities.

KNOWLE ST. GILES, a hamlet in the parish of Long Sutton, hundred of South Petherton, Somerset, 2½ miles from Ilminster, and 138 from London; containing 12 houses and 61 inhabitants.

KNOWLE, a township in the parish of Hampton in Arden, hundred of Hemlingford, Warwick, 3 miles from Solihull, and 105 from London; containing 170 houses and 843 inhabitants.

KNOWLTON, a depopulated parish in the hundred of Eastry, lathe of St. Augustine, Kent, 9 miles from Canterbury; containing 3 houses and 18 inhabitants.

KNOWSLEY, a township in the parish of Huyton, hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 2 miles from Prescott, and 200 from London; containing 127 houses and 739 inhabitants.

KNOWSTONE, a parish in the hundred of South Moulton, Devon, 7 miles from South Moulton, and 173 from London; containing 82 houses and 427 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 26*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.*

KNOYLE EAST, a parish in the hundred of Cawdon and Cadworth, Wilts, 2½ miles from Hindon, in which parish the borough of Hindon is situate, 99 miles from London; containing 139 houses and 853 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 30*l.* with Hindon chapel annexed, in the patronage of the bishop of Winchester.

KNOYLE WEST, a hamlet in the parish of North Newton, hundred of Mere, Wilts, 2½ miles from Mere, and 100 from London; containing 33 houses and 181 inhabitants.

KNUTSFORD NETHER, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Bucklow, Chester, situated on the rivulet Birken, 7 miles from Northwich, and 173 from London; containing 448 houses and 2052 inhabitants, viz. 931 males, and 1121 females, of whom 738 were returned as employed in various trades, and 69 in agriculture. The principal manufacture is that of shag velvet and sewing thread. A silk mill was erected here, but not answering was converted into a cotton mill. Part of the town is divided by the Birken, and called Over Knutsford: containing 50 houses and 320 inhabitants: in which parish there is a chapel of ease, but the mother church is in Nether Nutsford. The county sessions are held here twice annually, and during the races this town is much frequented by the neighbouring gentry. Its name is supposed to have been derived from Canute's ford, that king having forded the river here after a victory obtained in the neighbourhood. The market is on Saturday. Fairs 23d April, July 10, and Nov. 8. The living is a vicarage, value 26*l.* 16*s.* 2*d.* It was formerly a chapel to Rosthurn, but was made a distinct parish by act of parliament in 1740. The four lords of the manors of Over Knutsford, Nether Knutsford, Toft, and Bexton, present to the vicarage by turns.

KNYNO, a river in Pembrokeshire, Wales, which falls into the Fivy about 5 miles below Cardigan.

KORSHAM. See CORSHAM, Wilts.

KORKESHTY, mountains of Ireland, 17 miles north-west of Castlebar.

KREKYTHE. See CRIEKEITH, Carnarvon, Wales.

KYLE, a district of Ayrshire, Scotland, separated from Carrick by the river Ayr, and from Cunningham by the river Irvine, at the mouth of which rivers are the burghs of the same name.

KYLO, a chapelry in the parish of Holy Island, in Islandshire, Durham, 5 miles from Belford, and 330 from London; containing 198 houses and 968 inhabitants.

KYMBLE. See KIMBLE, Bucks.

KYME NORTH, a hamlet in the parish of South Kyme, hundred of Langoe, Kesteven, Lincoln, 6½ miles from Sleaford, and 122 from London; containing 38 houses and 215 inhabitants.

KYME SOUTH, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Langoe, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 7 miles from Sleaford, and 123 from London; containing 61 houses and 292 inhabitants.

KYNETON. See KINETON, Warwick.

KYO, a township to Lanchester, in Chester ward, Durham, 6 miles from Durham, and 266 from London; containing 50 houses and 281 inhabitants.

KYRE WYRE, a parish in the hundred of Doddingtree, Worcester, 3½ miles from Tenbury, and 131 from London, on the borders of Hereford; containing 30 houses and 165 inhabitants.

KYRE MINOR, a hamlet to the foregoing, half a mile distant; containing 23 houses and 126 inhabitants. This parish and neighbourhood is noted for the quantities of saffron growing wild.

LABACALLY, an ancient sepulchral monument in the county of Cork, province of Munster, Ireland, between Glenworth and Kilworth, consisting of large upright stones, with others placed horizontally upon them; one of which is 17 feet long, 9 broad, and 9 thick.

LABORN, a small village near Town Malling, Kent, where are the ruins of an ancient castle.

LACEBY, a parish in the hundred of Bradley Haverstoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 1¼ mile from Grimsby, and 170 from London; containing 72 houses and 368 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 12*l.* 0*s.* 10*d.*

LACERTON, a hamlet in the parish of Stapleton, hundred of Pimpern, division of Blandford, Dorset, 3 miles from Blandford; and 102 from London. Population included with Stapleton.

LACFODERY, mountains of Ireland on the east side of the county of Kerry, where it joins the counties of Limerick and Cork, 12 miles east of Tralee.

LACH, a small hamlet in the neighbourhood of Chester; containing 5 houses and 43 inhabitants.

LACKFORD, the name of a hundred in Suffolk, forming the north-western angle of the county and borders of Cambridge.

LACKFORD, a parish in the hundred of Thingoe, Suffolk, 5 miles from Bury St. Edmund's, and 76 from London; containing 16 houses and 102 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 19*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.*

LACKNA, a river of Ireland in the county of Donegal, which runs into Loch Glen.

LACKHAMPTON. See LECKHAMPTON, Gloucester.

LACKINGTON WHITE, a hamlet to Ilminster, hundred of Abdick, Somerset, 1 mile from Ilminster, and 134 from London; containing 53 houses and 190 inhabitants.

LACOCK, a parish in the hundred of Chippenham, Wilts, 3 miles from Chippenham, and 95 from London; containing 142 houses and 1408 inhabitants, of whom 121 were returned as being employed in various trades. It was formerly a Roman station: and at a subsequent period had a nunnery. The living is a vicarage, rated at 8*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*

LADBROOKE, a parish in the hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, 1½ mile from Southam, and 82 from London; containing 49 houses and 235 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 10*s.*

LADOCK, a parish in the hundred of Powder, Cornwall, near Truro, 255 miles from London; containing 114 houses and 542 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 18*l.*

LADY ISLAND, in the county of Wexford, province of Leinster, Ireland.

LADY ISLE, a small islet in the Frith of Clyde, 5 miles south-west of Irvine, and 5 north-north-west of Ayr. Two pillars are erected on it as guides to vessels going up the Frith.

LADY KIRK, a parish in the shire of Berwick, Scotland, on the banks of the Tweed, 10 miles from Berwick; containing 104 houses and 516 inhabitants. It was anciently called Cyssettingtoune, till it took its present name from James IV. building a handsome church here, and dedicating it to the Virgin Mary. It has a good salmon fishery on the Tweed.

LADY KIRK, a parish in the Isle of Sandy, one of the Orkneys; containing 151 houses and 830 inhabitants.

LAFFORD OLD and NEW. See SLEAFORD, Lincolnshire.

LAGAN, a river in the county of Down, province of Ulster, Ireland, which falls into Carrickfergus bay.

LAGEN BAY, a bay on the west coast of the island of Ila, south of Lagen point.

LAGEN POINT, a cape of Scotland, on the west coast of the island of Ila.

LAGGAN, or LUGGAN, a parish in the shire of Inverness, Scotland, 35 miles from Inverness, and 13 from Fort Augustus; containing 276 houses and 1535 inhabitants. Like the rest of the Highlands it is very mountainous. The river Spey nearly divides the parish: There are several lakes in this parish, the chief of which is Loch Laggan, which is 15 miles long, and 1½ broad, and exceeding deep. It abounds with char and various kinds of trout. On the south side is the Coill More, or great wood, the remains of an ancient Caledonian forest.

LAINGDON, a parish in the hundred of Barnstaple, Essex, 2½ miles from Billericay, and 24 from London; containing 36 houses and 242 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 35*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* with Basildon chapel annexed.

LAINGDON HILL, a parish united with West Lea, about a mile and a half from the foregoing, 4 from Billericay, and 22 from London; containing 24 houses and 195 inhabitants. This is the highest ground, next to Danbury, in the county of Essex; the ascent on the north side is easy, but towards the south-east and south-west the views exhibit a very beautiful and extensive valley, bounded by the Kentish hills, clothed with the finest verdure, and intersected with numerous hedges and woods. Through this valley runs the river Thames. The living is united with West Lea.—Young's Six Weeks Tour in the Southern Counties.

LAINSHILD, a hamlet in the parish of Edlingham, in Coquetdale ward, Northumberland, 5 miles from Alnwick, and 310 from London; containing 6 houses and 25 inhabitants.

LAIRG, a parish in the shire of Sutherland, Scotland, 15 miles from Dornock; containing 294 houses and 1209 inhabitants. The parish is very hilly and barren, very little of it being in cultivation. It has several plantations of birch.

LAKENHAM, a parish united with Trowse, 3 miles from Norwich, so called from its situation by the broad water or lake. The church stands by the cliff on the water side. The population was not returned to parliament. The living is a vicarage, united with Trowse, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Norwich.

LAKENHEATH, a parish in the hundred of Lackford, Suffolk, 3 miles from Brandon, and 76 from London; containing 156 houses and 745 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 18*s.* 11*d.* united with Undley.

LALEHAM, a parish in the hundred of Spelthorne, Middlesex, 2 miles from Staines, and 16 from London, on the banks of the Thames; containing 70 houses and 372 inhabitants. The scenery is charming, and this place is much resorted to by the lovers of angling. The earl of Lonsdale has a very handsome seat at this village. The church is a curacy, united with Staines.

LAMBA, one of the smaller Shetland islands, between Shetland and Yell.

LAMBANESS, a cape on the north-east coast of the island of Shetland.

LAMBAY, an island to the north of the peninsula of Howth, near Dublin bar, 5 leagues north-north-west of Drogheda. It is well stocked with rabbits, and great numbers of sea birds frequent the coast. Here is a fishery for oysters, lobsters, &c. and some kelp is burned on the shores. Lat. 53. 38. Long. 6. 5. W.

LAMBERHURST, a parish partly situated in the hundred of Brenchley, latine of Aylesford, Kent, and partly in the hundred of Loxfield Pelham, rape of Pevensey, Sussex, 10 miles from Tunbridge, and 40 from London; containing 89 houses and 1057 inhabitants. There formerly stood here an abbey of Premonstratensian monks brought from Beaulieu, now the residence of earl Camden. Fair April 5. The living is a vicarage, rated at 12*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Rochester.

LAMBETH, a very extensive parish on the banks of the Thames opposite to Westminster, in the half hundred of Brixton, Surry. It extends from Vauxhall to Southwark, Streatham, Norwood, and Croydon; and is divided into six liberties, or precincts, called the Archbishop's, the Prince's, Vauxhall, the Marsh and Wall, Stockwell, and the Dean's liberties; the whole containing 4789 houses and 27,939 inhabitants, viz. 12,371 males and 15,568 females, of whom 5148 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures, and 955 in agriculture. It is chiefly noted for the palace of the archbishops of Canterbury, a very large pile of building, situated near the river, and exhibiting the architecture of various ages. In the year 1197 the bishop and church of Rochester granted the manor of Lambeth, with the advowson, to Hubert Walter, archbishop of Canterbury, and his successors, in exchange for the manor of Darente and other premises, and it has been annexed to the see ever since. It appears that the palace was, in a great measure, if not wholly, rebuilt by archbishop Boniface about 1262. If any part of this structure now remains it is the chapel, under which is a crypt. The windows of this chapel were formerly of painted glass, put up by cardinal Morton. The repairing of the glass, which contained the scriptural history of the Old and New Testament, was imputed as a crime to archbishop Laud on his trial, and the windows were destroyed by the Puritans. The great hall was rebuilt by archbishop Juxon after the civil wars, upon the old model, and at the expence of 10,500*l.* The guard room appears to have been built before the year 1424, and the long gallery is supposed to have been erected by cardinal Pole. In the great dining room are portraits of all the archbishops from Laud to the present time. The library occupies the four galleries over the cloisters, which form a small quadrangle. The see is indebted for this library to archbishop Bancroft, who left all his books to his successors on condition of their giving due security that they would hand them down entire. During the civil wars the books were all seized by the parliament, when the great Selden, who had considerable weight with the government, suggested to the university of Cambridge their right to this library, under archbishop Bancroft's will, if it should be in danger of dispersion, and afforded them such assistance in their claim, that both houses of parliament agreed to remove it to Cambridge. After the restoration it was demanded by archbishop Juxon, and restored to his successor, who prosecuted the claim. It has been since augmented by archbishops Sheldon, Tenison, and Secker, and the present number of books is supposed to be about 25,000. In the windows is some painted glass, and over the western part of it is the library of manuscripts. The great tower, called the Lollard's Tower, was built by archbishop Chicheley in 1434 and 1435. In the walls are fixed large iron rings, intended, as supposed, to confine the Lollards, and other unfortunate persons imprisoned here. The gateway, and the adjoining tower, were built by archbishop Morton about 1490. The gardens and park, which contain near 13 acres, are laid out with great taste. In the gardens are two fig-trees of extraordinary size, said to have been planted by cardinal Pole; they are of the white sort, and bear very fine fruit. In Wat Tyler's rebellion in 1381, the rebels burned or destroyed all the furniture, books, registers, and public papers here, archbishop Sudbury himself falling a sacrifice to their resentment. During the commotions under Oliver Cromwell this palace became the first object of popular fury, and in 1648 it was sold to colonel Scot (secretary of state to Oliver Cromwell) and Matthew Handy, for 7073*l.* 0*s.* 8*d.* The parish church is dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and adjoins the palace. It was rebuilt between the years 1374 and 1377; the tower still remains, and the other parts of the present structure appear to be of the time of Henry VII. In one of the windows over the nave is the figure of a pedlar and his dog painted in glass, concerning which there is a tradition, that it was intended to represent a person of that occupation, who bequeathed a piece of land to the parish called Pedlar's Acre. In the church-yard is the monument of the Tradescants, father and son, who were celebrated gardeners in the seventeenth century, and the founders of the museum, now called the Ashmolean, at Oxford. A trench is said to have been cut through the parish of Lambeth by King Canute, for the purpose of conveying his fleet to the west side of London Bridge to attack the city by water. This trench is represented to have been begun in the east about Rotherhithe, and to have ended about Battersea. In this parish is the asylum for female orphans, instituted in 1758; the Westminster Lying-in Hospital, founded in 1765; Vauxhall gardens; Beaufoy's vinegar works; Coade's and Sealey's artificial stone manufactory; Watts's patent shot manufactory; and some other works. Many of the houses in Fore-street and its neighbourhood near the river, once the principal part of the parish, exhibit the most ancient specimens of building of the metropolis now standing; but the districts of South Lambeth, Stockwell, and Vauxhall, have many elegant mansions, and entire new streets daily erecting. Lord Grosvenor has obtained leave to erect a bridge over the Thames at Vauxhall, with a direct road to Hyde-park-corner through his lordship's estate. It is remarkable, that the springs which flow from the river here fall about the middle of September, return again in February, and remain high all the summer; it was observed, that they were rather higher than usual in the great drought of 1681.—Manning's Surry and Lysons's Environs of London.

LAMB HEAD, a cape on the south-east coast of the island of Stronsay, one of the Orkneys.

LAMB ISLAND, a small island of Scotland, in the mouth of the Forth, one mile north-north-west of Berwick.

LAMBLEY, a parish in the hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, 4 miles from Nottingham, and 127 from London; containing 71 houses and 467 inhabitants. It is a rectory, rated at 10*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.*

LAMBHOLM, a small island of the Orkneys, situated in Holme Sound, opposite the parish of Holme; containing 3 houses and 16 inhabitants. It is about three miles in circumference.

LAMBORNE, a parish in the hundred of Lamborne, Berks, 5 miles from Hungerford, and 67½ from London, taking its name from the small river Lamborne, which joins the Kennet near Thatcham. It contains 197 houses and 964 inhabitants. On the neighbouring downs horse races are annually held. Hempsted Marshall, in the environs, has the elegant mansion of earl Craven, called Ashdown park, the estate belonging to which was formerly held under the lord high marshal of England. Fairs 1st May, Whit-Monday, September 21, and November 23. The living is a vicarage, rated at 10*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.* the patronage of which is in the dean and chapter of St. Paul's.

LAMBORNE, the name of a hundred in Berks, lying on the south-western side of the county and borders of Wilts.

LAMBORNE UPPER, a hamlet to the foregoing, 1 mile distant, and containing 64 houses and 346 inhabitants.

LAMBORNE, a parish in the hundred of Ongar, Essex, between Waltham Abbey and Romford, 13¾ miles from London; containing 91 houses and 515 inhabitants. This manor is held by the service of the ward staff, viz. by carrying a load of straw in a cart with six horses, two ropes, and two men in harness, and watching the said ward staff when it is brought to the neighbouring hamlet of Abridge. The living is a rectory, rated at 14*l.*

LAMBRIGG, a hamlet in the parish and ward of Kendal, Westmoreland, near Kendal, and 260 miles from London; containing 23 houses and 124 inhabitants.

LAMBSHEAD, a cape of Ireland, on the south-west coast of Kerry, at the mouth of the Kenmare river, 34 miles south-south-west of Killarney, and 6 north of Cod's Head. Long. 10° 1′ W. of Greenwich, and Lat. 51° 42′ N.

LAMBSTON, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Roose, Pembrokeshire, Wales, 4 miles from Haverfordwest, and 268 from London; containing 40 houses and 219 inhabitants.

LAMBTON, a township in the parish of Chester-le-Street, Easington ward, Durham, 5 miles from Durham, and 264 from London; containing 59 houses and 266 inhabitants.

LAMER MOOR, or LAMAR MUIR, a ridge of hills in the south of Scotland, beginning at Dunglas in East Lothian, and terminating at the distance of 40 miles at Soutra hill. They are intersected by various glens, or vales, with innumerable streams of water collected from the hills. This range is chiefly occupied in the grazing of sheep, and in the culture of turnips for their support in winter. Priest Laws, an ancient encampment here, is 2000 feet in circumference.

LAMER, a hamlet in the parish of Wheathampstead, in the hundred of Dacorum, Herts, on the north side of the river Lea, 5 miles from St. Alban's, 5 from Hatfield, and 25 from London. The population is included with that of Wheathampstead.

LAMERTON, a parish in the hundred of Lyfton, Devon, 2 miles from Tavistock, and 207 from London; containing 133 houses and 722 inhabitants. In the church are the effigies of Nicholas and Andrew Tremaine, twins, who were so like each other as scarcely to be distinguished: they were subject to the same pain, the same appetites, and, although at a considerable distance, were killed together at Newhaven in France 1563. The living is a vicarage, rated at 13*l.* 2*s.* 1*d.*

LAMINGTON, a parish in the shire of Lanark, Scotland, united with Wandel, lying on the east bank of the Clyde, nearly opposite to the hill of Tinto, 10 miles from Lanark, and containing 85 houses and 375 inhabitants. Its neighbourhood has many remains of towers.

LAMLASH, or HOLY ISLAND, an island of Scotland, situated before the bay of Lamlash, about 2 miles long and half a mile wide; the whole is a vast mountain, in great part covered with heath, but with sufficient pasture and arable land to feed a few milch cows, sheep, and goats, and to raise a little corn, and some potatoes.

LAMLASH, a town or village in Scotland, on the east coast of the island of Arran, situated in a bay, to which it gives name, and which Mr. Pennant says, forms the safest harbour in the universe, with depth of water for the largest ships. In the year 1558 the English fleet, under the earl of Sussex, after ravaging the coast of Kintyre, at that time in possession of James M'Connel, landed in this bay, and burned and destroyed all the neighbouring country.

LAMMAS, a parish in the hundred of South Erpingham, Norfolk, 4 miles from Aylsham, and 114 from London; containing 29 houses and 251 inhabitants.

LAMONBY, a township in the parish of Skelton, in Leath ward, Cumberland, 7 miles from Penrith, and 290 from London; containing 43 houses and 244 inhabitants, LAMORRAN, a village in the hundred of Powder, Cornwall, 3½ miles from Tregony, and 254 from London; containing 14 houses and 78 inhabitants.

LAMPLUGH, a parish in Allerdale ward above Derwent, Cumberland, 5 miles from Whitehaven, and 302 from London; containing 21 houses and 117 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, rated at 10*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.*

LAMPORT, a parish in the hundred of Orlingbury, Northampton, 8½ miles from Northampton, and 75 from London; containing 23 houses and 148 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 48*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*

LAMPTON, a small hamlet in the parish of Heston, Middlesex, half a mile on the right of Hounslow.

LAMPTON, a hamlet in the parish of Stow, hundred of Buckingham, Bucks, 2½ miles from Buckingham.

LAMYATT, a parish in the hundred of Whitestone, Somerset, 1½ mile from Bruton, and 113 from London; containing 41 houses and 206 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*

LANARK, a royal burgh and the county town of Lanarkshire, Scotland, 24 miles from Glasgow, and 30 from Edinburgh. It stands on a rising ground near the river Clyde, 656 feet above the level of the sea, and contains 642 houses, and 4692 inhabitants, viz. 2180 males, and 2512 females, of whom 1611 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures, principally that of cotton: it consists of 5 neat streets, with several lanes, &c. and has many new buildings. It is a very ancient burgh, governed by a provost, 2 bailies, a dean of guild, 13 merchant counsellors, and 7 deacons of trade. It appears to have been a place of considerable note in former times, for according to Scottish history, Kenneth 2d held a parliament here in 978; and in 1244 it was burned to the ground. It unites with Linlithgow, Selkirk and Peebles, in sending one representative to parliament.—Pennant's Tour.

LANARK NEW, a hamlet to the foregoing, and adjoining to it. It was erected in 1785 to accommodate the persons employed at the cotton mills, by David Dale, esq. of Glasgow. The ground on which it is situated was morass, but was chosen on account of the powerful command of the Clyde water to be had at this place: some of the mills, erected here, contain upwards of 6000 spindles. The population is included with old Lanark. The houses are all of stone, elegant and lofty, and the town consists of 2 streets, about ½ mile long, very broad and clean; the cotton mills are in the center, in the front of which is a small neat house, in which the owner resided when living. Among the number of people employed here, there are about 500 children; to whom the greatest attention is paid, not not only to their health but to their morals, and the instructing them in useful education. There are many beautiful falls on the banks of the Clyde, which are much frequented by travellers.—M'Nayr's Guide to the Highlands.

LANARK, a parish in the hundred of Abergavenny, Monmouth, 5 miles from Abergavenny, and 143 from London, containing 53 houses and 290 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* with Clitha and Bettus chapels annexed, in the patronage of the archdeacon and chapter of Landaff.

LANARKSHIRE, or CLYDESDALE, a county or sheriffdom of Scotland, lying in the centre of the country, between the German and Atlantic oceans, bounded on the east by the counties of West and Mid Lothian, and Peebles, on the south by Dumfries-shire, on the west by the counties of Ayr and Renfrew, and on the north by those of Dumbarton and Stirling. The greatest length, from north to south, is about 47 miles, and the greatest breadth, from east to west, about 32 miles. The area is about 870 square miles, and 556,800 acres. It is divided into three wards, viz. the upper ward, of which the ancient burgh of Lanark is the chief town; the middle ward, of which the town of Hamilton is the centre; and the lower ward, lying immediately round the city of Glasgow. The upper ward, which is nearly two thirds of the whole county, is mostly mountainous, or at least hilly and moorish, and, from the nature of the soil, and the great elevation of the country, not capable of much agricultural improvement. On the Dumfries boundary the country is still more mountainous, the hills being placed so closely together, that their grandeur is lost to the eye of the beholder. Iron ore abounds in this county, and there are eight blast furnaces employed in making iron; a number of foundries are also occupied in recasting the metal into a great variety of forms, at one of which cannon, mortars, balls, &c. are made. The blast furnaces and foundries of the county employ about 1600 people, and the produce of pig-iron is annually from 9 to 10,000 tons, and the coals consumed about 130,000 tons. Among the mountains near the southern extremity of the county, are the well-known lead-mines belonging to the earl of Hopetoun: the produce of these mines may be computed at from 34,000 to 36,000 bars annually, and the inhabitants of the village of Leadhills at 1200. There are also found in this county a great quantity of free-stone, lime, and whin-stone: under the free-stone lie extensive beds of coal of various qualities, in the raising of which about 2800 people are employed, and the quantity annually produced is about 765,000 tons. The principal river is the Clyde, which rises in the mountains bordering on Dumfries-shire, and is there called the Daer, flowing for several miles under that name, till it is joined by a small brook called the Clyde, and from thence downward takes that name. The river is navigable only to Glasgow, after which, besides a number of corn and other mills, it drives the machinery of two large cotton spinning works at Lanark and Blantyre. The principal streams by which it is joined in its course are the Deninten, the Douglas, the Nethan, the Avon, and the West Calder, on the south side; and the Medwain, the Mouse, the South and North Calders, and the Kelvin, on the north side. There are a great many lakes in different parts of the county, but none of them are remarkable for extent. The Forth and Clyde navigation crosses the north corner of the county, and proceeds into Dumbartonshire at the aqueduct bridge over the Kelvin. There is also another canal, called the Monkland canal, which was begun in 1770, and carried from the centre of the coalworks in the parishes of Monkland as near Glasgow as the level would admit. The cotton manufactory is carried on in this county to an amazing extent; the quantity of cotton wool imported into the Clyde in the year 1804 being 89,000 bags and pockets, which, averaging 200lbs. each, amount to 7,800,000*l.* The tanning of leather, and the manufacture of shoes, boots, and saddlery, are also carried on here to a considerable extent; the linen manufacture is contracted, though great quantities of nuns' thread are made here. By the returns sent to parliament under the population act, this county contained 32,259 houses and 146,699 inhabitants, viz. 68,100 males, and 78,599 females, of whom there were employed in trade and manufactures 38,086, and 15,704 in agriculture. This county sends one member to parliament. It contains two royal burghs, Glasgow and Lanark, and many considerable towns and villages, and is divided into 41 parochial districts.

Published January 2 1808 by R. Phillips, Bridge Street Blackfriars London.

LANARTH. See LLANARTH, Cardigan, Wales.

LANBADOCK, a parish in the hundred of Usk, upper division, Monmouth, 5 miles from Usk, and 149 from London; containing 63 houses, and 312 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

LANBRYNMAIR, a parish in the hundred of Machynleth, Montgomery, Wales; 17 miles from Newtown, and 193 from London, containing 344 houses, and 1743 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.* and is a sinecure in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

LANCASHIRE, a county of England, bounded on the north by Cumberland, Westmoreland, and Yorkshire, on the east by Yorkshire, on the west by the Irish Sea, and on the south by Cheshire. It is about 74 miles long, and from 15 to 44 wide, and contains above 1,100,000 acres of land, of which above 550,000 are in a state of tillage, 450,000 in pasturage, and about 400,000 in wood lands, and uncultivated. It is divided into 6 hundreds, viz. Amounderness, Blackburn, Leyland, Lonsdale, Salford, and West Derby, and contains 6 boroughs, Clitheroe, Lancaster, Liverpool, Newton, Preston, and Wigan, 24 market-towns, Blackburn, Bolton, Burnley, Bury, Cartmel, Chorley, Colm, Dalton, Eccleston, Garstang, Haslingden, Hawkshead, Hornby, Kirkham, Manchester, Ormskirk, Poulton, Prescot, Rochdale, Ulverston, and Warrington, beside 62 parishes: the whole containing 114,270 houses, inhabited by 672,731 persons, viz. 322,356 males, and 350,375 females, of whom 269,259 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures, and 52,018 in agriculture. The amount of assessment for the poor's-rate for the year 1803, was 230,765*l.* at the rate of 5*s.* 4½*d.* in the pound. The assessment of the property-tax for one year, ending April, 1806, was 5,349,556*l.* The average scale of mortality, in this county, for 10 years, is as 1 to 46½ of the population. By a return made to the House of Lords, and printed in the year 1805, it is stated that the area of this county comprises 1,806 square statute miles, equal to 1,155,840 statute acres; the number of inhabitants in each square mile containing 640 acres, being 372; and the total number of persons 671,832. Lancashire lies in the diocese of Chester and province of York, and returns 14 members to parliament. Its principal rivers are the Mersey, Ribble, Were, and Lune. The Mersey rises in Derbyshire, and after receiving several smaller streams, divides that county from Cheshire, and falls into the sea at Liverpool. The Ribble rises in Yorkshire, and crossing the county, falls into the Irish Sea, near Preston. The Were is formed by several small streams, and falls into the Irish Sea above 12 miles north of the Ribble, and the Lune or Loune rises near Kirby Lonsdale, in Westmoreland, and falls into the Irish Sea, not far from Lancaster. All these rivers afford excellent salmon, and the Mersey is visited by annual shoals of smelts called sparlings, of remarkable size and flavour. A ridge of mountains separates Lancashire from Yorkshire, and continuing its course through some other counties, has been called The Backbone of England. This ridge screens the county from the easterly winds and their attendant evils, and is thought to cause a greater quantity of rain than in the more interior parts of the kingdom, but does not seem to make the climate less wholesome. Lancashire has some local advantages which have been the cause of rendering the county so famous for its manufactures. These, in a great measure, depend on the two material articles, coal and water, the former of which lies in immense beds towards the southern and middle part; and that sort, called cannel or candle coal, is found plentifully distributed. The northern and north-eastern districts produce lime-stone in abundance; and near Lancaster is an extensive quarry of excellent stone, which admits of a fine polish. Blue slate is obtained in large quantities in the mountains called Coniston and Telberthwaite Fells near Hawkshead. Copper mines have been worked in the north, but without much success. Scithe-stones are obtained at Rainford, well wrought upon the spot. This county comprises a variety of soil and diversity of country; but, in general, it is one of those which have been least favoured by nature; though as a commercial and manufacturing district, it has, of late years, encreased beyond any other in the kingdom. That disjointed part of it called the Hundred of Furness, is a wild and rugged region, stored with iron, and covered with underwood, which last is found very useful in supplying the furnaces: in this district is a considerable lake called Conistone Meer, near the sea, in the vicinity of the ancient abbey of Furness: the land is tolerably fertile; and the long and narrow isle of Walney forms its bulwark from the Irish Sea. On the southern part towards Yorkshire are many of those black turf bogs called mosses, some of very great extent, and entirely impassable during wet seasons. The country about Garstang is noted for its fine breed of horned cattle. From the wetness of its climate, and from the frequent clouds which in their passage from the western sea are here stopped by the inland ridge of hills, it is but little adapted for a corn country, so that the grain chiefly cultivated is the oat; but potatoes thrive here to very great advantage, and large quantities are even exported to Dublin. A considerable quantity of cheese is made in this county similar to that which takes its name from Cheshire. Manufactures are carried on very extensively here in all the various branches of silk, linen and cotton, which supply most of the markets at home and abroad, particularly since the late improvements in machinery, and the advantage of water carriage from Liverpool, which communicates by the system of inland navigation with all the neighbouring counties and principal rivers in England. There are also considerable works in iron and steel, favoured by its production of coal; and near Preston is a patent manufactory of cast plate-glass. The principal food of the labouring class, particularly on the northern and eastern borders, is oaten cakes, without leaven, and rolled very thin. Notwithstanding its wet climate, the air is not found to be particularly unhealthy. The beauty of the females of this county has long been proverbial, and entitled them from their bewitching appearance to the appellation of Lancashire witches. In the time of the Britons, Lancashire was inhabited by the Brigantes. The Romans included it in the province of Maxima Canariensis: during the heptarchy it belonged to the kingdom of Northumberland; and after the Norman conquest it was made a county palatine, having internal laws and jurisdictions appropriate to itself.

LANCASTER, Duchy of, the name of a hundred in Gloucestershire, on the north-western side of the county and west of Gloucester.

LANCASTER, a sea port, market and the county town of Lancashire, 22 miles from Preston, and 239 from London; containing 5198 houses, and 9030 inhabitants, viz. 3999 males, and 5031 females, of whom 1522 were employed in various trades and manufactures, principally in sail-cloth and coarse linens. It is situated on the river Lune, which forms an harbour of moderate size. The merchant shipping is chiefly employed in the West India, American and Baltic trades. It has a long fine quay, on which are a suite of noble warehouses. The houses are neat, handsome and well-built, and the streets paved; with one spacious square. The church is a handsome gothic structure, standing on the crown of an eminence below the castle, from which it is separated by a moat. A few of its pews retain some specimens of ancient carved work, in the stile of the times when it belonged to the priory of St. Martin, of Seez, in France. Here is also a neat chapel, to which an elegant steeple has been lately rebuilt; and there are places of worship for Presbyterians, Quakers, Methodists, and Roman Catholics. The town-hall and exchange is a good building, and has a noble portico. There is also a neat little theatre. The custom-house is a small building, having a portico supported by 4 Ionic pillars, each 15½ feet high, consisting of a single stone. There are many alms-houses in different parts of the town, some of them well endowed, and several charity schools. The castle is said by some to have been originally built in the time of Adrian, but the present structure was erected in the reign of Edward III. The round towers are about 26 paces distant from each other, joined by a wall and open gallery; two towers on the western side remain entire, and from their distance, and the visible foundation of the others, they appear to have been seven in number. The form of the castle must have been a polygon. One of these towers is called Adrian's. On the top is a large square tower, called John of Gaunt's Chair, whence is had most extensive prospect. In this castle the assizes are held, and it is now the county gaol. Here was formerly an hospital for lepers, and a house for dominican friars. The town is incorporated under a mayor, aldermen, recorder, bailiffs, &c. and sends two members to parliament: the returning officers being the mayor and two bailiffs. By the inland navigation, this town has communication with the Mersey, Dee, Ribble, Ouse, Trent, Darwent, Severn, Humber, Thames, Avon, &c. The principal exports are hardware, woollen goods, cabinet ware, &c. the cabinet makers of Lancaster being celebrated for their ingenuity. The new bridge is a handsome building of five equal arches, is 519 feet long, and cost 12,000*l*. It was erected at the expence of the county. The shambles in the market are built in the form of a street, every butcher having a shop with his name painted over the door. About 5 miles north-east of Lancaster is a remarkable cavern, called Dunald Mill Hok, in the middle of a large common; a brook nearly as large as the New River at London, and which turns a corn-mill just at the entrance of the cave, runs in at its mouth by several beautiful cascades, whence continuing its course for two miles under a large mountain, it makes its appearance again at Carnford. The entrance of this cavern has something pleasingly awful in its rapid descent, the roaring of the waters, and the variegated sides of the rocks; shewing all the tints of the rainbow, and forming a most curious picture of nature. On the road to Burton is a naked Limestone rock, called Farleton Knot, resembling in shape the rock of Gibralter. The markets are on Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs May 1, July 5, and October 10. The living is a vicarage, value 41*l.* Lat. 54. 4. Long. 3. 5. west.

LANCHESTER, a parish in Chester ward, Durham, 6 miles from Durham, and 266 from London; containing 145 houses and 708 inhabitants. The church was formerly collegiate, and is a curacy, under the bishop of Durham. It appears to have been once a considerable Roman station.

LANCILL, a parish in the hundred of Ewias Lacey, Hereford, 14 miles from Hereford, and 140 from London; containing 22 houses and 112 inhabitants.

LANCING, a parish in the hundred of Brightford, rape of Bramber, Sussex, 1¼ mile from Shoreham, and 54 from London; containing 79 houses and 451 inhabitants.

LANCROSS, a parish in the hundred of Shebbear, Devon, 2 miles from Bideford, and 200 from London; containing 8 houses and 50 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.*

LANDBEACH, a parish in the hundred of Northstow, Cambridge, 5 miles from Cambridge, and 56 from London; containing 45 houses and 235 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

LANDEGVETH, a parish in the hundred of Usk lower division, Monmouth, 4 miles from Usk, and 148 from London; containing 20 houses and 104 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.*

LANDGRAVE, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Earsham, Norfolk, 3 miles from Harleston, and 100 from London; containing 17 houses and 120 inhabitants.

LANDINNY, a parish in the hundred of Raylund, Monmouth, 4 miles from Usk, and 148 from London; containing 68 houses and 333 inhabitants.

LANFORD or LANGFORD a parish in the hundred of Frustfield, Wilts, 8 miles from Salisbury, and 78 from London; containing 32 houses and 186 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 5*s.* 9*d.*

LANDGUARD FORT stands on a point of land, at the south-east extremity of the county of Suffolk, at the mouths of the rivers Orwell and Stour, opposite to Harwich as it commands the sea from the entrance of the Manningtree water. At high water, and a little distance from shore, it has the appearance of an island. The fort has been refitted and enlarged, and has a strong garrison and a platform of guns to defend the coast.—Malham's Guide to the Coast.

LANDINABO, a parish in the hundred of Wormelow, Hereford, 6 miles from Ross and 127 from London; containing 8 houses and 35 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 2*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.*

LANDKEY, a parish in the hundred of South Moulton, Devon, 1½ mile from Barnstaple, and 193 from London; containing 96 houses and 607 inhabitants.

LANDOGO, a parish in the hundred of Raglan, Monmouth, 5 miles from Usk, and 150 from London; containing 112 houses and 589 inhabitants.

LANDRAKE, a parish in the hundred of East, Cornwall, 4 miles from Saltash, and 222 from London; containing 123 houses and 613 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 18*l.* 12*s.* 4*d.*

LAND'S-END, Cornwall, is 6 or 7 leagues west-north-west of the Lizard point, and 290½ miles from London; this is the western extremity of England, and was called by Ptolemy, Bolerium and Antivestæum. The British bards called it Penrighuard or the Promontory of Blood; by the Saxons it was termed Penwirthsteorr, and by the later inhabitants Penwonlas or Land's-End. It is supposed once to have ran farther into the sea. On the outermost rocks at low water are to be seen veins of lead and copper. Lat. 50. 6. long. 5. 45. west.—Malham's Guide to the Coast.

LANDS-END, a cape on the north-east coast of the isle of Sheppey, Kent, about 4 miles from Sheerness.

LANDULPH, a parish in the hundred of East, Cornwall, 3 miles from Saltash, and 218 from London; containing 84 houses and 529 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of the king.

LANDWADE, a hamlet to the parish of Ixning, in Suffolk, although situated in the hundred of Staplow, Cambridge, 3 miles from Newmarket. It contains only 3 houses and 25 inhabitants.

LANDWEDNACK, a parish in the hundred of Kerrier, Cornwall, 7 miles from Helstone, and 284 from London; containing 51 houses and 244 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 16*s.* 10*d.*

LANEAST, a hamlet in the parish of South Petherwin, in the hundred of East, Cornwall, 3 miles from Launceston, and 216 from London; containing 30 houses and 179 inhabitants.

LANEHAM, a parish in the hundred of Bassetlaw, Notts, 5 miles from Tuxford, and 138 from London; containing 73 houses and 302 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* and is in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Nottingham.

LANELIER, a parish in the hundred of Abergavenny, Monmouth, 2½ miles from Abergavenny, and 140 from London; containing 48 houses and 224 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 10*s.* 7*d.*

LANERCOST, a parish and curacy in Eskdale ward, Cumberland, 2 miles from Brampton, and 313 from London; the population was omitted to be returned to parliament. It is remarkable for the ruins of its priory of Augustines, situated in a romantic valley, near the river Irthing, and a little to the south of the Picts wall: some few of the offices of the monastery are fitted up as a farm house. The church which belonged to the priory still remains, and in the cemetery adjoining are several tombs of the Daire family, to whom this manor was granted at the dissolution. It now belongs to the earl of Carlisle.

LANESBOROUGH, a town in the county of Longford, province of Leinster, Ireland, pleasantly situated on the river Shannon, over which it has a bridge, leading to Ross common; 7 miles south-west of Langford, and 62 from Dublin.

LANFOIST or LANGOYLE, a parish in the hundred of Abergavenny, Monmouth, 2 miles from Abergavenny, and 134 from London; containing 19 houses and 158 inhabitants It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.*

LANGAR a parish in the hundred of Bingham, Notts, on the river Trent, 4 miles from Nottingham, and 122 from London; containing 45 houses and 266 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 7*s.* 11*d.*

LANGARRON, a township and chapelry in the parish of Lugwardine, in the hundred of Wormelow, Hereford, 5 miles from Ross, and 126 from London; containing 159 houses and 894 inhabitants.

LANGATTOCK, a village in the hundred of Abergavenny, Monmouth, 7 miles from Usk and 144 from London, containing 34 houses and 179 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 7*s.* 3*d.*

LANGATTOCK LINGORD, a parish in the hundred of Abergavenny, Monmouth, 6 miles from Abergavenny, and 140 from London; containing 46 houses and 191 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 6*s.* 3*d.* and is in the patronage of the prince of Wales, LANGATTOCK VIBON AVEL, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Skenfreth, Monmouth, 5 miles from Monmouth, and 134 from London; containing 59 houses and 425 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 18*s.* 11*d.*

LANGATTOCK by CAERLEON, in the hundred of Usk, Monmouth, 5 miles from Caerleon, and 136 from London; containing 35 houses and 169 inhabitants.

LANGBOROUGH, the name of a wapentake in the north riding of Yorkshire, on the northern coast of the shire, stretching along the coast from Whitby to Yarm.

LANGCLIFFE, a township in the parish of Giggleswick, wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, west riding of York, 1¼ mile from Settle, and 252 from London; containing 54 houses and 250 inhabitants.

LANGDALE, a township in the parish of Grassmere, Kendal ward, Westmoreland, 3 miles from Ambleside, and 275 from London; containing 59 houses and 300 inhabitants.

LANGDON WEST, a village in the hundred of Bewsborough, lathe of St. Augustine's, Kent, 3 miles from Dover, and 70 from London; containing 17 houses and 92 inhabitants.

LANGDON. See LAINGDON, Essex.

LANGDON, a river in Durham, which falls into the Tees, below Teesdale-forest.

LANGENHOE, a parish in the hundred of Winstree, Essex, near St. Osyth, 4 miles from Colchester, and 51 from London; containing 13 houses and 108 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 18*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

LANGFIELD, a township in the parish of Halifax, in Morley wapentake, west riding of York, near Halifax, and 196 miles from London; containing 202 houses and 1170 inhabitants, of whom 757 were returned as being chiefly employed in the woollen manufacture, LANGFORD, a parish in the hundred of Biggleswade, Bedford, 2½ miles from Biggleswade, and 42 from London; containing 73 houses and 458 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* in the patronage of the king.

LANGFORD, a parish in the hundred of Farringdon, Berks, 2 miles from Lechlade in Gloucestershire, and 78 from London; containing 79 houses, and 356 inhabitants. This is a detached part of Berks, surrounded by Oxfordshire and Gloucestershire.

LANGFORD, a parish in the hundred of Thurstable, Essex, 2½ miles from Malden, and 39¼ from London; containing 25 houses and 193 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.*

LANGFORD. See LONGFORD, Derby.

LANGFORD. See CHURCH LANGFORD, Oxford.

LANGFORD, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Newark, Notts, 2¾ miles from Newark, and 121 from London; containing 22 houses and 124 inhabitants.

LANGFORD BUDRIL, a township and chapelry in the parish and hundred of Milverton, Somerset, 2 miles from Wellington, and 151 from London; containing 103 houses and 524 inhabitants.

LANGFORD, a parish in the hundred of South Greenhoe, Norfolk, 6 miles from Thetford, and 86 from London; containing 4 houses and 54 inhabitants. The living is united with Igburgh, adjoining, and is a rectory, value 4*l.* 15*s.* 9*d.*

LANGFORD. See LONGFORD, Salop.

LANGFORD STEEPLE, a parish in the hundred of Branch and Dole, Wilts, 9 miles from Salisbury, and 89 from London; containing 114 houses and 523 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 54*l.* 0*s.* 7*d.*

LANGFORD LITTLE, a hamlet in the aforegoing, half a mile distance, and contains 5 houses and 25 inhabitants.

LANGFORD, a parish in the hundred of Frustfield, Wilts, 8 miles from Salisbury, and 81 from London; containing 37 houses and 186 inhabitants.

LANGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Lexden, Essex, 6 miles from Colchester and 56 from London; containing 124 houses and 657 inhabitants.

LANGHAM GREAT, a parish in the hundred of Holt, Norfolk, 3 miles from Holt, and 110

from London; containing 47 houses and 268 inhabitants.

LANGHAM-LITTLE, a hamlet in the parish Blakeney, hundred of Holt, Norfolk, 4 miles from Holt, and 118 from London. The population is included with Blakeney.

LANGHAM, a township and chapelry in the parish of Oakham, in Oakham soke, Rutland, 3¼ miles from Oakham, and 99 from London; containing 97 houses and 435 inhabitants.

LANGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Blackburn, Suffolk, 2 miles from Ixworth, and 78 from London; containing 27 houses and 207 inhabitants.

LANGHOLM, a parish in the shire of Dumfries, Scotland, 70 miles from Edinburgh; containing 385 houses and 2039 inhabitants, viz. 977 males and 1062 females, of whom 312 were returned at being employed in trade and manufactures, principally in that of cotton. It is intersected by the river Esk, and the woods on its banks abound with all kinds of game. The town of Langholm is a burgh of barony under the duke of Buccleugh, and at New Langholm, lying between the confluence of the Wauchope and the Esk, his grace has erected about 100 houses all on one regular plan, for the establishment of an extensive cotton manufactory. New Langholm is about half a mile distant from the old town. Langholm has a well attended weekly market and four annual fairs; that on July 26 is said to be one of the greatest in Scotland for lambs. The duke of Buccleugh has a handsome mansion, called the lodge, situated in a delightful valley on the banks of the Esk. Here are several medicinal springs. About 100 yards from the house a bridge of timber is thrown across the river. This seat is chiefly used by his grace during the season for grouse shooting.—Houseman's Tour in Scotland.

LANGIBBY, a parish in the hundred of Usk lower division, Monmouth, 2 miles from Usk, and 145 from London; containing 42 houses and 350 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 19*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.*

LANGLEY, the name of a hundred in Gloucester, lying in the south-western angle of the county, near Bristol.

LANGLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Hamstead Norris, hundred of Faircross, Berks, 5 miles from Newbury, and 56 from London; the population of which is included with Hamstead Norris.

LANGLEY, a parish in the hundred of Stoke, Bucks, 1½ mile from Colnbrook, and 18 from London; containing 226 houses and 1215 inhabitants, of whom 126 were returned employed in various trades and manufactures. It is sometimes called Langley Marsh and Langley Broom. Near Langley is Ditton Park, the seat of lord Beaulieu, and Langley park, an elegant stone building, erected by the late duke of Marlborough: at the foot of a sloping lawn, in the front of the latter, is a fine piece of water. The Black Park, consists entirely of firs, in the centre of which is a fine lake. It is now the residence of sir R. Bateson Harvey, bart. The church of Langley is a curacy, in the patronage of the dean and canons of Windsor.

LANGLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Lanchester, Chester ward, Durham, 6 miles from Durham, and 266 from London; containing 13 houses and 83 inhabitants.

LANGLEY DALE, a township in the parish of Staincross, Darlington ward, Durham, 5 miles from Barnard Castle, and 244 from London; containing 27 houses and 143 inhabitants, including the little village of Shotton adjoining.

LANGLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Claverring, hundred of Clavering, Essex, 10 miles from Standon, and 36 from London; containing 53 houses and 247 inhabitants.

LANGLEY, a parish in the hundred of Eyhone, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 3 miles from Maidstone, and 38 from London; containing 29 houses and 175 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 19*s.* 8*d.*

LANGLEY, a parish in the hundred of Loddon, Norfolk, 5 miles from Bungay, and 111 from London; containing 41 houses and 294 inhabitants.

LANGLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Acton Burnell, Salop.

LANGLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Wiveliscombe, hundred of West Kingsbury, Somerset, half a mile from Wiveliscombe, and 156 from London.

LANGLEY is also the name of a hamlet in the forest of Whichwood, Oxfordshire, where the kings of England had formerly a palace. The last monarch who inhabited it was Charles I.

LANGLEY BURRELL, a parish in the hundred of Chippenham, Wilts, 1½ mile from Chippenham, and 95 from London; containing 65 houses and 333 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 7*s.* 3*d.*

LANGLEY KING'S. See KING'S LANGLEY.

LANGLEY ABBOTTS. See ABBOTTS LANGLEY.

LANGO, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Blackburn, Lancaster, adjoining Blackburn.

LANGOVEN, a parish in the hundred of Raglan, Monmouth, between Monmouth and Usk, and 140 miles from London; containing 29 houses and 141 inhabitants.

LANGNEWTON, a hamlet in the parish of Abbey Holme or Holme Cultram, in Cumberland.

LANGOR, the name of a hundred in the division of Kesteven, Lincolnshire, near the centre of the county, and west of the river Witham.

LANGPORT, a market town and parish in the hundred of Pitney, Somerset, 5 miles from Somerton, and 130½ from London; containing 123 houses and 754 inhabitants. It is a very antient town, and consists of two streets. East of the church is a small antient building, called the Hanging chapel, in which is a free school, founded by Thomas Gillet, in the 17th century. It is situated on the river Parrot, (near its junction with the Irvell,) which being navigable to Bristol and Bridgewater, gives it a considerable traffic with those ports; this river abounds with eels. The principal articles of commerce at Langport, are timber, stone, coal, iron, salt, and corn. Its market is on Saturday. Fairs second Monday in Lent, June 29, September 24, and November 11.—Collinson's Somerset.

Langporty, a small hamlet in the parish of Lydd, in Romney Marsh, Kent.

Langridge, a parish in the hundred of Bath Forum, Somerset, 3 miles from Bath, and 109 from London; containing 16 houses and 86 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.*

Langrigg, a hamlet in the parish of Bromfield, in Allerdale ward, below Derwent, Cumberland, 5 miles from Wigton, and 306 from London; containing 38 houses and 198 inhabitants.

Langrike, a small village on the river Witham, Lincolnshire, having a ferry leading to Horncastle.

Langrike. See Long Drax, Yorkshire.

Langsett, a hamlet in the parish of Penistone, in Staincross wapentake, west riding of York, 6 miles from Barnsley, and 176 from London; containing 41 houses and 204 inhabitants.

Langstone Harbour, 4 miles east of Portsmouth, Hants, capable of containing the whole navy of England; but it has a bar of sand across its mouth, which renders the entrance of large ships very difficult. It is however very convenient for conveying timber, from the Hampshire and Sussex forests, to the dock-yard at Portsmouth. Here are stationed 6 or 7 hulks, having each about 200 convicts on board, many of whom are sent daily on shore to work in the dock-yard, at rigging vessels, &c.

Langthorne, a hamlet in the parish of Bedale Hang East wapentake, north riding of York, 2 miles from Bedale, and 225 from London; containing 24 houses and 104 inhabitants.

Langthorpe, a hamlet in the parish of Kirby Hill, in Hallikeld wapentake, north riding of York, 1 mile from Aldborough, and 209 from London; containing 24 houses and 114 inhabitants.

Langtoft, a parish in the hundred of Ness, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 2 miles from Market Deeping, and 92 from London; containing 86 houses and 386 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 5*s.* 7*d.*

Langtoft, a parish in Dickering lythe, east riding of York, 4 miles from Great Driffield, and 199 from London; containing 63 houses and 276 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* belonging to the prebend thereof in York cathedral.

Langton, a hamlet in the parish of Tarrant Monkton, in the hundred of Pimperne, division of Blandford, Dorset, on the banks of the Stour, 1 mile from Blandford, and 103 from London; containing 10 houses and 72 inhabitants.

Langton, a parish in the hundred of Rowbarrow, division of Blandford, Dorset, 3 miles from Corfe castle, and 118 from London; containing 102 houses and 510 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 10*s.*

Langton Herring, a parish in the hundred of Ugglescombe, division of Dorchester, Dorset, 4 miles from Weymouth, and 127 from London; containing 30 houses and 156 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 7*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.* in the patronage of the king.

Langton, a small village in Darlington ward, Durham, near Barnard Castle; containing 15 houses and 78 inhabitants.

Langton East, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 3 miles from Market Harborough, and 85 from London; containing 62 houses and 329 inhabitants.

Langton West, a hamlet adjoining to the foregoing; containing 52 houses and 82 inhabitants.

Langton Church. See Church Langton.

Langton, commonly called Langton by Horncastle, a parish in the hundred of Gartree, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 3 miles from Horncastle, and 136 from London; containing 12 houses and 58 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 7*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Lincoln.

Langton by Partney, a parish in the hundred of Hill, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 3 miles from Spilsby, and 137 from London; containing 22 houses and 132 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 12*s.* 3*d.*

Langton by Wragby, a parish in the hundred of Wraggoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 1 mile from Wragby, and 143 from London; containing 32 houses and 144 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 15*s.* 4*d.*

Langton, a parish in Buckrose wapentake, east riding of York, 3 miles from Malton, and 215 from London; containing 43 houses and 216 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 17*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.* and the patron is the king.

Langton Great, a parish in Gilling East wapentake, north riding of York, 6 miles from Northallerton, and 231 from London; containing 20 houses and 101 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 10*s.*

Langton Little, a hamlet in the preceding parish, ¼ mile distant; containing 9 houses and 67 inhabitants.

Langton, a small hamlet in the parish of St. Michael's, Appleby, Westmoreland.

Langton, a parish in the shire of Berwick, and district of Morse, Scotland, 15 miles from Berwick; containing 89 houses and 428 inhabitants. Agreeably to its name, it was formerly a long straggling town, often burnt and destroyed by the incursions of the Northumbrians. The new village of Gavintown was erected by the late proprietor, Mr. Gavin, in a more pleasant situation, half-a-mile distant from Langton, and the old town has almost totally disappeared. In the neighbourhood are the vestiges of several military stations.

Langtree, a parish in the hundred of Shebbear, Devon, 2½ miles from Black Torrington, and 198 from London; containing 90 houses and 583 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 29*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.*

Langtree, a hamlet in the parish of Standish, hundred of Leyland, Lancaster, 4 miles from Wigan, and 204 from London.

LANGWALL, a river in the shire of Caithness, which falls into the sea at the south extremity of the county.

LANGWATHBY, a parish and curacy in Leath ward, Cumberland, 3 miles from Penrith, and 286 from London; containing 42 houses and 226 inhabitants. It stands on the banks of the Eden.

LANGWITH, a parish in the hundred of Scarsdale, Derby, 5 miles from Mansfield, and 143 from London; containing 31 houses and 156 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 0*s.* 2*d.* and is in the patronage of the duke of Devonshire.

LANGWITH, or LANGWICH, a hamlet in the parish of Prince's Risborough, Bucks.

LANGWITH, a hamlet in the parish of Wheldrake, east riding of York, 4 miles from York, and 196 from London; containing 5 houses and 29 inhabitants.

LANGWM, a parish in Usk upper division, Monmouth, 2½ miles from Usk, and 144 from London; containing 49 houses and 243 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

LANGWORTH, a small hamlet in the parish of Cokeney, Notts, near Worksop.

LANHENOCH, a parish in Usk lower division, Monmouth, 2 miles from Caerleon, and 150 from London; containing 27 houses and 143 inhabitants. The church is a curacy, under the archdeacon and chapter of Llandaff.

LANHERNE, a hamlet in the parish of Mawgan, hundred of Pydar, Cornwall, near St. Columb, on the sea shore. There is a convent fitted up at this village for some nuns, who emigrated from France during the revolution.

LANHILETH, a parish in the hundred of Abergavenny, Monmouth, near Abergavenny, and 154 miles from London; containing 37 houses and 202 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 15*s.* 7*d.*

LANHYDROCK, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Pydar, Cornwall, 2 miles from Lostwithiel, and 256 from London; containing 56 houses and 167 inhabitants.

LANISHEN, a parish in the hundred of Raglan, Monmouth, 5 miles from Monmouth, and 134 from London; containing 38 houses and 179 inhabitants.

LANIVET, a parish in the hundred of Pydar, Cornwall, 2 miles from Bodmin, and 248 from London; containing 131 houses and 513 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 24*l.*

LANLIVERY, a parish in the hundred of Powder, Cornwall, 1 mile from Lostwithiel, and 253 from London; containing 132 houses and 1178 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 15*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

LANNOTH, a hamlet in the parish of Leeke, in Allertonshire, north riding of York, 5 miles from North Allerton, and 227 from London; containing 10 houses and 46 inhabitants.

LANSANTFFRAED, a parish in the hundred of Oswestry, Salop, 5 miles from Oswestry, and 177 from London; containing 74 houses and 371 inhabitants.

LANRETH, a parish in the hundred of West, Cornwall, 7 miles from Leskeard, and 230 from London; containing 76 houses and 478 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 18*l.* 12*s.* 4*d.* with Erney chapel annexed.

LANROTHALL, a parish in the hundred of Wormelow, Hereford, 5 miles from Monmouth, and 131 from London; containing 10 houses and 75 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 3*l.* 15*s.* 5*d.*

LANSDOWN, once an open plain, but now inclosed, situated 4 miles from Bath, Somerset, particularly noted for its excellent sheep, and for a most extensive prospect: having not only a fine view of the Bristol channel, and Bristol, but over a part of Wales, Bath, and the counties of Gloucester, Worcester, and Wilts. On the borders of Gloucestershire, on this down, a desperate battle was fought, on the 5th of July 1643, between king Charles's troops and the parliamentary army. A stately monument was erected on the northern ridge of the Down in 1720, by lord George Lansdown, grandson of sir Bevil Granville, who fell on that day, zealously defending the royal cause; it is inscribed, "To the memory of his renowned and valiant Cornish friends, who conquered dying in the royal cause."—Collinson's Somerset.

LANSILLOS, a parish in the hundred of West, Cornwall, 3 miles from Fowey, and 235 from London; containing 162 houses and 847 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 18*l.*

LANSOY, a small village in the hundred of Ragland, Monmouth, near Usk; containing 18 houses and 148 inhabitants.

LANTEGLOS, a parish in the hundred of Lesnewth, Cornwall, in which is situated the borough of Camelford: it is 231 miles from London; and contains 188 houses and 912 inhabitants. The living, with St. Advent's chapel annexed, is a rectory, value 34*l.* 11*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of the duke of Cornwall.

LANTEGLOSS, a parish in the hundred of West, Cornwall, 2 miles from Fowey, and 237 from London; containing 146 houses and 678 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 7*s.* 1*d.*

LANTHEWY, a parish in the hundred of Abergavenny, Monmouth, 4 miles from Abergavenny, and 144 from London; containing 69 houses and 304 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 15*s.* 5*d.*

LANTHEWY VACH, a parish in Usk lower division, Monmouth, 4 miles from Usk, and 148 from London; containing 34 houses and 153 inhabitants.

LANTHONY, in the hundred of Abergavenny, Monmouth, 8 miles from Abergavenny, and 141 from London. This hamlet is at the northern extremity of the county; and has the ruins of an antient priory, situated in a deep solitary valley encompassed with rocks, built by St. David, who at this village led the life of a recluse, in the reign of Henry I. where he first erected a chapel called Landewi Nant Honddu, or the Church of St. David on the Monddu, from its being on the banks of that river, now corrupted into Lanthony. Robert Betun, bishop of Hereford, formerly prior of this convent, when the monks were pillaged and driven away by the Welsh, granted them refuge in his palace at Hereford, and gave them a piece of ground called Hyde, near Gloucester, where they built a church which was also called Lanthony. The parish of Lanthony is called generally Llanfihangel Genn, and contains 63 houses and 333 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 11*l.* and is united to Ragland; the patronage is in the duke of Beaufort.—Coxe's Tour in Monmouthshire.

Lantillio Parthôley, a parish in the hundred of Abergavenny, Monmouth, 2 miles from Abergavenny, and 146 from London; containing 62 houses and 349 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.*

Lantillio Cressiney, a parish in the hundred of Skenfreth, Monmouth, 7 miles from Monmouth, and 137 from London; containing 132 houses and 625 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.*

Lanton, a hamlet in the parish of Kirk Newton, Glendale ward, Northumberland, near Wooller, 325 miles from London, and containing 14 houses and 81 inhabitants.

Lantrissaint, a parish in Usk upper division, Monmouth, 3 miles from Usk, and 147 from London; containing 52 houses and 69 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*

Lanvaches, a parish in the hundred of Caldicot, Monmouth, 8 miles from Caerleon, and 144 from London; containing 34 houses, and 175 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.*

Lanvair Kilgeddin, a parish in the hundred of Abergavenny, Monmouth, 5 miles from Usk, and 144 from London; containing 34 houses and 147 inhabitants.

Lanvair Discoed, a parish in the hundred of Caldicott, Monmouth, 8 miles from Caerleon, and 144 from London; containing 31 houses and 174 inhabitants. The church is a curacy, under the chapter of Landaff.

Lavair Waterdine, a township in the parish of Clunn, hundred of Purslow, Salop, 2 miles from Knighton, and 160 from London; containing 75 houses and 466 inhabitants.

Lanvapley, a parish in the hundred of Abergavenny, Monmouth, 4 miles from Abergavenny, and 144 from London; containing 25 houses and 108 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.*

Lanvetherine, a parish in the hundred of Abergavenny, Monmouth, 4 miles from Abergavenny, and 145 from London, containing 36 houses and 195 inhabitants.

Lanveyno, a parish in the hundred of Ewias Lacey, Hereford, 15 miles from Hereford, and 142 from London; containing 70 houses and 221 inhabitants.

Lanvihangel Crucorney, a parish in the hundred of Abergavenny, Monmouth, 5 miles from Abergavenny, and 152 from London; containing 69 houses and 342 inhabitants.

Lanvihangel Tormynydd, a parish in the hundred of Ragland, Monmouth, 5 miles from Usk, and 132 from London; containing 33 houses and 178 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 2*l.* 15*s.* 5*d.* under the archdeacon of Landaff.

Lanvihangell Ystern Lewern, a parish in the hundred of Skenfreth, Monmouth, 5 miles from Monmouth, and 136 from London; containing 25 houses and 125 inhabitants.

Lanvihangel Lanternan, a parish and curacy in Usk lower division, Monmouth, 2 miles from Caerleon, and 153 from London; containing 93 houses and 445 inhabitants.

Lanvihangel Pontymoule, a parish in Usk lower division, Monmouth, 2 miles from Pontypool, and 153 from London; containing 26 houses and 136 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the duke of Beaufort.

Lanvrechva, a parish in Usk lower division, Monmouth, 2 miles from Caerleon, and 153 from London; containing 109 houses and 510 inhabitants.

Lanwarne, a parish in the hundred of Wormelow, Hereford, 6 miles from Ross, and 127 from London; containing 56 houses and 342 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 15*l.* in the patronage of the governors of Guy's hospital.

Lanwenarth Citra, a parish in the hundred of Abergavenny, Monmouth, 2 miles from Abergavenny, and 160 from London; containing 37 houses and 148 inhabitants. It is united with Lanwenarth Ultra, in the same hundred, 1 mile distant; containing 109 houses and 467 inhabitants.

Lanyblodwell, a parish in the hundred of Oswestry, Salop, 4 miles from Oswestry, and 180 from London; containing 167 houses and 793 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

Lapford, a parish in the hundred of North Tawton, Devon, 9 miles from Crediton and 189 from London; containing 111 houses and 587 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.*

Lapley, a parish in the hundred of Cuttlestone, Stafford, 3 miles from Ponkridge, and 130 from London; containing 36 houses and 196 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 12*s.* 5*d.*

Lapworth, a parish in the hundred of Kineton, Warwick, 8 miles from Warwick, and 98 from London; containing 85 houses and 575 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 9*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.* in the patronage of Merton college, Oxford.

Larbert, a parish united with Dunipace, in the shire of Stirling, Scotland, 2 miles from Falkirk; containing 653 houses and 3269 inhabitants, viz. 1620 males, and 1649 females, of whom 1421 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture, mostly at the Carron works, the greatest iron foundery in the world. On a moor in this parish is held the famous Falkirk Tryst, where in October about 30,000 head of cattle are usually collected. Near the Carron works once stood the famous Arthur's oven, a model of which has been erected at Pennycuick, in Mid Lothian. Near the church of Dunipace are two artificial mounds, which probably gave name to the place, they being the Danes pacis, the Hills of Peace, in memory of the peace concluded here between the Romans and the Caledonians: they rise in a conical form about 60 feet, and the base covers about an acre of ground.

LARBRICK, a hamlet in the parish of Kirkham, hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, 5 miles from Kirkham and 230 from London. The population is included with Little Eccleston. Here is a chalybeate spring, the waters of which are remarkably cold.

LARG FELL, a mountain of Scotland, in the county of Kirkcudbright, 13 miles west of New Galloway.

LARGO BAY, a large bay on the north coast of the Frith of Forth: it forms a semicircle of 10 miles in extent; has a good anchoring ground, and is a safe road for ships, except when the wind blows from the south or south-east.

LARGO LAW, a hill in the parish of Largo, rising in a conical shape, 800 feet above the level of the sea.

LARGS, a parish in the shire of Fife, Scotland, on the shore of Largo Bay, in the German Ocean, 14 miles from Kirkcaldie, and 24 from Edinburgh; containing 361 houses and 1867 inhabitants, of whom 298 were returned as being employed in trade, &c. There is a good harbour here, which has a stone quay, at which vessels of 200 tons burden may lay conveniently. The chief manufacture carried on here is that of checks. On the coast is a small fishing village called Drumochy. On the banks of the river Keil are the ruins of the ancient castle of Balernwie; and a mile westward is the ancient tower of Lundin, now a part of a modern house. This place gave birth to Alexander Selkirk, whose adventures gave rise to the romance of Robinson Crusoe, written by Defoe. The chest and musket which Selkirk had with him in the desert island, were lately in the possession of one John Selkirk, a weaver, his grand nephew.

LARGS, a parish in the shire of Ayr, at the northern extremity of the county, on the east of the Frith of Clyde, opposite the Isle of Bute; containing 273 houses and 1361 inhabitants. The climate is so remarkably pure that it has been termed the Montpelier of Scotland. Entering the parish on the north, the road lies along the shore, and on the land side is a wall of stone upwards of 60 feet high, which terminates at the old castle of Kelly. Two small villages, Largs and Fairlie, lie on the sea-side; the former being much frequented in the summer for bathing. It has a fair annually at Midsummer, where the countless numbers of High and Lowlanders who usually meet here for the purposes of trade and pleasure, has given rise to the local proverb, "Out of Scotland into Largs!"—Lettice's Letters.

LARKHALL, a village in the parish of Dalserf, Lanarkshire, on the high road from Glasgow to Carlisle; consisting of about 120 new-built houses and 450 inhabitants, mostly weavers.

LARLING, a parish in the hundred of Shropham, Norfolk, 2 miles from Harling, and 94 from London; containing 24 houses and 196 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 0*s.* 2*d.*

LARNE, a town of Ireland, in the county of Antrim, situated at the mouth of a river of the same name, near the north channel of the Irish sea, 8 miles from Carrickfergus, and 16 from Antrim.

LARNE LOUGH, a bay on the east coast of Ireland, between the island Magee and the coast of Antrim, about 6 miles long and 1 wide, so called from the town of Larne, which is situated at the northwest extremity of it.

LARTINGTON, a township in the parish of Rumboldkirk, Gilling West wapentake, north riding of York, 2 miles from Barnard Castle, and 247 from London; containing 41 houses and 223 inhabitants.

LARTON, a hamlet in the parish of Newton, hundred of Broxton, Cheshire, 3 miles from Malpas, and 168 from London; containing 11 houses and 50 inhabitants.

LASBOROUGH, a small village 5 miles from Tetbury, and 19 from Gloucester, in Gloucestershire. It is a chapelry.

LASHKEL, a river in Derbyshire, which falls into the Wye below Alport.

LASSHAM, a parish in the hundred of Odiham, division of Basingstoke, Hants, 2½ miles from Alton, and 48 from London; containing 35 houses and 164 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 18*s.* 9*d.*

LASKHILL, a hamlet in the parish of Helmsley, in Rydall wapentake, north riding of York, near Helmesley, and 222 from London; containing 16 houses and 79 inhabitants.

LASSINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Dudstone and Kingsbarton, Gloucester, 3 miles from Gloucester, and 109 from London; containing 13 houses and 85 inhabitants. The petrifaction called Astroites, or star-stone, is found in a hill near this place. The living is a rectory, value 6*l.* 10*s.*

LASTINGHAM, a parish in the wapentake of Rydall, north riding of York, 5 miles from Kirby Moorside, and 228 from London; containing 49 houses and 222 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 17*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of the king.

LASWADE, a parish in Mid Lothian, Scotland, 4 miles from Edinburgh; containing 717 houses and 3348 inhabitants, of whom 459 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. There are two extensive bleachfields, and five paper-mills in this parish, and the river North Esk runs through it. Near Laswade is Melville Castle,—Hawthornden House, said to have been a strong hold of the Pictish kings, and in the 17th century, the seat of William Drummond, the poet and historian; and the venerable ruins of Roslin Castle.

Latchford, a township and chapelry in the parish of Grappenhall, hundred of Bucklow, Chester, 4 miles from Warrington, and 180 from London; containing 142 houses and 754 inhabitants.

Latchington, a parish in the hundred of Dengy, Essex, 5 miles from Maldon, and 38 from London; containing 44 houses and 394 inhabitants. The living is united with Lawling, and is a rectory, value 37*l.* in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury.

Latham, a township and chapelry in the parish of Ormskirk, hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 2 miles from Ormskirk, and 210 from London; containing 434 houses and 2179 inhabitants, viz. 1084 males, and 1095 females, of whom 541 were returned as being employed in various trades. The magnificent seat at this village, belonging to the Bootle family, is built upon the site of Latham house, which belonged to the earl of Derby, whose countess, in the troublesome times of Charles I. defended it for four months against 2000 of the parliament forces, but who at length took and entirely demolished it. At Latham is a chalybeate water, which besides iron contains some natron and Epsom salt.

Lathbury, a parish in the hundred of Newport, Bucks, 1 mile from Newport, and 52 from London; containing 25 houses and 189 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the dean and canons of Christ church, Oxford.

Latheron, a parish in the shire of Caithness, Scotland, lying on the sea coast, 44 miles from Dornoch; containing 749 houses and 3612 inhabitants, viz. 1655 males, and 1957 females, of whom 58 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. This parish is intersected by three rivers, all abounding with salmon; and the hills of Morven, Scarabine, and Mardin Pap, rise nearly a mile above the level of the sea. The coast is bold and rocky, but has several good harbours. There are several ruins of ancient castles in this parish. In the 14th century William Sutherland, alias William the Big, who was 9 feet 5 inches high, and well proportioned, was living at Latheron.

Latimer, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Chesham, hundred of Burnham, Bucks, 2 miles from Amersham, and 28 from London; containing, with Waterside and Botley which join it, 184 houses and 874 inhabitants.

Latton, a parish in the hundred of Harlow, Essex, 6 miles from Epping, and 23 from London; containing 48 houses and 279 inhabitants. Here was formerly a priory of black canons, the ruins of which, consisting of part of the nave of the church only, has been were long used as a barn. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.*

Latton, a parish in the hundred of Highworth and Cricklade, Wilts, 1 mile from Cricklade, and 87 from London; containing 70 houses and 349 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

Lauder, a royal borough in the shire of Berwick, Scotland, seated on a river of the same name, which falls into the Tweed, 22 miles south of Edinburgh, and 24 from Berwick; containing 329 houses and 1760 inhabitants, of whom 634 were returned as employed in various trades. In the reign of James III. the Scotch nobility, enraged at the conduct of the ministers, (one of whom from a mason, had been created earl of Mar,) and being summoned by the king to meet at Lauder, to consult on the means of repelling an invasion, before they proceeded to business, seized the earl of Mar, and his associates, and hung them over a bridge in the sight of the king and his army. The present appearance of the town is very mean, being much reduced from its former splendour.—The parish extends about 8 miles along the banks of the Lauder water, and the land is in general fertile, whilst other parts grow heath, juniper, &c. Small quantities of copper ore are found, but not sufficient for working. Lauder castle on the side of the river, which was built by Edward I. about 500 years ago as a fortress, is now the principal seat of the earl of Lauderdale, and many of the apartments are curiously ornamented. Lauderdale, one of the three greater divisions of Berwickshire, (which is watered by the river Lauder,) gives the title of earl to the Maitland family.

Lauders, or Lowthers, a hill between Lanarkshire and Annandale, 3150 feet above the level of the sea.

Laughton. See Loughton, Leicester.

Laughton, a parish in the hundred of Corringham, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 3 miles from Gainsborough, and 152 from London; containing 63 houses and 346 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 12*l.* and is united with Wilesworth.

Laughton, a parish in the hundred of Shiplake, rape of Pevensey, Sussex, 6 miles from Hailsham, and 50 from London; containing 74 houses and 539 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.*

Laughton en le Morthen, a parish in the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of York, 7 miles from Worksop, and 153 from London; containing 115 houses and 465 inhabitants. The church stands on a high hill, and is a handsome specimen of Gothic architecture; the tower and spire of which may be seen at the distance of 60 miles; the height to the weather-cock is 195 feet, and when viewed diagonally, it has a fine appearance, the pinnacles at the corner of the tower being joined by flying buttresses to the spire. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

LAUNCELLS, a parish in the hundred of Stratton, Cornwall, 1 mile from Stratton, and 221 from London; containing 113 houses and 647 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.*

LAUNCESTON, a borough, market town, and parish in the hundred of East, Cornwall, 20 miles from Bodmin, and 213 from London. It is pleasantly seated on the side of a hill, on the river Tamer, and contains 223 houses and 1483 inhabitants, 420 of whom were returned as being employed in various trades, &c. Its name is corrupted from Llanstephan, signifying St. Stephen's church. A college was founded here by one of the Saxon kings, which was converted in the year 1150 into a monastery of black canons. Reginald earl of Cornwall built a strong castle about a mile from the old town, which is spoken of by Leland as one of the strongest works in the kingdom. The tower is now made use of as a prison. Launceston was made a free borough by Henry III. being before composed of two other boroughs, viz. Dunheved and Newport. The knights of the shire are elected here, and the winter assizes are held at the Guildhall in this town, the summer assizes having of late years been removed to Bodmin. It has sent two members to parliament since the 23d of Edward I. and is what is called a close borough, the right of election being in the mayor, aldermen, and freemen, (inhabitants at the time they were made free,) the present number being about 23. The returning officer is the mayor. The chapel, which was enlarged in the reign of Henry VI. and converted into a parish church, was rebuilt in that of Henry VIII.: on the side of one of the walls is a fine figure of St. Mary Magdalen. The town is governed by a mayor, recorder, and 8 aldermen. There are two good charity schools at this town for 40 children of both sexes, and a free school founded by queen Elizabeth. Most kinds of provisions are both plentiful and reasonable, but coal are very dear. The markets are on Wednesday and Saturday, and the fairs the first Thursday in March, 3d Thursday in April, Whit Monday, July 5, Nov. 17, and Dec. 6. The church is a curacy, the patronage of which is in the king. Lat. 50° 38′ 15″. long. 4. 20. 45 W.—Borlase's Antiquities, and Polwhele's History of Cornwall.

LAUNCING. See LANCING, Sussex.

LAUND, a township in the parish of Whalley, hundred of Blackburn, Lancaster, near Whalley, and 210 miles from London. It contains 56 houses and 287 inhabitants.

LAUND, a hamlet in the parish of Withcott, hundred of East Goscote, Leicester, 1 mile from Leicester, and 98 from London; containing 5 houses and 28 inhabitants.

LAUNDITCH, the name of a hundred in Norfolk, near the centre of the county, north of East Dereham.

LAUNDON, or LAUNTON, a township and chapelry in the parish of Bicester, hundred of Ploughley, Oxford, 1½ mile from Bicester, and 54 from London; containing 56 houses and 372 inhabitants. The curacy is in the patronage of the bishop of London.

LAURENCE KIRK, formerly called CONVERTH, a parish in Kincardineshire, Scotland, on the small river Leuther, in the centre of the county, 10 miles from Brechin, 8 from Montrose, and 7 from Bervie. The parish contains 249 houses and 1215 inhabitants, and the village itself about 600 inhabitants. In 1762 it contained only 54 inhabitants; in 1779 it was made a burgh of barony, with power to elect every 3 years a bailie and 4 counsellors, and to have a weekly market and fair. Its worthy proprietor, the late lord Gardenstone, erected a commodious inn, and fitted up a well-selected library adjoining, for the benefit of travellers. At this place are manufactures of lawn, cambric, thread, &c. and a large bleaching field.

LAURIESTOWN, a village in the parish of Falkirk, shire of Stirling, Scotland; containing 860 inhabitants.

LAVENHAM, a parish in the hundred of Babergh, Suffolk, 7 miles from Sudbury, and 62 from London; containing 331 houses and 1776 inhabitants, of whom 1060 were returned as being employed in trade. The church is a large structure, and stands at the south end of the town; the steeple is 141 feet high, and contains 6 bells. There are two good charity schools, two Sunday schools, and a dissenters' meeting-house at this place. Lavenham had once a manufactory of blue cloth and callimanco; the former is now dwindled into a manufactory for woollen yarn, and the latter much declined. Of late a considerable manufacture of hempen cloth has been established. The town is governed by 6 capital burgesses, who are chosen for life. It has a spacious market place, and a stone cross in the centre, but the market has been long disused. The fair is on the 10th October, and lasts 4 days for butter and cheese, and there is another on Shrove Tuesday for horses. The living is a rectory, value 20*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.* and is in the patronage of Gonvil and Caius college, Cambridge.—Malon's Tours.

LAVANT, a river in Sussex, which runs into the sea about 5 miles below Chichester.

LAVANT EAST, a parish in the hundred of Aldwick, rape of Chichester, Sussex, 2½ miles from Chichester, and 61 from London; containing 53 houses and 274 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 20*l.* 18*s.*

LAVENDON, a parish in the hundred of Newport, Bucks, 3 miles from Olney, and 56 from London; containing 212 houses and 544 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* and is united with Brayfield.

LAVER, HIGH, a parish in the hundred of Ongar, Essex, 4 miles from Chipping Ongar, and 22 from London; containing 74 houses and 346 inhabitants. At Otes, near this place, the celebrated philosopher John Locke spent the latter part of his life, and died in 1704: his tomb of black marble enclosed with iron rails, being on the south side of the churchyard. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.*

LAVER LITTLE, a parish united with the foregoing, and nearly adjoining thereto, containing 15 houses and 90 inhabitants.

LAVER MAGDALEN, or MAWDLIN, another parish near the foregoing; containing 28 houses and 228 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 16*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.*

LAVERSTOCK, a parish in the hundred of Evingar, division of Kingsclere, Hants, 2 miles from Whitchurch, and 55 from London; containing 17 houses and 88 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 10*s.*

LAVERSTOCK, a parish in the hundred of Alderbury, Wilts, 1 mile from Salisbury, and 79 from London; containing 58 houses and 373 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Sarum.

LAVERTON, a hamlet and formerly a chapelry, in the parish of Brickland, near Campden, Gloucester.

LAVERTON, a parish in the hundred of Frome, Somerset, 3 miles from Frome, and 106 from London; containing 29 houses and 134 inhabitants; the living is a rectory, value 6*l.* 18s..6*d.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of Bath and Wells.

LAVERTON, a township in the parish of Kirby Malzeard, Claro wapentake, west riding of York, 4 miles from Ripon, and 226 from London; containing 74 houses and 368 inhabitants.

LAVINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Betisloe, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 3 miles from Folkingham, and 107 from London; containing 23 houses and 159 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 7*s.* 1*d.*

LAVINGTON EAST, or MARKET LAVINGTON (formerly called Staple Lavington), a market town and parish in the hundred of Swanborough, Wilts, 4 miles from Devizes, and 89 from London; containing 160 houses and 918 inhabitants. Here is a good charity-school, and a market on Monday, and another on Wednesday, principally for corn. It is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of the dean and canons of Christ Church, Oxford.

LAVINGTON WEST, or BISHOPS LAVINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Whorlsdon, Wilts, 1 mile from the foregoing, and 90 from London; containing 214 houses and 958 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Salisbury.

LAWERNE, a hamlet in the parish of St. John's, in the city of Worcester.

LAWFORD, a parish in the hundred of Tendring, Essex, 7 miles from Colchester, and 57 from London; containing 54 houses and 467 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* in the patronage of St. John's College, Cambridge.

LAWFORD CHURCH, a parish in the hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, 3 miles from Rugby, and 87 from London; containing 38 houses and 302 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 15*s.* 5*d.*

LAWFORD LITTLE, a hamlet in the parish of Newbold on Avon, hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, near the foregoing; consisting of 2 houses and 13 inhabitants.

LAWFORD LONG, a hamlet also near the foregoing, in the parish of Newbold on Avon, containing 65 houses and 318 inhabitants.

LAWHITTON, a parish in the hundred of East, Cornwall, 2 miles from Launceston, and 212 from London, near the river Tamer; containing 52 houses and 289 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 19*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Exeter.

LAWKLAND, a township in the parish of Clapham, wapentake of Staincliffe, west riding of York, 3¼ miles from Settie, and 235 from London; containing 80 houses and 368 inhabitants.

LAWRENCE WALTHAM, a parish in the hundred of Wargrave, Berks, 7 miles from Reading, and 31 from London; containing 111 houses and 572 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

LAWRENCE ST. a parish in the hundred of Dengey, Essex, near Ramsey and Osey Isle, on the shore of the river Blackwater, 8 miles from Maldon, and 45 from London; containing 16 houses and 140 inhabitants.

LAWRENCE WESTON, a tything in the parish and hundred of Henbury, Gloucester, 5 miles from Bristol, and 118 from London; containing 54 houses and 247 inhabitants.

LAWRENCE ST. a hamlet in the parish of Abbey Holme, or Holm Cultram, Cumberland.

LAWRENCE ST. a parish in East Medina liberty, in the Isle of Wight, near New Church; containing 13 houses and 76 inhabitants. The church here is a diminutive building, measuring only 20 feet by 12; whence the view of the scattered village mingled with rocks and trees, is highly picturesque.

LAWSHALL, a parish in the hundred of Baberg, Suffolk, 10 miles from Sudbury, and 64 from London; containing 97 houses and 554 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 20*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.*

LAWTON CHURCH. See CHURCH LAWTON, Chester.

LANEY, a small neat town on the east side of the Isle of Man, lying to the south of Ramsey. It has a good stone bridge over the river of the same name, near which it falls into the sea. In the neighbourhood are the remains of a convent for friars, founded by the lords of the island in 1373; and there are also many druidical remains in the neighbourhood: a few miles to the north is the lofty mountain of Snafield, being 1740 feet above the level of the sea.

LAXFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Hoxne, Suffolk, 6 miles from Framlingham, and 94 from London; containing 128 houses and 1008 inhabitants, of whom 95 were returned as employed in various trades. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 13*l.* 4*d.* united with Cratfield.

Laxton, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Blatherwick, hundred of Corby, Northampton, 6 miles from Oundle, and 88 from London; containing 37 houses and 204 inhabitants.

Laxton, a parish in the hundred of Bassetlaw, Notts, 2 miles from Tuxford, and 136 from London; containing 108 houses and 513 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 11*l.* united with Moorhouse.

Laxton, a township and chapelry in the parish of Howden, in Howdenshire, east riding of York, 4 miles distant from Howden, and 180 from London; containing 37 houses and 219 inhabitants. Before the conquest, this village was the lordship of Algar, earl of Mercia, and in the 13th century gave name to a prebend in Howden church. The chapel here was erected in the reign of Charles I., by three maiden sisters; and, in 1738, a decree was obtained by which it was the privilege of burying. In 1776 this chapel, having gone much to decay, was rebuilt.

Laxford, a river in Sutherlandshire, Scotland, which falls into an arm of the sea called the Bay of Laxford, in which is excellent anchorage.

Layer, De la Haye, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Winstree, Essex, 4 miles from Colchester, and 49 from London; containing 81 houses and 477 inhabitants.

Layer Marney, another parish in the same hundred, Essex, 6 miles from Colchester, and 47 from London; containing 26 houses and 188 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* Layer Marney house, of which a part only remains, was one of the earliest and finest brick mansions in the kingdom.

Layer Breton a third parish near the foregoing, 5 miles from Colchester, and 48 from London; of which the population was omitted to be returned. It is a rectory, value 7*l.*

Laycock. See Lacock, Wilts.

Layham, a parish in the hundred of Cosford, Suffolk, 1 mile from Hadleigh, and 63 from London; containing 50 houses and 471 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* 7*d.*

Laysdown, a parish in the Isle of Shepey, lathe of Scray, Kent, 16 miles from Chatham, and 46 from London; containing 13 houses and 88 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 10*s.*

Laysters, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Wolphy, Hereford, 5 miles from Leominster, and 137 from London; containing 30 houses and 184 inhabitants.

Layton, a parish in the hundred of Edwinstree, Herts, 5 miles from Standon, and 31 from London; containing 162 houses and 719 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.* united with Buntingford.

Layton, commonly called Low Layton, in the hundred of Becontree, Essex, 4 miles from Hackney, and 5½ from London, on the borders of Epping forest. Including Laytonstone hamlet, it contains 444 houses and 2519 inhabitants, viz. 1200 males and 1319 females, of whom 183 were returned as being employed in various trades. This place is supposed by some writers to have been the Roman station Durolitum; several foundations containing Roman bricks and coins having been discovered here, and some urns with ashes in them, dug up in the church-yard. In the neighbourhood are many handsome villas The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 12*s.*

Layton, a township in the parish of Bispham, hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, 2 miles from Poulton, and 234 from London; containing 105 houses and 473 inhabitants.

Layton East, a hamlet in the parish of St. John's Stanwix, Gilling West wapentake, north riding of York, 9 miles from Richmond, and 240 from London; containing 21 houses and 95 inhabitants.

Layton West, a hamlet in the parish of Hutton, in the same wapentake, 1 mile distant from the foregoing, containing 10 houses and 56 inhabitants.

Lazenby, a parish in Leath ward, Cumberland, 1 mile from Kirk Oswald, and 292 from London; containing 70 houses and 320 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Carlisle.

Lazenby, a hamlet in the parish of Kirk-Leatham, in Langborough wapentake, north riding of York, 4 miles from Gisborough, and 255 from London.

Lea, a hamlet in the parish of Wybunbury, hundred of Nantwich, Chester, 4 miles from Nantwich, and 160 from London; containing 10 houses and 73 inhabitants.

Lea, a hamlet in the parish of Euckford, hundred of Wirrall, Chester, 1½ mile from Chester, and 183 from London; containing 11 houses and 70 inhabitants.

Lea, a hamlet in the parish of Middlewich, hundred of Broxton, Chester, 1½ mile from Middlewich, and 165½ from London; containing 5 houses and 42 inhabitants.

Lea, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Linton in Herefordshire, although situate in the hundred of St. Briavells, Gloucester, 2 miles from Mitchel Dean, and 118 from London; containing 29 houses and 175 inhabitants.

Lea, a township in the parish of Preston, hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, near Preston, and 217 miles from London; containing 101 houses and 594 inhabitants.

Lea, a small village in the hundred of Corringham, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 2 miles from Gainsborough, and 150 from London; containing 37 houses and 180 inhabitants.

Lea, a parish and curacy united with Marston, hundred of Hemlingford, Warwick, on the banks of the Tame, 2 miles from Coleshill, and 105½ from London.

Lea, a hamlet in the parish of Glossop, hundred of High Peak, Derby.

LEA, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Malmsbury, Wilts, 1 mile from Malmsbury, and 95 from London; containing 45 houses and 252 inhabitants.

LEA, a river that rises near Luton in Bedfordshire, whence it runs by Hertford, Ware, &c. and then divides Essex from Herts and Middlesex. It falls into the Thames a little below Blackwall.

LEA, a small river in the county of Kerry, province of Munster, Ireland, which falls into Tralee bay.

LEACH, a river in Gloucestershire and Oxford, which runs into the Thames at Lechlade.

LEACROFT, a hamlet in the parish of Cannock, in Staffordshire.

LEACHLADE. See LETCHLADE, Gloucester.

LEADENHAM, a parish in the hundred of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 9½ miles from Sleaford, and 125 from London; containing 107 houses and 517 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

LEAD-HILLS, a village in the parish of Crawford, shire of Lanark, Scotland; containing 970 inhabitants, mostly miners, and probably the highest inhabited place in Britain; being about 2000 feet above the level of the sea. Gold has been found in the sand of these mountains, and veins of lead are now wrought among them, producing a liberal proportion of silver; the Lead-hills containing the oldest and most celebrated lead mines in Scotland. The Scots Mining Company was formed by the earl of Hopetoun, who receives every 6th bar of lead as rent: the number of bars cast annually are about 18,000. The miners working only 8 hours out of the 24, have a considerable portion of spare time, which they mostly occupy in reading. A public library has been fitted up at Lead-hills by subscription.

LEADEN, a river, which rising some miles above Ledbury in Herefordshire, enters Gloucestershire at Preston, and runs into the Severn opposite Gloucester.

LEADERWATER, a river of Scotland, which rises in the north-west part of Berwickshire, and runs into the Tweed, 3 miles east of Melross.

LEAD-STER BAY, a bay on the south coast of Wales, on the coast of Pembrokeshire.

LEAFOLD or LEFIELD, a township in the parish of Shipton, hundred of Chadlington, Oxford, 4½ miles from Burford, and 73 from London; containing 94 houses and 487 inhabitants.

LEAKE, a parish in the hundred of Skirbeck, parts of Holland, Lincoln, 6 miles from Boston, and 123 from London; containing 186 houses and 911 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

LEAKE EAST, a parish in the hundred of Rushcliff, Notts, 9 miles from Nottingham, and 115 from London; containing 118 houses and 608 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 25*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.* and is united with LEAKE WEST, a parish in the same hundred, and near the foregoing, containing 24 houses and 171 inhabitants.

LEAM, a river in Northamptonshire, which rising at Helliden, passes Catesby and Staverton into Warwickshire, and falls into the Ouse.

LEAM NEW, a river in Cambridgeshire, which runs north-east from Peterborough to Watersey, between Whittlesey Dyke and Wisbeach.

LEAM, a mountain of Ireland, in the county of Galway, situated at the south side of Lough Corib, 16 miles from Galway.

LEAMINGTON PRIORS, a parish in the hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Leam, 2 miles from Warwick, and 90 from London; containing 67 houses and 315 inhabitants. The saline springs here have of late attracted much notice; one of them rises near the churchyard, and a second in the bed of the river near the bridge. Two other springs have been recently discovered, of which a chemical analysis has been published by Dr. Lambe. They contain a small proportion of sea salt, a little calcareous earth, and also some Epsom salt. In 1791, warm and cold baths were erected here, and the earl of Aylesford, who is lord of the manor, has built an elegant pump-room. At the bowling-green is a handsome assembly room. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 10*s.*—Guide to the Watering Places, 1806.

LEAMINGTON HASTINGS, a parish in the same county, also on the banks of the Leam, but much nearer its source, 3 miles from Southam, and 85 from London; containing 89 houses and 503 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 20*l.*

LEAN CAPE or LOOP-HEAD, a cape of Ireland, on the south-west extremity of the county of Clare, and to the north of the mouth of the Shannon.

LEASEY POINT, a cape on the west coast of the county of Lancaster, in the Irish sea, north of the island of Walney.

LEASINGHAM NORTH and SOUTH, an united parish in the hundred of Flexwell, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 2 miles from Sleaford, and 118 from London; containing 47 houses and 215 inhabitants. Both the parishes are rectories, the first valued at 10*l.* 15*s.* 3*d.* the second at 13*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.*

LEATH, the name of a ward in Cumberland, forming the eastern angle of the county bordering on Durham.

LEATHERHEAD, a parish, and formerly a market-town, in the hundred of Copthorne, Surry, 13½ miles from London, on the right bank of the river Mole, which having sunk into the earth at Mickleham, at the foot of Boxhill, makes its appearance again near this place. Standing on a rising bank, it is very dry and pleasant, and contains 187 houses and 1078 inhabitants, of whom 153 were returned as being employed in various trades. Over the river is a new brick bridge of 14 arches. The church is built in the form of a cross. In the neighbourhood are many elegant seats. The fair is on the 10th of October, and is very considerable for horses, pigs, and pedlary. The living is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 6*s.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Rochester.—Manning's Surry.

Leatley, a parish in Claro wapentake, west riding of York, 3 miles from Otley, and 204 from London; containing 55 houses and 284 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 2*s.* 8 in the patronage of the king.

Leaton, a hamlet to Wolverhampton, hundred of Seisdon, Stafford, 1¼ mile from Wolverhampton, and 130 from London: lead ore is found here which is used by the potters of Burslem, &c. in glazing earthenware.

Leath-water or Withburn, a fine lake in Cumberland, lying south-east of Keswick. It commences at the foot of mount Kellwellyn, which it skirts for 4 miles, and in that distance receives numerous torrents which descend from the mountains. It is almost intersected in the middle by 2 peninsulas which are joined by a neat bridge of timber. The outlet of this lake unites with the rapid river Greeta at New-bridge. It has a communication with Derwent water.—Tour to the Lakes.

Leaveland, a small village in the hundred of Feversham, lathe of Scray, Kent, 2 miles from Feversham, and 48 from London; containing 8 houses and 57 inhabitants.

Leaven, a village in Holderness, east riding of York, near Beverley, 186 miles from London; containing 41 houses and 176 inhabitants.

Lebberston, a hamlet in the parish of Filey, in Pickering lythe, north riding of York, near Filey bay, on the small river Hartford, 2¼ miles from Hunmanby, and 213 from London; containing 20 houses and 120 inhabitants.

Lechlade. See Letchlade, Gloucester.

Leck, a township and chapelry in the parish of Tunstall, hundred of Lonsdale, Lancaster, 2 miles from Kirby Lonsdale, and 248 from London; containing 38 houses and 219 inhabitants.

Leckford, a parish in the hundred of Kings Omborne, division of Andover, Hants, 2 miles from Stockbridge, and 64½ from London; containing 41 houses and 199 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 9*l.* in the patronage of St John's college, Oxford.

Leckhampstead, a hamlet in the parish of Boxford, hundred of Faircross, Berks, 5 miles from Newbury, and 60 from London; containing 43 houses and 330 inhabitants.

Leckhampstead, a parish in the hundred of Buckingham, Bucks, 3 miles from Buckingham, and 59 from London; containing 60 houses and 346 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 18*l.*

Leckhampton, a parish in the hundred of Cheltenham, Gloucester, 3 miles from Cheltenham, and 96 from London; containing 29 houses and 225 inhabitants. Much of this parish lies in the vale of Gloucester, in which are many excellent dairy farms; the other part stretches over a stupendous ridge of hills. The living is a rectory, value 18*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Leckenfield, a parish in the division of Hunsley Beacon, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 218 miles from London; containing 59 houses and 316 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* The earls of Northumberland had formerly a strong castle at this village.

Lecropt, a parish lying partly in the shire of Perth, and partly in that of Stirling, Scotland, at the junction of the rivers Teith and Allan with the Forth, 4 miles from Stirling; containing 77 houses and 508 inhabitants. Here is the elegant residence of Mr. Stirling, of Kier.

Ledbury, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Radlow, Hereford, near the extremity of the Malvern hills, by the river Leden, and the side of the navigable canal from Gloucester to Hereford. It is 15 miles from Hereford, and 121 from London; and contains 577 houses and 3058 inhabitants, viz. 1513 males and 1545 females, of whom 484 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture, and 455 in agriculture. The town is well built, and is inhabited by a great number of clothiers, who carry on a good trade here. It has a charity-school, and a well endowed hospital, which was refounded by queen Elizabeth, for a master (to be nominated by the dean and chapter of Hereford), for 7 poor men and 5 poor women. The market is on Tuesdays, and the fairs are Monday before Easter, 22d June, 2d October, and 21st December. The living is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*

Ledder, a river of Wales, in the county of Caernarvon, which runs into the Conway, 12 miles south of Aberconway.

Ledington, a small hamlet in the parish of Dymmock, in Gloucestershire.

Ledsham, a hamlet in the parish of Shotwick, hundred of Wirrall, Chester, 6 miles from Chester, and 186 from London; containing 12 houses and 56 inhabitants.

Ledsham, a parish in Barkston Ash wapentake, west riding of York, 6 miles from Pontefract, and 182 from London; containing 42 houses and 230 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*

Ledston, a hamlet in the parish of Ledsham, Barkston Ash wapentake, west riding of York, ½ mile from the foregoing; containing 40 houses and 238 inhabitants.

Ledwell, a small hamlet near Deddington, in Oxfordshire, noted for a fine sand used in the manufacture of glass.

Ledwick, a river in Shropshire, which, with three contributory streams, joins the Teme, 5 miles south-east of Ludlow.

Lee, a chapelry in the parish of Weston Turville, hundred of Aylesbury, Bucks, 2½ miles from Wendover, and 37½ from London; containing 30 houses and 150 inhabitants.

LEE, a parish in the hundred of Blackheath, lathe of Scray, Kent, on the edge of Blackheath, 6½ miles from London; containing 68 houses and 376 inhabitants. On the summit of the hill, in a situation particularly rural, stands its ancient church; and in the church-yard, under a plain tomb, on which is an inscription in Latin, lies Dr. Edmund Halley, the celebrated astronomer. The living is a rectory, value 3*l*. 11*s*. 8*d*. in the patronage of the king.

LEE, a river in Ireland, which rises on the confines of Kerry, passes by Cork, and empties itself into Cork harbour.

LEE, a river of Ireland, which rises about 6 miles east from Tralee, in the county of Kerry, and runs into Tralee bay.

LEE, a river in Cheshire, which runs into the Wever, 2 miles north of Nantwich.

LEE BOTWOOD, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Condover, Salop, 9¼ miles from Shrewsbury, and 162 from London; containing 29 houses and 181 inhabitants.

LEEDS, a market-town in the wapentake of Skyrack, west riding of York, 192½ miles from London, by Doncaster and Ferry-bridge, and 191 by Wakefield. It stands on the north side of the river Aire, over which it has a stately stone bridge, which joins it to an extensive and populous vicinity; it contains 11,258 houses inhabited by 53,162 inhabitants, viz. 25,504 males and 27,658 females, of whom 20,367 were returned as being employed in various trades, but principally in the woollen manufacture. It is the largest and most flourishing town in the county; yet it had but one church till the reign of Charles I. though at present there are three. St. Peter's church is built in the form of a cross, with a tower in the middle; and the ceiling has a beautiful painting in fresco, of the ascension, by Parmentier, who voluntarily presented this specimen of his genius, as a grateful acknowledgment of the kindnesses he received in the town. St. John's was erected in 1634, at the sole expence of Mr. Harrison, who likewise built the house adjoining, a free-school, a market-cross, and the street called New-street, appropriating the rents thereof to pious uses. The Holy Trinity church is an elegant structure, with a spire steeple, built in the 18th century. Here are 8 other places of worship, amongst which is a handsome Presbyterian meeting-house, erected in 1691, which is said to be the oldest of that denomination in the north of England. There are 3 almshouses, a free-school, charity-school, hospital, and an extensive workhouse, in which children are taught the easy branches of the woollen manufacture. An infirmary was built by subscription in 1786, which is a large building. The trade in woollen-cloth here, is perhaps the greatest in the world; and, for the accommodation of the clothiers, there are 2 spacious halls, as well as a third for worsted goods. At six o'clock in the summer, and about 7 in the winter, the market bell rings; upon which, in a few minutes, without noise, hurry, or the least disorder, the whole market is filled, all the benches covered with cloth, as close to one another as the pieces can lie lengthways, each proprietor standing behind his own goods. As soon as the bell has ceased ringing, the factors and buyers of all sorts enter the hall, and walk up and down between the rows, as their occasions direct; when they have pitched upon their cloth, they lean over to the clothier, and by a whisper, the price is stated; one asks, the other bids, and they agree, or disagree, in a moment. In little more than half an hour all the business is done; 10 or 20,000*l*. worth of cloth, and sometimes much more, are bought and sold with a whisper only: the laws of the market being more strictly observed here than at any other place in England. That called the mixt cloth hall was erected in 1758, by the voluntary subscription of the clothiers; it is a large building with two wings standing near the general infirmary, at the top of Park-row, and contains seven divisions, called streets, each having four rows of benches, marked with their owners names; over the hall is an elegant assembly room. The white cloth hall is appropriated for the sale of white cloth only. The streets in the upper part of the town, towards the Kirkgate, are narrow, but in other parts are broad and spacious; and many of the houses are not only uniform, but elegant. It has several large open squares, the areas of which are in some cases planted, and in others used as tenter grounds. The buildings are chiefly built of brick, and covered with white slate, and every street has a flagged walk on each side. Almost every operation in the manufacture of broad cloths, in and near this town, is now performed by machinery, by which the manufacturers are enabled to sell their cloth considerably cheaper than formerly. This occasions very few hands to be wanted in the first stages of the manufacture, particularly in carding or scribling the wool, and in spinning it. There are some medicinal springs at Leeds, one of which, called St. Peter's, is extremely cold, and has been very beneficial in rheumatisms, the rickets, &c. This town was incorporated in the reign of Charles I., and is governed by a mayor, 12 aldermen, and 24 common-council-men. At the west end of the town formerly stood a castle, where Richard II. was imprisoned before he was carried to Pontefract. At a place called Tower-hill stood a tower, as well as a house called the Red-hall, from its being the first brick building in the town. By means of the rivers Aire and Calder, and the canal navigation, Leeds has communication with Wakefield, York, and Hull; from which latter place the woollen goods are usually shipped to foreign parts. The carriage of coals from the interior of Yorkshire is also a great source of traffic; these are carried in vessels from 45 to 60 tons burthen, by means of the rivers Aire and Calder, and the Selby canal, to Selby, York, Howden, Hull, Beverley, and all the intermediate towns lying on the rivers Ouse and Humber. There is a pottery at Leeds, which furnishes large quantities of earthenware both for home consumption and exportation. The markets are on Tuesday and Saturday, and are well supplied with all kinds of provisions. The fairs are, 10th July, and 8th November. The living of St. Peter's is a vicarage, value 38*l.* The new church of St. John's is a vicarage, the patronage of which is in the vicar and corporation of Leeds; and the Holy Trinity is a rectory, in the patronage of the recorder, and vicar, and curate of St. John's. Lat. 53. 47. 33. Long. 1. 38. 30. west.—Houseman's Tour.

Leeds, a parish in the hundred of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 5 miles from Maidstone, and 40 from London; containing 70 houses and 422 inhabitants It is a curacy united with Bromfield, and is in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury. Leeds had formerly a castle and a priory; the present ruins of the latter being the remains of a building erected by sir Hugh de Creveceur in 1071.

Leek, a market town and parish in the hundred of Totmonslow, Stafford, 13 miles from Macclesfield, and 154 from London, by Litchfield, standing on the river Churnet, and containing 867 houses and 4186 inhabitants, viz. 1912 males and 2274 females, of whom 2611 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures, principally in those of ribbons, silk, twist, and buttons. The church has a square tower with six bells, and at the south-east corner of the chancel stand the remains of an ancient cross, about 10 feet high. In the neighbourhood, at Blue hills, are coal mines, and a salt stream issues from them, which gives the earth a rusty colour, and mixed with an infusion of galls, produces a mixture as black as ink. Near the town formerly stood a Cistertian abbey. The market is on Wednesday. The fairs 10th February, 30th March, 18th May, 4th July, 12th October, and 14th November. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 9*s.* 1*d.* in the patronage of the earl of Macclesfield — Shaw's Staffordshire.

Leeke Wootton, a parish in the hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, 3 miles from Warwick, and 79 from London; containing 83 houses and 406 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.*

Lee Maling, a township in the parish of Simonbourn, in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 7 miles from Hexham, and 289 from London; containing 46 houses and 226 inhabitants.

Lee-n, a hamlet in the parish of Allostock, hundred of Northwich, Chester, 2½ miles from Middlewich, and 169 from London; containing 15 houses and 86 inhabitants.

Leet, a small river in Berwickshire, Scotland, which falls into the Tweed at Coldstream.

Leftwich, a township in the parish and hundred of Northwich, Chester, 1 mile from Northwich, and 173 from London; containing 139 houses and 899 inhabitants.

Legborn, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Calceworth, Lindsay division, Lincoln, near Alford, 140 miles from London; containing 53 houses and 280 inhabitants.

Legerwood, a parish in the shire of Berwick, Scotland, between Lauderdale and Lammermuir, 30 miles from Edinburgh; containing 101 houses and 495 inhabitants. The land in this parish is chiefly in extensive sheep walks. In the neighbourhood are the ruins of three ancient towers.

Legram, a small village in the parish of Whitewell, Lancaster. The population is included with Bolland.

Legsby, a parish in the hundred of Wraggoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 4 miles from Wragby, and 148 from London; containing 34 houses and 184 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*

Leicester, the county-town of Leicestershire, 14½ miles from Market Harborough, and 97½ from London, standing on the river Soar, and containing 3205 houses and 16,953 inhabitants, viz. 7921 males, and 9032 females, 11,330 of whom were employed in various trades and manufactures, and 499 in agriculture. This town is fabulously said to have been built by king Lear; it is however of great antiquity, and at the time of the Roman invasion was a place of strength belonging to the Britons. In Doomsday-book this town is styled a city, and was very populous; according to that record, 12 of the burgesses were bound by old custom, to send out men with the king whenever he went to war. If he went by sea against his enemies, they were to send four horses to carry arms or other baggage to London. Before the castle was dismantled, it was a prodigious building, it being the court of the great duke of Lancaster, who added 26 acres of ground to it, which he inclosed with a high wall, and called it his Novum Opus, now the Newark, which is still covered with the best houses in Leicester; they are extra parochial, as being under castle guard, by an old grant from the crown. Its hall and kitchen are still entire, the former of which is lofty and spacious, and the courts of justice, which are held here at the assizes, are at such a distance as not to disturb each other. A parliament was held here in the reign of Henry V., in which a law was enacted for the burning of heretics. Leicester contains six parishes, but only five churches; the parish of St. Leonard not having a church. St. Mary's adjoins the castle, and was rebuilt, after having been destroyed in the time of the conqueror, by Robert, earl of Meilent. From this church there used to be a solemn procession every Whit Monday, to St. Margaret's church, in which the image of the Virgin Mary was carried under a canopy, with 12 figures representing the 12 apostles. The spire of this church was partly demolished by a storm in 1763, and again in 1783. St. Martin's is esteemed the principal church in the county. The bishop of the diocese and the judges occasionally attend divine service at this church. St. Nicholas's church is supposed to be the oldest in Leicester; it formerly consisted of three ailes, but in 1697 the north aile was taken down on account of its ruinous condition. All Saints is a good structure, having three ailes, and a chancel, and is well pewed. St. Margaret's is a neat building, in the tower of which is a peal of 10 bells. St. Leonard's church was taken down when Leicester had a garrison placed in it, in 1642, because its situation commanded the north bridge. In this parish formerly stood the mint, in which, during the early periods of the history of Leicester, money was coined. There were three monasteries in this town; the Franciscans, the Augustines, and the White Friars. The Franciscan monastery stood on the south side of St. Martin's church-yard, and the Augustines were seated without the west gate, between the two channels of the river. The White Friars had their house near the north gate, but there are now no remains of it. Leland writes that king Richard III. was buried in the Franciscan monastery, and tradition says, that a stone coffin which was formerly used as a watering-trough for horses, was his, and a piece of it is mentioned as being preserved at the White Horse Inn. In Leland's time the whole town was built of timber. The abbey stood about a mile from the town, in which cardinal Wolsey died November 29th, 1530, on his journey to London. In the reign of James I. it was sold to the earl of Devonshire, in whose family it still continues; and during the civil wars in the reign of Charles I. was burned by a party from Ashby de-la-Zouch, under Henry Hastings, afterwards created lord Loughborough. It has continued ever since in ruins. Several stone coffins have been found on the site of the abbey church, the cavities of which did not lie uppermost, but were inverted over the bodies. These coffins had a round hole about the middle of them, nearly five inches in diameter; among them is said to have been discovered that of cardinal Wolsey. The corporation of Leicester consists of a mayor, recorder, steward, bailiffs, 24 aldermen, 49 common-councilmen, a town-clerk, &c. and its freemen are toll-free in all the markets and fairs in England. It sends two members to parliament, which privilege commenced in the 23d year of Edward I. The right of election is in the freemen and inhabitants paying scot and lot, amounting to about 1650; but the manufacturing interest has of late excluded every other influence whatever in this borough. The town hall stands nearly adjoining to St. Martin's church, and was before the reformation the Corpus Christi guild; this hall in point of magnitude is considerable, but it is not elegant; in it are held the assizes and sessions for the town, assemblies of the corporation, &c. and the election of members of parliament. There are several hospitals in this town: that called the Holy Trinity was founded in 1332 by Henry, earl of Lancaster; St. John's hospital was given by queen Elizabeth to the corporation, and was afterwards used as a wool-hall, but at the latter end of the reign of James I. six poor widows were placed in it; Bent's hospital supports four widows; Wigston's hospital is a regular building, founded in the reign of Henry VI., and consists of a master, confrater, 12 men, and 12 women, by the rules of the house all single. A building was erected in 1792, by John Johnson, esq. a native of Leicester, which he called the Consanguinitarium, the rooms of which are neat and convenient, and the windows glazed with stained glass;—beside these there are Simond's and Countess's hospitals, and Spital house, but they are places of no note. The free-school was founded in the reign of queen Elizabeth; the green-coat-school educates 55 boys; St. Mary's 45 boys and 35 girls; St. Martin's 35 boys and 30 girls. The prisons are, the county gaol, the town gaol, lately rebuilt, and the county and town bridewells. The places for religious worship, besides the churches of the established religion, are those for the Presbyterians, Quakers, and Baptists. In 1737 a mineral spring was discovered near this town, the beneficial effects of which have been repeatedly proved in diseases of the skin, in glandular obstructions, and in several complaints of the stomach and bowels. A few years ago a remarkably pleasant walk, of nearly a mile in length, was made by a spirited subscription. The principal trade of the town is in the manufacture of stockings, of which several years ago the value amounted to 60,000*l.* annually, and of late has much increased. Most of the streets of this town are narrow and dirty, but the market-place is remarkably large and well supplied with butchers' meat and vegetables of all sorts; the former being amongst the fattest of any in the kingdom. Leicester is supplied by canal navigation with coals, deals, and groceries; and communicates with all the principal towns in England. The market is on Saturday, and the fairs on the 2d March, Palm Saturday, Saturday in Easter week, May 12, July 5, Oct. 10, and Dec. 8; all upon a very large scale. The living of All Saints is a vicarage, and is united with St. Leonard's, value 10*l.* 8*s.* 5*d.* St. Margaret's is a vicarage, value 17*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* belonging to the prebend thereof in Lincoln cathedral. St. Mary's is a vicarage, value 8*l.*; St. Martin's, a vicarage, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; and St. Nicholas's, a vicarage, value 3*l.* 11*s.* 5*d.*; the three last being in the patronage of the king. Lat. 52. 38. Long. 1. 8. 30. west.—Nichols's Leicestershire.

DERBYSHIRE
NOTTINGHAMSHIRE
LINCOLNSHIRE
RUTLANDSHIRE
NORTHAMPTONSHIRE
WARWICKSHIRE
STAFFORDSHIRE
Leicester
Oakham
Hundreds.
1 West Goscote.
2 East Goscote.
3 Framland.
4 Sparkenhoe.
5 Gartree.
6 Guthlaxton.
Borough..... 1
Market Towns..... 11
Parishes..... 200
Inhabited Houses..... 25,993
Inhabitants..... 130,083
Acres of Land..... 580,000
Arable..... 65,000
Pasturage..... 450,000
Members of Parliament 4.
LEICESTERSHIRE
in which every Parish and Place is laid down containing upwards of 40 Houses.
British Miles.

Leicestershire, an inland county of England, bounded on the north by Derbyshire and Nottinghamshire; on the east by Lincolnshire and Rutlandshire; on the south by Northamptonshire; and on the west by Warwickshire and Staffordshire. Among the Britons this county was inhabited by the Coritani; and on the conquest of the island by the Romans, formed part of the province of Flavia Cæsariensis. During the Saxon heptarchy it belonged to the kingdom of Mercia. It is in length, from north to south, about 40 miles, and in breadth about 30. It is divided into six hundreds, in which are 196 parishes and 12 market towns, viz. Leicester, Ashby de la Zouch, Bosworth, Hallaton, Harborough, Lutterworth, Melton Mowbray, Mount Sorrel, Billesdon, Hinckley, Loughborough, and Waltham on the Wold. It returns 4 members to parliament, two for the county, and two for the borough of Leicester. By the population-returns to parliament in 1801, this county contained 25,992 inhabited houses, 27,967 families, 130,081 inhabitants, of whom 63,943 were males, and 66,138 females; the number of persons employed in trade and manufactures amounted to 42,036, and those employed in agriculture to 23,823. In a return made to the house of lords, which was printed in 1805, Leicestershire is stated to contain 816 square statute miles, equal to 522,240 statute acres; 159 persons in each square mile of 640 acres, and 129,744 inhabitants. The climate is generally temperate, and the county well watered. Leicestershire has in general a strong soil, the surface uneven, and in some parts rather hilly; the best soil being upon the hills, and the worst, which nearly approaches to clay, in the valleys. It may be considered more as an agricultural than a manufacturing county, though in the article of stockings the manufacture is considerable. It is famous for its breed of large black cart horses, and for its fine cattle and sheep; the latter have been brought to an astonishing degree of excellence, which seems to have been first owing to the great judgment and care of Mr. Bakewell, of Dishley, whose plan has since been pursued by others. There are three breeds of sheep in the county; the new Leicester, the old Leicester, and the forest sheep: the new Leicester, or Dishley, bred by Mr. Bakewell, has borne down every other, and is already dispersed over many parts of England. This fine county was, not many years ago, mostly in common, or open fields, and produced a great deal of corn; since its inclosure it has been found chiefly profitable in grass, and in consequence of the present farming system, the population appears to be in a declining state. The principal rivers are the Anker, the Avon, Soar, Swift, Welland, and Wreke: there are also three distinct lines of canal navigation; the Leicester navigation, the direction of which is southerly, following nearly the course of the river Soar; the Leicester and Melton Mowbray canal, whose direction is nearly east, following the courses of the rivers Wreke and Eye; the Leicestershire and Northamptonshire Union canal, the direction of which is nearly south-east by a crooked course of about 44 miles in both those counties. This county raised by the poor's-rate in 1803, 107,568l. at the rate of 5s. 2¼d. in the pound.

Leigh, a township and chapelry in the parish of Rosthern, hundred of Bucklow, Chester, 5 miles from Knutsford, and 177 from London; containing 128 houses, and 787 inhabitants.

Leigh Little, a township and chapelry in the parish of Budworth, hundred of Bucklow, Chester, 4 miles from Northwich, and 177 from London; containing 70 houses and 380 inhabitants.

Leigh West, a parish in the hundred of Fremington, Devon, 1¼ mile from Bideford, and 200 from London; containing 83 houses and 408 inhabitants.

Leigh North, a parish in the hundred of Colyton, Devon, 3 miles from Colyton, and 155 from London; containing 36 houses and 180 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10l. 9s. 7d.

Leigh South, a parish in the hundred of Colyton, Devon, 2 miles from the foregoing; containing 41 houses and 237 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11l. 8s. 9d.

Leigh, a tything in the parish and hundred of Yetminster, division of Sherborn, Dorset, 6 miles from Sherborn, and 122 from London; containing 62 houses and 300 inhabitants. It has a small chapel.

Leigh, a parish and small seaport in the hundred of Rochford, Essex, 2½ miles from Rochford, and 39 from London; containing 110 houses and 570 inhabitants. There is a custom-house at this village. It is a rectory, value 15l. in the patronage of the bishop of London.

Leigh Great, a parish in the hundred of Chelmsford, Essex, 5 miles from Braintree, and 35 from London; containing 27 houses and 150 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 25l. 7s. 1d. in the patronage of Lincoln college, Oxford.

Leigh Little, a parish in the same hundred, about ¾ mile distant from the foregoing, and the same distance from Braintree; containing 21 houses and 125 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9l.

Leigh, a parish in the hundred of Deerhurst, Gloucester, 5½ miles from Cheltenham, and 106 from London; containing 54 houses and 303 inhabitants.

Leigh, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Coxheath, lathe of Sutton, Kent, 2 miles from Tunbridge, and 29 from London; containing 97 houses and 739 inhabitants.

Leigh, a parish in the hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 6½ miles from Newton, and 198 from London; containing 271 houses and 1429 inhabitants, of whom 840 were returned as employed in various trades. This parish contains the township of Bedford, Astley, Tidsley, Shackesley, Pennington and Chowbent, inhabited altogether by near 15,000 persons. The church is a handsome structure, and has a square tower, in which hang 8 bells; the body being supported by 2 rows of pillars. Leigh has a considerable manufacture of fustian and other cotton stuffs, and by its canal navigation, which communicates with the rivers Mersey, Dee, Ribble, Ouse, Severn, Humber, Thames, Avon, &c. it carries on an extensive traffic. On the top of the market-cross is the figure of the sun. The market was on Saturday, but is now disused. Fair 25th of April. The living is a vicarage, value 9*l.*

Leigh North, a parish in the hundred of Wootton, Oxford, 3 miles from Witney, and 68 from London; containing 72 houses and 517 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 2*s.*

Leigh South, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Wootton, Oxford, 3 miles from Witney, and 62 from London; containing 41 houses and 240 inhabitants.

Leigh on Mendip, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Kilmersdon, Somerset, 6 miles from Frome, and 111 from London; containing 122 houses and 534 inhabitants.

Leigh, a parish in the hundred of Totmonslow, Stafford, 4½ miles from Uttoxeter, and 140 from London; containing 165 houses and 842 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 5*d.*

Leigh a parish and curacy in the hundred of Reigate, Surry, 2½ miles from Reigate, and 23½ from London; containing 63 houses and 390 inhabitants.

Leigh, a hamlet in the parish of Ashton Keynes, hundred of Highworth, Wilts, 2 miles from Cricklade, and 85 from London; containing 35 houses and 174 inhabitants.

Leigh de la Mere, a parish in the hundred of Chippenham, Wilts, 1½ mile from Malmsbury, and 95 from London; containing 65 houses, and 365 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.*

Leigh, a parish in the hundred of Pershore, Worcester, 6 miles from Worcester, and 120 from London; containing with the hamlets of Leigh Braces and Leigh Sinton, 222 houses and 1255 inhabitants, of whom 79 persons were returned as employed in trade. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.*

Leigh Abbott's. See Abbott's Leigh, Somerset.

Leighfield, a hamlet in the parish of Braunston, in Oakham Soke, Rutland, 4 miles from Oakham, and 92 from London; containing 7 houses and 49 inhabitants.

Leighlin, or Old Leighlin, a decayed town of Ireland, in the county of Carlow, 9 miles from Kilkenny, and 8 from Carlow; the see of a bishop, founded in the 7th century, and united with Ferns, in the year 1600; the cathedral serves for a parish church. It is a borough, and formerly sent two members to the Irish parliament.

Leighlin Bridge, a town of Ireland, in the county of Carlow, situated on the river Barrow, 7 miles from Carlow, and 11 from Kilkenny.

Leighthorn, a parish in the hundred of Kineton, Warwick, 7 miles from Warwick, and 87 from London; containing 65 houses and 323 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 17*s.* 3*d.*

Leighton, a hamlet in the parish of Coppenhall, hundred of Nantwich, Chester, 4 miles from Nantwich, and 168 from London; containing 38 houses and 200 inhabitants.

Leighton, a hamlet in the parish of Neston, hundred of Wirrall, Chester, on the banks of the river Dee, ¼ mile from Parkgate, and 192 from London; containing 53 houses and 266 inhabitants.

Leighton. See Layton Low, Essex.

Leighton, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Leightonstone, Hunts, 5 miles from Kimbolton, and 67 from London; containing 37 houses and 312 inhabitants. Fairs 12th May, and 5th October.

Leighton, a parish in the hundred of South Bradford, Salop, at the foot of the Wrekin, 4 miles from Wenlock, and 159 from London; containing 69 houses and 358 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*

Leightorton, or Leighterton, a hamlet in the parish of Boxwell, hundred of Grumbalds Ash, Gloucester, 5 miles from Tetbury, and 105 from London. It has a small chapel, with an embattled tower. Population included with Boxwell.

Leighton Buzzard, or Leighton Beardesert, a market town and parish in the hundred of Manshead, Bedford, standing on the river Ouse, on the borders of Bucks, 6 miles from Dunstable, and 41 from London; and containing 370 houses and 1963 inhabitants, of whom 1014 were returned as being employed in various trades, &c. There is a handsome cross at this town, consisting of 2 stories, ornamented with the figures of saints. There was a house of Cistercians here, which was a cell to Woburn Abbey; and in the neighbourhood was Grovebury Priory, under the abbey of Fontevrault, in Anjou. The market on Tuesday is generally well supplied with cattle. Fairs 25th January, Whit Tuesday for horses, 26th July, and 24th October. The living is a vicarage, value 15*l.* belonging to the prebend thereof in Lincoln cathedral, with the chapels of Hethe, Stanbridge, Eggington, and Bittington chapels annexed.—Maton's Tour.

Leinster, the eastern province of Ireland, which contains the twelve following counties, Louth, Meath, Dublin, Wicklow, Wexford, Kilkenny, Carlow, Kildare, Queen's County, King's County, West Meath, and Longford. Leinster is bounded by Ulster on the north, by Connaught and Munster on the west and south-west, and by the sea on the south and east. Its length is 104 miles, its breadth about 55, and its circumference 360. It includes 992 parishes, one archbishopric, and three bishopries: is in general well cultivated, and enjoys a good air and soil; is the most populous province of Ireland, and contains the seat of government. The principal rivers are the Boyne, Barrow, Liffey, Noir and May.

LEINTHAL EARLS, a chapelry in the parish of Aymestry, hundred of Wigmore, Hereford, 7 miles from Ludlow, and 150 from London. The population was omitted to be returned.

LEINTHAL STARKS, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Wigmore, Hereford, 6 miles from Ludlow, and 149 from London; containing 47 houses and 136 inhabitants.

LEINTWARDINE, a parish in the hundred of Wigmore, Hereford, on the banks of the Teme, 8 miles from Ludlow, and 151 from London; containing 127 houses and 675 inhabitants. The windows of the church have some handsome painted glass, and here is a well endowed free school. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 15*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the earl of Oxford.

LEIR, a hamlet in the parish of Lutterworth, hundred of Guthlaxton, Leicester, near the head of the river Soar, 2 miles from Lutterworth, and 85 from London; containing 76 houses and 347 inhabitants.

LEISTON, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Blything, Suffolk, 3 miles from Saxmundham, and 93 from London; containing 100 houses and 823 inhabitants. An abbey of Premonstratensian canons was founded at this place by Ralph de Glanville, in 1182, and the ruins of a chapel yet remaining, are supposed to have been part of the abbey.

LEITH, a small village in the liberty of Whitby Strand, north riding of York, near Whitby, noted for its alum mines. The aluminous earth is hewn out of a rock which overhangs the sea, then burnt, and afterwards steeped in pits of water, which is boiled, and the alum clarified in the manner it is found in the shops.

LEITH, a town and port of Scotland, lying on the Frith of Forth, two miles from Edinburgh; containing 1510 houses and 15,272 inhabitants, viz. 6634 males, and 8638 females, of which number 3215 were employed in various trades and manufactures, and 129 in agriculture. Leith is the sea-port of Edinburgh, and stands on both sides the harbour, which divides it into North and South Leith. The harbour is formed by a noble stone pier which was built at the beginning of the last century, at the confluence of the little river called "the Water of Leith" with the Frith of Forth. On the north side is a convenient new quay for the landing of goods, and a wet dock has been lately constructed within high water mark, under the auspices of the town council of Edinburgh; but as ships can only enter it at full tide, at other times they lie in Leith roads, about a mile distant, which at all times affords good and safe anchorage for ships of the largest size. In 1781, a fleet of more than 500 sail of merchantmen, under convoy of several ships of the line, remained here several weeks. The commerce of this place is very considerable, and the vessels employed in the London trade are in general of a large size; but those employed in the Greenland whale fishery, are the largest belonging to this port. Leith being conveniently situated for the navigation of the eastern seas, enjoys a share of the Baltic trade, but not so considerable at present as formerly; from Holland flax and linseed are imported; from the Mediterranean fruit; and from Portugal, wine and fruit. Some ships belonging to this port sail to the West Indies, whence they bring back the produce of our colonies, rum, sugar, cotton, &c. Several ships are also here fitted out for the whale fishery in Greenland, and the herring fishery in the British seas has been very productive. Ships of considerable size are built here, and several manufactures have been established, connected with ship-building, such as those of ropes and sail cloth, the fabrics of which are carried on to a great extent. Considerable quantities of coals are also shipped for the north-east coast of Scotland. In 1804, 2653 vessels arrived at Leith. The principal manufactures carried on in the town, beside those already mentioned, are soap, of which, including white, yellow, and brown, there is not less than 20,000*l.*'s worth made annually; glass, in the manufacture of which there are not less than six large houses employed in making bottles, window, and all sorts of drinking and ornamental glasses; leather and shoes, of both which considerable quantities are manufactured here, both for home consumption and exportation. There is likewise a large sugar-house; and the Water of Leith turns several flour mills; a manufactory for carpets, and some large iron founderies. The streets of Leith are narrow and confined, except the new ones, which are built upon an uniform plan, great improvements having taken place within the last 20 years. This town is governed by a magistrate from Edinburgh, who has the title of Admiral of Leith, and two resident baillies, elected by the town council of Edinburgh. At the period of the reformation Leith was strongly fortified, and surrounded by a wall and 8 bastions. The citadel in North Leith was fortified in the time of Oliver Cromwell, but these works were demolished at the restoration of Charles II. A little to the south-west of the citadel stands a small fortification or battery which commands the entrance of the harbour, erected about 27 years ago, at the time the celebrated Paul Jones was in the North Sea. There are three places of public worship belonging to the established religion. The house of the Leith banking company, recently erected, is a magnificent edifice. This company, which was some time ago formed by the first commercial houses in Leith, does a great deal of business, and a branch of the bank, called the British Linen Company, is likewise established here.

Leith Water, a river of Scotland, which rises at Currie, in Mid Lothian, and running about 14 miles, falls into the Frith of Forth at Leith, driving, in this short space, upwards of 80 mills. On its banks are many elegant seats, and it abounds with trout.

Leith Hill, near Boxhill, Surry, in the parish of Wotton, 5 miles from Dorking; it rises almost insensibly from Wotton for about 3 miles, and descends by a declivity for 3 miles, almost as far as Horsham. It commands all the wealds of Surry and Sussex as far as the South Downs, even to the sea. On the top of one part of the hill a square tower has been erected, with an inscription, importing that Mr. Hull, who had served in many parliaments, retired here from public business to the exercise of private virtues, and on his death his remains were interred at this place.

Leitrim, a county of Ireland, in the province of Connaught, being about 42 miles long, and from 6 to 16 broad. It is bounded on the north by Donegal Bay, on the north-east by Fermanagh, on the east by Cavan, on the south-east by Longford, on the south-west by Roscommon, and on the west by Sligo, and contains 21 parishes. The northern parts are mountainous, but furnish food for a great number of young cattle; the southern parts are level, and the soil fertile. The linen manufacture serves to increase population, and the lands are in general well cultivated. Some considerable iron-works have lately been established at Arigna. This county abounds with lakes and small rivers. The county town is Carrick. This county and the two boroughs of Carrick and Jamestown, till the union, returned 6 members to the Irish parliament, but since the union 2 members are returned for the county only.

Leitrim, a town from which the county of Leitrim takes its name, in the province of Connaught, Ireland, seated on the river Shannon, 4 miles north of Carrick, and 82 miles west-north-west of Dublin.

Leixlip, a town of Ireland, in the county of Kildare, and province of Leinster, seated on the river Liffey, 8 miles west of Dublin. It has a noble castle with large gardens, on one side of which is a fine waterfall, called the Salmon Leap. Near it are the ruins of the church and castle of Confy.

Lelant Uny, a parish in the hundred of Penwith, Cornwall, 3 miles from St. Ive's, and 277 from London; containing 199 houses and 1083 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 22*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.* the patron of which is the bishop of Exeter. Fair 15th August.

Leman, a river in Devonshire, which falls into the Ex, near Tiverton.

Lemington, a hamlet in the parish of Toddington, hundred of Tewksbury, Gloucester, 5 miles from Tewksbury, and 100 from London; containing 8 houses and 61 inhabitants.

Lemington, a hamlet in the parish of Eglingham, Coquetdale ward, Northumberland, 3 miles from Alnwick, and 314 from London; containing 31 houses and 178 inhabitants.

Lemington, Hastings, and Priors. See Leamington, Warwick.

Len, a river in Kent, which falls into the Medway at Maidstone.

Lenborough, a hamlet to and adjoining the town of Buckingham; containing 7 houses and 59 inhabitants.

Lench, a hamlet in the parish of Fladbury, hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, near Evesham.

Lench Church. See Church Lench, Worcester.

Lench Wick, a hamlet in the parish of Norton, hundred of Blakenhurst, Worcester, near Evesham.

Lene Lough, a lake of Ireland, in the county of West Meath, 9 miles north from Mullingar.

Lenham, a parish in the hundred of Eyhorne, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, standing at the source of the Len, 10 miles from Maidstone, and 45 from London; containing 352 houses and 1434 inhabitants, of whom 207 were employed in various trades. The Roman station called Durolenum was at this place. Lenham had formerly a market, but it has been long discontinued, and in 1751 an attempt was made to restore it, but without success. The living is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.*

Lenham East, a hamlet to the foregoing.

Lenox, an ancient district of Scotland, now divided between the shires of Stirling and Dumbarton. A ridge of hills called the Lenox hills, extends from Dumbarton to Stirling, and thence continues under the name of the Ochil hills; the whole being a mass of stupendous basaltic columns and volcanic rocks. This district gave title to the duke of Lenox, now enjoyed by the duke of Richmond.

Lenthall Earls and Starks. See Leinthall Earls.

Lenton, a parish in the hundred of Broxtow, Notts, on the river Len, 1¼ mile from Nottingham, and 125 from London; containing 153 houses and 893 inhabitants. Near it is the remains of a considerable monastic ruin, formerly a priory of the order of Gluniacs. In the neighbourhood are some coal mines. Fair, Wednesday after Whit Sunday, for 7 days; and a horse fair 18th November. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 2*s.* 5*d.* patron the king.

Leominster, a borough and market-town in the hundred of Wolphy, Hereford, 26 miles from Worcester, and 137 from London, situated on the Wye, in what are called the marshes of Wales. It contains 687 houses and 3019 inhabitants, being 1349 males, and 1670 females, of whom 502 were returned as being employed in various trades, principally in making gloves and hats, and in tanning leather. The church is a neat, spacious building, and appears to have been built at different periods; the roof is supported by four large Tuscan pillars: it has a beautiful altar-piece by Rubens, and in the tower is a musical peal of eight bells. The baptist meeting-house is a handsome square brick building; the minister residing in a house adjoining. The quakers, presbyterians, and a congregation of Moravian brethren, have each another meeting-house. In former times there were several religious houses at Leominster, on the site of one of which the poor house, called the house of industry, now stands. Leland observes, that this town had the remains of a strong castle, about half a mile distant. The borough is a distinct precinct from the county; it holds quarter sessions, and has a gaol and a bridewell. It is divided into six wards, and was incorporated by queen Mary; being governed by a high steward, a bailiff, a recorder, and 12 capital burgesses, who choose a bailiff and a town-clerk. It has returned two members to parliament from the 23d of Edward I., the right of election being in the freemen, and inhabitants paying scot and lot, amounting to about 620. The bailiffs are the returning officers. Queen Mary also endowed a free-school at this town, and there is another endowed by Mr. Pierrepont. Formerly Leominster carried on a considerable traffic in wool and wheat, which has now decreased. Flax of an excellent quality is grown in the neighbourhood, the land being peculiarly favourable for that plant. The market, originally held on Thursday, has been changed to Friday, on the petition of the inhabitants of the cities of Hereford and Worcester, who complained of the decay of their trade. Fairs, 13th Feb. Tuesday after Midlent Sunday, 2d May, 10th July, 4th September, and 8th November. The bailiff holds a court of pie-powder at each of them. —Oldfield's Boroughs.

Leominster, a parish in the hundred of Poleing, rape of Arundel, Sussex, near the river Arun, which divides it from Arundel, 59 miles from London, and containing 60 houses and 357 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.*

Leonard's St. a small village in the hundred of Aylesbury, Bucks, near Tring, 34 miles from London; containing 22 houses and 137 inhabitants.

Leonard's St. a small village near Exeter, Devon, 169 miles from London; containing 26 houses and 133 inhabitants.

Leonard's St. Hill, near Windsor, Berks, a most enchanting spot, on the summit of which is Gloucester lodge, which commands a most extensive view over the Thames and the surrounding country. It was first begun to be erected by the countess of Waldegrave, and completed by the duke of Gloucester, on his marriage with that lady.

Leonard St. a small village near Horsham, in the forest of the same name.

Leonard's Stanley, a parish in the hundred of Whitestone, Gloucester, 6 miles from Dursley, and 105 from London; containing 78 houses and 590 inhabitants. This was formerly a considerable market-town, but a fire in the reign of James II. reduced it so much that it has never recovered its former consequence. The tower of the church is of singular construction, having a double wall with a passage and recesses between. Here stood a priory of Benedictines founded in 1146. It has a charity school. Fairs 6th Nov. and the saturday after St. Swithin's day.

Leonhales. See Lyonshall, Hereford.

Leppington, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Scraggingham, Buckrose wapentake, east riding of York, between Stamford bridge and New Malton, 210 miles from London; containing 22 houses and 118 inhabitants.

Lepton, a township in the parish of Kirkheaton, Aybrig wapentake, west riding of York, 5 miles from Huddersfield, and 187 from London; containing 410 houses and 2180 inhabitants, viz. 1118 males and 1062 females, of whom 478 were employed in various trades.

Lerwick, the principal town of Shetland, on its east side, containing about 1000 inhabitants, much resorted to by fishing busses, to wait for the immense shoals of herrings which make their appearance in June; the larger vessels sometimes stop here to take in provisions, and to obtain a supply of seamen, who are remarkable for their skill and hardiness. This place is the general rendezvous of the fishing vessels of Britain, Holland, and Denmark. Lat. 60. 13. Long. 1. 17. west.

Lery, a river of Wales, in the county of Cardigan, which runs into the Irish sea, 5 miles north of Aberystwith.

Lesbury, a parish in Bamborough ward, Northumberland, 4 miles from Alnwick, and 313 from London; containing 125 houses and 524 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 2*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of the king.

Leskeard, a borough, market-town, and parish in the hundred of West, Cornwall, 10½ miles from Plymouth, and 237 from London; containing 402 houses and 2708 inhabitants, viz. 1252 males, and 1456 females, of whom 208 were employed in trade, principally in the manufacture of leather; and some few in spinning for the Devonshire clothier. The church is a large, noble building. The town-hall is erected on stone pillars, with a turret on the top, and a clock having four dials. On the hills of North Leskeard are many tin mines; the metal obtained from which is cast at the blowing houses into blocks, and sent to this town to be coined. There is a very eminent free-school here; and a good conduit for the supply of water. In the neighbourhood are several extensive sheep walks. It was incorporated by queen Elizabeth, and is governed by a mayor, recorder, eight capital burgesses, and 15 assistants, and returns two members to parliament, the right of election being in the corporation, and sworn free burgesses, amounting to about 110. The returning officer is the mayor. It has a very considerable market on Saturday. Fairs, Monday fortnight before Christmas, Shrove Monday, Monday before Easter, Holy Thursday, 15th August, and 2d October. It is a vicarage, value 18*l.* 13*s.* 1*d.* Lat. 50. 26. 50. Long. 4. 41. 45. west.—Polwhele's Cornwall.

Leslie, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, 8 miles from Inverurie, on the banks of the small river Gadie, containing 90 houses and 367 inhabitants.

Leslie, a parish in the shire of Fife, Scotland, on the north bank of the river Leven, 8 miles from Kirkcaldy; containing 253 houses and 1609 inhabitants, of whom 368 were employed in various manufactures. About a mile from the town, is the magnificent seat of Leslie house, and near it the old castle of Strathendrie.

Lesmahago, a parish in the shire of Lanark, Scotland, on the banks of the river Clyde, 12 miles from Hamilton, and 22 from Glasgow; containing 660 houses and 3070 inhabitants, viz. 1560 males and 1510 females, of whom 351 were employed in various trades. Besides the Clyde, it is watered by four other smaller streams, all falling into that river. On a lofty promontory, in the vale of the river Nathan, stand the ruins of Draffin or Craignethan castle, belonging anciently to the Hamilton family, and now to lord Douglas. Here the unfortunate Mary found a short asylum after her escape from her confinement at Lock Leven. Canal coal is found here; and lime-stone nearly approaching to the quality of marble. Among the quarries are found many petrifactions of sculls, horns of sheep, &c.

Lesnewth, a parish in the hundred of Lesnewth, Cornwall, 5 miles from Camelford, and 225 from London; containing 18 houses and 104 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.*

Lesnewth, the name of a hundred in Cornwall, lying on the north-western side of the county, stretching along the coast from Tintagel to Poundstock.

Lessingham, a parish in the hundred of Happing, Norfolk, 15 miles from Norwich, and 124 from London; containing 31 houses and 159 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 6*l.* and is united with Hempstead, in the patronage of King's college, Cambridge.

Lessingham, North and South. See Leasingham, Norfolk.

Lessington, a parish in the hundred of Wraggoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 4¼ miles from Wragby, and 145 from London; containing 28 houses and 146 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 16*s.* 6*d.*

Lessudden, or St. Boswell's, a parish in the shire of Roxburgh, Scotland, on the banks of the Tweed; containing 107 houses and 497 inhabitants. It is 10 miles from Kelso, 5 from Melrose, and 7 from Jedburgh, and has a fair on the 18th July, the largest in the south of Scotland.

Lestwithiel. See Lostwithiel, Cornwall.

Leswalt, a parish in the shire of Wigton, Scotland, forming part of the peninsula called the Rinns of Galloway, on the bay of Loch Ryan, 8 miles from St. Patrick; and containing 300 houses and 1329 inhabitants. It has a very productive fishery in the Irish channel.

Letchlade, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Brightwells Barrow, Gloucester, 6 miles from Farringdon, and 76 from London; standing at the confluence of a small river, called the Leche with the Thames. It contains 187 houses and 917 inhabitants. A considerable trade is carried on here by the rivers Isis and Thame, as well as by a canal lately constructed. Cheese, and great quantities of corn are conveyed hence to London, Bristol, &c. By means of this canal large quantities of coal are brought here, and the country for many miles round is supplied from hence with that necessary article. Near the bridge over the Thames formerly stood a hospital dedicated to St. John the Baptist, and there was also a priory here. The market is on Tuesday. Fair 9th September, for cattle, provisions, &c. The church is a very handsome structure, and is a vicarage, value 12*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* endowed with great tithes, its real value being about 400*l.*—Rudge's Gloucestershire.

Letchworth, a parish in the hundred of Broadwater, Herts, 2¼ miles from Baldock, and 35¾ from London; containing 10 houses and 67 inhabitants.

Letcomb Basset, a parish in the hundred of Kintbury Eagle, Berks, 2 miles from Wantage, and 60 from London; containing 45 houses and 230 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* and is in the patronage of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

Letcomb Regis, a parish ½ mile distant from the preceding, containing 95 houses and 394 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 3*s.* 7*d.* and is in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Westminster, with East and West Hallow, or Challow, chapels annexed.

Letham, a village in the parish of Monimail, Fifeshire, Scotland. It has a large fair in June.

Letham, a village in the parish of Dunnichen, shire of Forfar, Scotland. It has a weekly market principally for yarn and linens manufactured in the neighbourhood.

LETHENDY, a parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, 6 miles from Cupar; containing 69 houses and 345 inhabitants.

LETHERHEAD. See LEATHERHEAD, Surry.

LETHERINGHAM, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Loes, Suffolk, 3 miles from Framlingham, and 84 from London; containing 16 houses and 138 inhabitants.

LETHERINGSETT, a parish in the hundred of Holt, Norfolk, 1 mile from Holt, and 112 from London; containing 46 houses and 256 inhabitants. The situation of this place is so remarkably pleasant, that it is called the garden of Norfolk. It is a rectory, value 12*l.*

LETHNOT, a parish in the shire of Forfar, Scotland, united with Navar. It stands on one of the small branches of the South Esk, 6 miles from Brechin, and contains 97 houses and 489 inhabitants. The hills in this parish rise to a considerable height.

LETTERKENNY, a town in the county of Donegal, province of Ulster, Ireland, seated on the river Swilly, 15 miles south-west of Londonderry, and 113 miles north-west of Dublin.

LETTERSTON, a parish in the hundred of Dewsland, Pembroke, Wales, between Fishguard and Haverfordwest, 256 miles from London, and containing 87 houses and 358 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, with Lanvair chapel annexed, value 12*l.* 11*s.* and is in the patronage of the prince of Wales.

LETTON, a parish in the hundred of Stretford, Hereford, 11 miles from Hereford, and 146 from London; containing 8 houses and 60 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 15*s.* 7*d.*

LETTON, a hamlet in the parish of Brampton Bryant, hundred of Wigmore, Hereford, 10 miles from Ludlow, and 150 from London. Population returned included with Walford.

LETTON, a parish in the hundred of Mitford, Norfolk, 3 miles from East Dereham, and 98 from London; containing 13 houses and 131 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 14*s.* 7*d.*

LETTWELL, a hamlet in the parish of St. John, wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of York, 6 miles from Worksop, and 152 from London; containing 42 houses and 216 inhabitants.

LEUCHARS, a parish in the shire of Fife, Scotland, on the German ocean, 6 miles from St. Andrew's, on the road to the ferry of Dundee; containing 342 houses and 1687 inhabitants, of whom 159 were employed in trade and manufactures, mostly in that of linen for the Dundee market. The surface of this parish is level, and is often liable to inundations; but the land is very fertile. From the ruins yet remaining of the ancient castle it appears to have been once a building of great strength.

LEVAN ST. a parish and curacy in the hundred of Penwith, Cornwall, 2½ miles from the Land's end, and 297 from London, near Penwith point; containing 72 houses and 400 inhabitants.

LEVAN'S, or LEVEN'S-BRIDGE, over the river Ken, near Kendal, Westmoreland, where is a water-fall, and a fine view of the neighbouring valley. Levan's hall was for many ages the seat of the family of Levans. It is one mile from Heversham and 256 from London, and now belongs to the earl of Suffolk. The gardens are laid out in the stile of James II. and are said to have been first planned by the gardener of that monarch, who resided at this house with colonel Graham.

LEVEN, a parish in Holderness, east riding of York, 7 miles from Beverley, and 191 from London; containing 75 houses and 411 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

LEVEN, a village in the parish of Scoonie, Fifeshire, Scotland, standing at the mouth of the river Leven, which forms a safe harbour for vessels of considerable burthen. Leven is 6 miles from Cupar, and contains about 1165 inhabitants. The principal production of this neighbourhood is coal, and a few years ago some large iron works were established here.

LEVEN, LOCH, a beautiful lake, about 12 miles in circumference; lying in the shires of Kinross and Fife. There are 4 islands in this Loch, the largest of which is St. Serfs; containing about 46 acres; on it formerly stood a priory dedicated to St. Serf, or Servanus. The castle of Loch Leven is on another island of about 2 acres, and is encompassed by a rampart of stone; it could hold a numerous garrison. This castle is rendered conspicuous in the history of Scotland as being the place of confinement of the unfortunate queen Mary, after her separation from Bothwell, and on her being taken prisoner at the battle of Pinkie: here she suffered a rigorous captivity, made more bitter by the insolence and resentment of her female keeper, the mother of Murray, (who was afterwards regent), and who had married a Douglas, of Loch Leven. Here Mary was forced to sign an instrument by which she resigned her crown: at length a youth of 18, her keeper's younger brother, captivated by her charms, and pitying her misfortunes, stole the keys of the castle, and conveyed her away in safety to her zealous friends. The remains of the castle as they now stand, consist of a rectangular building flanked with small towers, the walls of a little chapel, and the apartment in which Mary was confined. The other two islands are called the Paddock Bower and the Reed Bower. The lake abounds with excellent pike, perch, eels, char, trout, &c. From the east end of it runs the river Leven, which falls into the bay of Largo at the village of Leven.

LEVEN, a river in the shire of Dumbarton, being one of the largest in Scotland; it issues from Loch Lomond at Balloch, and falls into the Clyde at Dumbarton castle, after having run about 10 miles. On its banks are numerous and extensive bleach and print fields. Dr. Smollet was born in a house on the banks of this river, near which an elegant monument has been erected to his memory.

Leven, a river in the county of Lancaster, which passes through Winander mere, and empties itself in Morecambe bay.

Leven Seat, a mountain in the parish of Carnwath, shire of Lanark, Scotland, 1200 feet above the level of the sea.

Leven Black, a river in Cumberland, which falls into the White Leven, another river, which runs into the Kirksop near Tomwhat hill.

Levenant, a river in Cardiganshire, which falls into the Dowy at Penalt.

Levenny, a river in Carnarvonshire, which falls into the Irish sea.

Levenny, a river in Denbighshire, which falls into the Cluyd a little above Ruthin.

Levens, a township in the parish of Heversham, Kendal ward, Westmoreland, 1 mile from Kendal, containing 85 houses and 442 inhabitants. There is a bridge here over the river Ken.

Levenshulme, a township in the parish of Manchester, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 1 mile from Manchester, and 108 from London; containing 102 houses and 628 inhabitants.

Leventhorpe, a small village near Yarm, north riding of York, 6½ miles from Stockton.

Lever Darcy, a township in the parish of Bolton le Moors, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 1 mile from Bolton, and 195 from London; containing 105 houses and 589 inhabitants.

Lever Great, a township in the parish of Middleton, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 1 mile from Manchester, and 180 from London; containing 78 houses and 398 inhabitants.

Lever Little, a township in the parish of Bolton le Moors, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 1 mile from Bolton, and 195 from London; containing 228 houses and 1276 inhabitants, of whom 856 were employed in various trades.

Leversall, a hamlet and chapelry in the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of York, adjoining to Doncaster, with which its population is included.

Leversdale, a hamlet in the parish of Irthington, Eskdale ward, Cumberland, 5 miles from Carlisle, and 310 from London; containing 55 houses and 399 inhabitants.

Leverton, North and South, an united parish in the hundred of Skirbeck, part of Holland, Lincoln, 5 miles from Boston, and 122 from London; containing 61 houses and 339 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.*

Leverton North, a parish in the hundred of Basset Law, Notts, 5 miles from Retford, and 148 from London, containing 57 houses and 270 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 18*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of the king.

Leverton South, a parish ½ a mile distant from the preceding, containing 65 houses and 278 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* 6*s.*

Levesdon, a hamlet in the parish of Watford, hundred of Cashio, Herts, 3 miles from Watford, and 19 from London. Population included with Watford.

Levington, a parish in the hundred of Colneis, Suffolk, situated on the river Orwell, 4 miles from Ipswich, and 73 from London; containing 40 houses and 165 inhabitants. Here is an almshouse for 6 poor people belonging to the parish. The living is a rectory, value 6*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.* and is united with Nacton.

Levisham, a parish in Pickering lythe, north riding of York, 4 miles from Pickering, and 229 from London; containing 47 houses and 123 inhabitants.

Lew, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Bampton, Oxford, 1½ mile from Bampton, and 71 from London; containing 34 houses and 222 inhabitants.

Lewanick, a parish and curacy in the hundred of East, Cornwall, 4½ miles from Launceston, and 217 from London; containing 101 houses and 548 inhabitants.

Lewes, a borough and market town, consisting of 6 parishes, in the hundred of Swanborough, rape of Lewes, Sussex, on the right bank of the river Ouse, 8 miles from Brighton, and 48½ from London; containing 685 houses and 4422 inhabitants, viz. 2031 males and 2391 females, of whom 1594 were represented as employed in various trades, and 488 in agriculture. It stands on the slope of a hill, surrounded by higher hills, and was formerly encompassed with walls. The gate and 2 towers of its ancient castle, built by William, earl of Warren, in the 11th century, still remain; and several religious houses appear to have been established here, viz. a priory of Cluniac monks, founded by the earl of Warren in 1078, and the first of that order in England; a priory of grey friars; a monastery, dedicated to St. James, and an hospital to St. Nicholas. It had formerly 12 parish churches, which are now reduced to 6, including St. Thomas at Cliffe, so called from its standing under the high chalky cliffs at the outskirts of the town, and is by far the handsomest church of all. Lewes is a handsome town, and one of the largest and most populous in the county, standing in an open champaign country, and from a windmill in the neighbourhood has a fine view of the sea and the circumjacent towns, gentlemen's seats, &c. not to be exceeded in England. It has a good charity school, and there are several private charities in the respective parishes. There is an annual horse race here for the king's plate of 100 guineas. It is a borough by prescription, but not incorporated, and is governed by 3 constables, who are chosen annually at the court leet. It has sent 2 members to parliament ever since the 23d of Edward I. the right of election being in the inhabitants paying scot and lot, in number about 310. The river is navigable for barges, from the harbour of New Haven, which is 6 miles lower down. On its banks are several iron-works, where cannon of small sizes, and several useful articles are cast. Near this town, in the year 1264, was fought a bloody battle between Henry III., accompanied by his son, and the barons headed by Simon de Montfort, earl of Leicester, in which the king was defeated and taken prisoner! The market is on Saturday. Fairs, 6th May, Whit Tuesday, and 6th October. The church of St. John's, by the castle, is a rectory, value 5*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.* St. Michael's in Foro, a rectory, value 8*l.* 15*s.* St. John's South-over, a rectory, value 6*l.* 12*s.* the patronage of which is in the king. St. Peter's and St. Mary's West-over, commonly called St. Anne's, a rectory. St. Thomas at Cliffe, a peculiar belonging to the archbishop of Canterbury, value 31*l.* 17*s.* 8*d.* And All Saints, a rectory, value 9*l.* 14*s.*—Guide to the Watering Places.

Lewes, the name of a rape in Sussex, being the center division of the county, from the borders of Surry to the sea at Brighton, and bounded on the east by the Ouse.

Lewis, an island, or more properly a peninsula, among the Hebrides, or Western Islands of Scotland, forming with Harris a large island, about 60 miles in length. Lewis, which is the northern part, is 40 miles in length, and its mean breadth about 15. It is divided into four parishes, viz. Batvas, Locks, Stornaway, and Gig, and contains 1751 houses and 9168 inhabitants, viz. 4240 males and 4928 females. It is on every part of its coast very much indented with bays. The country is in general wild and bleak, though from the many roots of trees dug up, it appears once to have been covered with wood. The hills are covered with heath, which affords shelter for various sorts of game. The lakes and streams abound with salmon, large red trout, and other fish. The only town in Lewis is Stornaway, situated on the east side of the north division of the island. To the west of Lewis and Harris, the coast is annually visited by shoals of herrings, and so immense are those of the dog-fish that pursue them, that their dorsal fins are sometimes seen like a thick bush of sedges above the water, as far as the eye can reach. From the liver of the dog-fish, a considerable quantity of oil is extracted. In the season these shores are the resort of many fishing-vessels from different parts. Many of the inhabitants here, as well as on the northern isles, live chiefly by fishing, and by a miserable mode of cultivating the land. The Gaelic language prevails among the lower people, but the English is principally taught in the schools. Long. 2. 45. to 6. 25. west of Edinburgh. Lat. 56. to 58. 32. north.

Lewisham, a parish in the hundred of Blackheath, lathe of Sutton, Kent, 5½ miles from London; containing 685 houses and 4007 inhabitants, viz. 1795 males and 2212 females, of whom 334 were employed in trade, and 230 in agriculture. This village has several good houses inhabited by the rich citizens of the metropolis, who have retired from business, or by those whose families wish to enjoy the peaceful sweets of a country life. The church is an elegant modern edifice, and has several elegant monuments, by Banks and Flaxman. There is a good grammar-school here, which was endowed by the Rev. Mr. Colfe, formerly vicar of the parish. The trustees are the leathersellers company of London. A branch of the river Ravensbourne runs through the village. On a hill stands an oak, called the oak of honour, because queen Elizabeth is said to have dined under it. The original tree has long since perished, and the present oak was planted in order that this traditional anecdote might be preserved. The living is a vicarage, value 23*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.* —Hasted's Kent.

Lewknor, a parish in the hundred of Lewknor, Oxford, 2½ miles from Stoken church, and 39 from London; containing 53 houses and 255 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 17*s.* and is in the patronage of All Souls College, Oxford.

Lewknor, the name of a hundred in Oxfordshire, lying on the eastern side of the county and borders of Bucks.

Lewtrenchard, a parish in the hundred of Lyfton, Devon, 9 miles from Oakhampton, and 204 from London; containing 20 houses and 154 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.*

Lexden, the name of a hundred in Essex, lying on the northern side of the county round Colchester.

Lexden, an out-parish of Colchester, Essex, which gives name to the hundred in which it is situated. This village stands on the side of a beautiful heath, 50 miles from London, and contains 92 houses and 697 inhabitants. Very extensive barracks for foot soldiers have lately been erected here. It is a rectory, value 12*l.*

Lexham East, a parish in the hundred of Launditch, Norfolk, 6 miles from Swaffham, and 99 from London; containing 22 houses and 119 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 6*s.* and is united with Lycham.

Lexham West, a hamlet to the foregoing, ½ mile distant, containing 16 houses and 138 inhabitants.

Leybourn Lund, a township in the parish of Wensley, Hang West wapentake, north riding of York, 1¼ mile from Middleham, and 235 from London; containing 81 houses and 446 inhabitants. The fairs are held on the second Friday in February, May, October, and December.

Leyland, a parish in the hundred of Leyland, Lancaster, 3 miles from Chorley, and 210 from London; containing 391 houses and 2088 inhabitants, viz. 984 males and 1104 females, of whom 619 were employed in various trades, and 150 in agriculture.

Leyland, the name of a hundred in Lancaster, on the western side of the county, bounded on the north by the river Ribble.

Leyton. See Layton, Essex.

Leytonstone, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Low-Layton, hundred of Becontree, Essex, at the foot of a hill near the river Lea. See Layton.

Lezant, a parish in the hundred of East, Cornwall, 5 miles from Launceston, and 218 from London; containing 124 houses and 610 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 32*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Exeter.

Leziat, a parish united with Ashwicken, in the hundred of Freebridge, Lynn, Norfolk, 3 miles from Lynn, and 100 from London; containing 12 houses and 107 inhabitants.

Lhanbryd, or St. Andrew's Lhanbryd, a parish in the shire of Elgin, near Elgin, 7 miles from Fochaber; containing 160 houses and 799 inhabitants. It is watered by the river Lossie, which communicates with three lakes, at the extremity of the parish, viz. Loch Spynie, Cots, and Nabee, the last of which is about 3 miles in circumference.

Libberton, a parish in the shire of Lanark, Scotland, united with Quothquon, on the banks of the Clyde, 4 miles from Biggar, and 8 from Lanark; containing 169 houses and 706 inhabitants. The lands in this parish are for the most part covered with heath. It is watered by two small branches of the Methven, which unite near Libberton, and fall into the Clyde. The Quothquon Law or hill is 600 feet above the level of the sea. In ancient times it appears to have been strongly fortified.

Libberton, a parish in the shire of Mid Lothian, Scotland, lying about one mile south of Edinburgh. It is divided into four villages, called Kirk, Nether, Over, and Upper Libberton, and contains 833 houses and 3565 inhabitants, viz. 1629 males and 1936 females, of whom 687 were employed in various trades. On the banks of two small rivulets are several mills and a considerable bleachfield; in the neighbourhood are some excellent seams of coal and limestone quarries. On the free-stone rocks of Craigmillar-hill, about 360 feet above the level of the sea, stands a castle, the favourite residence of Mary, queen of Scots.

Lichart, a lake in the shire of Ross, Scotland, on the borders of the parish of Gairlock. It is about 4 miles long, and 1 broad, and falls into a river of the same name which runs into the Frith of Cromarty.

Licky, a river in the county of Waterford, province of Munster, Ireland, which falls into the Blackwater, 4 miles north of Youghall.

Lid or Lyd, a river in the county of Devon, which runs into the Tamar, about 4 miles from Tavistock.

Lidbury. See Ledbury, Hereford.

Liddal, a river in the shire of Roxburgh, Scotland, forming the boundary of England for 5 miles till it joins the Esk, on the borders of Cumberland. The scenery on its banks is highly picturesque.

Liddel, lies 2 miles from Netherby, Cumberland, at the conflux of the rivers Liddal and Esk, on which spot formerly stood a strong castle.

Lidden, a river in Herefordshire and Gloucestershire, which falls into the Severn opposite Gloucester.

Liddiard Millicent, a parish in the hundred of Highworth, Wilts, 1½ mile from Wotton Basset, and 87 from London; containing 64 houses and 300 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 17*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.*

Liddiard Tregoose, a parish in the hundred of Kingsbridge, Wilts, 3 miles from Swindon, and 86 from London; containing 72 houses and 578 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.*

Liddington, a parish in the hundred of Wrandike, Rutland, 2½ miles from Uppingham, and 87 from London; containing 118 houses and 527 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 20*l.* 10*s.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of Lincoln.

Liddington, a parish in the hundred of Kingsbridge, Wilts, 3 miles from Swinden, and 81 from London; containing 51 houses and 337 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.*

Liddisdale, a district in the shire of Roxburgh, Scotland, on the banks of the river Liddal, being the southern angle of the county. It is extremely wild and mountainous.

Lidford. See Lyford, Berks.

Lidford, a parish in the hundred of Lifton, Devon, lying on the river Lid, at the edge of Dartmore forest, 8 miles from Oakhampton, and 203½ from London; containing 34 houses and 222 inhabitants. It was formerly a considerable town, and sent members to parliament. There is a natural cascade near the bridge, over the river Lid. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.*

Lidgate, a parish in the hundred of Resbridge, Suffolk, 8 miles from Clare, and 63 from London; containing 57 houses and 323 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 10*s.*

Lidlington, a parish in the hundred of Redborn stoke, Bedford, 4 miles from Woburn, and 46 from London; containing 106 houses and 559 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 11*l.*

Liff, a parish in the shire of Forfar, Scotland, united with Benvie, and adjoins the parish of Dundee. It is 4 miles from Dundee, and contains 453 houses and 2194 inhabitants. It consists of several villages, viz. Locheye, Millhouse, Liff, Benvie, and Invergowrie. In the neighbourhood of Lundiehouse, the seat of lord viscount Duncan, was lately discovered a subterraneous building, containing several different compartments, of very rude structure, the walls being formed without mortar. Here are several quarries of grey slate.

Lippey, a river of Ireland, which rises in the mountains of Wicklow, and runs into the bay of Dublin.

Lifford, a town in the county of Donegal, province of Ulster, Ireland, seated on the river Foyle, 24 miles from Donegal, and 102 from Dublin. It sent two members to the Irish parliament, before the union.

Lifton, a parish in the hundred of Lifton, Devon, 3 miles from Launceston, and 209¼ from London; containing 145 houses and 843 inhabitants. The fairs are on the 2d February, Holy Thursday, and 28th October. The living is a rectory, value 31*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.*

Lifton, the name of a hundred in Devonshire, near the western side of the county, comprehending Dartmore.

Lighthorn. See Leighthorn, Warwick.

Lilbourne, a parish in the hundred of Guildsborough, Northampton, 16 miles from Northampton, and 84 from London; containing 49 houses and 234 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* patron the king.

Lilburn East, a hamlet in the parish of Eglingham, in Coquetdale ward, Northumberland, 3 miles from Wooler, and 326 from London; containing 13 houses and 95 inhabitants.

Lilburn West, a hamlet in the same parish adjoining the foregoing; containing 31 houses and 164 inhabitants.

Lilford, a parish in the hundred of Huxloe, Northampton, 4 miles from Oundle, and 74¼ from London; containing 13 houses and 97 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 12*s.* 3*d.* and is united with Wigthorpe.

Lillesdon, a tithing in the parish of Thornfalcon, in the hundred of North Curry, Somerset, 5 miles from Taunton, and 140 from London; containing 48 houses and 193 inhabitants.

Lilley, a parish in the hundred of Kitchen, Herts, 5 miles from Luton, and 36 from London; containing 57 houses and 305 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 19*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of St. John's college, Cambridge.

Lilleshall, a parish in the hundred of South Bradford, Salop, 2¼ miles from Newport, and 142 from London; containing 376 houses and 2060 inhabitants, viz. 1024 males and 1036 females, of whom 1459 were employed in various trades. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 17*s.* 11*d.* and is in the patronage of the marquis of Stafford.

Lillingston Darrell, a parish in the hundred of Buckingham, Bucks, 3 miles from Buckingham, and 57 from London, standing near the river Ouse, and containing 22 houses and 111 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*

Lillingston Lovell, a parish adjoining the foregoing in the hundred of Ploughley, Oxford, containing 34 houses and 135 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.* the patronage of which is in the king.

Lillington, a parish in the hundred and division of Sherborn, Dorset, 4 miles from Sherborn, and 118 from London; containing 21 houses and 128 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 12*l.* 10*s.* 3*d.*

Lillington, a parish in the hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, 3 miles from Warwick, and 88 from London; containing 35 houses and 178 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Lillings Ambo, a hamlet in the parish of Sheriff Hutton, in Bulmer wapentake, north riding of York, 10 miles from York, and 210 from London; containing 25 houses and 142 inhabitants.

Limber Great, a parish in the hundred of Yarborough, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 3 miles from Caistor, and 160 from London; containing 52 houses and 345 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the king.

Limber Little, a hamlet in the parish of Brocklesby, hundred of Yarborough, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 7 miles from Caister, and 164 from London; containing 28 houses and 207 inhabitants.

Limbery, a small hamlet in the parish of Luton, in Bedfordshire.

Limbrook, a hamlet in the parish of Lyngen, hundred of Wigmore, Hereford, 5 miles from Presteign, and 148 from London; containing 18 houses and 77 inhabitants.

Lime, a river in Dorsetshire, which falls into the sea at Lime, or Lyme Regis, dividing that county from Devonshire.

Limehouse, a parish in the hundred of Ossulston, Middlesex, about 2 miles east of London, adjoining to Stepney, and was formerly a hamlet of that parish. It contains 755 houses and 4678 inhabitants, viz. 2336 males and 2342 females, of whom 1292 were employed in various trades. The church is an inelegant building, and one of the fifty new ones erected under an act of Anne. At Limehouse Hole are some considerable yards for ship building. A canal from the river Lea, enters the Thames at Limehouse, which saves the circuitous course round the isle of Dogs. The living is a rectory, in the patronage of Brazen Nose college, Oxford.—Lysons's Environs of London.

Limekilns, a considerable village and seaport in the shire of Fife, Scotland, in the parish of Dunfermline, on the coast of the Forth. It is so named from the extensive lime works carried on at it, which belong to the earl of Elgin. The number of inhabitants is 658.

Limerick, a county in Ireland, in the province of Munster, bounded on the north and north-west by Tipperary and Clare; on the west by Kerry; on the south by Cork; and on the east by Tipperary. It is about 40 miles long, and from 17 to 25 broad, containing 125 parishes, and about 170,000 inhabitants. It is watered by several rivers, but principally by the Shannon and the Maig. The south east and south-west parts of the county are very mountainous and not productive, but the rest under is fertile and particularly rich in pasture, most of the fine cattle slaughtered at Cork being its produce. This county sent 2 members to the Irish parliament before the union, as it now does to the united parliament; 2 for the city, and 4 for the 2 boroughs of Askeaton and Killmalloch.

LIMERICK, a city in the county of Limerick, and province of Munster, Ireland, 50 miles south-east of Galway, 50 north of Cork, and 94 south-west of Dublin. It is about 3 miles in circumference, and contains about 5000 houses and 40,000 inhabitants. It was formerly reckoned the second city in the kingdom, but since the rapid increase of Cork has lost its pre-eminence. It is a county of itself, and is divided into the Irish and the English town; the latter, which is the most ancient, is situated on an island formed by the river Shannon, called King's Island: this part of the city, whilst it was fortified, was esteemed the strongest place in Ireland. It has been dismantled about 40 years, and during that period has been much increased, by the addition of a number of handsome new streets and convenient quays. Its commerce has kept pace with its size. The linen, woollen, and paper manufactures, are carried on here to a considerable extent, and it has also a considerable share in the exportation of provisions. The country round it is fertile and pleasant, but the air is in general moist. It has many excellent hospitals and handsome public structures. Limerick sends one member to the united parliament.

LIMPENHOE, a parish in the hundred of Blofield, Norfolk, 11 miles from Norwich, and 116 from London; containing 24 houses and 95 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* and is united with Southwood rectory.

LIMPNE or LIMNE, a parish in the hundred of Street, lathe of Shepway, Kent, between Romney and Hithe, distant about 3¼ miles from each, and 64 from London; containing 50 houses and 361 inhabitants. On the summit of a hill, are the ruins of an ancient castellated mansion, formerly belonging to the archdeacons of Canterbury. Though this village is now 2 miles from the sea, it is supposed to have been the ancient port called Portus Lemanis. From hence to Canterbury, are the remains of an ancient Roman road, called Stone street. One mile to the south are the remains of a fortress called Stutfall castle. The living is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 1*s.* 4*d.*

LIMPSFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Tandridge, Surry, 3 miles from Westerham, and 23 from London; containing 110 houses and 727 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 20*l.* 5*d.*

LIMPSTONE, a parish in the hundred of East Budleigh, Devon, 3 miles from Topsham, and 173 from London; containing 194 houses and 883 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

LISAN, a river of Wales, in the county of Carnarvon, which runs into the Irish sea, 5 miles south of Carnarvon.

LINBRIDGE, a hamlet in the parish of Alwhinton, in Coquetdale ward, Northumberland, 5 miles from Rothbury, and 311 from London; containing 8 houses and 54 inhabitants.

LINCH EAST and WEST, two small hamlets near Kingston, in the Isle of Purbeck Dorset.

LINCHES, a village near Bisley, in Gloucester.

LINCHMERE, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Eastbourn, rape of Chichester, Sussex, 3 miles from Haslemere, and 45 from London; containing 39 houses and 249 inhabitants.

LINCOLN CITY, 131 miles from London by Ancaster; 136 miles by Newark; and 129 by Peterborough; stands in a cold situation on a high hill, by the side of the river Witham. It contains 1516 houses inhabited by 7398 persons, viz. 3474 males and 3924 females, of whom 1695 were returned employed in various trades, handicrafts and manufactures, and 718 in agriculture. It is a very ancient city, and was formerly surrounded with walls and defended by towers. On the common called Carham was a city of the Britons, if one of their fastnesses may be so called, but the Roman city called Lindum was built on the hill, in the form of a large square. The southern wall was sufficiently secured by the precipice, and the other three sides were surrounded with a deep trench, part of which is still remaining. The north Roman gate of the city, called Newport gate, still remains, consisting of a semi-circular arch, 16 feet in diameter, and 10 feet thick at the bottom, and is one of the noblest remnants of Roman architecture left in Britain. The stones are held together by their wedge-like form, no mortar or cement having been used in its construction. From this gate part of the old Roman wall may be seen, built of stone well cemented together. The Romans on finding this city not well situated for navigation, built another on the declivity of the hill. In Edward the Confessor's time, Lincoln contained 1070 houses and 900 burgesses, and a strong castle was erected here by William the Conqueror to keep the citizens in awe. This city formerly contained 52 parish churches, and a great number of religious houses, but in the second year of king Edward VI. the churches were reduced to 15. Lincoln was erected into a bishopric in the year 1088, the see being removed here from Dorchester, in Oxfordshire thedral is a magnificent fabric, and reported to be the largest in extent of any in England, except that of York. The situation is much to its advantage, as it stands on the edge of a steep hill, and may be seen through five or six of the adjoining counties. Its length from east to west is 530 feet, and the length of the great transept 227. From the pavement to the top of the lanthorn in the round tower is 124 feet. The west front with the two towers were built by bishop Remigius in 1088, and are in the Norman style of architecture, having semicircular arches, richly ornamented according to the manner of that period. The other parts have been erected at different times; bishop Alexander built the body of the cathedral, the chancel, and St. Mary's tower; bishop Hugh erected the east end or St. Mary's chapel, (in which he had afterwards a shrine) and the chapter house, which has a beautiful groined stone roof, supported in the centre by a single column rising from the floor. There is a fine painting over the communion table by the Rev. W. Peters. In the centre of the chancel is the episcopal throne, and on each side are the prebendal stalls, with seats for the vicars and singing men. The choir consists of a dean, precentor, chancellor, and sub-dean, six archdeacons, fifty-two prebendaries, four priest-vicars, five lay-vicars or singing men, four choristers, six burghess-chanters, two vergers, and two stall-keepers. The number of residentiaries are only four, viz. the dean, precentor, chancellor, and sub-dean. The cloisters and library are fine, and the latter well-furnished with printed books, and manuscripts. The great east window was fitted up with painted glass by Pechitt of York, in 1762. Before the reformation, this cathedral was undoubtedly one of the finest and richest in the kingdom, and the number and splendour of its tombs was almost incredible. In the year 1540, by order of king Henry VIII., there were carried from this church into his coffers no less than 2621 ounces of pure gold, and 4285 ounces of silver, besides an amazing quantity of diamonds, pearls, sapphires, rubies, turquoises, and carbuncles, with two shrines, one of pure gold, called St. Hugh's, and the other of silver, called bishop St. John of Alderby's. A second plunder was committed on this church in 1548, during the time of bishop Holbeck, who, being a zealous reformer, gave up all the remaining treasure, which Henry had had the grace to spare. The tombs afterward suffered great dilapidations, and during the troubles in the reign of Charles I. almost every remaining ornament was defaced, and the church converted into barracks for soldiers. This cathedral has many bells, but that which is most remarkable is hung alone in the north tower over the western front, and is called Great Tom of Lincoln. It weighs 96cwt. 3qr. 18lb and will hold 424 gallons, ale measure; the circumference is 22 feet 8 inches. On account of the great weight of this bell it has not been rung for several years. During the time that bishops Thomas and Green presided in this see, the cathedral was repaired and modernized in the state in which it now appears. South of the church, upon the very brow of the hill, are the remains of the bishop's palace, built by Robert de Chesney; bishop Beck and his successors greatly improved it, and for magnificence it was almost equal to the cathedral. The puritanical soldiers of Cromwell's time, destroyed it, as well as the bishop's palace at Bugden. There are at present in the city, 13 churches, but all of them are small miserable looking buildings. The ruins of the castle are venerable, and from their bold and commanding situation on a high hill, must once have formed a place of great strength. In the parish of St. Peter's at Goats, are the ruins of the palace in which John of Gaunt is said to have resided. Lincoln is full of the ruins of monasteries and religious houses, insomuch that the very barns, stables, and outhouses, display arched windows and doors, principally circular, with the simple Saxon zig-zag round them. This city is divided into two parts, the upper town lying on the hill, and the lower town in the valley. The river Witham runs through it, but that part of it which passes by the side of the principal street, is arched over, so that nothing of it is seen; but it makes a large lake on the west side, and has a canal called the Fosse-dike, by which it has a communication with the Trent, and by means of that river with the principal canals throughout the kingdom. The upper town contains several good buildings, and the very steepest part of the ascent of the hill is one of the principal parts of the city for trade. The communication between the upper and lower town being extremely inconvenient, carriages are obliged to make a circuitous track on each side of the hill. The market is kept in the lower town, and is well supplied with provisions of every description. The corn and wool trade is great here, large quantities of both being sent into Yorkshire, whence the vessels return laden with coals. In the reign of Edward III. this city was made the staple for wool, leather, and lead. On the plain, north of Lincoln, was fought the famous battle between the partizans of the empress Maud and king Stephen, in which the latter was defeated and taken prisoner. Several bloody battles were also fought near the city between the forces of Cromwell and the royal army. Lincoln has lately been much improved, in consequence of an act for lighting, paving, and watching it. It is a corporation consisting of a mayor, 12 aldermen, two sheriffs, a recorder, four chamberlains, a sword-bearer, a coroner, and 48 common-council-men; is a county of itself, and has a jurisdiction 20 miles in circuit. It has sent two members to parliament since the 29th of Henry III., the right of election being in the freemen, who are in number about 1300. The mayor and two sheriffs are the returning officers. The gaol is situated in the yard of the ancient castle. Fairs, first Tuesday after 12th April and July 5th, 2d Wednesday in September, and November 12th. St. Benedict's church is a curacy; St. Botolph's, a curacy; St. Mark's, a curacy; St. Martin's, a vicarage; St. Mary's in Wigford, a curacy; St. Peter's at Goats, a curacy; St. Peter's at Arches, a rectory; St. Peter's Eastgate, a curacy; St. Swithin's, a curacy; and St. Mary Magdalen, a curacy.—Howlett's Lincolnshire.

LINCOLNSHIRE, a maritime county of England, bounded on the north by the river Humber, which separates it from Yorkshire; on the east by the German Ocean; on the south by Cambridgeshire and Northamptonshire; and on the west by the counties of Rutland, Leicester, Nottingham, and York. It is in length 77 miles, and in breadth about 48, and contains, according to the return made to the house of commons in 1801, 41,595 houses, inhabited by 208,557 persons, viz. 102,445 males, and 106,112 females, of whom 24,263 were employed in various trades, handicrafts, and manufactures; and 60,584 in agriculture. By a return made to the house of lords, in 1805, the area of this county is stated to be 2,787 square statute miles, equal to 1,783,680 statute acres; the number of inhabitants on each square mile, containing 640 acres, is 75; and the total number of persons 209,025. The total amount of money raised by the poor's rate in 1803 was 145,848*l.* at the rate of 3*s.* 7*d.* in the pound, and the gross amount of the assessment under the property tax of 1806, was 2,704,736*l.* The average of the deaths for 10 years appears to be as 1 to 49¼ of the present population. Mr. Stone in his view of the agriculture of this county, estimates the number of acres at 1,893,100, of which he supposes there may be 473,000 acres of inclosed, marsh, and fen lands, 200,000 of commons, wastes, and unembanked salt marshes, 268,000 of common fields, 25,000 of woodlands, and 927,120 inclosed upland. Mr. Arthur Young states the area of this county at 2888 square miles, and 1,848,320 acres, of which he says the wolds contain 234,880, the heath 118,400, lowland 776,960, and miscellaneous soils 718,080. The discriminating features of the county of Lincoln, are strongly marked by nature. Contiguous to the sea in the southern part there spreads a great extent of low-land, much of which was once marsh and fen, but now become by the gradual exertions of above 150 years one of the richest tracts in the kingdom. It is a region of fertility without beauty, in a climate not salubrious to the human constitution. Advancing to the northward, along the coast, this rich tract becomes narrow, but reaches to the Humber, and there contracts to a mere edging of marsh land, cut off by the cliffs which rise on the Trent-mouth, from a nearly similar tract, which fills all the part of the county on the left side of that great river. The heaths north and south of Lincoln, are calcareous hills, and command many fine views over the lower country. In the time of the Britons, this county was inhabited by the Coritani, and under the Romans it formed a part of the province of Flavia Cæsariensis. It belonged to the kingdom of Mercia during the heptarchy. Lincolnshire is divided into three parts or provinces, viz. Holland, Kesteven, and Lindsey, and sub-divided into 30 hundreds and wapentakes, which contain 630 parishes, one city, and 31 market-towns. The division, called the parts of Lindsey, is much the largest, comprehending all the county from Fossedike and the Witham northwards. It is upon the whole the highest part of this county; toward the north-eastern part is a large tract of heathy land, called the Wolds, of which the southern portion is well inhabited, but the northern very thin of people. Great flocks of sheep are bred throughout this tract. The north-western part of Lindsey contains the river island of Axholme, formed by the rivers Trent, Dun, and Idle, a rich low tract, in which great quantities of flax are cultivated. The parts of Kesteven contain the western part of the county from the middle to the southern extremity. It possesses a variety of soil, and, though intermixed with large heaths, is a fertile country. Part of the fens are in the district of Kesteven, but the much greater part is in the remaining and smaller one of Holland, which occupies the south-eastern quarter of Lincolnshire, being contiguous to the shallow inlet of the sea called the Wash. The rivers of Lincolnshire are the Witham, the Axholme, the Welland, the Dun, and the Idle; and it is washed on its northern and western sides by the rivers Humber and Trent. The market towns are Boston, Grantham, Grimsby, Stamford, Alford, Barton, Binbrook, Bolingbroke, Bourn, Burgh, Burton, Caistor, Crowland, Crowle, Deeping, Donnington, Falkingham, Gainsborough, Glandford Briggs, Holbeach, Horncastle, Kirton, Louth, Market Raisin, Saltfleet, Sleaford, Spalding, Spilsbury, Stanton, Tattersal, Wainfleet and Wragby. The four first, with the city of Lincoln and the county, return each two members to parliament. With respect to the general products of Lincolnshire, its higher grounds yield grain of all sorts in abundance, and its lower, oats, hemp, flax, wood, and almost every other article of culture. It is particularly distinguished as a grazing county, and is remarkable for rearing all kinds of animals to the greatest size and weight: the oxen weighing from 80 to 100 stones, of 14lb. to the stone. It is equally famous for horses and sheep, the latter being clothed with a long

Hull
Ouse R.
Trent R.
Humber R.
Spurn Head
Grimsby
Lincoln
Boston
Stamford
Peterborough
Wisbech
Crowland
Newark
Gainsborough
Market Rasen
Caistor
Louth
Horncastle
Spilsby
Sleaford
Grantham
Folkingham
Bourn
Market Deeping
Uppingham
Oakham
Melton
Thorne
Epworth
Haxey
Belton
Butterwick
Scotter
Scawby
Glanford Brigg
Kirton
Laughton
Blyton
Willoughton
Corringham
Hibaldstow
Winterton
Barton
Barrow
Goxhill
Ferriby
Elloughton
Brough
Welton
Sutton
Barnetby
Barnetby le Wold
Caistor
Kelsey
Tealby
Binbrook
Market Rasen
Walesby
Thoresby
Tetney
Louth
Legbourne
Hubberd's Hills
Wragby
Bardney
Tattershall
Coningsby
Horncastle
Woodhall
Kirkby
Timberland
Blankney
Metheringham
Navenby
Waddington
Lincoln
Skellingthorpe
Fiskerton
Burton
Stow
Saxilby
Torksey
Gainsborough
Scotton
Scawby
Brumby
Frodingham
Ashby
Scunthorpe
Winterton
Alkborough
Whitton
Burton
Owston
Normanby
Epworth
Haxey
Belton
Butterwick
Boston
Skirbeck
Wyberton
Frampton
Kirton
Algarkirk
Sutterton
Fosdyke
Quadring
Donington
Gosberton
Surfleet
Pinchbeck
Spalding
Weston
Moulton
Wheeldyke
Holbeach
Sutton
Fleet
Tydd St. Mary
Crowland
Deeping
Market Deeping
Langtoft
Baston
Thurlby
Bourn
Morton
Corby
Grimsthorpe
Edenham
Aslackby
Billingborough
Horbling
Heckington
Sempringham
Pointon
Osbournby
Ingoldsby
Rippingale
Dunsby
Threekingham
Swaton
Folkingham
Sleaford
Leasingham
Ancaster
Haconby
Dorrington
Digby
Leadenham
Fulbeck
Carlton
Hough
Hanington
Aisthorpe
Normanton
Caythorpe
Brant Broughton
Navenby
Swinderby
Thorpe
Harmston
Doddington
Nocton
Bardney
Branston

thick wool, peculiarly fitted for the worsted and coarse woollen manufactures, of which great quantities are sent into Yorkshire and other counties. Lincolnshire is only, in a small degree a manufacturing county, and has much declined both in population and consequence. A principal reason of this is the decay of its sea and river ports, which, though formerly numerous, are now almost entirely choaked up with sand, and some of them quite deserted by the ocean. The long bow-like coast is fronted by sand hills or salt-marshes, and like those of the Dutch Netherlands, secured from the waves by banks; the mouth of the river Witham, near which Boston is situated, being now the only inlet from the sea fit for the purposes of navigation. The ladies of Lincolnshire have for several years past patronized the manufacture of the staple article of the county, wool, by appearing annually at a ball, called the "Stuff Ball," in woollen stuffs, wove and manufactured entirely within it, and from wool the produce of it. This county is remarkable for its decoys for taking wild-ducks, teal, and widgeon; the metropolis being in a great measure supplied from it.—Young's View of the Agriculture of Lincolnshire, Camden, &c.

LINCOMBE, a parish in the hundred of Bath Forum, Somerset, near Bath, and 108 miles from London; containing 430 houses and 2790 inhabitants, viz. 1231 males, and 1559 females, of whom 575 were employed in various trades.

LINCOMB, a hamlet of and adjoining to Ilfracombe, Devon, 203 miles from London.

LINDAIRE, a hamlet in the parish of Walton, hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 8 miles from Liverpool, and 207 from London.

LINDALL, a hamlet in the parish of Cartmel, hundred of Lonsdale, Lancaster, adjoining to Cartmel, and 263 miles from London.

LINDATH, a hamlet in the parish of Warton, hundred of Lonsdale, Lancaster, 8 miles from Lancaster, and 246 from London; containing 17 houses and 67 inhabitants.

LINDBY, a parish in the hundred of Broxtow, Notts, 6 miles from Nottingham, and 130 from London; containing 64 houses and 515 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.*

LINDFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Rushmonden, Pevensey rape, Sussex, 2 miles from Cuckfield, and 39 from London; containing 168 houses and 1077 inhabitants, of whom 102 were employed in various trades. Fairs on 6th May, Whit Tuesday, and 28th October.

LINDISFARNE, a monastery situated in Holy Island, on the coast of Northumberland. It was ruined by the Danes in the eighth century. The celebrated St. Cuthbert was prior of this monastery 12 years. After the invasion of the Danes, the monks removed to Durham, bringing with them the bones of the saint.

LINDRIDGE, a parish in the hundred of Blackenhurst, Worcester, on the borders of Salop, 5 miles from Tenbury, and 130 from London; containing 99 houses and 543 inhabitants. In the church are several ancient monuments. The living is a vicarage, value 26*l.* 12*s.* 11*d.* with Knighton on Team, and Pensax chapel annexed, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Worcester.

LINDSELL, a parish in the hundred of Dunmow, Essex, 3 miles from Dunmow, and 40 from London; containing 43 houses and 267 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* in the patronage of the earl of Guildford.

LINDSEY, a parish in the hundred of Cosford, Suffolk, 3 miles from Hadleigh, and 64 from London; containing 28 houses and 170 inhabitants. The church is a curacy, in the patronage of King's college, Cambridge.

LINEHAM, a hamlet in the parish of Shipton under Wichwood, in the hundred of Chadlington, Oxford, 4 miles from Chipping Norton, and 78 from London; containing 38 houses and 195 inhabitants. It is remarkable for a famous barrow.

LINER, a river in Cornwall, which falls into the Tamar, opposite Tovey.

LINESIDE, a township in the parish of Kirklinton, Eskdale ward, Cumberland, 3 miles from Longtown, and 310 from London; containing 34 houses and 197 inhabitants.

LINFORD GREAT, a parish in the hundred of Newport, Bucks, 1½ mile from Newport Pagnell, and 50 from London; containing 51 houses and 313 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 20*l.*

LINFORD LITTLE, a hamlet nearly adjoining to Newport Pagnell, hundred of Newport, Bucks, 50½ miles from London; containing 8 houses and 44 inhabitants.

LINFORD, a parish in the hundred of West Goscote, Leicester, 5 miles from Leicester, and 101 from London; containing 82 houses and 377 inhabitants.

LINGA, one of the smaller western islands of Scotland, 3 miles south of Watersea.

LINGA, a small island near the west coast of Scotland, being one of those called Treshannish. It lies 8 miles west of the coast of Mull.

LINGA SOUND, a bay on the west coast of Stronsa, one of the Orkney islands.

LINGAN, a small village near Penwardine, and Brompton Brian, Herefordshire.

LINGARTH, a small hamlet in the parish of Aldmonbury, west riding of York.

LINGAY, a small island of the Hebrides, belonging to the shire of Inverness, and in the district of North Uist, noted for its abundance of black cattle and deer.

LINGFIELD, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Tandridge, Surry, 5½ miles from Godstone, and 25 from London; containing 237 houses and 1387 inhabitants, of whom 164 were employed in various trades. The church is an ancient building, and has a free school adjoining to it. On the common is an enclosed spring, the water of which is of the same quality as that at Tunbridge.

LINGORRIL, a river in Merionethshire, which falls into the Irish sea at Llangyllin.

LINGWOOD, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Blofield, Norfolk, 9 miles from Norwich, and 118 from London; containing 34 houses and 229 inhabitants.

LINKERHOLT, a parish in the hundred of Pastrow, division of Kingsclere, Hants, 7 miles from Kingsclere, and 62 from London; containing 15 houses and 75 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 5*d.*

LINKINHORN, a parish in the hundred of East, Cornwall, 4 miles from Callington, and 219 from London; containing 163 houses and 924 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 13*l.*

LINKNESS, a cape of Scotland, on the north-west coast of the isle of Stronsa.

LINKTOWN OF KIRKALDY, a long straggling village, adjoining to the burgh of Kirkcaldy, but lying in the parish of Abbotshall, in the shire of Fife, Scotland.

LINLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Norbury, Wenlock franchise, Salop, near Wenlock; containing 18 houses and 108 inhabitants.

LINLEY, a township in the parish of Huddersfield, Aybrig wapentake, west riding of York, 2 miles from Huddersfield, and 188 from London; containing 289 houses and 1377 inhabitants, of whom 720 were employed in various trades and manufactures.

LINLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Otley, in Claro wapentake, west riding of York, near Otley, and 206 miles from London; containing 28 houses and 161 inhabitants.

LINLITHGOW, a royal borough, and chief town of Linlithgowshire, or West Lothian, Scotland, 16 miles west of Edinburgh. It consists principally of one street, about ¼ of a mile long, and contains 457 houses and 3594 inhabitants, viz. 1680 males and 1914 females, of whom 1722 were employed in various trades and manufactures. The magnificent ruins of its royal palace form a square with towers at the corners, and stand on an eminence on the west side of the town, on the site of a Roman station. It was kept in good repair till 1746, when it was accidentally set on fire by the soldiers of the royal army, who had been quartered in the hall. This palace was once the residence of the kings of Scotland, and gave birth to the unfortunate Mary. On the north side of the High-street, almost adjoining the palace, stands St. Michael's church, a noble piece of Gothic architecture, having a fine spire, over which is the figure of an imperial crown. The town-house is an elegant building, erected in 1668, opposite to which stands the Cross Well, from which the water issues by 8 spouts from grotesque figures. The chief manufacture here is leather; and there is also some woollen cloth made here. About 1 mile from the town is an extensive bleach and print field. It was anciently a place of great trade and opulence, and had first the harbour of Blackness, and afterwards of Queensferry, assigned to it as its port; but since the union it has declined considerably. It is governed by a provost, 4 bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, 12 merchant counsellors, and the deacons of 8 incorporated trades, and ranks as the sixth among the Scottish burghs. It joins with Lanark, Selkirk, and Peebles, in sending a representative to the Imperial parliament. Pennant's Tour. Lettice's Letters.

LINLITHGOWSHIRE, or WEST LOTHIAN, a county of Scotland, bounded on the north by the Frith of Forth; on the east and south-east by the river Amond, which separates it from Mid Lothian; on the south-west by Lanarkshire; and on the west by the small river Avon, which divides it from Stirling, being about 20 miles long, and containing 2796 houses and 17,844 inhabitants, viz. 8129 males, and 9715 females, of whom 3829 were employed in various trades and manufactures, and 4166 in agriculture. It is divided into 13 parochial districts, and contains 2 royal boroughs, Linlithgow and Queensferry; and the small towns of Borrowstowness, Bathgate and Kirkliston. The soil is one of the richest in Scotland, being in general a rich loam, highly improved and well cultivated. Its surface is finely diversified with hill and dale, and the whole is enriched with numerous elegant seats. It is but scantily supplied with water, the Avon and Amond being the only streams which deserve notice. It is very rich in coal, limestone and lead-ore, and in the reign of James 6th, a vein of lead was discovered, very rich in silver. Ironstone is found in almost every parish in the county, and lately some fullers'-earth has been discovered. In many places there are volcanic appearances, particularly at Dundas-hill, in the parish of Dalmony. In this county Adrian's, or Severus's wall began, which extended across this part of Scotland.

LINON, or LYNON, a river in Anglesey, which falls into the Allow at Llanworog.

LINSHIELDS, a hamlet in the parish of Alwhinton, Coquetdale-ward, Northumberland, 6 miles from Rothbury, and 312 from London; containing 12 houses and 87 inhabitants.

LINSLADE, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Cotslow, Bucks, 2 miles from Leighton Buzzard, and 43 from London; containing 55 houses and 203 inhabitants.

LINSTEAD, a parish in the hundred of Teynham, lathe of Scray, Kent, 4 miles from Feversham, and 43 from London; containing 112 houses and 796 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 3*s.* 11*d.* in the patronage of the archdeacon of Canterbury.

LINSTEAD GREAT, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Blything, Suffolk, 3 miles from Halesworth, and 101 from London; containing 12 houses and 93 inhabitants.

LINSTEAD LITTLE, a parish 1 mile distant, containing 16 houses and 134 inhabitants.

LINSTOCK, a township in the parish of Stanwix, Eskdale ward, Cumberland, 1 mile from Carlisle, and 305 from London; containing 36 houses and 167 inhabitants.

LINTHWAITE, a township in the parish of Almondbury, Aybrig wapentake, west riding of York, near Huddersfield, and 187 miles from London; containing 245 houses and 1381 inhabitants, of whom 725 were employed in various trades and manufactures.

LINTON, a market town and parish in the hundred of Chilford, Cambridge, 10 miles from Cambridge, and 46 from London; containing 183 houses and 1157 inhabitants, of whom 158 were employed in various trades. Through this town runs the Roman military road which joins the Ikenild-street; and the small river Granta passes the end of it. Here was a priory of Benedictines, belonging to the abbey of St. Jacut, in Bretagne, and was given in 1540, as an alien priory, to Pembroke-hall, Cambridge. The market is on Thursday. Fairs Whit Monday and 4th of August. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Ely. Lat. 51° 13′ 24″. Long 0° 30′ 40″ east.

LINTON, a parish in the hundred of Sherwill, Devon, 10 miles from Barnstaple, and 200 from London; containing 100 houses and 481 inhabitants. It is a curacy united with Countisbury.

LINTON, a township in the parish of Church Gresley, hundred of Repton and Gresley, Derby, 5 miles from Ashby de la Zouch, and 120 from London; containing 40 houses and 231 inhabitants.

LINTON, a hamlet in the parish of Churcham, near Gloucester.

LINTON, a hamlet in the parish of Avenbury, hundred of Broxash, Hereford, 2½ miles from Bromyard, and 123 from London; containing 80 houses and 465 inhabitants.

LINTON, a parish in the hundred of Greytree, Hereford, 4 miles from Ross, and 117 from London; containing 101 houses, and 578 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 10*s.* with the chapel of Lea, in Gloucestershire, annexed.

LINTON, a parish in the hundred of Maidstone, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 4 miles from Maidstone, near Coxheath, and 39 from London; containing 69 houses and 590 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

LINTON ON OUSE, a township in the parish of Newton, in Bulmer wapentake, north riding of York, 10 miles from York, and 209 from London; containing 46 houses and 246 inhabitants.

LINTON, a hamlet in the parish of Spofforth, in Claro wapentake, west riding of York, 4 miles from Wetherby, and 198 from London, on the banks of the Wharfe; containing 28 houses and 155 inhabitants.

LINTON, a parish in Staincliffe wapentake, west riding of York, 10 miles from Settle, and 230 from London; containing 32 houses and 186 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 32*l.* the patronage of which is in the king.

LINTON, a parish in the shire of Peebles, Scotland, on the banks of the Lyne and North Esk, 9 miles from Peebles, and 13 from Edinburgh; containing 221 houses and 1064 inhabitants, of whom about 400 reside in the village of Linton. It is very fertile, and has some excellent sheep-walks. Fullers' earth has lately been discovered in this parish.

LINTON, a parish in the shire of Roxburgh, Scotland; containing 78 houses and 403 inhabitants.

LINTZ GREEN, a township in the parish of Chester le Street, in Chester ward, Durham, 6 miles from Durham, and 265 from London; containing 138 houses and 654 inhabitants.

LINWOOD, a parish in the hundred of Walsheroft, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 2 miles from Market Raisin, and 142½ from London; containing 22 houses and 118 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*

LINWOOD, a village in the parish of Kilbarchan, shire of Renfrew, Scotland, built to accommodate the labourers at an extensive cotton-mill erected here in 1794.

LIPPOOK, a hamlet in the parish of Bramshold, hundred and division of Alton, Hants, 8 miles from Petersfield, on the borders of Sussex, and 47 from London. Fairs 1st Wednesday in March and 11th of June. Population included with Bramshold.

LISBURN, a town in the county of Antrim, province of Ulster, Ireland, stands on the river Laggan, 8 miles south-west of Belfast, and 73 north east of Dublin. The houses are very new, and have altogether a very handsome appearance. It has a very considerable manufacture of linen cloth, and has a good market. It sent two members to the Irish parliament before the union. The damask table linen manufactured here is distinguished by the quality of the cloth and the beauty of the patterns. During the last 25 years there has been some muslin and cambric made in the town and neighbourhood.

LISCARD. See LESKEARD.

LISS, a small village near Petersfield, Hants, 55 miles from London. Fair 6th of May.

LISSET, a hamlet in the parish of Beeford, Holderness, east riding of York, 3 miles from Great Driffield, and 201 from London; containing 14 houses and 122 inhabitants.

LISSMORE, an island of the Hebrides, belonging to the shire of Argyle, Scotland, situated at the mouth of the great arm of the sea Loch Linnhi, being about 10 miles long and 2 broad, and containing 218 houses and 1121 inhabitants, the whole employed in agriculture. It is extremely fertile in oats and that sort of barley called bere; and the parts that are not arable are filled with the tops of sharp rocks, peeping above the surface. The land is in general low, and the stratum limestone. This island was the seat of the bishopric of Argyle, the see of which was disjoined from that of Dunkeld, about the year 1200.

LISSMORE, a parish united with Appin, Argyleshire, Scotland; comprehending the districts of Airds, Appin, Durror, Glencreran, Glencoe, Kingerlock, and the island of Lissmore, the whole length being upwards of 63 miles. It contains 626 houses and 3243 inhabitants.

LISSMORE, a town in the county of Waterford, province of Munster, Ireland: formerly a very considerable city, but now reduced. It lies 31 miles west-south-west of Waterford, and 100 south-south-west of Dublin; standing on the south side of the river Blackwater, over which it has a fine bridge, the span of the principal arch being 102 feet. A bishop's see was founded here in the 7th century, and was united with the see of Waterford in the year 1536. The cathedral is spacious and handsome. This town sent two members to the Irish parliament before the union. There is a considerable salmon fishery here.

LISTON, a parish in the hundred of Hinckford, Essex, 3 miles from Sudbury, and 56 from London; containing 10 houses and 85 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.*

LITCHAM, a parish in the hundred of Launditch, Norfolk, 6 miles from Swaffham, and 99 from London; containing 88 houses and 426 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*

LITCHBOROUGH, a parish in the hundred of Fawsley, Northampton, 5 miles from Towcester, and 65 from London; containing 57 houses and 302 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*

LITCHET MALTRAVERS and MINSTER. See LYTCHET MALTRAVERS, Dorset.

LITCHFIELD, or LUDSHELFE, a parish in the hundred of Overton, Hants, 5 miles from Whitchurch, and 51 from London; containing 12 houses and 55 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*

LITCHFIELD, more properly LICHFIELD, a city, containing 3 parishes, in the hundred of Offlow, Stafford, on a small branch of the Trent, 119 miles from London by Coventry, and 12½ by Northampton. It contains 873 houses and 4712 inhabitants, viz. 2145 males and 2567 females, of whom 1666 were returned as employed in various trades and manufactures, particularly in that of coarse earthenware. It is not ascertained whether Litchfield derives its name from the number of battles fought here, or from its marshy soil, as the word Lych, in Saxon, signifies both a morass and a dead body. It is supposed to have arisen from the ruins of a Roman town, called Etocetum, about a mile distant, where the Ikenild and Watling-street cross each other, and which is now called Chesterfield Wall. The cathedral stands in the close, and is said to have been first built in the year 300; rebuilt by Offa, king of Mercia, in 766, again rebuilt in 1148, and much enlarged in 1296. This city was erected into an archbishopric in the latter part of the 8th century by Offa, but soon after was reduced to a bishopric under the archbishop of Canterbury. In the year 1075 the see was removed to Chester, and in 1102 to Coventry, and not long after it was restored to Litchfield and united with Coventry. During the war between Charles I. and his parliament this city was several times taken and retaken. The Close was garrisoned for the king against the parliamentary army under lord Brooke and sir John Gill, but was taken after a month's siege. Lord Brooke was shot here whilst conducting the siege; an inscription, and the place where he fell being paved with white pebbles, commemorate this event. In the course of the war it was taken by prince Rupert, but with the rest of the kingdom fell under the sway of the Oliverian government. During these unhappy disputes the cathedral was garrisoned by the royal troops, and suffered materially. At the restoration Dr. Hatchet was made bishop of this see, and immediately set about cleansing and repairing his episcopal church, and by his own large contributions and the subscriptions he obtained from the neighbouring gentry, he was enabled to repair and beautify not only the cathedral but the palace of the bishop also. The church is walled in like a castle, and stands so high as to be seen at the distance of many miles. Its length is 411 feet, and breadth 153. From the centre rises a spire 256 feet high, and 2 towers, terminating also in spires, rise from the west front. Its portico is hardly to be paralleled in England. The chancel is paved with alabaster and cannel coal, in imitation of black and white marble. One of the windows is now fitted up with some very handsome stained glass, purchased by the dean and chapter from a ruined abbey in France. The north door is extremely rich in sculpture. In 1789, this church underwent a general and thorough repair; behind the altar-piece is an elegant stone screen, which divides it from St. Mary's chapel. In the inside of the dome are some neat marble monuments, particularly 2 near the south entrance, to the memory of David Garrick and Dr. Johnson, both natives of the place; and another in the north aisle to lady Mary Wortley Montagu, who introduced from Turkey the inoculation of the small-pox, first practising it on her own children. There belong to this cathedral a bishop, dean, precenter, chancellor, treasurer, 4 archdeacons, (of Coventry, Stafford, Shropshire, and Derby) and 27 prebendaries, beside 5 priest-vicars, 7 lay clerks, or singing men, choristers and inferior officers. There are 3 other churches in Litchfield, one of which, St. Michael's, has a church-yard, containing 6 or 7 acres called St. Michael's Green-hill. Its ancient castle is supposed to have stood near the gate of the close, now taken down, and on the site of the alms-houses, called Newton college, for clergymen's widows. At the south-east end of the city is a college priory, or Hospital of St. John the Baptist, which continues at this time for a master and poor brethren. Here is also a new theatre. The guildhall has a very neat appearance, the top being ornamented with the city arms carved in stone. Lichfield is a county of itself, containing a jurisdiction extending about 12 miles in compass, and has the power of holding assizes and determining cases of life and death. It is governed by 2 bailiffs, (chosen yearly out of 24 burgesses,) a recorder, a sheriff, a steward, and other officers. It has sent 2 members to parliament since the 33d Edward I.; the right of election being in the bailiff, magistrates, freeholders of 40*s.* a year, the holders of burgage tenures, and in such freemen as are enrolled, and pay scot and lot. The number of voters is about 620. This city gives title of earl to the family of Lee. It has a large gaol for debtors and felons, and a good free-school, at which Dr. Johnson received the rudiments of grammatical instruction. The markets are on Tuesday and Friday. Fairs the 3 first Thursdays after Twelfth-day, Ash Wednesday, May 1, and the Friday before St. Simon and St Jude. By the inland navigation it communicates with the Mersey, Dee, Ribble, Ouse, Derwent, Trent, Severn, Humber, Thames, and Avon. The churches of St. Michael's and St. Chad's Stow, are only chapels to St. Mary's, and in the patronage of the vicar thereof. St. Mary's in Foro is a vicarage, value 10*l.* the patronage of which is in the chapter of Litchfield. Shaw's Staffordshire.

LITCHURCH, a hamlet in the parish of St. Peter, Derby, in the hundred of Morlestone and Litchurch, and 126 miles from London; containing 8 houses and 35 inhabitants.

LITCOT, a hamlet in the parish of Stewkley, hundred of Cotslow, Bucks, 5 miles from Winslow, and 45 from London. Population included with Stewkley.

LITHERLAND, a hamlet in the parish of Sephton, hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, near Liverpool-haven, 5 miles from Liverpool, and 210 from London. Population included with Aintree.

LITLINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Armingford, Cambridge, 4 miles from Royston, and 39 from London; containing 62 houses and 350 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 13*s.* 7*d.* and is in the patronage of Clare-hall, Cambridge.

LITLINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Longbridge, rape of Pevensey, Sussex, 4 miles from Eastbourne, and 60 from London; containing 17 houses and 111 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.*

LITLINGTON, See LITTLETON, Middlesex.

LITTLEMORE, an island near the west coast of Ireland, and county of Galway, about 4 miles long and 2 wide.

LITTLEBORNE, a parish in the hundred of Downhamford, lathe of St. Augustine, Kent, 4 miles from Canterbury, and 59 from London; containing 99 houses and 559 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* and is in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Canterbury.

LITTLEBOROUGH, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Rochdale, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 4½ miles from Rochdale, and 201 from London. Population included with Hundersfield.

LITTLEBREDY, a parish united with LONGBREDY, in the hundred of Ugglescombe, division of Dorchester, Dorset, 4 miles from Abbotsbury, and 124 from London; containing 25 houses and 134 inhabitants.

LITTLEBROUGH, or LITTLEBOROUGH, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Basset Law, Notts, 3 miles south of Gainsborough, and was long famous for its ferry over the Trent into Lincolnshire. It is supposed to have been the Roman Agelocum, as several urns have been found here. It contains 12 houses and 62 inhabitants.

LITTLEBURY, a parish in the hundred of Uttlesford, Essex, 1 mile from Saffron Walden, and 42½ from London; containing 114 houses and 495 inhabitants. The church is situated within the site of a small Roman camp. In the neighbourhood is Audley End, or Inn, converted from an ancient monastery into an elegant mansion by Thomas Audley, lord chancellor in the reign of Henry VIII. now the seat of lord Braybrooke. Here is also Shortgrove, the seat of the earl of Egremont. It is a rectory, value 26*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* a sinecure, in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.—Morant's Essex.

LITTLEHAM, a parish in the hundred of East Budley, Devon, 2 miles from Exmouth, and 170 from London; containing 406 houses and 1909 inhabitants, of whom 570 were employed in various trades. The living is a vicarage, value 15*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Exeter.

LITTLEHAM, a parish in the hundred of Shebbear, Devon, near Blacktorrington, 208 miles from London; containing 45 houses and 292 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 16*s.* 10*d.*

LITTLE ISLAND, an island of Cork, in the province of Munster, Ireland, situated in the river Lee, 6 miles east of Cork, and about 3 miles in circumference.

LITTLE ISLAND, a small island of Ireland, in the river Suire, about 2 miles below Waterford.

LITTLEMORE, a parish in the hundred of Bullington, Oxford, 3 miles from Oxford, and 51 from London; containing 55 houses and 259 inhabitants. This parish is without a church. Here was formerly a nunnery, of which but few relics are remaining.

LITTLEOVER, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Morlestone and Litchurch, Derby, 1¼ mile from Derby, and 127 from London; containing 61 houses and 319 inhabitants.

Littleport, a parish in the isle of Ely, Cambridge, 4 miles from Ely, and 70 from London; containing 234 houses and 1602 inhabitants, of whom 97 were employed in various trades. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* the patronage of which is in the bishop of Ely.

Littleton West, a hamlet in the parish of Tormarton, hundred of Grumbald's Ash, Gloucester, 3½ miles from Marshfield, and 106 from London; containing 17 houses and 100 inhabitants.

Littleton on Severn, a parish in the hundred of Langley and Swineshead, Gloucester, 2 miles from Thornbury, and 124 from London; containing 21 houses and 136 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.*

Littleton, a parish in the hundred of Spelthorne, Middlesex, 2½ miles from Staines, near the Thames, and 14½ from London; containing 24 houses and 147 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.*

Littleton High, a parish in the hundred of Chewton, Somerset, 9 miles from Wells, and 121 from London; containing 160 houses and 811 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 7*s.* 8*d.* the patron of which is the king.

Littleton, a parish in the hundred of Buddlesgate, division of Fawley, Hants, 3 miles from Winchester, and 66 from London; containing 13 houses and 78 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the chapter of Winchester.

Littleton South, a parish in the hundred of Blackenhurst, Worcester, 3 miles from Evesham, and 98 from London; containing 30 houses and 116 inhabitants. The church is a curacy, in the patronage of the dean and canons of Christ church, Oxford.

Littleton Middiæ, a parish united with the foregoing, ¼ of a mile distant; containing 40 houses and 304 inhabitants. Near it is a petrifying spring, supposed to be good for weak eyes. The inhabitants attend divine service in the church at South Littleton.

Littleton North, a hamlet in the parish of Middle Littleton, ¼ mile distant therefrom.

Littleton, a tything in the parish of Steeple Ashton, hundred of Whorlsdon, Wilts, 3 miles from Trowbridge, and 95 from London. Population included with Semington.

Little Drew, a parish in the hundred of Chippenham, Wilts, 7 miles from Chippenham, and 101 from London; containing 24 houses and 87 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Salisbury.

Littleworth, a tything in the parish of Faringdon, hundred of Shrivenham, Berks, 2 miles from Farringdon, and 68 from London; containing 22 houses and 189 inhabitants.

Littleworth, a hamlet in the parish of Wing, hundred of Cotslow, Bucks, 2½ miles from Leighton Buzzard, and 40 from London.

Littleworth, a village in the hundred of Dudstone and Kingsbarton, near Gloucester, 106 miles from London; containing 39 houses and 150 inhabitants.

Littleworth, a hamlet in the parish of Spalding, hundred of Elloe, parts of Holland, Lincoln, 3 miles from Spalding, and 97 from London.

Littleworth, a hamlet in the parish of Stonesfield, hundred of Wootton, Oxford, 3 miles from Woodstock, and 65½ from London.

Litton, a township in the parish of Tideswell, hundred of High Peak, Derby, ¼ a mile from Tideswell, and 160 from London; containing 78 houses and 438 inhabitants.

Litton, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Cascob, in Radnor, Wales, although situated in the hundred of Wigmore, Hereford, 4 miles from Presteign, and 156 from London; containing 14 houses and 85 inhabitants.

Litton, a parish in the hundred of Wells forum, Somerset, 7 miles from Wells, and 121 from London; containing 80 houses and 366 inhabitants. The living belongs to the prebend thereof in Wells cathedral.

Litton, a hamlet in the parish of Arncliffe, wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, west riding of York, 8 miles from Settle, and 240 from London; containing 23 houses and 114 inhabitants.

Litton Cheney, an extensive parish and formerly a market town in the hundred of Ugglescomb, division of Dorchester, Dorset, 9 miles from Dorchester, and 128 from London; containing 70 houses and 347 inhabitants. The church has a very neat and high tower. It is a rectory, value 33*l.* 7*s.* 8*d.*

Livedale, a hamlet in the parish of Penkridge, hundred of Cuttlestone, Stafford, 2 miles from Penkridge, and 129 from London; containing 30 houses and 195 inhabitants.

Liverington, a parish in the isle of Ely, Cambridge, 2 miles from Wisbeach, and 90 from London; containing 108 houses and 593 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 25*l.* 7*d.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.

Livermere Great, a parish in the hundred of Thedwestry, Suffolk, 5 miles from Bury St. Edmund's, and 76 from London; containing 34 houses and 259 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 8*s.* 11*d.*

Livermere Little, a hamlet to the foregoing, ½ a mile distant; containing 7 houses and 89 inhabitants.

Liverpool, a market town, borough and sea-port, consisting of 6 parishes, in the hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 206 miles from London. It lies near the mouth of the river Mersey, and contains 11,784 houses, inhabited by 77,653 persons, viz. 24,307 males and 43,286 females, of whom 11,269 were employed in trade, handicraft and manufacture. Until the reign of William III. Liverpool had but one church, and that only a chapelry to Walton, when about the year 1698, an act of parliament was obtained empowering the inhabitants to erect a new church; from that time may be traced the rapid progress of population and commerce, till this port is now second only to the metropolis of the empire. Near the old church dedicated to our Lady and St. Nicholas, formerly stood an image of the latter saint, to which the sailors used to make an offering on going to sea. This church has been elegantly rebuilt a few years ago. The tower of St. Peter's church is a well proportioned octagon, each side of the angles having a candlestick and a gilt vane representing a flame. It has a very handsome altar-piece, and the pedestals supporting the galleries are richly carved in oak. In the 3d year of queen Anne, the corporation had a grant of the site of Liverpool castle, which had long lain in ruins, for the purpose of erecting a third church, with liberty to use the old materials; king George the first confirmed this grant by an act of parliament, and the church was finished in 1734, and dedicated to St. George. The body is a complete range of the Doric order, crowned with an attic wall, and decorated with a variety of vases; on the south side is an elegant terrace supported by six arches. St. Thomas's church is of the Ionic order, and was consecrated in 1750; it has a very handsome appearance. St. Paul's church was erected in 1769 at the expence of the town. At the west end is a bold Ionic portico, with a pediment, and in the centre, on an octagonal base, a dome with a lanthorn, ball, and cross; it is supported in the inside by 8 Ionic pillars. The stone-work of the building is crowned with plain vases and a range of balustrades. The altar is in an oval recess, and the pulpit moveable. St. Ann's church, on the road to Everton, is a very neat building of brick and stone, erected at the joint expence of two private gentlemen; it has a tower decorated with pinnacles. The altar stands in a niche at the east end, and the gallery is supported by slender iron columns. St. John's is a new church built of stone, in the Gothic style, with a tower. The church of St. Mary has nothing remarkable about it. St. Catherine's chapel, in Temple-court, called the Octagon from its form, was originally a dissenting meeting-house, and is a structure of considerable taste; the gallery is supported by slender pillars, and the roof terminates in a cove; in the front is a stone portico, through which the minister passes by a flight of steps to the pulpit; over the portico is the vestry-room; and the whole is surrounded with a handsome enclosed burial-ground. There are also in Liverpool several meeting-houses for independents, anabaptists, quakers, methodists, and Roman catholics, and the Jews have a synagogue. The Exchange is a very handsome building of stone, having two fronts, each consisting of an elegant range of Corinthian columns, supporting a pediment; between the capitals are heads and emblems of commerce in basso relievo, and in the pediment of the grand front is a piece of sculpture representing Commerce committing her treasures to the care of Neptune. The entrance, or avenue, is by 3 arched doorways. In the exchange are the town-hall, council and assembly-room. All the modern buildings are very handsome, and the new streets spacious and airy, but the old streets are narrow. The observatory is a small building on an eminence at the east side of the town, erected for the purpose of promoting the study of astronomy, but the project failed. In John-street is a public-library, conducted by a president and committee, with a very valuable collection of modern books. The theatre is a large, handsome and elegantly finished building, erected in 1772 by the subscription of 30 gentlemen. In Bold-street is the music-hall, at which is held subscription concerts. The infirmary is a noble institution, and not only receives distressed objects in Liverpool, but is open to those who come from a distance under any dangerous casualty. The design was first formed in 1745 by a public subscription, and the corporation granted a field for 999 years, but it was not completed till 1748, owing to the national troubles of that period. It forms one edifice with the hospital for seamen's widows, the buildings being connected by two handsome colonnades, with a turret on the top of each, and in the middle of the pediment a clock. The hospital for seamen forms one of the wings of the infirmary. This charity likewise extends to the children and widows of mariners. It is maintained by a monthly collection of 6d. from the wages of every sailor going from the port of Liverpool. There is also a public dispensary, a marine society, and an extensive poor-house, erected in 1771. The new prison, acording to the Howardian plan for solitary confinement, is on a very extensive scale, and has every possible convenience. At the east end of the town is a wet dock capable of holding 100 sail of vessels, besides which there are several other wet and dry docks, and many graving docks for the repairing of vessels, which render it one of the most commodious sea-ports in the world. The custom-house is a neat brick building, at the east end of the old dock; a small flight of steps leads to a piazza, over which is the long-room, and behind are extensive warehouses. At the south end of the town is St. James's-walk, commanding a beautiful prospect of the town, the harbour, river, sea, and the Welsh mountains; behind this is the stone quarry which supplies the town with that material for building; the entrance is through a subterraneous passage, supported by arches. There is a mineral spring of great reputation and fashionable resort. The streets of Liverpool are in general well paved, and during the winter tolerably well lighted. The town is supplied with fresh water by pipes from the Bootle springs, which are about 4 miles distant. Among the principal manufactures are those of china and earthenware, the several branches of the watch manufacture, and particularly that of fine files, an extensive stocking manufacture, salt, iron, and copperas works, and several public and private breweries. It is computed that here are 3000 shipwrights employed in the different dock-yards. There are also 16 roperies and 27 wind-mills in the neighbourhood. The mouth of the river Mersey may be called properly an arm of the sea; its breadth from Leacombe Point to the opposite shore is 1200 yards. It abounds with salmon, cod, flounders, turbot, &c. and at full tide is 2 miles over; ships of any burthen may come up fully laden before the town, which is quite open and unfortified. Ships of considerable burthen go up the Mersey almost as high as Warrington, chiefly for rock salt and Cheshire cheeses. Great improvements have of late been made at Liverpool with respect to the accommodations for sea-bathing, the corporation having finished in 1794, at a great expence, a most complete set of baths, into which the water flows from the sea. There are also private baths introduced into the dressing-rooms, but so connected with the large ones that a person may either bathe privately in his dressing-room, or swim out into the great baths. Here are also convenient accommodations for those who prefer bathing in the open sea. And there are bathing-machines on a similar construction to those of Margate and Brighton. There are stands of hackney-coaches and chairmen the same as in the metropolis. The high grounds on the east of the town defend the place from easterly winds, but it is open for the western breezes to allay the heat of summer, so that in general it is very healthy and temperate. Epidemical disorders seldom shew themselves in this town, and when they do are only of short continuance. To shew the rapid increase of the town within the last century it may be interesting to note the baptisms and burials at 4 different periods, viz. in 1700—162 baptisms and 117 burials. In 1750—824 baptisms and 1031 burials. In 1780—1579 baptisms and 1486 burials; and in 1800—2905 baptisms and 2782 burials. Originally the trade of Liverpool was only with Ireland; and for carrying it on with more facility, several Irish merchants settled in the town. The greater part of the trade with the isle of Man was gradually transferred hither. The following notices will shew the progress of this town in commercial affairs; in 1720 some salt was exported, and in 1730 it is first recorded, that several ships had sailed from this port to the coast of Africa. The first dock was dug in 1710; it afterwards became frequented by ships from the Baltic, and other parts of the north of Europe, as they were more certain of finding a return cargo here than at Bristol, and always sure of having salt in the place of sailing in ballast. The inland navigation, by canals, opened a most advantageous communication with the manufacturing places and chief towns of the kingdom. The increasing manufactures of Lancashire created a continual demand for raw materials from abroad; the salt works of Cheshire, by a more diligent and improved mode of management, became more productive; the African trade became nearly exclusively centered here, and at the same time brought an increased connection with the West Indies; these and various other supervening causes, were the means of this port enjoying one-twelfth of the navigation of Great Britain, the fourth part of its foreign trade, the sixth part of its general trade, half as much of commerce as London, five-eighths of the African trade, and three-sevenths of the African trade of Europe. From the 30th of June 1805 to the same day 1806, 33,364 ships entered the different docks at this port. On the quays of the docks stand large warehouses, and among others the large tobacco warehouse belonging to government, which will hold 7000 hogsheads. The abolition of the slave trade, it is thought, will greatly affect the commerce of this port. The first charter granted to Liverpool appears to have been by Henry I. and H. and several additional charters were granted afterwards; but it was not remarkable in history till besieged by prince Rupert in the civil wars of Charles I. It is governed by a mayor, annually chosen on St. Luke's day, a recorder, and common-council of 41, including the mayor, recorder, and town clerk; and whoever has served the office of mayor is afterwards stiled alderman. It sends 2 members to parliament, the right of election being in the mayor, bailiffs, and freemen, estimated at about 1000. The returning officers are the mayor and 2 bailiffs. Lat. 52° 23′. Long. 2° 56′ 45″ west.—Enfield's History, &c.

LIVERSEDGE, a township in the parish of Birstall, Morley wapentake, west riding of York, 5 miles from Huddersfield, and 192 from London; containing 507 houses and 2837 inhabitants, viz. 1405 males and 1432 females, of whom 1852 were employed in various trades.

LIVERTON, a village in Langborough wapentake, north riding of York, 6 miles from Gisborough, and 256 from London; containing 53 houses and 230 inhabitants.

LIVESAY, a township in the parish and hundred of Blackburn, Lancaster, 1¼ mile from Blackburn, and 208 from London; containing 209 houses and 1184 inhabitants. of whom 561 were employed in various trades.

Livingstone, a parish in the shire of Linlithgow, 7 miles from Linlithgow, and 20 from Edinburgh; containing 124 houses and 551 inhabitants.

Lizard, a hamlet in the parish of Landwednack, hundred of Kerrier, Cornwall, 6 miles from Helstone, and 282 from London. Population included with Landwednack. The Lizard Point is the most southern promontory of England, whence ships usually take their departure when bound to the westward. It makes a corresponding angle with the promontory called the Land's End; but is more useful, because it is more visible at sea. Lat. 49° 57′ 55″, Long. 5° 11′ 17″ west.

Llach, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Llanhamlach, hundred of Penkelly, Brecon, Wales, 3 miles from Brecon, and 165 from London; containing 34 houses and 153 inhabitants.

Llahaddon, or Llawhedon, a parish united with Bletherstone, in the hundred of Dungleddy, Pembrokeshire, Wales, 3 miles from Narberth, and 257 from London; containing 102 houses and 371 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 17*l.* 17*s.* 1*d.* the patronage of which is in the bishop of St. David's.

Llalestone, a township and chapelry in the parish and hundred of Newcastle, Glamorgan, Wales, 3 miles from Bridgend, and 181 from London; containing 100 houses and 415 inhabitants.

Llambeudy, or Llamboidy, a parish in the hundred of Derlis, Carmarthen, Wales, 7 miles from Narberth, and 250 from London; containing 272 houses and 1394 inhabitants, of whom 96 were employed in trade. It is a rectory, value 16*l.*

Llanaber, a parish in the hundred of Ardudwy, Merionethshire, Wales, 12 miles from Dolgelly, and 215 from London; containing 310 houses and 1463 inhabitants, of whom 67 were employed in various trades. The living is a rectory, value 11*l.* 18*s.* 9*d.* the patronage of which is in the prince of Wales.

Llanallgo, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Llanygraid, hundred of Twyrcelyn, Anglesea, Wales, 10 miles from Beaumaris, on the sea-shore; containing 36 houses and 196 inhabitants.

Llanarmon, a parish in the hundred of Chirk, Denbigh, Wales, 6 miles from Mold; containing 50 houses and 384 inhabitants. It is a rectory and a sinecure, value 31*l.* 15*s.* the patron is the bishop of St. Asaph.

Llanarmon in Yale, a parish in the hundred of Yale, Denbigh, so called to distinguish it from the foregoing village in Chirk, 4 miles from Gresford, and 6 from Wrexham; containing 61 houses and 399 inhabitants. This place was formerly noted for pilgrimages accompanied by great offerings to the shrine of St. Armon. Fairs 19th of October and 30th of November. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.* the patronage of which is in the bishop of St. Asaph.

Llanarth, a parish in the hundred of Moyddyn, Cardiganshire, Wales, 15½ miles from Cardigan; containing 396 houses and 1719 inhabitants, of whom 83 were returned as employed in various trades. Fair 22d of Sept. The living is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 18*s.* 1*d.* and is united with Llaninan. The patron is the bishop of St. David's.

Llanarthney, a parish in the hundred of Iskennen, Carmarthenshire, Wales, 10 miles from Neath, and 207 from London; containing 255 houses and 1408 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

Llanasaph, a parish in the hundred of Presteign, Flintshire, Wales, 5 miles from Holywell, and 212 from London; containing 280 houses and 1402 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 11*s.* 5*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

Llanavonvach, a parish in the hundred of Builth, Brecon, Wales, 4 miles from Builth, and 177 from London; containing 111 houses and 633 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

Llanbadarn Vawr, a market town and parish in the hundred of Ilar, Cardiganshire, Wales, 1 mile from Aberystwith, and 203 from London, standing on the river Rydal, and containing 249 houses and 1228 inhabitants. It is supposed to have been antiently called Mauritanea, and to have changed its name in the 6th century in memory of Paternus, who here founded a monastery, and made it an episcopal see, but the inhabitants murdering their bishop it was united to St. David's. Its ancient church, built in the form of a Greek cross, is the mother church of Aberystwith. Between this place and Aberystwith, on the banks of the river, stands Plas Grug, anciently a fortified mansion, supposed to have been the residence of Owen Glyndwr; the remains are still pretty considerable, particularly a square embattled tower, nearly perfect. This town has a small harbour, and is governed by a portreeve. Market on Tuesday. The living is a vicarage, value 20*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.—Warner's Tour in Wales. Guide to the Watering Places.

Llanbadarn, a parish in the hundred of Kefenlys, Radnor, Wales, 6 miles from Builth, and 173 from London; containing 65 houses and 313 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 12*s.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

Llanbadarn Odyn, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Islar, Cardigan, Wales, 5 miles from Tregaron; containing 160 houses and 756 inhabitants.

Llanbadarn Fynnyd, a village in the hundred of Knighton, Radnor, being a chapelry to Llanbister, 10 miles from Rhayader. It contains 72 houses and 433 inhabitants.

LLANBADRIG, a parish in the hundred of Talybolion, Anglesea, Wales, 6 miles from Amlwych, and 281 from London; containing 170 houses and 957 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 8*s.* 1*d.* patron the king.

LLANBEBLICK, a parish in the hundred of Irwigfai, Carnarvon, Wales, adjoining Carnarvon, and 250 miles from London; containing 609 houses and 3626 inhabitants, viz. 1588 males and 2038 females, of whom 399 were employed in various trades. This includes the town of Carnarvon, which is situated in the parish. The church is a vicarage, value 12*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Chester, with Carnarvon chapel annexed.

LLANBEDER, a river of South Wales, which runs into the Artro, near the town of Llanbeder.

LLANBEDER, or LLAMPETER, or LLANBEDR-PONT-STEPHIN, a market town and parish in the hundred of Modwyn, Cardigan, Wales, pleasantly situated in a fertile vale near the river Teife, 304 miles from London, and containing 147 houses and 669 inhabitants. It is supposed to have taken the additional name of Pont Stephen, from king Stephen's having thrown a bridge over one of the principal trenches of a camp here; the river is noted for its excellent salmon. It is a corporation governed by a portreeve, bailiff and town clerk; and together with Cardigan, Aberystwith, and Aspar, returns 1 member to parliament. There is a considerable traffic here in horses, horned cattle and hogs, great numbers being purchased here for the English market. Great quantities of salted butter, and tanned and raw hides, are sent coastways to London, Bristol, &c. Near the town stands the old family mansion of Sir Herbert Lloyd; its 4 towers, crowned with domes, peeping through a thick-planted enclosure, has a striking appearance. The market is on Tuesday. Fairs, 1st Wednesday after Whitsuntide, July 10, 1st Saturday in August; old stile, 27th August, 1st Saturday in September, old stile, 26th September, 19th October, and the first Saturday in November, old stile; the two first are by far the largest, for all kinds of cattle and goods. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.—Malkin's Tour in South Wales.

LLANBEDR, a parish in the hundred of Tyndaethy, Anglesey, Wales, 6 miles from Beaumaris; containing 54 houses and 312 inhabitants. It is a rectory, in the patronage of the bishop of Bangor.

LLANBEDR DYFFRIN CLWYD, a parish in the hundred of Ruthin, Denbigh, Wales, 2 miles from Ruthin, and 216 from London; containing 81 houses and 422 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 13*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.* the patron of which is the bishop of Bangor.

LLANBEDR, a parish in the hundred of Ardudwy, Merioneth, Wales, 8 miles from Dolgelly, and 218 from London; containing 56 house and 319 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

LLANBEDR PAINSCASTLE, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Painscastle, Radnor, Wales, 8 miles from Hay, and 161 from London; containing 50 houses and 278 inhabitants.

LLANBERIS, a parish in the hundred of Isgwfai, Carnarvon, Wales, 10 miles from Carnarvon; contains 99 houses and 464 inhabitants. This is a truly romantic situation, surrounded by rocks. In the vale are 2 small pools, formerly noted for excellent char, which are now entirely destroyed from the effects of the copper-works carried on here. Near the village is a high perpendicular mountain, called Clyder Vawr, of very slippery and dangerous ascent: except Snowdon, it is the highest mountain in Carnarvonshire. In a flat about ½ mile up its ascent is a small pool, called Llyn y Cwn, or the Pool of Dogs, mentioned by Giraldus Cambrensis, as containing a singular kind of trout, perch and eel, all wanting the left eye; but none of this description, or any other, are now to be found in it. On a rocky eminence near the lake stands the remains of an old building, called Dolbadarn Castle, consisting of a round tower, and the walls of various offices, &c. A little to the south is a tremendous cataract, called Cawnan's Mawr, falling from a mountain 60 feet high.—Cambrian Itinerary, and Aikin's Tour.

LLANBISTER, a parish in the hundred of Knighton, Radnor, 9 miles from Knighton, and 167 from London; containing 150 houses and 647 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 11*s.* 5*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

LLANBITHER, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Carthinog, Carmarthen, Wales, 5 miles from Lampeter, and 200 from London; containing 167 houses and 709 inhabitants.

LLANBLETHIAN, a parish in the hundred of Cowbridge, Glamorgan, Wales, 2 miles from Cowbridge, and 172 from London; containing 117 houses and 475 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Gloucester, with Cowbridge chapel annexed.

LLANBLULAN, a parish in the hundred of Lyfon, Anglesey, Wales, 10 miles from Holyhead, and 270 from London; containing 35 houses and 140 inhabitants. The rectory, value 22*l.* 3*s.* 11*d.* is in the patronage of the bishop of Bangor.

LLANCARVAN, a parish in the hundred of Dinas Powis, Glamorgan, Wales, 6 miles from Cowbridge, and 169 from London; containing 117 houses and 631 inhabitants. A monastery is said to have been founded here early in the sixth century, and it is noted as the birth place of Caradoc the celebrated Welsh bard and historian.

LLANDAFF, a city in the hundred of Kibbon, Glamorgan, Wales, situated on the river Taff, 2 miles from Cardiff, and 162 from London; containing 191 houses and 860 inhabitants. Its name is supposed to be a corruption of the word Llan-ar-daff, that is, the Church on the Taff, as the walls of the churchyard are close to the river. The church here was originally very richly endowed, but was deprived of most of its possessions soon after the conquest, at which time the cathedral was destroyed: the present structure was built by bishop Urban, in 1120; it had 2 towers at the west end, 89 feet high, of which that on the south only remains. The north tower, now 105 feet high, was rebuilt in an elegant manner in the reign of Henry VII. The body of the cathedral has also been rebuilt, but there are no cross aisles, nor is there any steeple in the middle. The discordant mixture of architecture in this cathedral arising from the repairs made of late years, is truly absurd. Among the ancient monuments of the bishops interred in this church, there is one representing an emaciated corpse in a winding-sheet, in which the appearance of death brought on by a long sickness, is admirably pourtrayed. The ecclesiastical establishment consists of the bishop, archdeacon, 12 prebendaries, and 2 vicars choral. The episcopal see was founded about the end of the 5th century. Part of a very thick ancient wall now standing south-east of the church, is supposed to have enclosed the bishop's palace, which is conjectured to have been built by Urban about the year 1120, and to have been destroyed by Owen Glendower. This diocese includes great part of the counties of Glamorgan and Monmouth, and though it is stiled a city, from being the see of a bishop, it is without a market. It has the benefit of a tolerable good harbour that opens into the Severn at 4 miles distant. Fairs, 9th February and Whit-Monday.—Aikin's Wales.

LLANDAFILOG, a parish in the hundred of Merthir, Brecon, Wales, 2½ miles from Brecon, and 169 from London; containing 69 houses and 354 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* and is in the patronage of the prince of Wales.

LLANDAROG, a parish in the hundred of Elver, Carmarthenshire, Wales, 7 miles from Carmarthen, and 212 from London; containing 92 houses and 472 inhabitants. The church is a curacy, in the patronage of the bishop of St. David.

LLANDEWI VELFRY, a parish in the hundred of Narberth, Pembroke, Wales, 6 miles from Narberth, and 250 from London; containing 103 houses and 517 inhabitants. The rectory is a sinecure, and the vicarage value 7*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.* is in the patronage of the prince of Wales.

LLANDOGETT, a parish in the hundred of Isdulas, Denbigh, Wales, 3 miles from Llanwrst; containing 56 houses and 250 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 13*s.* 1*d.* the patronage of which is in the bishop of St. Asaph.

LLANDULAS, a parish in the hundred of Isdulas, Denbigh, Wales, 2 miles from Abergeley, on the sea shore; containing 54 houses and 169 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 1*s.* 5*d.* the patronage of which is in the bishop of St. Asaph.

LLANDEFRIOG, a parish in the hundred of Troedyroyr, Cardiganshire, Wales, 1 mile from New Castle, in Glamorgan, and 222 from London; containing 134 houses and 647 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

LLANDDOISANT, or LLANDEVVEYSANT, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Perfidd, Carmarthen, Wales, 18 miles from Brecon, and 186 from London; containing 148 houses and 682 inhabitants.

LLANDEFFEL, or LLANDERFELL, a parish in the hundred of Penlyn, Merionethshire, Wales, 4½ miles from Bala, and 196 from London; containing 157 houses and 815 inhabitants. This place was remarkable for the wooden image of St. Derfel Gadam, concerning which the Welsh had a prophecy, that it would set a whole forest on fire; to complete which it was brought to London in 1538, and used as part of the fuel which consumed Forest the friar, in Smithfield, for denying the pope's supremacy. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 12*s.* 11*d.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph. Fair 17th Aug.

LLANDEGLA, a parish in the hundred of Tyndaethy, Anglesey, Wales, 2 miles from Beaumaris, and 251 from London; containing 99 houses and 484 inhabitants. The rectory, value 8*l.* 12*s.* 3*d.* has Beaumaris chapel annexed.

LLANDEILO, a parish united with Maenclochog, hundred of Kemess, Pembrokeshire, Wales, 8 miles from Narberth; containing 14 houses and 48 inhabitants. This parish is without a church.

LLANDEILO, a parish in the hundred of Cayo, Carmarthen, Wales, 10 miles from Lampeter, and 204 from London; containing 214 houses and 996 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

LLANDEILO VAWR, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Merthir, Brecon, Wales, 30 miles from Brecon, and 202 from London; containing 109 houses and 545 inhabitants.

LLANDEILO VAWR, a market town and parish in the hundred of Perfidd, Carmarthen, Wales. It stands on the side of a hill, at the foot of which runs the river Towy, 17 miles from Carmarthen, and 202 from London; containing 136 houses and 647 inhabitants. The streets are narrow, steep, and irregular, but some of the buildings are very handsome, and it has a considerable manufactory of flannel. The church is an ancient, low building, consisting of 2 aisles; the pillars of the arches which support the roof being only 5 feet high. Over the river Towy is a handsome stone bridge. About a mile distant on an eminence above the town, in Newton park, is Dynevor Castle, the seat of lord Dynevor, formerly the residence of the princes of South Wales. The building is of a square form, stuccoed, and has a small turret projecting at each corner, covered with a dome, and the whole embattled: it was formerly fortified with a double moat and rampart. The last prince who inhabited it was Rhys ap Tewdyr, an ancestor of Rees, now baron Dynevor. South of the castle are the ruins of a chapel between 2 round towers, and on the east side a dungeon at the bottom of a ruined tower. The river abounds with excellent salmon, trout, and eels. The market is on Saturday, and is well supplied with all kinds of provisions, vegetables, fish, &c. Fairs, 20th February, Palm Monday, 12th May, 11th June, 25d August, 12th November, and Monday before Christmas. The living is a vicarage, value 16*l.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.—Cambrian Itinerary. Malkin's Tour in South Wales.

LLANDEINIOLEN, a parish in the hundred of Isgwfai, Carnarvon, Wales, 4 miles from Carnarvon, and 250 from London; containing 208 houses and 1039 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.* the patronage of which is in the king.

LLANDELOY, a parish in the hundred of Dewsland, Pembroke, Wales, 7 miles from St. David's, and 260 from London; containing 36 houses and 161 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 5*l.* united with Llandhowell, in the patronage of the chantor and chapter of St. David's LLANDEVALOG, a parish in the hundred of Kirkwelly, Carmarthenshire, Wales, 6 miles from Carmarthen, and 220 from London; containing 215 houses and 1108 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

LLANDESILIO, a township and chapelry in the parish of Llandrini, in the hundred of Deuddur, Montgomery, Wales; containing 95 houses and 493 inhabitants The curacy is in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

LLANDESILIO, a parish in the hundred of Yale, Denbigh, 8 miles from Welchpool, and 170 from London; containing 287 houses and 629 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of sir Watkin Williams Wynne.

LLANDESILIO GOGO, a parish in the hundred of Moyddwn, Cardigan, Wales, 14 miles from Lampeter, and 218 from London; containing 117 houses and 512 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 3*l.* 18*s.* 1*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

LLANDESILIO, a parish in the hundred of Derlis, Carmarthen, Wales, 8 miles from Carmarthen, and 230 from London; containing 98 houses and 457 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 7*l.* the patronage of which is in the bishop of St. David's.

LLANDEVODWY, a parish in the hundred of Ogmore, Glamorgan, 6 miles from Lantrissant, and 180 from London; containing 44 houses and 244 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

LLANDEFALLEY, a parish in the hundred of Talgarth, Brecon, Wales, 7 miles from Brecon, and 162 from London; containing 137 houses and 724 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* and is united with Crickadarn.

LLANDEWI ABERARTH, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Ilar, Cardiganshire, Wales, 10 miles from Lampeter, and 214 from London; containing 124 houses and 656 inhabitants.

LLANDEWYWYD, a parish in the hundred of Troedyroyr, Cardiganshire, Wales, 10 miles from Aberystwith, and 210 from London; containing 169 houses and 798 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

LLANDIGAI, or LLANDYGAI, a parish in the hundred of Uchaff, Carnarvon, Wales, 2 miles from Bangor, and 249 from London, by Chester; containing 241 houses and 1280 inhabitants, of whom 69 were employed in various trades. It is very pleasantly situated by the side of the little turbulent river Ogwen. The church is a very neat building, but small, built in the form of a cross, having a tower at the intersection of the angles, supported within by 4 arches. In this church lie the remains of John Williams, archbishop of York in the reign of Charles I. and his figure is represented on a monument dressed in his episcopal robes, kneeling at an altar. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the bishop of Bangor.—Pennant's Tour.

LLANDISSILL, a parish in the hundred of Troedyroyr, Cardiganshire, Wales, 6 miles from Newcastle, and 212 from London; containing 127 houses and 1171 inhabitants. The vicarage is a sinecure, value 12*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.* annexed to the headship of Jesus College, Oxford.

LLANDOVERY, or LLANYMDOVERY, a market town and parish in the hundred of Derlis, Carmarthen, Wales, 18 miles from Brecon, and 188 from London; is situated on the river Towy, over which it has a handsome stone bridge of one arch. It contains 118 houses and 617 inhabitants. In the neighbourhood are the remains of an ancient castle covered with ivy. The market is on Friday. Fairs, 31st July, Wednesday after 10th October, November 26, Wednesday after Epiphany, Wednesday after Lent, and on Whit Tuesday. The church stands on a hill at the end of the town, and the living is a rectory, value 6*l.*—Lipscomb's Tour in South Wales.

LLANDOGH, a parish in the hundred of Dinas Powis, Glamorgan, Wales, 6 miles from Cardiff, and 166 from London; containing 21 houses and 90 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* united with Logan and Leekwith.

LLANDOUGH, a parish in the hundred of Cowbridge, Glamorgan, Wales, 4 miles from Cowbridge, and 170 from London; containing 18 houses and 85 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 18*s.* 9*d.*

LLANDWYE, a parish in the hundred of Ardudwy, Merionethshire, Wales, 5¾ miles from Harlech; containing 53 houses and 308 inhabitants. The rectory, value 10*l.* 18*s.* 1*d.* is in the patronage of the bishop of Bangor, and is united with Llanendog. This church had formerly large possessions, now swallowed up by the sea. At Plas Newydd, 2 miles distant, is a new castellated mansion belonging to the earl of Uxbridge. Fair, 14th March.

LLANDYFRYDOG, a parish in the hundred of Twrcelyn, Anglesey, Wales, 6 miles from Amlwch, and 270 from London; containing 108 houses and 533 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Bangor.

LLANDYRNOG, a parish in the hundred of Ruthin, Denbighshire, Wales, 6 miles from Ruthin, and 222 from London; containing 133 houses and 675 inhabitants. The rectory, value 19*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.* is held in commendam with the bishopric of Bangor, and is served by a curate.

LLANEDERN, a parish in the hundred of Kibber, Glamorgan, Wales, 4 miles from Cardiff, and 164 from London; containing 59 houses and 301 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 8*s.* 11*d.* and is in the patronage of the archdeacon and chapter of Llandaff.

LLANELIAN, a parish in the hundred of Twrcelyn, Anglesey, Wales, 2 miles from Amlwych, and 273 from London; containing 241 houses and 1168 inhabitants. The church is a very ancient building, and tolerably handsome; in it is the portrait of St. Elian Cannaid its founder, as well as of several of the apostles. A private chapel dedicated to the founder adjoins the church. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.*

LLANELIAN, a parish in the hundred of Isdulas, Denbigh, Wales, 6 miles from Ruthin, and 210 from London; containing 87 houses and 454 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 15*s.* 10*d.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

LLANELLY, a township and chapelry in the parish of Langattock, hundred of Crickhowell, Brecknock, Wales; containing 119 houses and 937 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the gift of the duke of Beaufort.

LLANELLY, a parish and formerly a market town in the hundred of Carnwallen, Carmarthenshire, Wales, 13 miles from Carmarthen, and 220 from London; containing 500 houses and 2972 inhabitants, viz. 1398 males, and 1574 females, of whom 208 were chiefly employed in trade. The principal business of this place is in coals, for which it was noted in the time of Leland. It is pleasantly seated on a creek near the sea, and the houses are tolerably well built. In the mouth of the creek or river Bury, is a small island called Mashynnis, where formerly stood a monastery built by St. Piro. Fairs, on Holy Thursday, and 30th September. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the duke of Rutland.

LLANELWETH, a parish in the hundred of Colwyn, Radnor, Wales, 6 miles from Builth, and 170 from London; containing 23 houses and 146 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

LLANELLWIS, or LLANELLWY. See ST. ASAPH.

LLANENY, a parish in the hundred of Ruthin, Denbigh, Wales, 4 miles from Denbigh, and 216 from London; containing 144 houses and 744 inhabitants The rectory, value 2*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* is annexed to the bishopric of Bangor.

LLANERCHLWYDOG, or LLANYCLOTHOG, a parish in the hundred of Kemess, Pembrokeshire, Wales, 12 miles from Cardigan; containing 32 houses and 167 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.*

LLANFACHELL, a parish in the hundred of Talybolion, Anglesey, Wales, 4 miles from Amlwch, and 279 from London; containing 166 houses and 440 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Bangor.

LLANFAETHAETH, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Talybont, Merionethshire, Wales, 5 miles from Dolgelly, and 217 from London; containing 207 houses and 1069 inhabitants.

LLANFAES, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Tyndaethwy, Anglesey, Wales, 2 miles from Beaumaris; containing 28 houses and 198 inhabitants. A stone coffin dug up some years ago at this place, was supposed to have contained the body of Joan, daughter of king John of Denmark, deposited in the burial ground of a house of Franciscan friars, which anciently stood here. It is now converted into a trough for watering horses at a farm house called the Friars, (which is supposed to stand on the site of the monastery) about 1 mile from Beaumaris.

LLANFAELOG, a township and chapelry in the parish of Llanbulan, in the hundred of Lyfon, Anglesey, Wales, 12 miles from Beaumaris; containing 97 houses and 441 inhabitants.

LLANFIHANGEL ESCHWIOG, a parish in the hundred of Monai, Anglesey, Wales, 10 miles from Holyhead, and 270 from London; containing 60 houses and 353 inhabitants. The church is a curacy, in the patronage of the dean of Bangor.

LLANFIHANGEL-TREBBARDD, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Llandyfridog, in the hundred of Twrcelyn, Anglesey, Wales, 8 miles from Beaumaris; containing 50 houses and 260 inhabitants.

LLANFIHANGEL ABERGWLYSSIN, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Llangamerch, in the hundred of Builth, Brecknockshire, Wales, 13 miles from Builth; containing 68 houses and 337 inhabitants. The curacy is in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

LLANFIHANGEL BRYN PABBEAN, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Llanavan Vawr, in the hundred of Builth, Brecknockshire, Wales, 9 miles from Builth, and 182 from London; containing 62 houses and 350 inhabitants.

LLANFIHANGEL NANT BRAN (Upper and Lower), a parish in the hundred of Merthir, Brecon, Wales, 8 miles from Brecon; containing 106 houses and 519 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

LLANFIHANGEL CREDDYN, (Upper and Lower), a parish and curacy in the hundred of Ilar, Cardigan, Wales, 7 miles from Tregaron, and 211 from London; containing 271 houses and 1427 inhabitants.

LLANFILANG L YSTRAD, a parish in the hundred of Mowddyn, Cardiganshire, Wales, 9 miles from Tregaron, and 213 from London; containing 178 houses and 784 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 14*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

LLANFIHANGEL ABERCOWIN, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Derlis, Carmarthen, Wales, 8 miles from Carmarthen, and 230 from London; containing 118 houses and 607 inhabitants.

LLANFIHANGEL ARARTH, a parish in the hundred of Carthinog, Carmarthen, Wales, 13 miles from Carmarthen, and 215 from London; containing 227 houses and 1179 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

LLANFIHANGEL RHOSYCORN, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Llanlwny, in the hundred of Carthinsy, Carmarthen, Wales, 9 miles from Llandilovawr, and 211 from London; containing 92 houses and 437 inhabitants.

LLANFIHANGEL ABERBYTHYDD, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Iskennor, Carmarthen, Wales, 5 miles from Llandilovawr, and 200 from London; containing 118 houses and 654 inhabitants.

LLANFIHANGEL Y PENNANT, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Towyn, hundred of Efyniodd, Carnarvon, Wales, 12 miles from Carnarvon; containing 80 houses and 427 inhabitants.

LLANFIHANGEL ITRAITH, a parish united with Llandeckwin, in the hundred of Ardudwy, Merionethshire, Wales, 9½ miles from Harlech, and 230 from London; containing 125 houses and 669 inhabitants. The rectory, value 6*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.* is annexed to the treasurership of Bangor.

LLANFINAN, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Llanfihangel y Ceifog, in the hundred of Menai, Anglesey, Wales, 6 miles from Beaumaris, and 255 from London; containing 26 houses and 154 inhabitants.

LLANFROTHEN, a parish in the hundred of Arduddwy, Merionethshire, Wales, 22 miles from Dolgelly, and 233 from London; containing 84 houses and 646 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 6*l.* 15*s.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of Bangor.

LLANFYDD, a parish in the hundred of Isaled, Denbighshire, Wales, 5 miles from Denbigh, and 225 from London; containing 182 houses and 957 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

LLANFYNYDD, a parish in the hundred of Carthinog, Carmarthen, Wales, 10 miles from Carmarthen, and 230 from London; containing 247 houses and 1145 inhabitants, of whom 65 were returned as employed in various trades. It is a rectory, value 18*l.* the patronage of which is in the bishop of St. Asaph.

LLANGADDOCK, a market town and parish in the hundred of Perfydd, Carmarthen, Wales, 22 miles from Brecon, and 184¼ from London; containing 373 houses and 1821 inhabitants, of whom 42 were returned as employed in various trades. This town, which stands between the rivers Branc and Sawthy, is tolerably well built, but was formerly much more considerable; the manufacture of coarse woollens and stockings carried on here is chiefly consumed in the town. Its ancient castle has been long since demolished. The market is on Thursday. Fairs, 12th March, last Thursday in May, 9th July, first Thursday after 11th September, and second Thursday after 10th October and 11th December, each 2 days, for cattle, provisions, pediary, &c. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* the patronage of which is in the bishop of St. David's.—Pennant's Tour.

LLANGADFEN, a parish in the hundred of Matrafel, Montgomery, Wales, 8 miles from Llanvair, and 193 from London; containing 140 houses and 858 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 5*s.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

LLANGAIN, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Derlis, Carmarthen, Wales, 4 miles from Carmarthen, and 230 from London; containing 73 houses and 321 inhabitants.

LLANGAMMARCH, a parish in the hundred of Builth, Brecon, Wales, 8 miles from Builth, and 181 from London; containing 125 houses and 780 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 14*s.* 5*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

LLANGAN, a parish in the hundred of Ogmore, Glamorganshire, Wales, 5 miles from Bridgend, and 176 from London; containing 41 houses and 189 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 16*s.*

LLANGAFALON, or LLANGAFELING, a parish in the hundred of Geneur Glyun, Cardigan, Wales, 7 miles from Aberystwith, and 210 from London; containing 114 houses and 477 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

LLANGANHAVEL, a parish in the hundred of Ruthin, Denbighshire, Wales, 5 miles from Ruthin, and 221 from London; containing 69 houses and 380 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 15*s.* in the patronage of the bishop of Bangor.

LLANGARTY TALYLYN, a parish in the hundred of Penkelly, Brecon, Wales, 7 miles from Brecon, and 160 from London; containing 32 houses and 130 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 18*s.* 9*d.*

LLANGATHEN, a parish in the hundred of Carthinog, Carmarthenshire, Wales, 3 miles from Llandelovawr, and 205 from London; containing 164 houses and 908 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Chester.

LLANGATTOCK, a parish in the hundred of Crickhowell, Brecknockshire, Wales, 6 miles from Abergavenny, and 140 from London; containing 136 houses and 816 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, in the patronage of the duke of Beaufort.

LLANGEFFNI, a parish in the hundred of Menai, Anglesey, Wales, 8 miles from Beaumaris, and 260 from London; containing 97 houses and 539 inhabitants. It is situated in a beautiful vale. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Bangor.

LLANGEINWIN, a parish in the hundred of Menai, Anglesey, Wales, 7 miles from Beaumaris, and 250 from London; containing 111 houses and 612 inhabitants. It is a rectory, in the patronage of the earl of Pembroke, the clear annual value of which is about 300*l.*

LLANGEVELACH, a parish in the hundred of Llangevelach, Glamorganshire, Wales, 3 miles from Swansea, and 204 from London; containing 415 houses and 2549 inhabitants; of whom 102 were employed in various trades. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

LLANGELOR, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Elvet, Carmarthenshire, Wales, 4 miles from Newcastle, and 230 from London; containing 272 houses and 1292 inhabitants.

LLANGINNING, a township and chapelry in the parish of St. Clares, in the hundred of Derlis, Carmarthenshire, Wales, 8 miles from Carmarthen, and 226 from London; containing 64 houses and 325 inhabitants.

LLANGOLLEN, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Chirk, Denbighshire, Wales, 7 miles from Wrexham, and 192 from London; containing 269 houses and 1287 inhabitants. The situation of this town is very romantic, in the midst of mountains, rocks, woods, and torrents. It is watered by the river Dee, over which it has a beautiful bridge of four arches, supposed to have been built by Trevor, bishop of St. Asaph, about the year 1400, and is reckoned one of the wonders of Wales; the center arch is near 30 feet in diameter, it is erected on the ledge of a rock, which seems very unsafe for a foundation, but the stream only passes through the western arch. The market is on Saturday. Fairs, last Friday in January, 17th March, 31st May, 21st August, and 22d November. It is reported that a castle was destroyed here by fire so early as the 10th century, but the ruins yet remaining, appear to be of far more modern origin. It is called Castle Dinas Bran from the name of the mountain on which it is situated, whose declivity is exceedingly steep, and difficult of approach, and the castle being defended by a long and deep entrenchment, as well as by a large fosse, hollowed out of the solid rock, immediately under the wall, it must have been almost impregnable: the entrance was by two draw-bridges. About two miles distant is Valle Crucis, an abbey founded about the year 1200, and now one of the finest pieces of antiquity remaining in the principality. Historians have not agreed concerning the etymology of its name, some deriving it from the figure of its building in the shape of a cross, and others from a present made by its monks to king Edward I. of a piece of the true cross. The west window is a beautiful specimen of architecture, surmounted by a small circular light, but much of its ornaments are now defaced, and that part of the building which is standing is converted into a farm-house, with stables, &c. About 2 miles distant are the ruins of one of Ower Glendower's palaces. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.—Pennant's and Warner's Tours.

LLANGONOD, a parish in the hundred of Newcastle, Glamorganshire, Wales, 4 miles from Bridgend, and 181 from London; containing 146 houses and 806 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 19*l.* 5*s.*

LLANGOWER, a parish in the hundred of Penlynn, Merionethshire, Wales, 3¼ miles from Bala, and 205 from London; containing 101 houses and 430 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 5*s.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

LLANGRANNOG, a parish in the hundred of Moyddyn, Cardiganshire, Wales, 7½ miles from Lampeter, and 210 from London; containing 136 houses and 470 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

LLANGUNLLO, a parish in the hundred of Kefenlys, Radnor, Wales, 8 miles from Presteign, and 160 from London; containing 67 houses and 367 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 1*s.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

LLANGURRICK, a parish in the hundred of Llanidloes, Montgomeryshire, Wales, 5 miles from Llanvyllin, and 190 from London; containing 258 houses and 1426 inhabitants, of whom 327 were employed in various trades. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 10*s.* in the patronage of the bishop of Bangor.

LLANGWYM, a parish in the hundred of Isaled, Denbighshire, Wales, 6 miles from Corwen, containing 183 houses and 850 inhabitants. The rectory, value 11*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.* is a sinecure.

LLANGRISTIOLIS, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Maltraeth, Anglesey, Wales, 10 miles from Beaumaris, and 260 from London; containing 124 houses and 643 inhabitants.

LLANGYBI, a parish in the hundred of Efyniony dd, Carnarvonshire, Wales, 6 miles from Pwllheli; containing 128 houses and 633 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* united with Llanarmon.

LLANGYNFELIN, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Geneur Glyn, Cardiganshire, Wales, 7½ miles from Aberystwith, and 210 from London; containing 114 houses and 477 inhabitants.

LLANGYNDIERN, a township and chapelry in the parish of Llandevalog, hundred of Kirkwelly, Carmarthenshire, Wales, 226 miles from London; containing 328 houses and 1630 inhabitants, of whom 193 were returned as being employed in various trades, &c.

LLANGYAN, a township and chapelry in the parish of Llanbedrog, hundred of Gaflogion, Carnarvonshire, Wales, 6 miles from Pwllheli; containing 181 houses and 791 inhabitants.

LLANHAMLACH, a parish in the hundred of Penkelly, Brecon, Wales, 164 miles from London; containing 23 houses and 125 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.*

LLANHARAN, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Llanylid, hundred of Cowbridge, Glamorganshire, Wales, 6 miles from Cowbridge; containing 39 houses and 213 inhabitants.

LLANILTERN, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of St. Fagan's, in the hundred of Dinas Powis, Glamorganshire, Wales, 3 miles from Cardiff; containing 23 houses and 84 inhabitants.

LLANKERRIG Y DRUIDION, a parish in the hundred of Isaled, Denbighshire, Wales, 3 miles from Llangollen; containing 182 houses and 851 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 8*s.* 1*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

LLANLECHID, a parish in the hundred of Uchaff, Carnarvonshire, Wales; containing 253 houses and 1322 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Bangor.

LLANLOWELL, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Llanwrthull, in Brecknock, Wales, 2½ miles from Rhayader; containing 35 houses and 189 inhabitants.

LLANLLWCHIARN, a parish in the hundred of Moyddyn, Cardiganshire, Wales, 8 miles from Lampeter; containing 36 houses and 205 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 7*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

LLANLLWCHIARN, a parish in the hundred of Newton, Montgomery, 7 miles from Montgomery; containing 101 houses and 675 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

LLANON, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Perfydd, Carmarthen, Wales, 219 miles from London; containing 191 houses and 1233 inhabitants. It has a neat small church, and the inhabitants carry on a trifling trade.

LLANRHAIDR, a parish in the hundred of Isaled, Denbigh, Wales, 3 miles from Denbigh; containing 242 houses and 1702 inhabitants, of whom 89 were returned employed in various trades. It is pleasantly situated on a small eminence in the fertile vale of Clwyd. The church is a large handsome building, and the east window has a good painting of the genealogy of Christ from Jesse. About a quarter of a mile from the church is a cold-bath called Ffynnon Dauffnog, or the deep-well, to which there was formerly a chapel adjoining. Fairs, 5th May, 24th July, 28th September, and 8th November. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

LLANRHAIADR YN MOCHNANT, a parish consisting of 17 townships, in the hundred of Chirk, Denbighshire, Wales, 5½ miles from Llangedwin; containing 369 houses and 1869 inhabitants, of whom 147 were employed in various trades. It is situated in a deep hollow, surrounded on all sides by lofty mountains. The buildings are ancient, and irregular. About 4 miles distant, on the banks of the river Rhaiadr, is a celebrated cataract called Pistell Rhaiadr; near the foot of the rock which forms the cataract is a small neat room, built for the accommodation of visitors. The celebrated Dr. Morgan, who first translated the Bible into Welsh, was vicar of this place. The rectory is a sinecure, value 18*l.* 16*s.*

LLANRWSTED, a parish in the hundred of Iar, Cardiganshire, Wales, 9 miles from Aberystwith, in the road to Cardigan; containing 238 houses and 1148 inhabitants. Near it are two large stones, called druidical sepulchres, upwards of 10 feet high and between 5 and 6 feet broad. A nunnery is also thought to have formerly stood here. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

LLANRWST, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Isdulas, Denbigh, Wales, 28 miles from Aberconway, and 226 from London; standing on the banks of the river Conway, over which it has a simple but elegant bridge of three arches, built in 1636 by Inigo Jones, and connecting the town with Carnarvonshire. Llanrwst contains 642 houses and 2549 inhabitants, viz. 1202 males and 1347 females, of whom 77 were returned as being employed in various trades. The church is a very plain building, adjoining which is a chapel built by one of the Wynne family. There are many handsome tombs in both; against the wall of the church at the west end are five brasses with inscriptions and portraits of the persons to whose memory they were erected. In the river Wenfel, which fall into the Conway a little below the town, is a romantic cataract. The river is navigable for small vessels as high as the little village Trefriew, 1½ mile above the town. Near this town stands Gwydir house, the seat of lord Gwydir, an extensive pile of building, which marks the splendour of its ancient possessors. Llanrwst is the high road from Shropshire to Holyhead, and the only market-town in this part of the country; it is the center of all the business of the populous vale in the middle of which it stands. It has a good market-house and free school. The market is on Tuesday. Fairs, 25th April, 21st June, 9th August, 17th September, and 11th December. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph, and is united with the rectory, which is a sinecure.—Warner's and Aikin's Tours in Wales.

LLANSAMLET, a parish in the hundred of Llangevelach, Glamorganshire, Wales, 201 miles from London; containing 551 houses and 2567 inhabitants. It is a curacy annexed to Llangevelach, in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

LLANSANTFRAED, a parish in the hundred of Builth, Brecknock, Wales, 162 miles from London, between Crickhowel and Brecon; containing 141 houses and 633 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.*

LLANSANTFRAED, a parish in the hundred of Isdulas, Denbigh, Wales, 4 miles from Conway; containing 162 houses and 865 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

LLANSANFRAED, a parish in the hundred of Ilar, lower division, Cardiganshire, Wales, 6 miles from Conway; containing 174 houses and 777 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 13*s* 4*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

LLANSANTFRAED YN MECHAN, a parish in the hundred of Deuddwr, Montgomery, Wales, 180 miles from London; containing 80 houses and 492 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* being a sinecure in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

LLANSTEPHAN, a parish in Pembrokeshire, Wales, 6 miles from Kidwelly; containing 79 houses and 374 inhabitants. It stands at the mouth of the river Towy, and the inhabitants subsist chiefly by fishing; on the summit of a high promontory near it, are the remains of an ancient castle. It is a rectory, value 3*l.* 0*s.* 5*d.*

LLANSTEPHAN, a parish in the hundred of Derlis, Carmarthen, Wales, 5 miles from Kidwelly, and 220 from London; containing 201 houses and 974 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the prince of Wales.

LLANSTEPHAN POINT, a cape on the south coast of Wales, in the Bristol Channel, at the mouth of the river Towy.

LLANTECWYN, a small village in Merionethshire, Wales, 5 miles from Harlech. About a mile from this village there is a beautiful large pool of water, called Llyn Tecwynuchia.

LLANTRISSANT, a borough, market-town, and parish in the hundred of Miskin, Glamorganshire, Wales, 10 miles from Llandaff, and 170 from London; containing 364 houses and 1715 inhabitants, of whom 93 were returned as being employed in trade. It is pleasantly seated on the side of a steep hill, which abounds in lead-ore, and is the property of the marquis of Bute. Its name signifies the church of the three saints; the church being dedicated to St. Ilhog, St. Devong, and St. Monow. The streets are steep and narrow, but many of the houses are tolerably well-built, and the prospects are picturesque. The town-hall and market-house are new buildings, erected by the late earl of Bute. Its ancient castle is now in ruins, having only part of one side of a tower remaining. This borough is governed by a portreeve, and together with Cardiff, Swansea, &c. unites in sending one member to parliament. The market is on Friday. Fairs, 1st May, 1st August, and 18th of October. It is a vicarage, value 26*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Gloucester.

LLANUFYDD, a parish in the hundred of Isaled, Denbighshire, Wales, 5 miles from Denbigh; containing 132 houses and 957 inhabitants. Here are the ruins of an ancient seat of Myredydd ap Meirchion, lord of Isdulas, the chapel of which is now converted into a farm-house. Fairs, 18th March, 12th May, 14th August, and 20th November.

LLANVAES. See LLANFAES, Anglesey.

LLANVIHANGEL. See LLANFIHANGEL.

LLANVILLING, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Llanfylling, Montgomery, Wales, situated in a flat part of the county, near the river Cane, 15 miles from Montgomery, and 186 from London; the town is remarkably neat, containing 437 houses and 1594 inhabitants, of whom 73 were employed in trade. Many of the houses are well built. It was first incorporated by Llewellyn ap Gryffyd, lord of Mechain and Mochant, in the reign of Edward I.; and is governed by 2 bailiffs, chosen annually, who are justices of the peace within their own district during the time of office. The market is on Tuesday. Fairs, Wednesday before Easter, 24th May, 28th June, and 5th October. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

LLANWNNOG, a parish in the hundred of Moyddyn, Cardiganshire, Wales, 5 miles from Lampeter, containing 235 houses and 1045 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

LLANWINNIO, a parish in the hundred of Derlis, Carmarthen, Wales, 10 miles from Carmarthen; containing 142 houses and 666 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

LLANWRTYD, a parish in the hundred of Builth, Brecon, Wales, 6 miles from Garth and 20 from Brecon; containing 97 houses and 457 inhabitants. It is noted for a spring discovered about 80 years since, which is said to be very efficacious in scorbutic cases.

LLANYCIL, a parish in the hundred of Penllyn, Merionethshire, Wales, 1¼ mile from Bala; containing 486 houses and 2445 inhabitants, viz. 1124 males and 1321 females, of whom 526 were employed in various trades. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 6*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

LLANWCHLLYN, a parish in the hundred of Penlyn, Merioneth, Wales, 3 miles from Towyn, contains 290 houses and 1491 inhabitants.

LLANYMYNECH, a small village in Merionethshire, Wales, 6 miles from Oswestry, and 9½ from Welsh Pool; the houses are all white. Llanymynech-hill is a vast hillock of marble, and here are the most extensive lime works in the country, which supply the surrounding district both for the purposes of building and agriculture. In the time of the Romans considerable copper mines appear to have been worked here, several of the pits, of great dimensions, with their air shafts, are still remaining, in which Roman coins have been found; and some years since a skeleton was discovered, with several mining tools. Between the village and the rock a branch of the Ellesmere canal passes. The little river Virnwy, which flows by the village, unites with the Severn at the foot of the Breddin hills, and abounds with fish. Here runs the rampart made by Offa, king of the Mercians, to divide his country from Wales, called Offa's Dyke. About 4 miles distant is an house where the poor of a neighbouring parish are maintained. Fairs, 29th of May and 29th of September.—Aikin's and Warner's Tours in Wales.

LLANYDLOES, a market town and parish in the hundred of Llanydloes, Montgomery, Wales, pleasantly situated near the right bank of the Severn, 13 miles from Newton and 190 from London; containing 408 houses and 2282 inhabitants, viz. 1038 males and 1244 females, of whom 743 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures. The church has a neat appearance, being supported by six arches, the pillars of which have capitals of palm leaves, and are said to have been brought from Cwmber Abbey. Several of the streets are spacious, but the buildings in general are irregular, and mostly of lath and mud between timber frames. A number of persons are constantly employed in the neighbouring slate quarries, and there are several very extensive sheep-walks about the town. On the borders of Cardigan, about 7 miles distant, is Plinlimmon, one of the highest mountains in Wales. The market on Saturday is very considerable for wool and yarn, with which it supplies Welsh Pool. Fairs, first Saturday in April and September, 11th of May, 17th of July, and 28th of October. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Bangor.

LLANYMOWDDWY, a parish in the hundred of Tallybout, Merionethshire, Wales, 13¼ miles from Bala; containing 139 houses and 702 inhabitants.

LLAUGHARN, a market town and parish in the hundred of Derlis, Carmarthenshire, Wales, 7 miles from Carmarthen, and 223 from London; containing, with the hamlet of Marsh, 241 houses and 1016 inhabitants, of whom 109 were returned as being employed in various trades. It stands at the mouth of the river Towy, where, on a low rock, are the remains of a very antient castle, the foundation of which is washed by the tide. It is recorded to have been destroyed, as well as the castle at Llanstephan, by Llewellyn, prince of North Wales. The market is on Saturday. Fair 10th of December. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.*—Windham's Tour in Wales.

LLWCOR, LLYCHWYR, or LLYCHWR, a parish in the hundred of Swansea, Glamorgan, Wales, standing on the left bank of a river of the same name, which rises about 3 miles south of Landilo Vawr, and falls into the Severn near Carmarthen bay. It lies 242 miles from London, and contains 129 houses and 583 inhabitants. It is mentioned by Antoninus under the name of Leucarum. The ancient town and church is supposed to have stood nearer the river on the other side of the ruined castle, the walls of which now only remain, having been destroyed by Rhys ap Gryffyd in 1215. On the north-east, at a place called Cfn-y-Brynn, is a vast stone, weighing 20 tons, called Arthur's stone. The living is a rectory, value 9*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.* in the patronage of the prince of Wales.

LLYN SAVATHAN, a lake in Brecon, Wales, 4 miles east from the town of Brecon, about 2 miles long, 1 mile broad, and 13 fathoms deep; it abounds with excellent fish.

LLYN CWELLYN, 7 miles from Carnarvon, in which the red char is taken during the winter season.

LLYN DYWARCHEN, a lake or pool near the preceding, in which is a floating island.

LLYN TRIGRAIENYN, 5 miles from Dolgelly, so denominated from 3 huge fragments of rock, lying at the east end. This small pool is said to be upwards of 50 fathoms deep.

LLYND TEGID, or BALA LAKE, called also PIMBLEMEER, is about 23 fathoms deep, and in stormy weather the waves run high and encroach upon the land towards the north-east end. It sometimes rises to the height of 9 feet, and in stormy weather overflows the valley of Eidirnion. It abounds with pike, perch, eels, trout and gwynnid.

LLEDDER, a river of Wales, in the county of Carnarvon, which runs into the Conway about 11 miles from Aberconway.

LLEDDING, a river in Montgomeryshire which falls into the Severn at Welsh Pool.

LLEDWICH, a river in Salop which falls into the Teme at Great Chapel.

LLEGGY, a river in Carnarvonshire which falls into the Conway above Bettus.

LLENONY, a river of Wales, in Carnarvonshire, which runs into the Irish sea 5 miles from Carnarvon.

LLEUENY, a river of Wales, in the county of Brecon, which runs into the Wye about 3 miles from Nay.

LLEYNGORYLL, a river of Wales, in Merionethshire, which runs into the Irish sea 3 miles from Barmouth.

LLYNAN, a river of Wales, in Carnarvonshire, which falls into the Irish sea near Carnarvon.

LLOGHER, or LOUGHER, a river in Carmarthenshire. See LLWYER.

LLOYD, a river in Montgomeryshire, Wales, which falls into the Severn near Llanydloes.

Llee, or Thlue, a river in Carmarthenshire, which falls into the Llogher near Llogher castle

Llue, a river in Merionethshire, Wales, which falls into the Dee near Pemblemeer

Load, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish and hundred of Martock, Somerset, 3½ miles from Ilchester, and 126 from London. Population included with Martock.

Loasby, a village in the hundred of East Goscote, Leicester, 8 miles from Leicester, and 89 from London; containing 9 houses and 46 inhabitants.

Loch, the Scottish name for Lake, which is also applied to numerous arms of the sea; as Loch Lomond, Loch Leven, Loch Tay. See Lomond, Leven, &c.

Lochaber, a district of Inverness-shire, Scotland, bounded on the east by Badinoch, on the south by Athol, Rannoch and Argyle, on the west by Moidart, and on the north by the lakes and rivers which occupy the middle of Glenmore-nahalabin; it is one of the most dreary and mountainous districts in Scotland, and is very thinly inhabited. The chief produce of the country is black cattle, which are sold to the English graziers. It produces some scanty crops of oats and barley. This district is celebrated for its gallant Thane, Banquo, who was murdered in 1050 by Macbeth.

Loch Achastial, a bay of Scotland, on the west coast of the county of Argyle, 24 miles from Inverary.

Loch Achrakill, a bay on the west coast of Scotland and county of Ross, situated on the south side of Loch Ferridon.

Loch Alarich, a lake of Scotland, in the county of Perth, 10 miles from George-town.

Loch Alfarric, a lake of Scotland, in the county of Inverness, 14 miles from Fort Augustus.

Loch Alort, a bay on the west coast of Scotland and county of Inverness, 24 miles west of Fort William.

Loch Anacat, a lake of Scotland, in the county of Perth, 10 miles from George-town.

Loch Ann, a bay of Scotland, on the coast of Argyle, which communicates with Mull Sound.

Loch Anstronmun, a lake of Scotland, in Perthshire, 3½ miles from George-town.

Loch Archeig, a lake of Scotland, in the county of Inverness, 10 miles long and 1 broad. 12 miles north of Fort William.

Loch Ardvar, a bay of Scotland, on the west coast of Sutherlandshire, 23 miles south of Cape Wrath.

Loch Asynt, a bay of Scotland, lying on the north-west coast of the county of Ross.

Loch Aven, a lake of Scotland, in Banffshire, 21 miles south of Inveraven.

Loch Awe, a lake of Scotland, in Argyleshire, 22 miles long, and from half a mile to a mile and a half in breadth.

Lochbadcaal, a bay of Scotland, on the west coast of Sutherlandshire, 20 miles south of Cape Wrath.

Loch Castle Semple, a lake of Scotland, in Renfrewshire, 6 miles from Paisley.

Loch Catherine, a lake of Scotland, in the county of Perth, about 6 miles long and 20 miles from Crieff.

Loch Dalreach, a lake of Scotland, in Ayrshire, 10 miles from Ayr.

Loch Damh, a lake of Scotland, in Perthshire, 7 miles south of George-town.

Loch Dee, a lake, of Scotland, in the county of Kirkcudbright, 12 miles from New Galloway.

Loch Derculoch, a lake of Scotland, in Perthshire, 7 miles south of Blair and Athol.

Loch Dirantadlin, a lake of Scotland, on the east border of Argyleshire.

Loch Doine, a lake of Scotland, in Perthshire, 20 miles from Crieff.

Loch Drumelly, a lake of Scotland, in Perthshire, 7 miles from Coupar, Loch Duntelchah, a lake in the county of Inverness, 20 miles from Fort Augustus.

Loch Eil, a lake at the south end of Inverness-shire, 8 miles long and 1 broad, near Fort William.

Loch Enoch, a lake in the county of Kirkcudbright, 14 miles from New Galloway.

Loch Ericht, a lake in the county of Inverness, 12 miles long, and ½ a mile wide, 4 miles from George-town.

Loch Ersey, a lake in the island of Arran, 5 miles from Brodick.

Loch Essan, a lake in Perthshire, 18 miles south of George-town.

Loch Fin, a lake in Ayrshire, 14 miles from Irvine.

Loch Fine, a lake in Argyleshire, 4 miles long, and from 1 to 4 and 6 broad.

Loch Fintrakin, a lake in the county of Dumfries, Scotland, 7 miles from Lochmaben.

Loch Fitty, a lake in Fifeshire, Scotland, 2½ miles from Dunfermline.

Loch Frenchy, a lake in Perthshire, Scotland, 9 miles north of Crieff.

Loch Garry, a lake in Perthshire, Scotland, 9 miles from George-town

Loch Garvie, a lake in Ross-shire, 10 miles west of Dingwall.

Loch Goyle, a lake which branches off to the north-west, from Loch Long, Argyleshire.

Loch Heck, a lake in Argyleshire, Scotland, between Loch Long and Loch Fine.

Loch Inver, a lake in the county of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 5 miles north of New Galloway.

Loch Kenmoor, a lake of Scotland, 5 miles long and ½ a mile wide, at the conflux of the rivers Ken and Dee.

Loch Kingsmoor, a lake in the county of Selkirk, Scotland, 11 miles from Selkirk.

Loch Laggan, a lake in the county of Inverness, Scotland, 8 miles long and ½ a mile wide, 10 miles south-east of Fort Augustus.

Loch Lawerston, a lake in Kincardineshire, Scotland, 9 miles north-east of Stonehaven.

Loch Lee, a lake in the county of Angus, Scotland, 11 miles north-west of Brechin.

Loch Levs, a lake in Kincardineshire, Scotland, 10½ miles from Stonehaven.

Loch Lochy, a lake in the county of Inverness, Scotland, between Fort Augustus and Fort William, 10 miles long and rather more than one wide, communicating with Loch Eil, Loch Linnhe and Loch Arkeig.

Loch of the Lows, a lake in the county of Selkirk, 13½ miles south-west of Selkirk.

Loch Luichart, a lake in Ross-shire, Scotland, 11 miles west of Dingwall.

Loch-Lydoch, a lake in Perthshire, Scotland, 5 miles west of George-town.

Loch Lyon, a lake in Perthshire, 10 miles south-west of George-town.

Loch Maddy, a lake in Inverness-shire, Scotland, 5 miles long and ½ a mile wide, 17 miles north-west of Fort Augustus.

Loch Mahahee, a lake in Perthshire, 5 miles north-west of Dumblane.

Loch Merk, a lake in Perthshire, Scotland, 7 miles north of Blair Athol.

Loch Mickly, a lake in the county of Inverness, Scotland, 13 miles north-east of Fort Augustus.

Loch Milford, or Loch Melfort, a safe harbour of Argyleshire, Scotland, much resorted to for herrings, 18 miles west of Inverary.

Loch Moan, a lake in the county of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 18 miles north-west of New Galloway.

Loch Mochrum, a lake in the county of Wigton, Scotland, 7 miles west of Wigton.

Loch Monar, a lake in Ross-shire, Scotland, 6 miles long and ½ a mile wide.

Loch Moorn, a bay of Scotland, in the north-west of Ross-shire, Scotland, 9 miles north of Dingwall.

Loch Morrer, a lake in the county of Inverness, Scotland, 10 miles long and ½ a mile wide, 16 miles north-west of Fort William.

Loch Moy, a lake in the county of Inverness, near a town of the same name, 9 miles south east of Inverness.

Loch Naver, a lake in the county of Sutherland, Scotland, 12 miles in circumference, and 25 miles north of Dornoch.

Loch Nell, a lake in Argyleshire, 17 miles north-west of Inverary.

Loch Ness, a lake in the county of Inverness, Scotland, 22 miles long and 1 broad, between Fort Augustus and the Frith of Murray, into which its waters run.

Loch Oich, a lake in the county of Inverness, four miles long, communicating with Loch Ness, 4 miles south-west of Fort Augustus.

Loch Orchan, a lake in the county of Inverness, 9 miles from George-town.

Loch Ore, a lake in Fifeshire, Scotland, 6 miles north-east of Dunfermline.

Loch Orent, a lake in the county of Caithness, 6 miles south of Thurso.

Loch Paatoch, a lake in the county of Inverness, 12 miles north of George-town.

Loch Shire, a lake in the north part of the county of Sutherland, Scotland, 12 miles long and 1½ wide, 13 miles north-west of Dornoch.

Loch Skene, a lake in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, 4½ miles south of Kintore.

Loch Skiach, a lake in Perthshire, Scotland, six miles north-west of Dunkeld.

Loch Tay, a lake in Perthshire, 16 miles long and 1 broad.

Loch Tollie, a lake in Argyleshire, 10½ miles north-east of Glenorchy.

Loch Troig, a lake in the county of Inverness, 14 miles east of Fort William.

Loch Tumel, a lake in Perthshire, 5 miles south of Blair Athol.

Loch Turret, a lake in Perthshire, 5 miles north-west of Crieff.

Loch Vack, a lake in Perthshire, 3½ miles south-west of Blair Athol.

Loch Valican, a lake in Perthshire, 6 miles east of Blair Athol.

Loch Voil, a lake in Perthshire, 17 miles west of Crieff.

Loch Vrotachan, a lake in Aberdeenshire, 7 miles south of Castleton of Braemar.

Loch Watten, a lake in the county of Caithness, 7 miles west of Wick.

Loch Ruthon, a lake in the county of Kirkcudbright, 4 miles south-east of Dumfries.

Lochty Water, a river in Fifeshire, which runs into the river Leven, about 3 miles from its mouth.

Lochalsh, a parish on the west coast of the shire of Ross, Scotland, 23 miles from Dingwall; containing 319 houses and 1606 inhabitants. The general appearance is hilly, but toward the coast the soil is tolerably rich: being surrounded on three sides by the sea, it has some good fisheries and safe harbours.

Lochar Moss, an extensive tract of moss in the shire of Dumfries, extending down to the Solway frith, and divided into two parts by the Lochar water. Trees are dug up throughout this moss, and a stratum of sea-sand is found at certain depths, with anchors and pieces of vessels. So that it is supposed originally to have been occupied in part by the sea, and the remainder by wood. In 1785, after a dry summer, it accidentally took fire, and burnt to a great extent until it was extinguished by a heavy shower of rain.

Lochar Water, runs through the Lochar Moss; it is about 25 feet broad, and abounds with excellent pike, some of them weighing upwards of 20 pounds. It falls into the Solway Frith about 2 miles east of Dumfries.

Lochbroom, a parish in the shire of Ross, Scotland, 26 miles from Dingwall; containing 692 houses and 3533 inhabitants. The greater part consists of wild uncultivated mountains, affording pasture to herds of black cattle and flocks of sheep. Toward the coast, and on the straths formed by the rivulets, it is, however, tolerably fertile. Ullapool, one of the villages established by the British fishing society, is in this parish. It has also a good fishing station at Isle Martin, 5 miles north of Ullapool, and another at Isle Tunera, 1 mile north of the former.

Loch Carron, a parish in the shire of Ross, Scotland, situated on an arm of the Western Ocean, into which the river Carron falls 30 miles from Fort Augustus; containing 226 houses and 1178 inhabitants. At the ferry town of Strom are the remains of a castle, formerly belonging to the Macdonalds of Glengary.

Lochgellie, a village in the parish of Auchterderran, shire of Fife, Scotland; containing about 350 inhabitants.

Lochgoilhead, a parish in the district of Cowal, shire of Argyle, Scotland, united with Kilmorich. It lies on the western coast of Loch Long, at the head of Lochgoil, a small arm of the sea, and contains 103 houses and 680 inhabitants. The surface in general is very rugged, and some of the mountains form the western extremity of the Grampians. Amongst them are several caves of great extent. There are 3 strong castles, Dunduraph, Ardkinlas and Carrick; the latter was once a royal residence, and is of great antiquity; except the walls there is now but little remaining of it. Ardkinlas is a strong building, and has lately been repaired, being now the residence of Sir Alexander Campbell. At Cairndow, at the head of Lochfyne, is a small neat village, serving as a stage between Arroquhar and Inverary, where there is a rich vein of lead ore.

Lochlee, a parish in the shire of Forfar, Scotland, 20 miles north from Forfar, and surrounded on all sides, except the east, by the Grampian mountains; it contains 129 houses and 541 inhabitants. The hills are mostly steep, rocky, and covered with heath, producing only pasture for sheep. The principal branches of the river North Esk, called the Lee, Mark and Tarf, have their sources here from lakes of the same name. The parish abounds with limestone and lead ore.

Lochmaben, a royal borough in the shire of Dumfries, Scotland, in the district of Annandale, 7 miles from Dumfries. The parish extends about 10 miles along the banks of the river Annan, and contains 496 houses and 2053 inhabitants, of whom 771 were employed in trade and manufacture, principally in that of coarse linen cloth for the English market. It was formerly a place of great opulence and trade. It is governed by a provost, 3 bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer, and 9 counsellors, and joins with Annan, Dumfries, and Sanquhar, in sending one member to the Imperial parliament. The river Annan has excellent salmon and trout, and Castle Loch produces 15 or 16 different kinds of fish fit for the table, particularly a sort called sondace, peculiar to this place; it something resembles a herring, but is esteemed much more delicate. Near the town is the site of an old castle surrounded with a moat, which was the seat of Sir Robert Bruce.

Lochrutton, a parish in the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, 20 miles from Dumfries; containing 112 houses and 514 inhabitants. In the centre of the parish is a lake about a mile long and ½ a mile broad, having an artificial island in the middle. There is a weak chalybeat spring here called Merklandwell, reckoned good for stomachic complaints. On a hill at the east end of the parish are the vestiges of a druidical temple.

Lochs, a parish in the island of Lewis, shire of Ross, Scotland; containing 332 houses and 1875 inhabitants, mostly employed in the various fisheries along the coast. The soil is very moory and unfit for cultivation, and the chief employment, besides fishing, is the making of kelp.

Lochtown, a village in the parish of Longforgan, Perthshire, Scotland; containing about 100 inhabitants. Lochtown hill stands 1172 feet above the level of the sea.

Lochwinnoch, a parish in the shire of Renfrew, Scotland, on the side of Castlesemple Loch, 8 miles from Paisley; containing 411 houses and 2955 inhabitants, of whom 1141 were returned as living in the village, and mostly employed at the extensive cotton mills adjoining. There is another considerable loch in the parish, called Dweenside Loch. The hill called Misty Law is 1240 feet above the level of the sea. Two miles from Castlesemple, is a remarkable magnetic rock, by which the compass is strongly attracted at the distance of 150 yards around it.

Lochrusberg, a bay on the western coast of Ireland, in the county of Donegal. Long. 8° 23′ west of Greenwich. Lat. 54° 46′ north.

Lochrusmore, a bay on the west coast of Ireland, in the county of Donegal, a little to the north of the preceding.

Loch Y, a lake in the shire of Inverness, Scotland, about 14 miles long, and 1 broad. A military road passes along its banks, and about the middle of it is the stage inn of Letter Finlay.

Lochy River, has its rise from the lake of the same name in the shire of Inverness, and falls into the sea near Fort William, with such rapidity that it is said to preserve its stream entire for a considerable way without any taste of saltness.

Lochy, a lake also in Braidalbin, in the shire of Perth, Scotland, which discharges itself into a river of the same name that falls into Loch Tay. The river is about 12 miles long, and gives the name of Glenlochy to the vale which it passes through.

Locker, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Spondon, hundred of Appletree, Derby, 3¼ miles from Derby, and 123 from London.

LOCKERBIE, a considerable market and post-town in the parish of Drysdale, shire of Dumfries, Scotland, 17 miles from Gretna Green, 12 from Dumfries, and 16 from Moffat, pleasantly seated on the river Annan. It consists of one regular street about ¼ mile long from north to south, and another at right angles, and contains about 150 houses and 750 inhabitants. Most of the houses are new buildings, and at the head of the principal street on an eminence stands the parish church of Drysdale. Here are 12 well-attended fairs in the course of the year, noted for the sale of woollen cloth, and lambs.—Lettice's Letters.

LOCKERBY, a hamlet in the parish of Kirkleatham, Langborough wapentake, north riding of York, lying between Barnby Moor and the mouth of the river Tees, 4 miles from Gisborough, and 255 from London.

LOCKERLEY, a township and chapelry in the parish of Mottisfont, hundred of Thorngate, Hants, 5 miles from Romsey, containing 59 houses and 356 inhabitants.

LOCKERIDGE, a hamlet to Marlborough, in the hundred of Selkley, Wilts, 2 miles from Marlborough, and 77 from London; containing 51 houses and 194 inhabitants.

LOCKING, a parish in the hundred of Winterstoke, Somerset, 6 miles from Axbridge, and 137 from London; containing 20 houses and 137 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 6*s.* 10*d.*

LOCKINGE EAST, a parish in the hundred of Wantage, Berks, 3 miles from Wantage, and 57 from London; containing 57 houses and 245 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 31*l.* 10*s.* and is in the patronage of All Souls College, Oxford.

LOCKINGE WEST, a hamlet to the above, and adjoining to it; containing 14 houses and 60 inhabitants.

LOCKINGTON, a parish in the hundred of West Goscote, Leicester, 7 miles from Loughborough, and 115 from London; containing 40 houses and 236 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 7*s.* 8*d.*

LOCKINGTON, a parish in the division of Bainton Beacon, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 6 miles from Beverley, and 190 from London; containing 77 houses and 379 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 20*l.*

LOCKSTON, a parish in the hundred of Winterstoke, Somerset, 3½ miles from Axbridge, and 134 from London; containing 22 houses and 97 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 15*l.* 15*s.* 5*d.*

LOCKTON, a township in the parish of Middleton, in Pickering lythe, north riding of York, 4 miles from Pickering, and 229 from London; containing 52 houses and 295 inhabitants.

LOCKWOOD, a township in the parish of Almondbury, Agbrig wapentake, west riding of York, 2 miles from Huddersfield, and 188 from London; containing 264 houses and 1276 inhabitants, of whom 750 were returned as principally employed in the various branches of the woollen manufacture.

LODDEN, the name of a river in Berks and Hampshire, which falls into the Thames near Twyford.

LODDEN, the name of a river in Herefordshire, which rises near Grendon Bishops, and after receiving several small streams falls into the Frome at Stretton Gransum.

LODDINGTON, a parish and curacy in the hundred of East Goscote, Leicester, 7 miles from Uppingham, and 96 from London; containing 34 houses and 130 inhabitants.

LODDINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Rothwell, Northampton, 3 miles from Kettering, and 77 from London; containing 35 houses and 183 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.* the patronage of which is in the King.

LODDISWELL, a parish in the hundred of Stanborough, Devon, 3 miles from Kingsbridge, and 205 from London; containing 112 houses and 608 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 26*l.*

LODDON, a market town and parish in the hundred of Loddon, Norfolk, 5 miles from Bungay, and 111 from London; containing 162 houses and 799 inhabitants. The market is on Friday, and is very inconsiderable. Fair, 10th November. The living is a vicarage, in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.

LODERS, a parish in the hundred of Eggarton, division of Bridport, Dorset, 2 miles from Bridport, and 133 from London. The parish is about 6 miles in length, and is divided into the hamlets of Upper, Lower, and Loders Maltravers. It contains 112 houses and 654 inhabitants, and is pleasantly situated in a vale; the church is a large ancient structure, near which in Lower Loders are the remains of an ancient priory. It is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 5*s.* 7*d.* in the patronage of the king and the earl of Shaftesbury, alternately.

LODDON, the name of a hundred in Norfolk, near the south-eastern angle of the county to the north of Bungay, in Suffolk.

LODSWORTH, a township and chapelry in the parish of Eastbourne, hundred of Westborne and Singleton, rape of Chichester, Sussex, 5 miles from Petworth, and 53 from London; containing 92 houses and 433 inhabitants.

LOE, a river in the county of Cornwall, which runs into the English Channel, 4 miles below Helston.

LOFTUS, a parish in Langborough wapentake, north riding of York, 7 miles from Gisborough, and 256 from London; containing 261 houses and 1186 inhabitants, of whom 811 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 11*s.* in the patronage of the king.

LOGAN, a river in the shire of Lanark, Scotland, taking its rise amongst the hills which divide the parishes of Lesmahagoe and Muirkirk, and after a course of 8 miles joins the river Nethan.

Logie, a parish in the shire of Fife, Scotland, lying between Cupar and Woodhaven, 6 miles from Cupar; containing 78 houses and 339 inhabitants.

Logie, a parish nearly equally situated in the shires of Perth, Stirling, and Clackmannan, on the river Forth, 2 miles north of Stirling; containing 432 houses and 2166 inhabitants. On a peninsula of the Forth in this parish, stands the ruinous abbey of Cambuskenneth, founded by David I. king of Scotland. Near it is Abbey Craig, a rock of considerable height, on the top of which are the remains of a battery, said to have been erected by Oliver Cromwell, when he laid siege to the castle of Stirling. In the neighbourhood are some appearances of copper mines.

Logie, a parish in the shire of Forfar, Scotland, situated on the North Eske, 20 miles from Montrose; containing 129 houses and 541 inhabitants. Here are 2 extensive bleach-fields, one on the estate of Logie, and the other on Craigo. The earl of Kintore has a good mansion at Inglismaldie; and at Craigo is a neat house belonging to Mr. Carnegie; from Rose Hill in the neighbourhood, belonging to the earl of Northesk, that family takes the second title of baron. Great quantities of lime are made here.

Logie Amon, a district in the shire of Perth, Scotland, commonly called the New Parish, formerly belonging to the parishes of Fodlis and Monzie. It lies on the north bank of the river Amon, 15 miles from Perth, and contains 70 houses and 421 inhabitants. There are several remains of antiquity, and a ruinous castle near the banks of the Amon.

Logie Buchan, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, 15 miles from Aberdeen. It is divided into two parts by the river Ythan, which is navigable for small vessels for about 3 miles up from its mouth.

Logie Coldstone, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, in the district of Cromar, lying between the rivers Dee and Don; 34 miles from Aberdeen; containing 141 houses and 539 inhabitants.

Logie Easter, a parish in the shires of Ross and Cromarty, Scotland, 20 miles from Dingwall; containing 245 houses and 1031 inhabitants.

Logierait, a parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, being a point of land formed by the junction of the Tummel with the Tay. It lies 22 miles from Perth, and contains 657 houses and 2890 inhabitants, of whom 1189 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. Here is a very extensive whisky distillery. Near the church is an eminence commanding a most extensive and diversified prospect. The hills are covered with heath, and afford excellent pasture for sheep. Many remains of religious edifices are found here, and on the banks of the Tummel are the ruins of an old fortified castle, said to have been the residence of Robert II., after his abdication of the government.

Logie Wester, a parish in the shire of Ross, Scotland, united with Urquhart.

Loigh, a river in the shire of Ross, Scotland, which falls into Loch Long, an arm of the sea, and is the northern boundary of the peninsula of Kintail.

Lolworth, a parish in the hundred of Longstow, Cambridge, 6 miles from Cambridge, and 56 from London; containing 17 houses and 98 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 2*s.* 3*d.*

Lomond, the name of 2 beautiful conical hills in the shire of Fife, Scotland, nearly in the centre of the county. At the foot of the eastern hill is the little town of Falkland, above which it stretches its head 1650 feet above the level of the sea. On its summit is a small lake. The hill has lately been opened for its lead and coal. The western Lomond is considerably higher, and has on its summit a large heap of loose stones.

Lomond Loch, a lake in the shire of Dumbarton, Scotland, being the most beautiful expanse of water in Great Britain. It is about 30 miles long, and in some parts 8 or 9 miles in breadth; containing an area of 20,000 acres. There are many islands scattered over it, of which 11 are of considerable size, viz. Inch Murin, Inch Tavanach, Grange, Tor, Caillach, Clear, Fad, Conagan, Moan, Loanig, and Inch Cruin. The water is from 20 to 100 fathoms deep, and at the east end it receives the waters of the Endrick, and on the west several smaller streams. It discharges itself at the southern extremity by the river Leven, which falls into the Frith of Clyde, at Dumbarton. The whole scenery of this lake and its islands are highly delightful. Some of the spots of this little Archipelago consist of open green pastures; others display a variety of elevated hills, clothed with trees from their summit to the water's edge; and here a charming little peninsula belonging to sir James Colquhoun, with its beautiful plantations, commands one of the finest points of the lake. On the borders of this loch is the agreeable little village of Luss.—Leticel's Letters.

Londesborough, a parish in the division of Holme Beacon, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 3 miles from Market Weighton, and 197 from London; containing 21 houses and 166 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* It is thought to have been the Roman station Delgovicia.

LONDON, the metropolis of the British empire, situated on the north banks of the river Thames, in the county of Middlesex. London appears to have been founded by the inhabitants of Britain in times prior to the Roman invasion under Cæsar. The first mention of London in authentic history, is by Tacitus, who speaks of its being sacked in the year 61, under the emperor Nero, by the British queen Boadicea. It was then a place of importance among the Roman possessions in Britain, and according to that author, was the chief residence of merchants, and the great mart of trade and commerce. Under the emperor Claudius it became a Roman colony, and was governed by a prefect, annually sent from Rome, who administered the laws of the empire to the inhabitants, consisting not only of Romans but Britons. By the Romans it was called Londinium, and Londinium Augusta; by the Britons, Lundayn; and by the Saxons, at a later period, Londenceaster, Lunden-byrig, Lunden-wye, and finally London. There have been many fanciful etymologies of its name, the true meaning of which, however, appears to have been lost in the antiquity of its origin. The walls were unquestionably reared by the Romans, but under which of their emperors is uncertain, some authors ascribing them to Constantine the Great; others to his mother Helena; and others, to Valentinian, about the year 368. This wall was composed alternately of layers of flat Roman brick, and rag stones, (similar, no doubt, to those which still remain at Silchester and Verulam,) and had many lofty towers; those on the land side being fifteen in number. The original boundaries appear to have been Ludgate-hill on the west, a fortress, probably, near the site of the Tower on the east, Cripplegate on the north, and the bank of the river on the south. On the decay of the Roman empire, that people relinquished Britain, and London remained in the possession of the native Britons more than 90 years before it fell into the hands of the Saxons. On the establishment of the Saxon heptarchy, London became the metropolis of the kingdom of the East Saxons, and was governed by a magistrate called a portreeve, i. e. governor or guardian of the port. In the year 400, Augustine the monk, introduced christianity into England, and was made archbishop of Canterbury, when he ordained Melitus bishop of the East Saxons, and established his see at London, where a church was erected for him by Ethelbert, king of Kent. During the ravages committed in Britain by the Danes, London suffered materially; but Alfred having driven out the invaders, not only repaired the walls and towers, but embellished the city with additional buildings, and constituted London the metropolis even of the country. In the reign of Ethelred, Canute, king of Denmark, sailed up the river A. D. 1016, in order to plunder the city; but finding he could not pass London-bridge with his fleet, he caused a canal to be cut through the marshes on the south, by which he brought his ships to the west of the bridge, and attacked the city on all sides. He was however repulsed by the citizens, who exerted themselves with extraordinary bravery, and obliged him to raise the siege. He afterwards renewed his attack with greater vigour, but not with better success. A peace however being concluded between him and Edmund Ironside, the kingdom was divided between them; Mercia, of which London was then the capital, falling to the share of Canute, and Edmund dying soon after, the whole kingdom submitted to him, and he became sole monarch of England. At the Norman conquest, London was a place of great wealth and power, and its civil government and privileges as they existed under the Saxons, were confirmed by two charters from the Conqueror. In the reign of Henry I. it obtained a most important grant, by the annexation of the county of Middlesex to its jurisdiction, with a power of appointing a sheriff and justiciary from among the citizens, and it was at this period that companies began to be established according to the arts, mysteries, or manufactures of those who composed them. The king reserving to himself the power of appointing the portreeve, which title was now lost in that of bailiff, and afterwards of mayor. On the death of Henry I. the citizens assisted king Stephen in his endeavours to obtain the crown, and purchased of him the right of choosing their own sheriffs. Henry II. granted a new charter, which confirmed their liberties and immunities. In the reign of king Richard I. on the day preceding his coronation, London was disgraced by the massacre of nearly all the Jews residing in it. In this reign the citizens purchased of the king the conservancy of the river Thames, with a power of removing obstructions. In the reign of John, 1207, Henry Fitz-Alwyn took the title of mayor, instead of custos and bailiff, under which names he had held that dignity for 20 years successively. In the year 1211, the walls were encompassed with a deep ditch, 200 feet wide. Henry III. harassed the citizens by seizing their charters, and making them purchase new ones; and in the reign of Edward I. the city was divided in 24 wards, the supreme magistrate of each of which had the ancient Saxon title of alderman, and each ward chose some of the inhabitants as a common council, who were sworn into their office, and who were to be consulted by the aldermen, and their advice followed in all public affairs relating to the city. In the year 1327, king Edward III. granted the citizens two charters; by the first of which it was ordained that the mayor shall be constantly one of the judges of oyer and terminer, for the trial of criminals confined in Newgate, &c. By the second charter, Southwark was granted to the citizens. In the year 1354, the same prince granted the city the privilege of having a gold or silver mace carried before the chief magistrate, a privilege then peculiar to London; and it was about this time when, it is supposed by some, that the title of lord was first added to that of mayor. In the 5th of Richard II. in the rebellion of Wat Tyler, the city suffered severely. In 1392 the city refusing to lend the king a sum of money, and some of the citizens beating and abusing a Lombard merchant for offering to advance the sum required, the mayor was committed prisoner to Windsor castle, and several of the aldermen and citizens to other places of confinement; and by a commission of enquiry under the great seal, being found guilty, they were fined 3000 marks, and the liberties of the city seized; the mayor and sheriffs were degraded, and others chosen in their room; and by the king's precept 17 persons were appointed aldermen during the royal pleasure. However, on the payment of the fine, all the city liberties were restored, except the privilege of choosing a mayor, which was not obtained till after the additional payment of 10,000l. In the reign of Henry IV. the privileges of the city were extended in several instances. On the return of Henry V. from the battle of Agincourt, the citizens distinguished themselves by the splendid cavalcade with which they conducted that brave prince through the city. In 1416, sir Henry Barton, lord mayor, first ordered lanterns to be hung out to illuminate the streets by night. Edward IV. granted a new charter of confirmation to the citizens, and extended their privileges. The conduct of Henry VII. to the citizens was oppressive, the extortions of his ministers Empson and Dudley being very great. The reign of Henry VIII. was remarkable for the dissolution of the monasteries; and it is almost incredible how many magnificent churches, cloisters, libraries, and other buildings in the metropolis, were ruined. King Edward VI. in the year 1551, gave the city a charter, by which he not only confirmed all its former privileges, but granted the lord mayor, aldermen, and citizens, several lands and tenements in Southwark, with the manor thereof; the assize of bread, wine, beer, and ale; a fair for three days; and the offices of coroner, escheator and clerk of the market, which are for ever vested in the lord mayor and his successors. In the reign of queen Elizabeth commerce received a new impulse by the erection of the Royal Exchange for the meeting of merchants to transact their business. In 1588, when the country was threatened by the Spanish armada, the city unanimously resolved not only to raise ten thousand troops, but voted, in addition, 16 of the largest ships in the river Thames, and 4 pinnaces; they were fitted out with the utmost expedition, and the charge defrayed both of men and ships during the time they continued in the queen's service. In the reign of James I. London received improvements of a different kind from any we have yet mentioned; the New river was brought to Islington from Amwell, in Hertfordshire, in 1613. In 1615, the sides of the principal streets, which had before been laid with pebbles, were now paved with flags. During the unhappy reign of Charles I. great disputes arose between the king and the city in relation to ship-money, loans, and other grievances; but even in the midst of these disputes, and whilst the king was actually opposing the liberties of the citizens, he granted them several charters, by which he confirmed all their former privileges, and added some new ones; however, the citizens entered heartily into the measures of the parliament against him, and fortified the city with forts, joined by a line of circumvallation, formed by a rampart of earth, which on all sides surrounded London, Westminster and Southwark. On the death of Oliver Cromwell, the citizens made a strong opposition to the committee of safety, declared for a free parliament, and refused to advance resources to the then government: on which general Monk was ordered to march into the city with his army, who broke and cut to pieces the city gates, portcullises, and posts. After this the city heartily and zealously joined with general Monk in bringing about the restoration, and on the 29th of May, 1660, the lord mayor and aldermen went out and met king Charles II. in St. George's Fields. In 1663, the king granted the city a confirmation of all their ancient charters, privileges, liberties, rights and customs, and the citizens in return advanced considerable sums of money towards carrying on the war with Holland, for which they received the thanks of both houses of parliament. In the reign of James II. the city remonstrating to the king on the slowness of the court in the business of the popish plot, so highly offended him, that he declared their privileges forfeited, and their charter at his disposal; but, frightened by his own temerity, he sent for the lord mayor and aldermen, and promised to restore their charter in its full extent, which he accordingly did. On the revolution taking place, to which the citizens of London contributed very much, they had little difficulty in obtaining a full confirmation of their rights and privileges from king William and queen Mary. The most remarkable occurrence relating to the city in the reign of queen Anne, was the act authorizing the building of 50 new churches. In 1720, that most extraordinary bubble, the South Sea scheme, was projected; the failure of which produced the most lamentable consequences. During his present majesty's reign, London has undergone, from the spirit and wealth of its citizens, a multitude of improvements. In 1771, the mayor and one of the aldermen were committed to the Tower; and, in 1780, the city was disgraced by the most frightful enormities committed by a mob under the pretext of opposition to popery: the terror that was then spread being yet alive in the memory of thousands.

The sufferings experienced by the city of London from those two dreadful scourges, pestilence and fire, form a strong and prominent feature in its history. In the year 1348, it was visited by a most terrible pestilence, which continued to rage till the churchyards were found scarcely capacious enough to receive the dead. This induced several persons to purchase ground to supply that defect, and on the site of one of these, purchased by sir Walter Manny, the Charter-House has since arisen: no less than 50,000 persons were interred the following year, and by this dreadful disease 100,000 persons are said to have died in the city. In 1407, a dreadful plague carried off 30,000 of the inhabitants, by which corn became so cheap, that wheat sold at 3s. 4d. the quarter. In the second year of Edward IV. the plague raged so violently in the metropolis, as to sweep away an incredible number of people. In the beginning of the reign of king Henry VII. the sweating sickness first raged in London, of which disease two lord mayors, and one of the sheriffs died within the year. In 1500, the plague carried off not less than 20,000 persons. About 1518, the sweating sickness made its second appearance, and carried off a considerable portion of the population; its third appearance was in 1528, when the greater part of those attacked, died in the short space of five or six hours. In the year 1603, the plague made such dreadful devastation, that between March and December it swept away no less than 30,578 persons. In 1625, when king Charles I. ascended the throne, another dreadful pestilence raged, which carried off in the course of a year, in the city and suburbs, 35,417 people, beside those who died of other diseases, which in the whole amounted to 54,265, said to be one third of the inhabitants. But the most dreadful instance of pestilence in this city was that which is known by the name of the great Plague, which broke out in the beginning of May, 1665; and progressively increased in its ravages from 9, the number dying in the first week of its discovery, to 470 in June, which in July arose to 2010. All the houses were now shut up, the streets deserted, and scarcely any thing to be seen but grass growing in them, innumerable fires, to purify the air, coffins, pest carts, and poor women, with woeful lamentations, carrying their children to the grave. In September the burials had increased to 6998 in one week, and in the week following to 7165! After this the contagion gradually decreased, till it pleased the Almighty to restore this desolate city to its pristine state of health, after the direful ravages of the distemper had swept off 68,596 persons, which, together with those who died of other diseases, made the bill of mortality for that year amount to 97,306. Happily this is the last instance of that terrible disease in the metropolis. The different Fires which have happened at various periods, present another scene of devastation experienced in the metropolis. The first we have an account of is that when Suetonius, the Roman general, abandoned the city to the vengeance of Boadicea, who set it on fire, and put all the inhabitants to the sword. In the year 983, it suffered by the flames again, and in 1077, a few years after the conquest, it was laid in ruins in one night, by such a fire, says the Saxon Chronicle, as had not happened since it was founded; and nine years after it was again destroyed by the same element. In 1135, it was again burned, with the bridge, which was afterwards built of stone. But the most terrible calamity of this sort which befel London, was in 1666, at the time when the plague had just ceased, and when those who had fled were returned to their habitations. This deplorable event began on Sunday the 2d of September, about one in the morning, in the house of a baker in Pudding Lane, near New Fish street, which being in a quarter of the town closely built with wooden houses pitched, spread itself so far before day-light, that it became too powerful to be mastered. A violent easterly wind spread the flames, and it raged all Monday and Tuesday; but on the evening of the latter day, meeting with brick buildings at the Temple, by little and little it was observed to lose its force on that side; and toward Wednesday evening a stop was put to it in various parts of the city, and on Thursday the flames were wholly extinguished. By this dreadful conflagration there were consumed 400 streets and lanes, 13,200 houses, the cathedral of St. Paul, 86 parish churches, 6 chapels, the Royal Exchange, Blackwell-hall, and the Custom-House; several hospitals and libraries, 52 of the companies' halls, and a great number of other stately edifices, together with 3 of the city gates, 4 stone bridges, and 4 prisons; the value of which, with that of the merchandize and household-furniture, amounted to 10,730,500l.; but it is truly amazing that in this terrible devastation only 6 persons lost their lives by the fire.

London is divided into 26 wards, each of which is under the jurisdiction of an alderman, chosen by the freemen at large, being householders, in assemblies termed wardmotes. Out of these aldermen one is annually elected on Michaelmas day to be the lord mayor, who enters on his office on the 9th of November following. The two sheriffs are chosen annually by the Livery, not only for the city, but for the county of Middlesex, the same persons being sheriffs for London, and jointly forming one sheriff for the county. The recorder, who is a serjeant learned in the law, is chosen by the lord mayor and aldermen, for their instruction and assistance in matters of justice and proceedings according to law. He is the orator of the city on all extraordinary occasions, reads the addresses of the corporation to the king, and when seated on the bench, delivers the sentence of the court. The chamberlain is chosen annually on Midsummer-day, by the livery, though he is never displaced from his office unless some material complaint be alledged against him. Besides these officers of trust there are several others, viz. the coroner, the town-clerk, the common serjeant, the city remembrancer, &c. The suburbs in Middlesex are under the jurisdiction of the justices of the peace for the county, and there are also several police offices, at which magistrates sit every day for the examination of offenders, and the determination of various complaints in a summary way.

The Population of London, according to the Return made to Parliament in 1801, is contained in the following Enumeration.

	Inhabited Houses.	Males.	Females.	Total.
City of London within and without the walls	30,904	106,847	115,553	222,390
City and Liberties of Westminster	18,231	71,301	86,909	158,210
Out Parishes in Middlesex and Surrey	56,207	163,899	200,627	364,526
Parishes not within the Bills of Mortality	14,657	50,029	67,773	117,802
Inns of Court extra parochial	1,230	1,293	614	1,907
	121,229	393,369	471,476	864,845

The population of London and Westminster amounted in 1700 to 674,350; in 1750 to 676,050; and in 1802 to nearly 900,000. In the year 1650, the total number of deaths was 8,764; in 1700, they were 19,443; in 1750, they were 23,727, and in 1800, they amounted to 25,761. The consumption of provisions in London is immense; the number of bullocks annually consumed is 110,000; of sheep and lambs 776,000; calves 210,100; hogs 210,000; sucking pigs 60,000; besides animals of other kinds; milk 6,980,000 gallons, the number of cows kept being 8,500; wheat 700,000 quarters; coals 600,000 chaldrons; ale and porter 1,113,500 barrels, of 36 gallons each; spirituous liquors and compounds 11,146,782 gallons; wine 65,000 pipes; butter about 16,600,000 pounds; cheese 21,100,000 pounds. There are 10,000 acres of ground near the metropolis cultivated wholly for vegetables, and about 4000 acres for fruit. The quantity of fish consumed is comparatively small, there not being, on an average, more than 14,500 boats of cod and other sea fish brought annually to the London market, exclusive of mackarel, which is sometimes plentiful. The supply of poultry is inadequate to a general consumption, and the price most exorbitant. A considerable quantity of game and venison is also consumed in London. The public buildings in the metropolis are numerous, and several strike the beholder with wonder and astonishment. The first we shall notice is St. Paul's Cathedral, which may be called the chief ornament of London; it is situated between Cheapside on the east and Ludgate-street on the west. The body of the church is in the form of a cross. Over the spaces where the lines intersect each other, rises a stately dome, adorned on the outside with Corinthian columns, and surrounded at its base by a balcony; above are a gilded ball, and cross, which crown the ornaments of this part of the edifice. The length of St. Paul's is 500 feet, the breadth 250, the height, to the top of the cross, 340, and the entire circumference 2292 feet. It is surrounded by a dwarf stone wall, which supports a balustrade of cast iron. The church is adorned with three porticoes, one at the principal entrance facing the west, opposite to Ludgate-street, and the other two facing the north and south, at the extremities of the cross aile. The western portico, perhaps, combines as much grace and magnificence as any specimen of the kind in the world; it consists of 12 lofty Corinthian columns below, and eight Composite above, supporting a grand pediment, the whole resting on an elevated base, the ascent to which is by a flight of 22 square steps of black marble. The inside of St. Paul's does not correspond in beauty with its exterior, being nearly wholly destitute of ornament. The interior of the dome was painted by Sir James Thornhill, and lately the inside of the church has been relieved by the placing of three statues and five monuments; the statues are plain full length figures, on marble pedestals, having appropriate inscriptions, in honour of Dr. Samuel Johnson, Mr. Howard, and Sir William Jones. The monuments are to the memory of Captains Burgess, Faulkner, Westcott, Riou and Moss, and General Dundas. In this part of the cathedral are hung the tattered trophies of British valour, the colours taken from the enemy in various battles. Beneath the pavement, immediately under the dome, is interred the remains of the noble and gallant Admiral Lord Nelson. This cathedral was built at the national expence, by Sir Christopher Wren, and cost 736,752*l.* 2*s.* 3½*d.* exclusive of the iron balustrade, which, with its seven iron gates, cost 11,202*l.* This immense edifice was reared in 35 years, being began in 1675 and finished in 1710. Westminster Abbey is situated in the city of Westminster, and was originally founded by Sebert, king of the East Saxons. Edward the Confessor raised a new building entirely from the ground, which was again rebuilt as it now stands, by Henry III. and his successor. Its length is 360 feet, the breadth 72 feet, and the length of the transept, or cross aile, 195 feet. The interior architecture of the church it is almost impossible to extol too highly. It is in the form of a long cross, and the choir is one of the most beautiful in Europe, in which is performed the ceremony of crowning the kings and queens of England. At the eastern end of the church are twelve small chapels, in which are a great number of monuments to the memory of the illustrious dead, and in all parts of this extensive building these memorials strike the eye of the beholder with endless variety. The Chapel of Henry VII. is one of the finest specimens of architecture, in the pointed arch style, now remaining. The exterior of it is remarkable for the richness and variety of its form, and it is impossible to suppose architectural beauty of a higher degree than the whole of its interior. The Churches in London, amounting in number to 146, are in general neat, plain structures. Some of them, however, are handsome edifices, amongst which we may enumerate St. Stephen's, Walbrook; St. Martin's in the Fields; St. George's, Hanover-square; St. Paul's, Covent-garden; the New Church in the Strand, and a few others. The Palace that first merits notice is St. James's, the external appearance of which is inconsiderable. It is built with brick, and though there is nothing very superb or grand in the decorations or furniture of the state apartments, they are commodious and handsome. The sole use made of this palace is for purposes of state. The Queen's Palace, (also called Buckingham-house,) is the actual town residence of the present royal family. This house was purchased by the king in 1761, and settled by parliament, in 1775, on the queen, in case she survives his majesty. It is a handsome brick building, and behind the house are extensive gardens. Carleton House, the residence of the prince of Wales, has several magnificent apartments, and the finest armory in the world. The principal front faces Pall-mall. The garden, which is extensive, is laid out with considerable taste. Westminster-hall is one of the largest rooms in Europe unsupported by pillars. It was built by William Rufus, and at present is used for the coronation feasts, and occasionally for the trials of peers, or of any persons on the impeachment of the commons. The Horse Guards derives its name from the two regiments of life-guards stationed there, and is situated at the eastern end of St. James's Park. The Admiralty is a brick building, containing the offices of the lords commissioners and their clerks, who superintend and transact the business in the department of naval affairs. On the top of the building are two telegraphs, one communicating with Deal, the other with Portsmouth. The Treasury is an extensive building, the principal front of which is of stone, in the Park; this is a noble pile, though rather too massive. The Houses of Lords and Commons are situated at the back of Westminster-hall. The latter was formerly a chapel originally built by king Stephen, and dedicated to the saint of his name. It was rebuilt by Edward III. and in the reign of Henry VI. was converted to the use it is at present applied to. The Tower of London was anciently a palace, inhabited by various sovereigns of England till the reign of queen Elizabeth; it is situated on the north bank of the Thames at the extremity of the city. The Tower contains the mint, the record-office, a royal menagerie, the Spanish armory, (in which are deposited the various weapons and instruments of torture taken in the ships which composed the celebrated Spanish armada,) the small armory, one of the finest rooms in the world, (345 feet in length, and containing complete stands of arms for no less than 200,000 men, part of which are disposed in a variety of figures on the walls in a very elegant manner,) the royal train of artillery, the horse armory, (in which are the effigies of the kings of England on horseback, in armour,) and the jewel office, where are preserved the regalia used at coronations. There is a church in the Tower, dedicated to St. Peter ad vincula, in which various persons are interred, particularly such as have been at various times beheaded. The Bridges are objects of particular interest: London Bridge is of great antiquity, and was for many ages encumbered with houses on each side; it was improved and put into its present condition in 1756, but is now considered as a building, in several points of view, unfit for the purpose. The water-works on its north-west side, supply a considerable part of London with water for domestic purposes. Westminster Bridge was built between 1738 and 1750, and cost 389,500*l.* and is esteemed one of the most beautiful in the world. Blackfriar's Bridge was finished in the year 1769, and is remarkable for the lightness of its structure. The length of this bridge is 1100 feet; of Westminster, 1222 feet; and of London bridge 915 feet. The Monument is about 200 yards north of London bridge, and is a fluted column, 202 feet in height, erected by Sir Christopher Wren, in memory of the great fire, which, in 1666, destroyed the metropolis, and which broke out in a house on this spot. Somerset House is on the south side of the Strand, and is an immense stone edifice, appropriated to various public uses; here is the stamp-office, the hawkers' and pedlers' office, the navy office, the rooms of the royal society, of the society of antiquaries, and the royal academy. The Bank of England, situated in Threadneedle-street, covers a great extent of ground, and is completely insulated. This national establishment was first incorporated by act of parliament in 1694. The capital was at first limited to 1,200,000*l.* but has been augmented at various times, till it now amounts to 11,686,800*l.* The Royal Exchange, originally built by sir Thomas Gresham, in 1566. It is situated on the south side of Cornhill, and has two principal fronts. Each of these fronts has a piazza, within which are niches, intended for statues, all of which are vacant except two; one filled by the statue of the founder, and the other by one of Sir John Barnard. In the area is a marble statue of king Charles II. and over the piazzas are whole length figures of the different kings and queens of England. The Mansion House is on the west of Cornhill, and is the residence of the lord mayor of London; it is a massive and inelegant building, of an oblong form; many of the apartments are dark and incommodious, though others are mentioned as peculiarly convenient. Guildhall is the public hall of the city of London, in which are held the various courts of the city; it was originally built in 1411, and is a fine Gothic structure; it was erected by voluntary subscription, and occupied 20 years in its erection. The East India House, in Leadenhall-street, comprises the offices of the East India company, and was originally built in 1726. It has a fine portico in the centre, and has recently been considerably enlarged. The Custom House, near the Tower; the Excise Office, in Broad-street; and the South Sea House, in Thread-needle-street, are all appropriated to the business denoted by their names. The General Post Office, in Lombard-street, however important its concerns, is a confused mass of building, and owing to the immense increase of business is at present ill adapted to the purposes for which it is used. The Trinity House is a neat edifice on Tower-hill, the use of which is to superintend the interests of the British shipping, military and commercial: the corporation founded in 1515, being endowed with extensive powers for that purpose, as well as others subordinate thereto. The Corn Exchange is in Mark-lane; the Heralds' College, on St. Bennet's-hill; the halls of the various city companies, and the East India Company's Warehouses, are all buildings of large extent, but not marked by any peculiarity of character. The Inns of Court are spacious buildings, being the two Temples, Lincoln's Inn, and Gray's Inn: The Inns of Chancery are Furnival's Inn, Thavie's Inn, Staple Inn, Barnard's Inn, Serjeant's Inn, Clifford's Inn, Clement's Inn, and Lyon's Inn, which are comparatively small, containing nothing of importance to recommend their appearance to public notice. The societies in the metropolis for the promotion of science and literature, are not less eminent than numerous; the Royal Society holds its meetings in Somerset-place, and since its foundation, about the middle of the last century but one, has added more to the stock of useful knowledge than any similar body; its memoirs, which are contained in a great number of volumes, present an important mass of scientific and laborious research. The Society of Antiquaries was incorporated in 1751, and holds its meetings in the same place with the Royal Society; its pursuits are directed to the elucidation of our national antiquities, as well as those of other countries, and it has produced several volumes of papers, containing a great number of curious articles, as well as some other productions illustrative of our ecclesiastical architecture. The Society for the Encouragement of Arts, &c. in the Adelphi, was instituted in 1753, for promoting (by means of premiums) useful discoveries, for the benefit of the manufactures, the commerce and the arts of the country. The paintings in the house of this society, by the late ingenious James Barry, have cast a lustre upon his name which will render it, as far as human means can do so, immortal. The Royal Institution, in Albemarle street, was founded in 1800 for the purpose of facilitating the general introduction of useful mechanical inventions, and for teaching, by lectures, the application of science to the common purposes of life. The London Institution was established in 1806, for nearly similar purposes, but is not yet sufficiently organised. Besides these there are Gresham College, where lectures are delivered in various sciences; the Mineralogical Society, for the purpose of investigating the British mines and minerals; the Linnæan Society, for encouraging the study of natural history; the Entomological Society, for elucidating the history of the insects of Great Britain; and various others, which are laudably directed to the interests of science and literature. The arts are attended to peculiarly in the Royal Academy, the British Gallery, the Society of Engravers, of Painters in Water Colours, &c. The British Museum is a grand national depository of antiquities, books, and natural curiosities; it was established by act of parliament in 1753, in consequence of the will of Sir Hans Sloane, and has been encreased every year since by the accession of numerous scarce, valuable, and interesting articles in every department of science, literature, and the arts, as well as in subjects of antiquities, and natural and artificial productions. The benevolent institutions in the metropolis are numerous and well conducted. Christ's Hospital is a royal foundation for the maintenance and education of poor children; it is situated a little to the north of Newgate-street, and is a very extensive though irregular building; there are at present about 1000 children on the foundation, and about 500 more at the preparatory school at Hertford; the expenditure of this hospital is about 30,000l. per annum. The Charter House, formerly a priory for Carthusian monks, was converted in 1611, by Thomas Sutton, Esq. into an hospital, consisting of a master, a preacher, a head schoolmaster, and a second master, 44 boys, and 80 decayed gentlemen, and it also supports 29 students at the universities. St. Bartholomew's Hospital is a magnificent building of stone near Smithfield, for the reception of the sick and maimed. St. Thomas's, in the Borough, for the same purposes. Guy's Hospital also in the Borough, was erected at the sole expence of Thomas Guy, a bookseller of London, who left at his death the enormous sum of 200,000l. for its endowment. These three hospitals are most excellent practical schools of medicine and surgery, and in each of them lectures are delivered by the most eminent professors in the different branches of medicine, surgery, chemistry, &c. &c. Beside these there are several others, as the London Hospital, in Whitechapel-road; St. George's Hospital, at Hyde Park-corner: the Westminster Hospital, at the end of York-street; and the Middlesex Hospital, in Mary le Bonne: besides the above there are others appropriated to particular purposes, as Bethlehem and St. Luke's, for lunatics; the Lock, for venereal patients; several hospitals for the reception of pregnant women, where they lie in and are treated with all the attention and care their temporary situation requires; the Foundling, for the education of poor orphan children; the Magdalen, for the reception of penitent prostitutes; and a great number of Dispensaries, where advice and medicine are distributed gratis to the diseased poor. The prisons in London present a melancholy detail of wretchedness and misery; the principal of these is Newgate, where felons and debtors are confined in one prison; the number of debtors here being from 200 to 300, and the felons from 140 to 300. In 1780, this prison was burned down by the rioters, and has since been restored in the manner it now stands; it presents a fine uniform exterior, consisting of two wings, the debtors and felons side, with the keeper's house in the middle. The Poultry Compter is in the Poultry, where debtors and persons charged with petty offences are usually confined till they are examined or sent to some other prison. Giltspur-street Compter is occupied by debtors, persons fined, and committed for misdemeanors. Ludgate Prison, is appropriated to the use of debtors free of the city of London, to clergymen, proctors, and attornies. The Marshalsea, in the Borough, is a gaol of great antiquity, in which are confined persons arrested for very small debts within twelve miles of the palace of St. James's, though not in the city of London. The King's Bench is in St. George's Fields, to which debtors may remove themselves from any other prison. The liberties of this prison, or rules as they are called, extend about three miles in circuit, and those who purchase the rules, may take up their residence any where within them. The Fleet Prison is in Fleet Market, and is of a similar nature to the King's Bench. The Savoy is a military prison, where deserters are generally confined till otherwise disposed of. The Cold Bath Fields Penitentiary House was constructed on the plan of the late Mr. Howard. It was opened in 1794, and was at first designed only as a kind of Bridewell, but having suitable accommodations for various descriptions of prisoners, it was applied to their different circumstances. There are also some other prisons, as Tothill Fields Bridewell; the New Prison, Clerkenwell; the Borough Compter, Tooley street; the jail, in Horsemonger lane, &c. The places of musical and dramatic entertainment in the metropolis, are the Opera-house, the academy of ancient music, the concert of ancient music, Harrison's and Bartleman's vocal concerts, Drury-lane and Covent-garden theatres, the theatre in the Haymarket, the Royalty-theatre, in Wellclose-square, Sadler's wells, Astley's Amphitheatre, the Circus, Vauxhall-gardens, and several private theatres. The Markets in London are numerous, and well supplied with provisions of all kinds; Leadenhall market is divided into five considerable squares; in one of which, beef and leather are sold, two for small meat, another for fowls, and another for herbs. Newgate market is chiefly for butcher's meat, and the principal market for selling whole carcases to the retail butchers in the metropolis; Fleet market for flesh meat, fish and vegetables; Billingsgate, the most famous market in London, or even England, is for fish. Smithfield is the greatest market for black cattle, sheep and horses in Europe; and Covent-garden, the most celebrated market for fruit, vegetables and garden-stuff of all kinds. There are also several other markets equally supplied with the best articles of living, but of minor consequence. No metropolis in the world receives so much advantage from its water communication as London does from the Thames. The merchants of London, either individually or in companies, trade to all parts of the world, though the war at present carried on by France, has, in some measure, obstructed the communication which is so necessary in producing the reciprocities of commerce. However, within a few years past, the most stupendous works for the convenience and dispatch of trade have been executed; the West India Docks, in the Isle of Dogs, for the reception of West India produce, form one of the strongest features of the magnitude of the commerce of Great Britain. The London Docks in Wapping, are improvements of immense advantage to the general trade of the port of London. The East India Docks at Blackwall, constructed by the East India company for the purpose of loading and unloading their ships, are worthy of the proprietors. The Grand Junction Canal, which terminates in a bason at Paddington, connects the various inland canals, and forms a channel of communication between them and the metropolis, of incalculable advantage, not only to London, but also to those parts of the country which border on the line of inland navigation.

The figure of London is very irregular, being stretched out in buildings at the pleasure of every speculator. Its form, however, including Westminster and the borough of Southwark, approaches to an oblong, being about seven miles in length, and in breadth in the narrowest part about two miles, and at the broadest about four. The greater part of it is situated on the north side of the river Thames, through which the tide regularly flows twice every day. The hills or risings on which the principal part of the town stands, are mostly a mixture of clay and sand, the sand or gravel generally being in the largest proportion. The heat of the air is very variable, seldom remaining equal for many days; and every year differing entirely from the preceding ones, not only in heat, but also in moisture and rains. The thermometer sometimes rises to above 80° of Fahrenheit's scale, very rarely to 84°; but the most common summer heat is from 65°, to 75°; it sometimes falls in the winter to 15° but has been known to fall below the point marked 0 very rarely. The most common winter heat when it freezes, is between 20° and 30°, the most frequent when it does not freeze, between 40° and 50°. The streets are generally wide, few of them being so narrow as to prevent two carriages from passing, and many of them wide enough to allow five or more to pass, especially in the new parts of the town, which form more than half of it, they are from 20 to 60 feet; those of great communication seldom less than 30 in the old part of the town, and in the new scarcely ever less than 40. In several places there are squares of considerable size, from 100 feet to 1000 feet square. Grosvenor square is undoubtedly the first square in London; it contains five acres, is planted with evergreens, and in the center is an equestrian statue of George II.; the houses round this square are some of the most magnificent in the metropolis. Next in beauty to this is Portman-square, at one of the corners of which is that very elegant house, the residence of the late Mrs. Montague. South of Grosvenor-square, is Berkeley-square, the center of which is ornamented with an equestrian statue of his present majesty in the character of Marcus Aurelius. In Cavendish-square, which is for the most part surrounded with good houses, is a statue of William duke of Cumberland. Manchester-square is small but neat. There is no uniformity in St. James's square; but the houses in Bedford-square correspond exactly, and have a grand appearance. Leicester-square is planted, and has an equestrian statue of king George II. Lincoln's-Inn-square is the most magnificent in size of them all, the sides exactly corresponding in dimensions with those of the great pyramid in Egypt. The squares of an inferior order are too many to be enumerated; among them are, Golden-square, Soho-square, Hanover-square, Bloomsbury-square, with several others. The houses, except most of those in the oldest part of the town, which are not more than a quarter of the whole, have a story sunk under the level of the street. This contains the kitchen and other offices. Below the level of the bottom of this story a covered sewer is dug under the street, with which there is a communication from the houses, and by which putrescent matters sufficiently fluid, are carried off. Ashes, bones, &c. are carried away in carts twice a week. The greater part of the houses are of a uniform structure; in each story is a large room in front; a smaller room and staircase occupy the back part; and there is frequently a smaller room added behind. There are commonly four stories besides the one under the level of the street. London is supplied with water from the Thames and from the New River, which is carried in wooden pipes under the streets into the houses of the inhabitants. Rain water is little used, owing to its being always impure, from the dust it washes from the tops of the houses. The whole supply of water for the use of the metropolis, is about 120,000 cubic feet every hour. London has sent 4 members to parliament ever since the 49th of king Henry III. The sheriffs are the returning officers, and the number of voters amounts to about 10,500. The longitude is 0° 5′ west of Greenwich, and the latitude 51° 32′ north.

LONDONDERRY. See DERRY, Ireland.

LONDON LITTLE, a hamlet in the parish of Oakley, hundred of Ashendon, Bucks, 5 miles from Thame, and 51 from London. Population included with that of Oakley.

LONDON LITTLE, a hamlet to Shepton Mallet, Somersetshire, 2 miles from Shepton Mallet.

LONDON LITTLE, a small village near Thaxted, in Essex.

LONDON LITTLE, a hamlet to Hillingdon, near Uxbridge, Middlesex, 15 miles from London.

LONDON THORPE, a hamlet to Grantham, in Grantham liberty, division of Kesteven, Lincoln, 112 miles from London; containing 26 houses and 125 inhabitants.

LONG, or LOUNG, a loch or extensive arm of the sea which runs from the Frith of Clyde in a north-east direction, and divides the counties of Argyle and Dumbarton. It is about 24 miles long, and is from 40 to 80 fathoms deep. It abounds with herrings, and gives employment to a great number of fishermen.

LONG LOCH, an arm of the sea in the shire of Ross, which forms the boundary of the peninsula of Kintail.

LONG ASTON. See ASTON LONG.

LONG BENTON, a parish in Castle ward, Northumberland, 8 miles from Hartley, and 281 from London; containing 665 houses and 3355 inhabitants, viz. 1782 males, and 1573 females, of whom 541 were returned as being employed in various trades. It is a vicarage, value 3*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.* and is in the patronage of Baliol College, Oxford.

LONGBOROUGH, a parish in the hundred of Kiftsgate, Gloucester, 3 miles from Stow, and 84 from London; containing 105 houses and 473 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 15*s.*

LONGBREDY, a parish in the hundred of Eggarton, division of Bridport, Dorset, 7 miles from Dorchester, and 126 from London; containing 47 houses and 241 inhabitants. It lies near the river Bredy, at the foot of some chalk hills, and a small hamlet adjoining to it, is called Little Bredy. It is a rectory, value 19*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.*

LONGBRIDGE. See LANGBRIDGE.

LONGBRIDGE, a hamlet in the parish of Berkley, near Dursley, Gloucester.

LONGBURGH, a hamlet in the parish of Burgh, in Cumberland ward, Cumberland, 5 miles from Carlisle, and 309 from London; containing 23 houses and 106 inhabitants.

LONGBURTON, a parish in the hundred and division of Sherborne, Dorset, 3 miles from Sherborne, and 120 from London; containing 42 houses and 216 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 15*s.* with Holnest chapel annexed.

LONGCOT, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Shrivenham, Berks, 3½ miles from Farringdon, and 70 from London; containing 68 houses and 368 inhabitants.

LONG DITTON. See DITTON LONG.

LONGDON ON TERN, a hamlet in the parish of Kinnersley, in the hundred of South Bradford, Salop, 8 miles from Newport, and 148 from London; containing 16 houses and 102 inhabitants.

LONGDON, a parish in the hundred of Offlow, Stafford, 4 miles from Litchfield, and 128 from London; containing 193 houses and 909 inhabitants. It stands on a brook which runs into the Trent, and by which the Staffordshire canal passes. The living is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 5*s.* belonging to the prebend of the same name, in Litchfield cathedral.

LONGDON, a hamlet in the parish of Leek, hundred of Totmonslow, Stafford, 2 miles from Leek, and 156 from London; population included with Endon.

LONGDON, a parish in the hundred of Pershore, Worcester, 2½ miles from Upton, and 107 from London; containing 106 houses and 533 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 17*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Worcester, with Castle Moreton and Chaseley chapels annexed.

LONGDRAX. See DRAX LONG.

LONGHATON, a parish in the hundred of Morleston and Litchurch, Derby, 9 miles from Derby, and 119 from London; containing 125 houses and 505 inhabitants.

LONGFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Axton, lathe of Sutton at Hone, Kent, 5 miles from Dartford, and 20 from London; containing 18 houses and 99 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 5*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Rochester.

LONGFLEET, a tything to Poole, in the hundred of Cogdean, division of Shaston, Dorset, 1 mile from Poole, and 105 from London; containing 142 houses and 504 inhabitants.

LONGFORD, a parish in the hundred of Appletree, Derby, 8 miles from Derby, and 134 from London; containing 78 houses and 414 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 3*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*

LONGFORD ST. CATHERINE'S, a parish in the hundred of Dudstone and Kingsbarton, Gloucester, 1½ mile from Gloucester, and 107 from London; containing 15 houses and 84 inhabitants.

LONGFORD ST. MARY, a parish united with the foregoing, and nearly adjoining thereto; containing 18 houses and 82 inhabitants.

LONGFORD, a hamlet in the parish of Harmondsworth, hundred of Elthorne, Middlesex, on the banks of the Colne, 15 miles from London; much frequented by anglers.

LONGFORD, a small village, 3 miles from Salisbury, Wilts, where is a beautiful mansion of the earl of Radnor.

LONGFORD BURLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Minching Hampton, Gloucester, 102 miles from London.

LONGFORD, a county of Ireland, in the province of Leinster, bounded on the north-west by Leitrim, on the north-east by Cavan, on the east and south by Westmeath, and on the west by the river Shannon, which divides it from Roscommon. It is about 25 miles long, and 16 broad, and contains 24 parishes, about 10,000 houses, and 50,000 inhabitants. Before the union, this county and its boroughs sent 10 members to parliament, but since that event it only sends 2 to the imperial parliament. It is a very fertile and pleasant country, is in general flat, but towards the north rather mountainous. The river Shannon passes through the more level part of it, which is sometimes liable to be overflowed. It has a very extensive share in the linen trade.

LONGFORD, the county town of the county of Longford, province of Leinster, Ireland, is seated on the river Camin, 70 miles west-north-west of Dublin. Many considerable branches of the linen manufacture are carried on here, and a great quantity of hemp is sent hence to the other manufacturing towns.

LONGFORGAN, a parish in the district of the Carse of Gowrie, Perthshire, Scotland, on the banks of the Tay. The village of Longforgan is a straggling built town, on the road from Dundee to Perth, 4 miles from Dundee. It contains 321 houses and 1569 inhabitants. The church is a new and elegant building. Longforgan is a free burgh of barony, elects its own baillies, has a weekly market, and 2 annual fairs. The seat of the proprietor, Mr. Paterson, at Castle Huntly, who erected the new church, is a handsome mansion, built on the top of a rock which rises in the middle of a plain. The gardens and grounds are laid out in the most costly and elegant manner. There are two small villages belonging to the parish, the one called Kingoodie, and the other standing near the hill of Lochtoxen.

LONGFORMACUS, a parish in the shire of of Berwick, Scotland, in the midst of the Lammermuir hills, 18 miles from Berwick; containing 94 houses and 406 inhabitants.

LONGHAVEN, a bay of Scotland, on the west coast of Aberdeenshire, 4 miles south of Peterhead,

LONGHOLME. See LANGHOLME.

LONGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Launditch, Norfolk, 4 miles from East Dereham, and 105 from London; containing 34 houses and 247 inhabitants.

LONGHOPE, a parish in the district of the duchy of Lancaster, Gloucester, 5 miles from Newent, and 114¼ from London; containing 145 houses and 636 inhabitants. The church is a large ancient building, in the form of a cross, having a spire and 5 bells. It was compleatly repaired in 1771. The living is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 7*s.* 11*d.*

LONGHURST, a township in the parish of Bothall, Morpeth ward, Northumberland, 2½ miles from Morpeth, and 293 from London; containing 35 houses and 154 inhabitants.

LONG ISLAND, an island 2 miles in length, on the south coast of Ireland, in Roaring Water Bay. Lat. 51° 26′. Long. 9° 27′

LONG ISLAND, the name applied to that district of the Hebrides which extends from the island of Lavis on the north, to the island of Barray on the south. They appear to have been formerly united, as many of them are only separated by a channel which is dry at low water, and the depth of the soundings between the other islands is much less than it is at a small distance from them.

LONGLEAT, a hamlet to Warminster, in the hundred of Heyteshury, Wilts, 2½ miles from Warminster, and 99 from London. Here is the magnificent mansion and extensive grounds belonging to the marquis of Bath.

LONGNESS POINT, the most southerly part of the Isle of Man, in the Irish sea, and the east limit of Castle Town Bay, 10 miles south-south-west of Douglas. It is at the extremity of a peninsula ten miles round, to which St. Michael's island, near Derby haven, is joined by a high breast work of about 100 yards.

LONG NEWTON, a town of Scotland, in the county of Roxburgh, 6 miles north-west of Jedburgh.

LONGNEY, a parish in the hundred of Whitestone, Gloucester, 7 miles from Stroud, and 109 from London; containing 53 houses and 314 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 12*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.* the patronage of which is in the king.

LONGNOR, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish and hundred of Condover, Salop, 8 miles from Shrewsbury, and 160 from London; containing 36 houses and 177 inhabitants.

LONGNOR, a township and chapelry in the parish of Alstonfield, hundred of Totmonslow, Stafford, 6 miles from Leeke, and 152 from London; containing 95 houses and 391 inhabitants. It stands near the source of the river Manifold, on the borders of Derbyshire, and has a small market on Tuesday.

LONGPORT, a hamlet adjoining Newcastle under Line, Staffordshire. It has a considerable pottery, and the Staffordshire canal passes near this place, where the canal company have a public wharf.

LONGPRESTON, a parish in Staincliffe wapentake, west riding of York, 4 miles from Settle, and 230 from London; containing 120 houses and 573 inhabitants.

LONGRIGG, a hamlet to Norham, in Northumberland, Durham, 5 miles from Coldstream, and 339 from London; containing 13 houses and 66 inhabitants.

LONGSHAWS, a hamlet in the parish of Longhorsley, Morpeth ward, Northumberland, 6 miles from Morpeth, and 297 from London; containing 7 houses and 40 inhabitants.

LONGSIDE, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, in the district of Buchan, 5 miles from Peterhead; containing 472 houses and 1825 inhabitants. At the hamlet of Nether Kirmundy, a small woollen manufactory has been lately established. This parish abounds with many beautiful specimens of granite.

LONGSLEDDALE, a township and curacy in the parish and ward of Kendal, Westmoreland, 6 miles from Kendal, and 266 from London; containing 36 houses and 187 inhabitants.

LONGSTANTON, a parish in the hundred of Northstow, Cambridge, 6 miles from Cambridge, and 56 from London; containing 58 houses and 296 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 14*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.

LONGSTOCK, a parish in the hundred of Kingsomborne, division of Andover, Hants, 2 miles from Stockbridge; and 68 from London; containing 52 houses and 283 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 15*s.*

LONGSTONE GREAT, a township and chapelry in the parish of Bakewell, and hundred of High Peake, Derby, 2½ miles from Bakewell, and 155 from London; containing 81 houses and 382 inhabitants.

LONGSTONE LITTLE, a township united with the foregoing, ¼ mile distant, and contains 31 houses and 151 inhabitants.

LONGSTOW, the name of a hundred in Cambridge, lying on the western side of the county around Caxton.

LONGSTOW, a parish in the hundred of Longstow, Cambridge, and 1 mile from Caxton; containing 22 houses and 175 inhabitants. There are some fine woods in the neighbourhood, and it gives name to the hundred in which it is situated. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 8*s.* 2*d.*

LONGTON, a hamlet in the parish of Gainford, Darlington ward, Durham, 7 miles from Barnard Castle, and 240 from London; containing 15 houses and 78 inhabitants.

LONGTHORPE, a hamlet to Peterborough, in the hundred of Nassaburgh, Northampton, 2 miles from Peterborough, and 83 from London; containing 36 houses and 193 inhabitants.

LONGTON, a township in the parish of Penwortham, hundred of Leyland, Lancaster, 4 miles from Preston, and 216 from London; containing 182 houses and 904 inhabitants.

LONGTOWN, a township in the parish of Arthuret, Eskdale ward, Cumberland, 7 miles from Carlisle, and 310 from London; it contains 176 houses and 1335 inhabitants, of whom 648 were employed in various trades and manufactures. Longtown lies on the borders of Scotland, near the conflux of the Esk and Liddel. It has a good charity school, with a market on Thursday. Fairs Thursday after Whitsunday, Thursday after Martinmas, and 22d of November. At the north end of the town is a good stone bridge over the river Esk. The houses are built in the modern stile, and the streets are regular and spacious. It is the property of sir James Graham.—Housman's Tour in Cumberland.

LONGTOWN, a township and chapelry in the parish of Gludock, hundred of Ewia's Lacey, Hereford, 14 miles from Hereford, and 146 from London, near Golden Vale; containing 116 houses and 768 inhabitants.

LONGTOWN. See LANGTOWN, Scotland.

LONGTREE, the name of a hundred in Oxford, forming the southern angle of the county, divided from Berkshire by the Thames.

LONGTREES, the name of a hundred also in Gloucestershire, on the southern side of the county and borders of Wilts.

LONGWHITTON, a hamlet in the parish of Hartburn, in Morpeth ward, Northumberland, 6 miles from Morpeth, and 296 from London; containing 23 houses and 124 inhabitants.

LONGWOOD, a township in the parish of Huddersfield, Aybrig wapentake, west riding of York, 3 miles from Huddersfield, and 190 from London; containing 264 houses and 1276 inhabitants, of whom 631 were employed in various trades and manufactures.

LONGWORTH, a parish in the hundred of Ganfield, Berks, 7 miles from Abingdon, and 62 from London; containing 79 houses and 401 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 27*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of Jesus college, Oxford, with Charney chapel annexed.

LONGWORTH, a township in the parish of Bolton le Moors, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, near Bolton, and 196 miles from London; containing 37 houses and 249 inhabitants.

LONMAY, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, 10 miles from Peterhead, on the Loch Strathberg, which abounds with excellent trout. It is also watered by a branch of the Ugie. It contains 577 houses and 1607 inhabitants. There are two considerable fishing villages lately established in this parish.

LONSDALE, the name of a hundred in Lancashire, forming the northern extremity of the county, bounded by Westmoreland and Cumberland;—also the name of a ward in Westmoreland, forming the south-eastern extremity of the county, and border of Lancashire and Yorkshire.

LOOE EAST, a market town and borough in the hundred of West, Cornwall, 12 miles from Plymouth, and 233½ from London; containing 117 houses and 467 inhabitants, of whom 154 were returned employed in trade, principally in the herring fishery, and in the exporting and the importing of coals. This town takes its name from the river Looe, on which it is commodiously situated near a creek of the sea. There is a large stone bridge of 15 arches over this creek. Here is a chapel of ease to the parish of St. Martin's adjoining, which stands at 2 miles distance from the town. It is governed by a mayor and 8 burgesses, who form a common council, but the recorder and other officers are chosen by the mayor only. It sends 2 members to parliament, who are chosen by the mayor, burgesses, and freemen, in number about 50. The corporation has the toll of the market, and holds the manor of the town of the duchy of Cornwall, at a fee farm rent of 20*s.* per annum. The surrounding country is well furnished with gentlemen's seats, and a little higher up the tin works begin. The market is on Saturday. Fairs, 13th of February and 10th of October.—Polwhele's Cornwall.

LOOE WEST, a township in the parish of Talland, in the hundred of West, Cornwall, standing on the banks of the river Looe, opposite to East Looe; it contains 79 houses and 376 inhabitants, and was formerly much more considerable in point of trade, &c. than East Looe. It is a borough and sends 2 members to parliament, the right of election being in the mayor, burgesses, and freemen, in number about 55. It was first incorporated by queen Elizabeth, and is governed by a mayor and 12 capital burgesses; the manor anciently belonged to the crown, and was annexed to the dutchy of Cornwall by Henry III. of whom it is now held by the corporation. Although the harbour is not large, it is commodious, and is defended by a strong battery; the river is navigable for vessels of 100 tons. Near the mouth of the harbour is a small island, called St. George's. Lat. 50° 23′. Long. 4° 36′ west.—Polwhele's Cornwall.

LOOK, HIGH and LOW, two small hamlets to Abbotsbury, Dorsetshire.

LOOPOOL, a lake near Helstone, Cornwall, being about 2 miles long, abounding with excellent trout.

LOOSE, a township and chapelry in the parish and hundred of Maidstone, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 2 miles from Maidstone, and 37 from London; containing 116 houses and 668 inhabitants. The chapelry is in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury.

LORHAM NORTH, a parish in the hundred of Guilteross, Norfolk, 3 miles from Harling, and 93 from London; containing 79 houses and 388 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 17*l.* 5*d.*

LORHAM SOUTH, ½ mile distant from the preceding; contains 88 houses and 692 inhabitants.

Loppington, a parish in the hundred of Pimhill, Salop, 2 miles from Wem, and 172 from London; containing 92 houses and 547 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.* in the patronage of the king.

Lorbottle, a hamlet in the parish of Whittingham, Coquetdale-ward, Northumberland, 6 miles from Alnwick, and 310 from London; containing 13 houses and 95 inhabitants.

Lorn, a district in the shire of Argyle, Scotland; bounded on the east by Braidalbain, on the south by Loch Etnis, on the west by the ocean, and on the north by Lochaber. It was formerly the seat of the Pictish government: here also was the Royal-castle of Dunstaffnage. It gives title of marquis to the eldest son of the duke of Argyle.

Lorton, a township and chapelry in the parish of Brigham, Allerdale-ward, above Derwent, Cumberland, 3½ miles from Cockermouth, and 300 from London; containing 67 houses and 298 inhabitants.

Lossie, a river in the shire of Moray, Scotland, which rises at Ederkellie, passes the borough of Elgin, and falls into the sea at Lossiemouth 26 miles from its source. It is too small to be navigable beyond its mouth, but abounds with excellent red-spotted trout.

Lossie Mouth, a village in the parish of Drainy, shire of Moray, Scotland; containing about 180 inhabitants. It has its name from lying at the mouth of the river Lossie, and is a port belonging to the town of Elgin, from which it is distant 7 miles. The harbour will receive vessels of about 80 tons.

Lostock, a township in the parish of Witton, in the hundred of Northwich, Chester, 2 miles from Northwich, and 174 from London; containing 70 houses and 361 inhabitants.

Lostock, a township in the parish of Bolton le Moors, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, near Bolton, and 196 miles from London; containing 86 houses and 509 inhabitants.

Lostwithiel, a borough, market town and parish in the hundred of Powder, Cornwall, 5 miles from Fowey, and 246 from London; containing 21 houses and 743 inhabitants. It stands on the river Fowey, which was formerly navigable, but is now choaked up with sand. It has a handsome church with a spire steeple. Here is the stannary gaol, and the county courts for Cornwall are held here. It is governed by a mayor, 6 capital burgesses, and 17 common council, and has returned 2 members to parliament ever since the 23d Edward I. It had originally the privileges of a mint. The seat of lord Camelford, at Bocconnoc, is a good building, standing in a romantic situation. The market is on Friday, and it has a tolerable woollen manufacture. Fair November 13. The living is a vicarage, value 2*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the king.—Polwhele's History of Cornwall.

Loth, a parish in the shire of Sutherland, Scotland, lying on the sea coast, 20 miles from Dornock, and 50 from Dingwall, containing 238 houses and 1374 inhabitants. It is watered by the rivers Loth and Helmsdale, which fall into the ocean near this place. The coast is in many places rocky, but it has several small and safe harbours. Here are several remains of Pictish buildings. It abounds with lime-stone, freestone, and coal.

Loth, a small river in the shire of Sutherland, Scotland, rising near the middle of the county, and after a course of about 16 miles, falls into the ocean by a channel cut through a rock 20 feet high, by order of lady Jane Gordon, countess of Sutherland, by which many acres of low marsh-land have been recovered to cultivation.

Lotherton, a township in the parish of Sherburn, in Barkston-ash Wapentake, west riding of York, 1½ mile from Abberford, and 186 from London; containing 74 houses and 323 inhabitants.

Lothian, an extensive and fertile district of Scotland, now divided into three shires, viz. East Lothian or Haddingtonshire, Mid Lothian or Edinburghshire, and West Lothian or Linlithgowshire. Lothian gives title of marquis to the noble family of Ker.

Loveden, the name of a hundred in Lincolnshire, in the division of Kesteven, and western side of the county, bordering on Newark, in Notts.

Lovington, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Catash, Somerset, 2½ miles from Castle Carey, and 118 from London; containing 27 houses and 174 inhabitants.

Lothingland, a tract of land in Suffolk near Lowestoff, extending thence to Yarmouth, once an island, but now a peninsula. It is bounded on the north by the river Yare, the sea on the east, a lake called Lothing on the south, and the river Waveney on the west. It is joined to the mainland by a very narrow isthmus near Lowestoff, and gives name to a hundred, which in the division of the county is joined with Mutford.

Loudon, a parish in the shire of Ayr, Scotland, containing 404 houses and 2503 inhabitants, of whom 1519 were returned employed in various trades and manufactures; and there are 3 other villages besides Loudon, viz. New Mills, Derval and Auldtown. The mansion of the earl of Loudon is a very extensive building, and contains a very valuable library.

Loughborough, a market town and parish in the hundred of West Goscot, Leicester, 11 miles from Leicester, and 108 from London, on the river Soar, over which it has a good stone bridge; it contains 957 houses and 4646 inhabitants, viz. 2279 males and 2367 females, of whom 825 were returned employed in various trades and manufactures. It has the benefit of a navigable canal, which communicates with that called the union canal, and with the river Soar; from hence is a railway for 2 miles to Broadhurst hill on the borders of Charnwood forest, from which it has a navigation to the lime works at Barrow hill, near Worthington. This town has often suffered by fire. In the time of the Saxons it was a royal village, and according to Camden ranked next to Leicester. The church is a very extensive building, and there is a good free school, and also a charity school for 80 boys, besides one for 20 girls. The district of Charnwood forest westward of the town, extends 10 miles in length, and 6 in breadth. It is full of hills, woods, and rocks, and was disafforested by Henry III. Market on Thursday. Fairs, 28 March, April 25, Holy Thursday, August 12, November 13, and September 15. The living is a rectory, value 40*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.* and is in the patronage of Emanuel College, Cambridge.—Nichols's Leicestershire.

Loughton Magna, a parish in the hundred of Newport, Bucks, 3½ miles from Fenny Stratford, and 48 from London; containing 58 houses and 302 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of Trinity College, Cambridge.

Lough in Ireland, the same as loch in Scotland, and lake in England.

Lough Aghree, in the county of Down, province of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles east-south-east of Dromore, about 1 mile long and ¼ mile broad, well stored with trout and eels.

Lough Allen, in the county of Leitrim, province of Connaught, Ireland, is upwards of 30 miles in circumference, and entirely encompassed by high mountains, from the top of which is a most beautiful landscape. The district abounds with coal and iron mines, and of late years both have been worked to very considerable advantage.

Lough Allua, in the county of Cork, province of Munster, Ireland, within a mile of Inchigeela. In this lake there is a small island remarkable for the hermitage of Finbar.

Lough Arrow, in the county of Sligo, province of Connaught, Ireland, about 2 miles from Ballinafabad: in it are a number of well-planted islands.

Loughbrickland, a town in the county of Down, province of Ulster, Ireland, 58 miles north of Dublin, on the road to Belfast, consisting chiefly of one broad street. It is supposed to have had its name from Brickland, signifying speckled trout, from a species of that kind produced in a neighbouring lake.

Lough Conn, a lake in the county of Mayo, Connaught.

Lough Corrib, in the county of Galway, province of Connaught, Ireland, is upwards of 20 miles long, and in some parts near 6 miles broad. In this lough are many fine islands: it is noted for the gillaroe trout, a very delicate fish, which is often taken here, from 12 to 18 pounds.

Lough Derg, a lake in the county of Donegal, province of Ulster, Ireland. From this lough issues the river Derg, and falls into Lough Foyle. In it is an island, containing a little cell called St. Patrick's Purgatory.

Lough Derg, is also the name of a lake which joins the Shannon, between the towns of Tipperary and Galway.

Lough Erin, in the county of Down, province of Ulster, Ireland, lying in the parish of Anahilt. In several places it is so deep that a line of 16 fathoms has not reached the bottom. It is noted for the amazing size of its pike, trout, and eels.

Lough Erne, in the county of Fermanagh, province of Ulster, Ireland.

Lough Esk, in the county of Down, province of Ulster, Ireland, produces excellent char.

Lough Falcon, in the county of Down, province of Ulster, Ireland.

Lough Foyle, in the county of Derry, province of Ulster, Ireland, before the mouth of which is a sand called the Towns, but it does not obstruct the navigation, there being at all times 14 or 15 fathoms water in the channel, which is broad as well as deep; and on the arm on which Londonderry stands, there is 12 fathom water, which renders it as commodious a harbour as any in the kingdom.

Lough Garra and Gill, in the county of Sligo, province of Connaught, Ireland.

Lough Glen, in the county of Donegal, province of Ulster, Ireland, lying about 22 miles west-north-west of Londonderry.

Lough Gule, in the county of Antrim, province of Ulster, Ireland.

Lough Hanch, in Queen's county, province of Leinster, Ireland.

Lough Hennev, in the county of Down, province of Ulster, Ireland.

Lough Hine, in the county of Cork, province of Munster, Ireland, is about 2 miles in circumference, and abounds with salmon, white trout, lobsters, crabs, and oysters.

Lough Hoyle, in the county of West Meath, province of Leinster, Ireland, lying about 2 miles north-west of Mullingar, the county town, and 40 miles from Dublin.

Lough Inchiquin, in the county of Clare, Munster, Ireland, affords excellent fish.

Lough Iron, in the county of Westmeath, province of Leinster, Ireland, 5 miles north-west of Mullingar, and 43 from Dublin.

Lough Kay, in the county of Leitrim, province of Connaught, Ireland, a most beautiful expanse of water, with a number of islands interspersed, some of them presenting picturesque views, being ornamented with good plantations; others exhibiting some ancient castles in ruins.

Lough Key, in the county of Roscommon, province of Connaught, Ireland, about 6 miles north-west of Carrick on Shannon, and 83 from Dublin.

Lough Lean. See Killarney.

Lough Lee, or Lough Currane, in the county of Cork, province of Munster, Ireland, near Ballinaskeligo bay, of an oval form, about 3 miles long, and ½ mile broad. It contains 3 small islands, and abounds with excellent white trout and salmon.

Lough Leighs, or Lough Healing, in the county of Cavan, province of Ulster, Ireland.

Lough Loughail, in the county of Westmeath, province of Leinster, Ireland, is about 3 miles long, and 1 mile broad; in which are 5 small islands well planted and cultivated.

Lough Macnean, in the county of Fermanagh, province of Ulster, Ireland, communicating with the east part of Lough Earne.

Lough Maghan, in the county of Down, province of Ulster, Ireland, covers about 23 acres of land, well stored with pike, eels, roach and bream.

Lough Mask, in the county of Mayo, province of Connaught, Ireland.

Lough More, in the county of Limerick, province of Munster, Ireland.

Lough Neagh, a very extensive lake, lying partly in the counties of Armagh, Down, Derry, Antrim, and Ulster; about 20 miles long, and 15 broad; containing an area of upwards of 100,000 acres. It is remarkable for its healing virtue in scrofulous cases; and is also noted for its strong petrifying quality, which is also imparted to the adjacent soil to a considerable depth.

Lough Pallis, in King's county, province of Leinster, Ireland, about 12 miles from Portarlington, and 38 from Dublin.

Lough Ramor, in the county of Cavan, province of Ulster, Ireland, near Virginia, 40 miles from Dublin; containing several small islands, on which are many ruins of castles.

Loughrea, a town in the county of Galway, province of Connaught, Ireland, standing near a beautiful lake of the same name, about 1¼ mile long, and near a mile broad; 15 miles south-west of Galway, and 86 west of Dublin.

Lough Ree, lies between the counties of Longford and Westmeath, and the county of Roscommon, Ireland; it is very spacious, and is formed by the river Shannon. There are a number of small islands in it.

Loughrigg, a township united with Rydal, in the parish of Grassmere, Kendal ward, Westmoreland, 1½ mile from Ambleside, and 276 from London. It is joined to Rydal by a bridge over the Rydal water that runs into the Winandermere; both villages containing 230 inhabitants.

Lough Salt, in the county of Donegal, province of Ulster, Ireland, lying between Kilmacrenan and Glenn Inn, on the top of a lofty mountain.

Lough Shark, in the county of Down, province of Ulster, Ireland.

Lough Shellin, in the county of Westmeath, province of Leinster, Ireland, within a mile of Daly Bridge. It is of considerable magnitude, extending to Finae, where it joins Lough Inny. Between the two lakes is a bridge which joins the counties of Westmeath and Cavan. This lough contains several small islands.

Lough Shy, in the county of Mayo, province of Connaught, Ireland.

Lough Strangford, in the county of Down, province of Ulster, Ireland. It takes its name from a small port-town called Strangford on its west side, from the narrow entrance of the sea. It forms a very deep bay about 17 miles long and 4½ broad, and was formerly called Lough Cone, or Lough Coyne. It abounds with excellent fish, particularly smelts; and here is a considerable trade in the herring fishery. It contains about 54 islands of various sizes; 4 of them are called Swan islands, from the number of swans which frequent them. On most of the islands the people are employed in burning sea weed into kelp.

Lough Swilly, in the county of Louth, province of Leinster, Ireland.

Loughton, a parish in the hundred of Ongar, Essex, 4 miles from Epping, and 12½ from London; containing 119 houses and 681 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 18*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.*

Loughton, a parish in the hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 4 miles from Market Harborough, and 86 from London; containing 34 houses and 162 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.*

Loughton, a parish united with Folkingham, in the hundred of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 1 mile from Folkingham, and 106 from London; containing only 8 houses and 29 inhabitants.

Loughton, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Chatton; hundred of Stoddesdon, Salop, 3 miles from Bridgenorth, and 41 from London; containing 23 houses and 130 inhabitants.

Lound, a hamlet in the parish of Sutton, hundred of Basset Law, Notts, 3½ miles from Retford, and 148 from London; containing 70 houses and 268 inhabitants.

Lound, a parish in the hundred of Mutford and Lothingland, Suffolk, 3½ miles from Yarmouth, and 117 from London; containing 62 houses and 332 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.*

Louth, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Louth Eske, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 27 miles from Lincoln, and 144 from London, on the river Lud, containing 893 houses and 4236 inhabitants, viz. 2007 males and 2229 females, of whom 549 were returned employed in various trades, and 331 in agriculture. The streets are neat, and the buildings mostly of brick, tiled, except a few cottages which are of clay. The church is a very large building, having a spire 96 yards high, curiously constructed in an octagonal form; and by means of small stones regularly projecting out of the angles, a sailor climbed to the top of the weathercock, a few years since. Louth has a canal cut from the river northwards, which falls into the sea about 7 miles distant, and it has a considerable trade coastways. The air here is very salubrious. In the park near the town stand the ruins of a Cistertian monastery. The town is incorporated under a warden and 6 assistants. It has a well-attended market on Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs 24th May and 16th August. The living is a vicarage, value 12*l.* in the patronage of the prebend of Louth in Lincoln cathedral.—Housman's Tour; Howlett's Lincoln.

Louth, a county of Ireland, in the province of Leinster, Ireland, bounded on the west by Monaghan and Meath, on the north by Armagh and Carlingford bay, on the east by St. George's channel, and on the south by Meath, from which it is parted by the river Boyne. It is about 22 miles long, and from 9 to 14 broad: containing 61 parishes, 11,500 houses, and about 57,750 inhabitants. The chief towns are Dundalk, Carlingford, Drogheda, Ardee, and Dunleer. It is the smallest county in the kingdom, but is very fertile, pleasant and healthy. This county sends 2 members to the imperial parliament.

Louth, a town in the county of the same name, 6 miles south-west of Dundalk; contains nothing worthy of notice.

Lowdham, a parish in the hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, 7 miles from Nottingham, and 131 from London; containing 88 houses and 553 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.*

Lowdore, a celebrated waterfall in the vale of Keswick, on the east side of the Derwent water, Cumberland, 3 miles from Keswick, and is formed by the rushing of the waters of the Watanlath through a chasm made by the contiguity of two vast rocks.

Lowestoff, a market town and parish in the hundred of Mutford and Lothingland, Suffolk, in the east part of the county near the sea, 10 miles from Yarmouth, and 114 from London. It consists principally of one long street, stretching from north to south about ¾ of a mile, intersected by several smaller ones, and contains 496 houses and 2332 inhabitants, viz. 1089 males and 1243 females, of whom 206 were returned employed in various trades; but the principal employment is the herring fishery. Upwards of 70,000 barrels of herrings have been exported in a season. The town standing on a lofty eminence, commands an extensive view of the German ocean. The church is a fine Gothic building, consisting of a nave and 2 side aisles handsomely paved. Here are also a town hall and a dissenting meeting house. It has a small manufactory of china ware, and a ropery. A theatre was erected here in 1790. Of late years several bathing machines have been built, and during the season a pretty numerous company resort here for the benefit of bathing, and the salubrity of the air. At the south end of the town formerly stood Good Cross chapel, now destroyed by the sea, as well as the village of Newtown adjoining. Here are several strong batteries, mounted with 32, 18, and 9 pounders for protecting the roads. The coast is very dangerous, and has 2 light-houses. There is a tolerable mackarel fishery here, which commences in May, and continues till the latter end of June, and supplies the adjacent markets as well as the metropolis. The market is on Wednesday. Fairs 12th May, and 10th October. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Norwich. Lat. 52. 35. Long. 1. 55. east.

Lowick, a township and chapelry in the parish of Ulverstone, hundred of Lonsdale, Lancaster, 5 miles from Ulverstone, and 275 from London; containing 54 houses and 278 inhabitants. Here is a bridge over the river Crake, which runs into the Coniston water.

Lowick. See Luffwick, Northampton.

Lowick, a parish in Glendale ward, Northumberland, 5 miles from Wooller, and 328 from London; containing 293 houses and 1382 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Lowlands, one of the largest divisions of Scotland, being the south-east and south-west parts, as the northern and western parts are called the Highlands. The Lowlands, although not so level as England, contain a large extent of cultivated land and verdant meadows, and in many parts are agreeably diversified with hill and dale, plains, woods, and numerous streams of water. The aspect altogether, as well as the manners of the inhabitants of the two districts, are dissimilar. Here the manners, customs, and language of England, are every where introduced.

Low Layton. See Layton Low, Essex.

Lownd, a hamlet in the parish of Wytham on the Hill, hundred of Bettisloe, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 2 miles from Bourn, and 98 from London. Population returned included with Toft.

Lownds. See Heath, Derby.

Lowndsborough. See Londesborough, east riding of York.

Lowside, a hamlet in the parish of St. Bees, in Allerdale ward, above Derwent, Cumberland, 7 miles from Cockermouth, and 308 from London; containing 37 houses and 226 inhabitants.

Lowswater, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of St. Bees, Allerdale ward, above Derwent, Cumberland, 6 miles from Cockermouth, and 308 from London; containing 68 houses and 294 inhabitants. It takes its name from a beautiful lake about 1 mile long, and ¼ mile broad, which falls into the Crummoch water. It is a romantic spot, the shores being diversified with hanging woods, and by inclosures. The southern shore is bounded by lofty mountains. It abounds with pike and perch, and has some trout.

Lowther, a parish in West ward, West moreland, standing on the river Loder, 2 miles from Penrith, and 283 from London; containing 86 houses and 373 inhabitants. Near the river is a row of pyramidical stones, 8 or 9 feet high, extending nearly a mile. It is a rectory, value 25*l.* 7*s.* 3*d.*

Lowthrop, a parish and curacy in Dickering lythe, east riding of York, 3 miles from Great Driffield, and 199 from London; containing 25 houses and 159 inhabitants.

Lowton, a township and chapelry in the parish of Winwick, hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 2 miles from Newton, and 190 from London; containing 273 houses and 1402 inhabitants, of whom 818 were employed in various trades and manufactures.

Loxbeare, a parish in the hundred of Tiverton, Devon, 4 miles from Tiverton, and 167 from London; containing 22 houses and 132 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.*

Loxhere, a parish in the hundred of Sherwell, Devon, 4 miles from Barnstaple, and 197 from London; containing 38 houses and 209 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 14*s.* 4*d.*

Loxley, a township in the parish of Uttoxeter, hundred of Totmonslow, Stafford, 2 miles from Uttoxeter, and 136 from London; containing 83 houses and 458 inhabitants.

Loxley, a parish in the hundred of Barlichway, Warwick, 3 miles from Stratford on Avon, and 91 from London; containing 33 houses and 257 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* the patronage of which is in the king.

Lubbenham, a parish in the hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 2 miles from Market Harborough, and 83 from London; containing 90 houses and 504 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Lubberthorp, a hamlet in the parish of Ailestone, hundred of Sparkenhoe, Leicester, 2½ miles from Leicester, and 94 from London; containing 10 houses and 61 inhabitants.

Lucan, a pleasant village seated on the river Liffey, 6 miles from Dublin; noted for a medicinal spring.

Luccombe, a small hamlet in the parish of Shanklin, in East Medina liberty, Isle of Wight, about 5 miles from Brading.

Luce, or Glen Luce, a spacious bay in Wigtonshire, Scotland, named from a river which runs into it. It is surrounded on three sides by the land, and is about 20 miles wide at the entrance, and nearly the same extent up the country. It affords good anchorage for vessels of 50 tons, within half a mile of the land.

Luce, a river in the shire of Wigton, Scotland, rising in the hills which separate Galloway and Carrick, and falls into the sea at the bay of Luce, and gives name to 2 parishes, viz.

Luce New, a parish in the shire of Wigton, Scotland, 12 miles from Newton Douglas; containing 88 houses and 368 inhabitants. It is poorly cultivated, and consists chiefly of a heathy moss for only, for the rearing of sheep and black cattle.

Luce Old, a parish which lies on the bay at the mouth of the river of the same name, 17 miles from Newton Douglas; containing 220 houses and 1221 inhabitants. Near the village of Glenluce are the ruins of a Cistertian monastery, founded in 1190.

Lucker, a hamlet in the parish of Balmborough, in Balmborough ward, Northumberland, 3 miles from Belford, and 222 from London; containing 40 houses and 153 inhabitants.

Luckham, a parish in the hundred of Carhampton, Somerset, 3 miles from Minehead, and 165 from London; containing 84 houses and 457 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.*

Luckington, a parish in the hundred of Chippenham, Wilts, 7 miles from Malmsbury, and 100 from London; containing 52 houses and 304 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 7*s.* 8*d.*

Luckbridge, a small village 3 miles from Modbury, in the hundred of Stanborough, Devon.

Lucton, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Eye, hundred of Wolphy, Hereford, 3 miles from Leominster, and 140 from London; containing 26 houses and 156 inhabitants.

Ludborough, a parish in the hundred of Ludborough, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 6 miles from Louth, and 159 from London; containing 47 houses and 254 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 20*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.*

Ludbury North, a parish in the hundred of Purslow, Salop, 2½ miles from Bishop's Castle, and 155 from London; containing 152 houses and 829 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Luddenham, a parish in the hundred of Feversham, lathe of Scray, Kent, 2 miles from Feversham, and 45 from London; containing 18 houses and 130 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the king.

Luddesdown, a parish in the hundred of Toltingtrough, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 6 miles from Maidstone, and 27 from London; containing 27 houses and 172 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.*

Luddington, a parish in Manley wapentake, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 2 miles from Burton on Stather, and 163 from London; containing 73 houses and 407 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.*

Luddington, a parish in the hundred of Polebrook, Northampton, 4 miles from Oundle, and 78 from London, on the borders of Hants, part of the parish being in that county. It contains 17 houses and 104 inhabitants; and is a rectory, value 8*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*

LUDDINGTON, a hamlet in the parish of Stratford on Avon, formerly a chapelry in the hundred of Barlichway, Warwick, 2 miles from Stratford, and 93 from London; containing 19 houses and 148 inhabitants.

LUDDINGTON. See LIDDINGTON, Wilts.

LUDFORD, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Brimfield, hundred of Wolphy, Hereford, 5 miles from Ludlow, and 159 from London; containing 32 houses and 253 inhabitants. The chapelry is a perpetual curacy.

LUDFORD, a parish in the hundred of Wraggoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 7 miles from Market Raisin, and 148 from London; containing 64 houses and 314 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.*

LUDGERSHALL, a parish in the hundred of Ashendon, Bucks, 10 miles from Aylesbury, and 50 from London; containing 59 houses and 359 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 17*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

LUDGERSHALL or LUGGERSHALL, a borough and parish in the hundred of Amesbury, Wilts, 15 miles from Salisbury, and 70 from London; containing 109 houses and 471 inhabitants. It is very pleasantly situated on the borders of Chute forest. It is a borough by prescription, and is governed by a bailiff chosen annually at the court leet of the lord of the manor. It has sent 2 members to parliament ever since the 25d Edward I. the right of election being in the freeholders and leaseholders of the borough, determinable on lives. The number of voters is about 70, and the returning officer is the bailiff. Fair, 25th July. The living is a rectory, value 11*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*—Britton's Beauties of Wiltshire.

LUDGVAN, a parish in the hundred of Penwith, Cornwall, 2½ miles from Marazion, and 288 London; containing 259 houses and 1324 inhabitants, of whom 331 were returned employed in various trades and manufactures. It is a rectory, value 30*l.* 11*s.*

LUDHAM, a parish in the hundred of Happing, Norfolk, 10 miles from Norwich, and 119 from London; containing 114 houses and 524 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Norwich.

LUDLOW, a borough, market town and parish in the hundred of Munslow, Salop, situated at the confluence of the Teme and Corve, 29 miles from Shrewsbury, and 142 from London; containing 780 houses and 3897 inhabitants, viz. 1780 males and 2117 females, of whom 503 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. It appears anciently to have been called Dinan and Llystewaw by the Welsh, signifying Prince's palace, from the castle here originally belonging to the Princes of Wales. The main street leading from the bridge to the centre of the town is spacious, well paved and lighted, and the houses in general are all neat and well-built. At the end of this street stands the town house, an elegant building of hewn stone. The church is an ancient and venerable structure built of stone, standing in the upper part of the town. It is in the Gothic style, with large and lofty windows of painted glass, and has a high tower and spire with 8 bells. Here is also a handsome organ, the gift of William Henry, earl of Powis, which cost 1000*l.* as well as a number of curious antique monuments and inscriptions, particularly one relating to prince Authur, brother to Henry VIII. whose bowels were deposited here. Toward the end of the main street stands a commodious market-house for corn. Here also is a spacious hall where the members of parliament are elected, and an assembly room. Near the church is a neat hospital erected by John Hosyer, as appears by the inscription in the front of it, in the year 1486; an extensive alm hou e for the support of decayed inhabitants; a good-school house, having two houses and gardens for the masters; and in a large stone building over the butter cross, a blue coat school. The river Corve passes the town on the north-west side, over which is a stone bridge of 3 arches, and the entrance from Presteign is by an old bridge, the south-gate of which has been converted into a dwelling house leaving the arched passage open; both the rivers here abound with excellent trout, perch and roach. Here are four public conduits well supplied with spring water, and a river engine, which, by means of a reservoir, furnishes each house. Its ancient castle, standing at the west end of the town is supposed to have been first built by Roger de Montgomery, earl of Shrewsbury, in the reign of Henry I. but he having rebelled against his sovereign, it was forfeited to the crown, and Montgomery died a benedictine monk at Shrewsbury. Various possessors appear to have held and been deprived of Ludlow castle till the reign of Henry VI. when Richard Plantagenet, duke of York, here set up his standard, but being killed at the battle of Wakefield, it was seized by the king's forces, and dismantled. Soon after this, his son Edward got possession of it, and restored the fortress. Prince Authur, eldest son of Henry VII. held his court here. But from the reign of Henry VIII. when the court of the marches of Wales was instituted, it seems to have remained with the crown, that court being held in the castle, and the lord president residing there. During the earl of Bridgewater's presidency in 1634, Milton's mask of Comus was first performed here, principally by his lordship's sons and daughters. At present a kind of governor is appointed by the crown, but the building is suffered to decay. The situation is beautiful, standing on a rock, shaded on the west by a lofty hill, and washed by the river. The battlements are of great height and thickness, with towers at convenient distances. A chapel here has abundance of coats of arms as well as the hall, together with various old spears, lances, firelocks, &c. but all the once royal apartments and rooms of state now lie open, the whole being completely ruinous and covered with ivy. The borough of Ludlow, which is very ancient, sends 2 members to parliament, and is governed by 2 bailiffs, who are the returning officers. The high bailiff is a justice of the peace; there are 2 more justices, 12 aldermen, and 24 common council-men. The quarter sessions are held here before the recorder and justices of the town, who have, in former times, passed sentence of death; but all persons liable to be tried for capital offences are removed to the county gaol: here is held a court of record weekly, in which the recorder and bailiff sit as judges. The markets are on Monday, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday, but that on Monday is the principal. Fairs, Tuesday before Easter, Wednesday in Whitsun-week, 21st August, 8th September, and 8th December. The races here are generally very numerously attended. It is a rectory, value 19*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of the king.—Grose's Antiquities. Lipscomb's Tour in South Wales.

Ludston, a small hamlet in the hundred of Brimstrey, in Salop, near the borders of Staffordshire, 6 miles from Bridgenorth, and 133 from London.

Ludwell, a hamlet to Hartington, in the hundred of Wirksworth, Derby, on the banks of the Dan, 11 miles from Ashburn, and 151 from London; on the borders of Staffordshire.

Ludworth, a parish in the hundred of High Peak, Derby, 6 miles from Chapel le frith, and 173 from London; containing 150 houses and 666 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.*

Lumworth, a hamlet in the parish of Pittington, Easington ward, Durham, 3¼ miles from Durham, and 260 from London.

Luffenham North, a parish in the hundred of Wrandike, Rutland, 4 miles from Uppingham, and 86 from London; containing 77 houses and 357 inhabitants. The living is a rectory, value 17*l.* 5*d.* in the patronage of Emanuel college, Cambridge.

Luffenham South, a parish adjoining the foregoing, supposed formerly to have adjoined it; it contains 49 houses and 227 inhabitants; and is a rectory, value 12*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*

Luffield, a small hamlet attached to the parish of Stow, hundred of Buckingham, Bucks, although part of it is in the county of Northampton; it lies 4 miles from Buckingham, and 60 from London on the borders of Stow park; containing 3 houses and 16 inhabitants.

Luffincott, a parish in the hundred of Black Torrington, Devon, 4 miles from Holdsworthy, and 214 from London; containing 11 houses and 76 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Luffwick, a parish in the hundred of Huxloe, Northampton, 2 miles from Thrapston, and 70 from London; containing 79 houses and 353 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* 8*s.* 11*d.*

Luc, a river in Herefordshire, which falls into the Wye near Hereford.

Luc, also a river in South Wales, which rising in Radnor, and running south through Herefordshire, passes Monmouth, and falls into the Severn at Chepstow.

Lugar, a river in the shire of Ayr, Scotland, which takes its rise in the Cumnock lochs, and falls into the river Ayr at Barskimming.

Luggan, a parish and lake in the shire of Inverness, Scotland. See Laggan.

Luggershall. See Ludgershall, Wilts.

Luggie, a river in the shire of Stirling, Scotland, which falls into the Kelvin. The canal between the Forth and Clyde is carried over it by an aqueduct bridge.

Lugton, a river which rises at Nielston in Renfrewshire, and falls into the Garnock about a mile below Eglintown castle.

Lugwardine, a parish in the hundred of Radlow, Hereford, 3 miles from Hereford, and 134 from London; containing 89 houses and 585 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 22*l.* 7*s.* 1*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Hereford; having Hentland, Langaren, St. Waynard's, Little Dew church and Ballingham annexed.

Luina Loch or Lochavich, in the shire of Argyle, Scotland, is of a regular triangular form, about 8 miles in circumference, in which are several small islands, on one of which are the ruins of a castle. It discharges itself into Loch Awe.

Luing, a small island in the parish of Killbrandon, shire of Argyle, Scotland, on the top of a hill, where are the ruins of an ancient fortification, being in some parts nearly 10 feet thick. Veins of lead ore, with a small quantity of zinc, have been discovered here.

Luland Isle, lying at the mouth of Padstow haven, Cornwall.

Lulessley, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Sukeley, Worcester, from which it is distant 2 miles; containing 25 houses and 131 inhabitants.

Lullingstone, a parish in the hundred of Axton, lathe of Sutton at Hone, Kent, on the little river Derwent, 4 miles from Sevenoaks, and 18 from London; containing 3 houses and 33 inhabitants. The rectory is united with the vicarage, and is valued at 7*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.*

Lullington, a parish in the hundred of Repton and Gresley, Derby, 6 miles from Ashby, and 113 from London; containing 56 houses and 245 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of the king.

LULLINGTON, a parish united with Beckington, in the hundred of Frome, Somerset, 2 miles from Frome, and 104 from London; containing 29 houses and 157 inhabitants.

LULLINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Alciston, rape of Pevensey, Sussex, 3 miles from Seaford, and 60 from London; containing 4 houses and 32 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 12*d.* 11*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Chichester.

LULSLEY. See LULLESLEY, Worcester.

LULWORTH EAST, a parish in the hundred of Winfrith, division of Blandford, Dorset, 6 miles from Wareham, and 116 from London; containing 74 houses and 364 inhabitants. The church is an ancient building, with a curious tower, being in the shape of a cone from the base to the top. At the east end of the church is a chimney. On the site of its ancient fortress now stands a most superb building called Lulworth Castle, the seat of Thomas Weld, esq. The principal front standing towards the east, is most beautifully decorated with statuary, and the chapel within these few years erected is a handsome piece of architecture. The whole of the interior of the building is fitted up with taste, and ornamented with many excellent pictures; the gardens and grounds also are extensive. A range of buildings about a mile from the castle has been erected and fitted up by Mr. Weld for the reception of a number of monks of La Trappe, who having taken refuge here from France, carry on all the formalities of their order. The munificent proprietor has granted them a piece of ground, which they cultivate during the relaxation from religious duties, for their maintenance. The living is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 14*s.* 7*d.*

LULWORTH, a parish united with the foregoing, about 1 mile distant south-west towards the sea coast, and 117 miles from London; containing 73 houses and 312 inhabitants. Not far from hence is Lulworth Cove, a remarkable natural curiosity; it is of a circular form, and appears as if scooped out of the solid rock. It is surrounded with lofty hills. The entrance is narrow, with rocky cliffs on each side, and vessels of 80 tons burthen can ride in the cove with perfect safety. It is about 21 feet deep at low water.—Hutchinson's Dorsetshire.

LULWORTH ST. ANDREW'S, a small hamlet in the parish of Stoke, near West Lulworth, Dorset.

LUMLEY GREAT, a township in the parish of Chester le Street, Easington ward, Durham, 5 miles from Durham, and 265 from London; containing 155 houses and 696 inhabitants. It stands on the river Weare, on the opposite side to Chester le Street. Here is an hospital with a chapel annexed, which is frequented during divine service by the inhabitants.

LUMLEY LITTLE, a hamlet annexed to the foregoing township, also in the parish of Chester le Street, and nearly adjoining thereto; containing 48 houses and 249 inhabitants.

LUMPHANAN, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland; lying in a valley surrounded by hills, 32 miles from Montrose; and containing 144 houses and 614 inhabitants. At the south end of the parish is Loch Auchlosan, abounding with pike and eels. Among the many barrows or ancient burial places near this place, one is shewn called Macbeth's cairn, supposed to contain the ashes of the usurper.

LUND, a township in the parish of Hemmingbrough, in the division of Ouse and Derwent, east riding of York, 7 miles from Howden, and 191 from London.

LUND, a township in the division of Baiton Beacon, east riding of York, 7 miles from Beverley; containing 53 houses and 310 inhabitants.

LUNDIE, a parish in the shire of Forfar, Scotland, united to Foulis Easter, 4 miles from Dundee; containing 69 houses and 345 inhabitants. Lundie Loch covers about 12 acres of land.

LUNDY ISLAND, in the mouth of the Bristol channel, between 3 and 4 leagues from the Devonshire coast. It is about 5 miles long, and 2 broad, and is encompassed with inaccessible rocks, having but one entrance, where it will hardly admit 2 persons abreast. In the north part of it is a high pyramidical rock called the Constable. It has horses, pigs, goats, sheep, and rabbits, but at present but one family is living on it. Its chief business is in supplying fowls and eggs to the inhabitants of Devonshire. Formerly it had a fort and chapel. One of the rocks is called Rat Island, from the number of rats which burrow about it. In the reign of Henry VIII. one Morisco, together with 18 of his accomplices, strongly fortified themselves here, and considerably annoyed the coast by their piratical depredations. Lat. 51° 20′. Long. 4° 9′ west.

LUNAN, a parish in the shire of Forfar, Scotland, 7 miles from Arbroath, and 5½ miles from Montrose; containing 66 houses and 318 inhabitants. It stands on Lunan bay, where a river of the same name discharges itself into the German ocean. The bay is of a semi-circular form, comprehending an extent of coast for about 4 miles.

LUNAN, a river in the shire of Forfar, Scotland, which rises at a spring called Lunan Well, a little above a chain of lochs. It flows in a winding course for about 14 miles through the parishes of Guthrie, Kinnel, Inverkeilor, and Lunan, abounding with trout and pike, and falls into the sea near Red Castle.

LUNAN, also a river in the shire of Perth, Scotland, which rises in the parish of Caputh, and proceeding eastwards, forms 5 beautiful expanses of water, and at Meiklow it joins the Isla.

Lune, a river in Westmoreland, and Lancashire, which runs into the Irish sea at Sunderland Point.

Lune, a river in Westmoreland and Durham, which falls into the Tees below Longton, about 6 miles above Barnard Castle.

Lune, a township and chapelry in the parish of Rumboldkirk, Gilling West wapentake, north riding of York, 10 miles from Barnard Castle, and 250 from London; containing 59 houses and 307 inhabitants.

Lunt, a hamlet in the parish of Sephton, hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 4 miles from Ormskirk, and 208 from London.

Luppit, or Loveit, a parish in the hundred of Axminster, Devon, 3 miles from Honiton, and 159 from London; containing 109 houses and 675 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 10*d.*

Lupton, a hamlet in the parish of Kirby Lonsdale, hundred of Lonsdale, Westmoreland, 3 miles from Kirby Lonsdale, and 251 from London; containing 41 houses and 150 inhabitants.

Lurbottle. See Lorbottle, Northumberland.

Lurgan, a town in the county of Armagh, province of Ulster, Ireland, lying about 2 miles from Lough Neagh, of which it has a most beautiful and extensive prospect. It is 14 miles north-east of Armagh, and 67 north of Dublin. The linen manufacture of late years has been carried on here to a very great extent, and the whole of the country around has been much improved.

Lurgeshall, a parish in the hundred of Rotherbridge, rape of Arundel, Sussex, 4 miles from Petworth, and 45 from London; containing 76 houses and 521 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.*

Lusby, a parish in the hundred of Bolingbroke, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 3 miles from Spilsby, and 137 from London; containing 15 houses and 89 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 14*s.*

Luss, a parish in the shire of Dumbarton, Scotland, lying on the west coast of Loch Lomond, 10 miles from Dumbarton; containing 188 houses and 953 inhabitants. The village of Luss projects into the lake, through the middle of which the small water of Luss runs. The church and manse stand close to the lake, concealed in a beautiful cluster of trees. There is a cotton mill here: and 2 or 3 very valuable quarries of blue slate. On a peninsula of the lake, stands the elegant modern mansion of sir James Colquhoun, of Luss. The tower of its former ancient castle still remains.

Lustleigh, a parish in the hundred of Teignbridge, Devon, 3 miles from Chudleigh, and 185 from London; containing 54 houses and 246 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*

Luston, a township to Leominster, in the hundred of Wolphy, Hereford, 2 miles from Leominster, and 139 from London; containing 65 houses and 312 inhabitants.

Luton, a market town and parish in the hundred of Flitt, Bedford, 3 miles from Dunstable, 8 from St. Alban's, and 31½ from London; standing on the river Lea, on the road to Oakham, and containing 612 houses and 3095 inhabitants, viz. 1422 males, and 1673 females, of whom 234 were returned employed in trade and manufacture, and 619 in agriculture. It has a remarkable church with a tower steeple prettily chequered with flint and free stone. In the church is a curious font of an hexagonal form, open at the sides, and terminating in handsome tabernacle work. There is a chapel adjoining the church, in which there are some good monuments. The buildings in the streets are mostly dirty and mean. The principal trade and manufacture here is the making of straw hats. The market-house is an extensive building, and there is a good corn market on Monday. On the edge of the Bedfordshire downs, about 2 miles distant, is Luton Hoe park, the seat of the marquis of Bute. This mansion being on an eminence, commands a most extensive prospect, but having been built at various periods, had nothing of uniformity till the whole was corrected by Adam, who formed a suite of rooms which for grandeur of dimensions, and luxury of decoration, are hardly to be equalled. The private chapel is a very handsome piece of building, and has within a curious piece of carved work, brought from Tyttenhangar in 1608. In the neighbouring wood is a portico, originally designed for a house to have been built by lord Wenlock. It is a most beautiful piece of brick building, and in the park is a tower of flint and Tottenham stone, of great antiquity. The library here is inferior only to that at Blenheim. It consists of 3 rooms, the whole being 146 feet in length. It has also a good botanical garden, the whole comprising an area of 1400 acres. Fairs 25th April and 18th Oct. The living is a vicarage, value 35*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.*—Malone's Tour.

Luthermoor, a small village in the parish of Marykirk, shire of Kincardine, Scotland; containing about 200 inhabitants.

Lutterworth, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Guthlaxton, Leicester, situated on the river Swift, about 2 miles from the Watling-street road which divides the county from Warwickshire, 14 miles from Leicester, and 89½ from London; containing 267 houses and 1652 inhabitants, of whom 274 were returned as being employed in various trades. Many of the houses are regular and well built of brick, but the more ancient buildings are of mud covered with thatch. The church has a remarkably handsome tower, with 4 beautiful turrets. In the beginning of the 18th century, the roof was beat in by the fall of the spire, which was nearly 50 feet higher than the present turrets. About the year 1740, the whole was repaired, a pavement of chequered stone laid, and all the interior made new except the pulpit, which is of thick oak planks of an hexagonal shape, and has a seam of carved work in the joints; this pulpit is preserved with great veneration, in memory of the reformer Wickliff, who was rector of this place, and died suddenly in 1387, while hearing mass. The chair in which he breathed his last, is also preserved with great care: his body was buried in the church, but the council of Constance having condemned his doctrines in 1415, his remains were taken up and burned in 1428, and his ashes cast into the river. His portrait hangs over the gallery at the west end of the church. Another relic is preserved, the communion cloth of purple velvet, trimmed with gold, which is shewn as the very garment he wore. The font, a present of the earl of Denbigh, in 1704, has a cover representing the old spire of the church. Here is also a presbyterian meeting-house. This town is a place of little trade, for a few inferior woollen goods excepted. Market on Thursday. Fairs 2d April, Holy Thursday, and 16th Sept. In the neighbourhood is a petrifying spring. The rectory is valued at 26*l.* in the patronage of the king. The earl of Denbigh is lord of the manor.—Nichols's Leicestershire.

LUTTON, a parish in the hundred of Willybrook, Northampton, 3 miles from Oundle, and 80 from London; containing 23 houses and 155 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 21*l.* 11*s.* 5*d.* and is united with Washingley.

LUTTONBOURNE, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Sutton St. Mary's, hundred of Elloe, parts of Holland, Lincoln, 3 miles from Hollbeach, and 108 from London; containing 109 houses and 507 inhabitants.

LUTTONS AMBON, a township and chapelry in the parish of Weverthorpe, Buckrose wapentake, east riding of York, 7 miles from Driffield, and 204 from London; containing 42 houses and 207 inhabitants.

LUXBOROUGH, a hamlet in the parish of Chigwell, hundred of Ongar, Essex, ½ of a mile from Woodford bridge, and 9 from London. Here is a very elegant mansion, erected, about 64 years ago, by lord Luxborough.

LUXBOROUGH, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Cutcombe, hundred of Carhampton, Somerset, 4 miles from Watchet, and 158 from London; containing 48 houses and 332 inhabitants.

LUXULIAN, a parish in the hundred of Powder, Cornwall, 2½ miles from Lestwithiel, and 236 from London; containing 143 houses and 875 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.*

LYD, a river in Devonshire, which falls into the Tamer, near Langston.

LYDD, a market town and parish in the hundred of Langport, lathe of Shepway, Kent, 2 miles from Romney, and 72 from London; containing 204 houses and 1303 inhabitants, of whom 106 were employed in various trades, &c. It is said to owe its rise to the inhabitants of Promhill settling here on the demolition of their town by the sea. It is a corporation, governed by a bailiff and jurats, and has the distribution of justice within its own jurisdiction. It is a member of the Cinque Ports, being joined with Romney, but its custom-house is under the ports of Dover and Rye. It had formerly a very considerable fishery carried on off Dungeness beach, but that has considerably decreased. Here is a charity-school. The sea having retreated from the old light-house, a new one has been lately built 100 rods nearer the sea, and 3¼ miles from the town: it is a circular building of brick, with stone door and window frames, 100 feet high. This part of the coast is defended by some strong batteries lately erected, and is much noted for smuggling. On the beach near Stone-end, is a heap of stones, said to be the tomb of Crispin and Crispianus. It has a small market on Thursday. Fair first Monday in September, for pedlary, &c. The living is a vicarage, value 55*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.* of exempt jurisdiction, in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury.—Hasted's Kent.

LYDDON, a river in Dorsetshire, in the hundred of Buckland, from whence it runs to Bayborough, and being joined by a considerable brook, falls into the Stour, near Stourminster Newton.

LYDE, a parish united with Pipe, in the hundred of Grimsworth, Hereford, near Hereford.

LYDEARD ST. LAWRENCE, a parish in the hundred of Taunton, Somerset, 8¼ miles from Taunton Dean, and 152 from London; containing 101 houses and 604 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 22*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

LYDEARD BISHOPS. See BISHOPS LYDEARD, Somerset.

LYDFORD EAST, a parish in the hundred of Somerton, Somerset, 4 miles from Castle Cary, and 120 from London; containing 21 houses and 143 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*

LYDFORD WEST, a parish in the hundred of Catash, Somerset, 5 miles from Castle Cary, and 121 from London; containing 57 houses and 313 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 17*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

LYDHAM, a parish in the hundred of Purslow, Salop, stands on the river Camlet, 9 miles from Bishop's Castle, and 159 from London; containing 15 houses and 106 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.*

LYDIAT, a township in the parish of Halsall, hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 5 miles from Ormskirk, and 208 from London; containing 85 houses and 532 inhabitants.

LYDLINCH, a parish in the hundred and division of Sherborne, Dorset, 3 miles from Sturminster Newton, and 114 from London; containing 47 houses and 249 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.*

LYDNEY, a parish in the hundred of Blideslow, Gloucester, lying on the borders of Monmouthshire, and on the west bank of the river Severn, 123 miles from London; and formerly a market town. It contains 129 houses and 783 inhabitants. In the neighbourhood is an extensive iron forge, and some collieries. It has the appearance of having been a Roman station, and was formerly of much greater extent. Fairs May 4th, and November 8th. It is a vicarage, value 24*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* with Aylberton, St. Briavel's, and Hulsfield chapels annexed, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Hereford.

Lyg, a hamlet in the parish of Aymestrey, hundred of Wigmore, Hereford, 7 miles from Presteign, and 145 from London; containing 16 houses and 68 inhabitants.

Lyford, a hamlet in the parish of West Hanney, hundred of Moreton, Berks, 5 miles from Abingdon, and 60 from London; containing 24 houses and 124 inhabitants.

Lyme Regis, a sea port, borough and market town in the hundred of Whitchurch, division of Bridport, Dorset, 23 miles from Dorchester, 28 from Exeter, and 143 from London; containing 265 houses and 1451 inhabitants, of whom 534 were returned employed in various trades. Its commodious harbour has been artificially constructed. The materials of its rude pier consist of vast stones weighed out of the sea, arranged in such a manner as to break the violence of the tide, which has made great encroachments, the cliffs being composed of a kind of marle and blue clay incorporated with lime. The point of the first or main wall, is the entrance into the port, and the opposite wall breaks the violence of the sea from the entrance, and the vessels being defended from all winds, ride as secure as in a wet dock. This singular work is called the Cobbe, and for keeping it in constant repair (which is done at the expence of the town), there are annually chosen 2 Cobbe wardens. On this cobbe or pier, are planted several pieces of ordnance for the defence of the town, and on it is erected the custom-house, which standing on pillars, the corn-market is held in the area beneath. This town had formerly a considerable trade, but it has much declined of late. It has now a small pilchard fishery. The church stands at the east end of the town on a rising ground, adjoining which is a large stone building, and over it a school. As the town stands on the slope of a hill, the houses have a pretty appearance one above another, and many of them are very handsome modern buildings covered with blue slate. Here is a small assembly-room, a card-room, and billiard-table, all conveniently arranged under one roof. In Church-street is a good almshouse, and there is likewise a presbyterian and an anabaptist meeting-house. The town is governed by a mayor, who is a justice of peace during his mayoralty, and in the year following; and in the 3d year he is both justice and coroner. The corporation consists of the mayor, recorder, 15 capital burgesses, 2 of whom are justices; a town-clerk, and inferior officers. This borough has sent 2 members to parliament since the 23d of Edward I. The elective franchise is exercised by the mayor, capital burgesses, and freemen only, in number from 30 to 40. The mayor is the returning officer. This borough for a long series of years has been represented by some of the junior branches of the family of Fane, earls of Westmoreland. In the reign of Henry IV. and V. it was plundered and burnt by the French. In 1644, it stood a regular siege of 2 months against the king's forces. Off this place the English fleet first engaged the Spanish armada; and here the duke of Monmouth, in 1685, landed with his adherents; but many of his party were soon after put to death upon the spot. The market is on Friday. Fairs, 2d February, and 21st September. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 5*s.* 7*d.* belonging to the prebend thereof, in Salisbury cathedral.—Hutchins's Dorsetshire.

Lyminge, a parish in the hundred of Londesborough, lathe of Shepway, Kent, 9 miles from Ashford, and 64 from London; containing 80 houses and 491 inhabitants. The rectory, value 21*l.* 10*s.* is a sinecure. The vicarage is valued at 10*l.* 18*s.* 9*d.* with Stadford and Paddlesworth chapels annexed.

Lymington, a borough and market town in the parish of Boldre, in New Forest, East division, Hants, situated on a creek of the English channel called Boldre Water, about ½ of a mile from the sea, 18 miles from Southampton, and 95 from London; containing 475 houses and 2378 inhabitants, viz. 974 males and 1404 females, of whom 387 were returned as being employed in various trades. It is pleasantly seated on the brow and declivity of a gentle hill, and consists principally of one long street, leading toward the quay. Many of the houses are well built, commanding a most delightful prospect of the English channel, and the isle of Wight. The town-hall is a neat building, and is often used as an assembly-room. The chief commerce here is the import of coals, and the export of salt; but both these are greatly on the decline, Lymington being rivalled by other markets. The port here is an appendage to Southampton, and it admits vessels of 500 tons to the quay. There are two sets of baths, one at the bottom of the town, the other about half a mile from it; of late they have been made very convenient, and are much frequented during the season. The borough is a corporation by prescription, consisting of a titular mayor, aldermen, and burgesses without limitation. It has sent two members to parliament ever since the 27th of Elizabeth, the right of election being in the mayor and burgesses only. The number of voters is about 60. According to tradition, this town was three times sacked and burnt by the French; and it is supposed that its ancient church must have been destroyed, as part of its site may be still traced north of the town. The present church is only a curacy, under the vicar of Boldre. About a mile distant are the traces of a Roman camp, known by the name of Buckland Rings, or Castle Field. Market on Saturday. Fairs, 12th May, and 2d October.—Guide to the Watering Places.

LYMINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Stone, Somerset, 4 miles from Yeovil, and 123 from London; containing 40 houses and 242 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 21*l.* 6*s.* 5*d.*

LYMISTER. See LEOMINSTER, Sussex.

LYMME, a parish in the hundred of Bucklow, Chester, 5 miles from Warrington, and 180 from London; containing 236 houses and 1622 inhabitants, of whom 100 were returned as being employed in various trades. The living is a rectory, value 11*l.* 7*d.* and is united with Warburton.

LYMPSHAM, a parish in the hundred of Brent and Wrington, Somerset, 5 miles from Axbridge, and 136 from London; containing 51 houses and 334 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 58*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of earl Poulet.

LYNCH, a small village in the hundred of Eastbourn, rape of Chichester, Sussex, 2 miles from Haslemere, in Surrey, and 54 from London; containing 12 houses and 78 inhabitants.

LYNDHURST, a township and chapelry in the parish of Minsted, in New Forest division, Hants, standing near the center of the forest, 9 miles from Southampton, and 86 from London; containing 170 houses and 882 inhabitants. The building here called the King's House, belongs to the duke of York, as lord warden of the New Forest. What is now called the New Forest, is a tract of about 40 miles in compass, formerly containing many populous towns and villages, together with 36 churches, all of which are said to have been destroyed, and made a forest, by William the Conqueror. The forest is divided into 9 walks, each having a keeper under the lord warden, besides 2 rangers, and a bow-bearer. In this tract king Henry VIII. erected some castles, and there are several good towns and villages. Its situation on the Southampton water and the British channel, renders it the most convenient and valuable district in the kingdom for the ready supply, by water-carriage, of timber to his majesty's dock-yards.—Guide to the Watering Places.

LYNDHURST Wood, a small wood lying to the east of Mansfield, in Nottinghamshire.

LYNDON, a parish in the hundred of Martinsley, Rutland, 5 miles from Stamford, containing 19 houses and 93 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 17*s.* 1*d.*

LYNE, a river in Staffordshire, which falls into the Trent, near Trentham.

LYNE, a river in Northumberland, which falls into the German sea, near Carswell.

LYNE, a river in the shire of Peebles, Scotland, which rises at the Cauldstane Slap, a pass in the Pentlands from West Lothian to Tweedale, and falls into the Tweed about 6 miles from Peebles.

LYNE and MEGGET, two united parishes in the shire of Peebles, Scotland; although they are far distant from each other, Megget being quite at the extremity of the county. They contain 23 houses and 167 inhabitants.

LYNEHAM, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Kingsbridge, Wilts, 4 miles from Wootton Basset, and 84 from London; containing 157 houses and 833 inhabitants.

LYNEMOUTH, a hamlet in the parish of Woodhorn, in Morpeth ward, Northumberland on the coast, 5 miles from Morpeth, and 296 from London; containing 3 houses and 12 inhabitants.

LYNESACK, a township in the parish of St. Andrew's Auckland, Darlington ward, Durham, 2 miles from Bishop Auckland, and 255 from London; containing 107 houses and 517 inhabitants.

LYNG, a parish in the hundred of Eynesford, Norfolk, 3 miles from Reepham, and 108 from London; containing 101 houses and 496 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.*

LYNG EAST, a parish in the hundred of Andersfield, Somerset, 5 miles from Taunton, and 140 from London; containing 51 houses and 253 inhabitants.

LYNHER, a river in Cornwall, which rises among the hills, about 8 miles west of Launceston, and after a course of 24 miles, falls into the Tamar. Its stream is very trifling during the summer, but in the winter the current from the hills often overflows its banks, and occasions inundations, which do mischief.

LYNN REGIS, or KING'S LYNN, a sea port, borough and market town in the hundred of Freebridge, Lynn, Norfolk, 11 miles from Downham, and 96¼ from London. It is divided into 10 wards, containing 1465 houses and 10,096 inhabitants, viz. 4540 males and 5556 females, of whom 2103 were employed in various trades and manufactures. It stands on the right bank of the Ouse, near its mouth, about 8 miles from the sea. The principal church is St. Margaret's, erected by the bishop of Norwich, about the year 1100. Part of it being blown down in 1741, and damaging the body of the church, it was soon afterwards rebuilt with 3 large aisles, and is now one of the largest parochial churches in England. St. Nicholas chapel is reckoned the largest of the kind in England, supposed to have been erected about the year 1350. It has a bell tower of freestone, over which is an octagonal spire, the whole being 170 feet from the ground: this as well as St. Margaret's has a library erected by subscription. The chapel of St. James was rebuilt in 1682, by the benefactions of the corporation and inhabitants, and converted into a workhouse for the whole town. In 1683, sir John Turner, who had been 3 times mayor and many years representative in parliament for this borough, erected at his own expence a handsome building of freestone, with 2 orders of columns, intending it as an exchange for the merchants; in a niche in the front is the statue of king Charles II. and within it is the custom-house, fitted up with every accommodation possible. The harbour is capable of containing 300 merchant vessels, and the advantageous situation of the town, gives it a considerable traffic with all the neighbouring counties, in wine, coals, and corn, exclusive of the produce of the country; and it has till lately had a considerable export trade to the Baltic, Spain, and Portugal. There are no fresh water springs here, but the inhabitants are supplied from the Gaywood river by the water-works near the east gate called Kettle-mill. The streets in general are very narrow, but well paved. The King's Staith Yard or quay, where the greatest part of the imported wines are landed and housed, is a handsome square, with brick buildings, having in the center of it a statue of king James I. Persons pass hence over the famous washes into Lincolnshire; but accidents often occur to the boats. The new mall, extending from the workhouse to Gannock Gates, is about 340 yards long, and 11 wide, very neatly planted with a quick-set hedge on each side, having at convenient distances semicircular recesses and benches. At the east end of the town is a mound, on which are some strong fortifications. The market-place is very spacious, containing an area of about 3 acres, having a very handsome market cross of freestone, erected in 1710, adorned with statues. In a semicircular form on each side are the butchers' shambles, in 2 divisions, the frontispieces being supported by Doric columns, and the pediments enriched with various appropriate decorations. Behind this is another building, fitted up as a fish market, having some handsome houses enclosing it. On the causeway leading to Gaywood, an hospital was founded in 1145, for a prior, and 12 brothers and sisters, which was refounded by James I., for a master and widows. Here was formerly also a convent of Grey friars, (the steeple of whose church is mentioned as a sea mark,) together with several other religious houses, of which but few vestiges are now remaining. Until the reign of Henry VIII. this town appears to have been called Bishops Lynn, when falling into his hands in consequence of some exchange of property, it changed its name to Lynn Regis. It is governed by a mayor, aldermen, high steward, recorder, &c. and has sent 2 members to parliament ever since the 23d of Edward I. the right of election being in the freemen, who are in number about 100: the returning officer is the mayor. A very laudable institution prevails here, called the Feast of Reconciliation; it is a monthly meeting of the mayor, aldermen, preachers, &c. to hear and determine all controversies amicably, for the prevention of law-suits. This town was taken by the parliamentary army in 1643, after a siege of 3 weeks, when it paid upwards of 3000*l.* ransom. The market days are on Tuesday and Saturday. The fairs 17th of October, called the cheese fair, and 14th of February; the last of which continues 14 days, and is generally well attended. St. Margaret's is a curacy, patron the chapter of Norwich; All-saints, a vicarage, value 18*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* patron the bishop of Ely.—Blomefield's History of Norfolk.

Lynn West, a parish in the hundred of Freebridge Marshland, Norfolk, 97 miles from London, on the west side of the river over against Lynn Regis; containing 27 houses and 242 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.*

Lynsford, a hamlet in the parish of Mundford, hundred of Grimshoe, Norfolk, 6 miles from Thetford, and 87 from London.

Lynsdock. See Tarrant and Knyne, Dorset.

Lyonshall, a parish in the hundred of Stretford, Hereford, 3 miles from Kineton, and 152 from London; containing 130 houses and 678 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 10*s.* 7*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Hereford.

Lyre Ocle, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Ocle Pritchard, hundred of Broxash, Hereford, 6 miles from Hereford, and 130 from London; population included with Ocle Pritchard.

Lypiat, Upper and Lower, 2 small hamlets in the parish of Stroud, hundred of Bisley, Gloucestershire, adjoining to Stroud, 105 miles from London.

1. Lyth, a parish in Langborough wapentake, north riding of York, 4½ miles from Whitby, and 250 from London; containing 201 houses and 1037 inhabitants, of whom 550 were returned employed in various trades and manufactures, particularly in some extensive alum works in the neighbourhood. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* the patronage being in the archbishop of York.

Lytham, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, 5 miles from Kirkham, and 250 from London; containing 92 houses and 920 inhabitants.

Lythe, a hamlet in the parish of Heversham, Westmoreland, where is a very extensive moss, in which large trees have been frequently dug up.

Lytton. See Litton, Yorkshire.

MABE, a township and chapelry in the parish of St. Maker, hundred of Kerrier, Cornwall, 2¾ miles from Penrhyn, and 269 from London; containing 52 houses and 387 inhabitants.

MABLETHORPE, a parish in the hundred of Calceworth, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 5 miles from Alford, and 145 from London; containing 45 houses and 154 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 17*l.* 10*s.* 2*d.* and is united with Staine.

MABYN ST. a parish in the hundred of Trigg, Cornwall, 4 miles from Bodmin, and 238 from London; containing 91 houses and 475 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 36*l.*

MACCLESFIELD, the name of a hundred in Cheshire, being the eastern point of the county projecting into Yorkshire, having Lancashire on the north, and Derbyshire on the east.

MACHEN, UPPER and LOWER, a parish in the hundred of Wentlooge, Monmouth, 6 miles from Newport, and 152 from London, near the river Rumney; containing 128 houses and 674 inhabitants.

MACHYNLETH, a market town and parish in the hundred of Machynlaeth, Montgomery, Wales, 30 miles from Montgomery, and 200 from London on the river Dyvy, the supposed Maglona of the Romans, surrounded by lofty mountains. The town is neat and well built, containing 244 houses and 1118 inhabitants. Owen Glendower exercised the first acts of his regality at this place in 1403, having assembled a parliament, and formally accepted the crown of Wales. An old house, now divided into tenements, is shewn as being that in which the parliament was held. This town was formerly a Roman station: many coins have been found here. The market is on Monday. Fairs, 16th May, 26th June, 9th July, 18th September, and 25th November, for sheep, horned cattle, and horses.—Warner's Tour in Wales.

MACCLESFIELD, or MACCLESFIELD, a market town and parish in the hundred of Macclesfield, Chester, 18 miles from Manchester, and 167¼ from London; standing on an eminence near the river Bollin, and containing 1426 houses and 8743 inhabitants, viz. 3979 males and 4764 females, of whom the greater part were returned as being employed in numerous manufactories of buttons, silk twist, cotton goods, hats, hat-bands, &c. It contains 2 churches and several chapels. St. Michael's is a large building, supposed to have been erected by the family of Savage. In it are many handsome monuments. The tower, containing 8 bells, is 24 yards high: adjoining is a chapel belonging to the Cholmondeley family, but formerly to the Savages, earls Rivers. Here is shewn the copy of a pardon said to have been granted by the pope to a woman and her 7 children, for 26,000 years and 26 days, for saying 5 Ave marias and 5 Paternosters. Here also is shewn an elegant figure of earl Rivers cut in marble, leaning upon his pillow; together with others of the same family in the different dresses of the times. The new church, called Christ-church, erected in 1775, is an elegant pile of building, and has 10 bells. The pulpit is of mahogany, and the church has a good organ. The church-yard contains a very elegant pyramidal monument over the family vault of — Rowe, esq. In the Back-street are 3 almshouses, endowed for the maintenance of 3 poor widows: and a free-school first endowed by Edward VI. with houses and lands, which now produce 300*l.* per annum. On the common adjoining the town are upwards of 40 brick-kilns, the neighbourhood also produces stone and slate; at the bottom of the hills are several excellent seams of coal, which are worked to great advantage. The town, which is well supplied with water from a fountain upon the common, (for which every housekeeper pays a yearly sum to the mayor) is incorporated, and is under the government of a mayor, and 24 aldermen, 4 of which are in the commission of the peace; and one of them is always mayor; under whom are a town clerk, who is coroner for the borough, two serjeants at mace, &c. The mayor is always lord of the manor. This town gives title of earl to the family of Parker. In the town-box is preserved a copy or counterpart of a petition sent to the king soon after the battle of Bosworth, praying that the citizens might not lose their charter, although they were unable to fill up the number of aldermen, having lost so many of their principal inhabitants in that battle in the king's service. This town is also the head of the hundred of Macclesfield forest, where the sessions are held at Michaelmas and Easter, to try persons charged with misdemeanors; and an inferior court is held weekly by the mayor and justices, for petty causes, and a bench of justices every Monday. The market is on Monday and Saturday, and is well supplied. Fairs, 6th May, 22d June, 11th July, 4th October, and 11th November. The church of St. Michael's is a curacy, in the patronage of the mayor.—Norden's Cheshire.

MACKNEY, a hamlet in the parish of Brightwell, hundred of Moreton, Berks, 1¼ mile from Wallingford, and 47 from London. Population included with Brightwell.

MACWORTH, a parish in the hundred of Morlestone and Litchurch, Derby, 3 miles from Derby, and 129 from London; containing 60 houses and 303 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 3*s.*

MADDERSFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Pershore, Worcester, 5 miles from Upton, and 115 from London; containing 25 houses and 153 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 3*l.* 13*s.* 11*d.* The seat of lord Beauchamp of Powyk, here, is a neat modern building, commanding a most delightful prospect of the Malvern hills.

MADDINGTON, a parish in the hundred of Branch and Dole, Wilts, near Amesbury, 83 miles from London; containing 69 houses and 327 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, not rated in the king's books. The vicar is entitled to the tithe of wool.

MADEHURST, a parish in the hundred of Avisford, rape of Arundel, Sussex, 3 miles from Arundel, and 57 from London; containing 21 houses and 133 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 8*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Chichester.

MAEBEARY Loch, a small lake in the shire of Wigton, Scotland, lying between Penninghame and Kirkowen. There are several islands in it, on the largest of which are the remains of a considerable building and a garden. These islands are chiefly remarkable for the number of eagles which have been seen here for a number of years. The lake falls into the river Bladenoch.

MACDUFF, a considerable town in the shire of Banff, Scotland, 20 miles from Fraserburgh, adjoining Banff, and containing 250 houses and 1200 inhabitants. The houses are well built. Here is also a neat chapel of ease, the clergyman of which is paid by lord Fife. Previous to the year 1732, it had only a few fishing huts, with a small sandy creek; but it has now one of the best harbours in the Moray Frith, and has several vessels in the Baltic and London trade.

MACHAIG Loch, a lake in the parish of Kilmadock, shire of Perth, Scotland. Its banks are covered with fine woods. It falls into the Teith, near the castle of Doune.

MACHANY, a small rivulet in the parish of Muthil, shire of Perth, Scotland, which falls into the Allan, near Dumblane.

MACHAR New, a parish in the district of Buchan, partly situated in the shire of Aberdeen, and partly in that of Banff, lying on each side of the road from Aberdeen to Old Meldrun, 10 miles from Aberdeen. It contains 208 houses and 925 inhabitants. In the Bishop's Loch is an island, on which are the ruins of a castle formerly belonging to the bishops of Aberdeen.

MACHAR Old, or Old Aberdeen, a parish in Aberdeen, Scotland, standing on an eminence on the river Don, about 1 mile north of the city of New Aberdeen, and the same distance from the sea. It contains 1383 houses and 9911 inhabitants. Vide Aberdeen City.

MACKERMORE, a small island near the west coast of Scotland, 5 miles east of Jura.

MACHLIN, or MAUCHLINE, a parish in the shire of Ayr, Scotland, on the banks of the Ayr, 10 miles from Ayr; containing 315 houses and 1746 inhabitants, of whom 1081 were returned as being employed in various trades. The town is neatly built, and was formerly a burgh of barony, with power to elect its own magistrates; but this right has been lost for a century past. Coal, freestone, and limestone are found here in abundance.

MADDERTY, a parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, near the head of the vale of Strathern, 20 miles from Perth; containing 137 houses and 650 inhabitants. The river Pow runs through the parish. On its banks is situated the ancient abbey of Inch Affray.

MADELEY MARKET, a market town and parish in the liberties of Wenlock franchise, Salop, 8 miles from Bridgnorth, and 147 from London; containing 291 houses and 4758 inhabitants, viz. 2432 males and 2326 females, of whom 1594 were returned as being employed in various trades. The famous iron bridge here over the Severn, consists of 1 arch, which is 100 feet within the span, and is supposed to contain 500 tons of iron; it was cast at Coalbrook Dale, and erected in 1780, and together with the romantic scenery of the winding glen, has a most beautiful appearance. At the foot of this bridge is now held the market, near 2 miles from its original situation. It was revived in 1763, after having been for many years discontinued. Here is a navigable canal to the Ketley iron works, which are some of the most considerable in England, and a work for obtaining fossil tar, or petrolium, from the condensed smoke of pit coal. Market on Friday. The living is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 17*s.* 10*d.*—Arthur Young's Tour.

MADELEY GREAT, a parish in the hundred of Pirehill, Stafford, 5 miles from Newcastle under Line, and 153 from London; containing 163 houses and 945 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 16*s.*

MADELEY LITTLE, a hamlet to the foregoing, and 1 mile distant therefrom.

MADELEY, a hamlet in the parish of Chickley, hundred of Totmonslow, Stafford, 5 miles from Uttoxeter, and 140 from London.

MADINGLEY, a parish in the hundred of Northstow, Cambridge, 5 miles from Cambridge, and 53 from London; containing 36 houses and 190 inhabitants. The living is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.

MADLEY, a parish in the hundred of Webtree, Hereford, 5 miles from Hereford, and 140 from London; containing 144 houses and 930 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 16*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.* and is in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Hereford, with Tiberton chapel annexed.

MADOIS ST. a parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, at the western extremity of the Carse of Gowrie, and on the north bank of the river Tay, 10 miles from Dundee; containing 50 houses and 295 inhabitants.

MADRON, a parish in the hundred of Pen-with, Cornwall, 3 miles from Penzance, and 292 from London; containing 303 houses and 1564 inhabitants, of whom 200 were returned as being employed in various trades. It is a vicarage, value 21*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.* with Renpauce chapel annexed.

MAENTWROG, a parish in the hundred of Ardudduy, Merioneth, Wales, 228 miles from London; containing 96 houses and 593 inhabitants. It is supposed to derive its name from a large stone in the church yard, supposed to have been erected to the memory of a British saint, who lived here about the year 610.

MAENCLOCLOC, a village in the hundred of Kemyss, Pembrokeshire, Wales, 240 miles from London; containing 51 houses and 220 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 3*l.* 18*s.* 9*d.* and is united with Langolman.

MACROOMP, a town in the county of Cork, province of Munster, Ireland, situated in the barony of Muskerry, 142 miles from Dublin. Many of its inhabitants are employed in combing wool and spinning yarn, as well as in some newly erected salt works. One mile from the town is a chalybeat spa.

MADAMS COURT HILL, in the county of Kent, 19 miles from London, on the road to Seven Oaks, commanding a most beautiful prospect of Kent and Sussex.

MAER, a parish in the hundred of Pirehill, Stafford, 6 miles from Newcastle-under-line, and 148 from London; containing 71 houses and 362 inhabitants.

MAGER, a parish in the hundred of Caldicot, Monmouth, 12 miles from Chepstow, and 140 from London; containing 49 houses and 268 inhabitants. It is rectory, value 7*l.* 1*s.* and is united with Redwick.

MAGEE, an island on the coast of the county of Antrim, province of Ulster, Ireland, a little to the north of Carrickfergus bay, 6 miles long and 2 broad.

MAGHERA, a village in the county of Derry, province of Ulster, Ireland, 92 miles from Dublin.

MAGHERAFELT, a town in the county of Derry, province of Ulster, Ireland, 30 miles south-east of Londonderry. It has a very considerable linen manufactory.

MAGHERALIN, a village in the county of Armagh, province of Ulster, Ireland, pleasantly seated on the river Lagan.

MAGHEREDROLL, a name given to the country about Ballynahinch, in the county of Down, signifying the field of difficulties, from its being full of rocks and mountains.

MAGHAREE, or the Seven Hogs, a cluster of small islands on the western coast of Ireland, situated on the south side of the entrance into Fralee bay.

MAGHARIES BAY, in the county of Kerry, province of Munster, Ireland, between Brandon-head and the Magharee islands, full of sunken rocks, and dangerous to navigation.

MAGHERELIN, a village in the county of Down, province of Ulster, Ireland, having several very extensive branches of the linen manufacture.

MAGHERMORE, a village in the county of Donegal, province of Ulster, Ireland, also a bay on the coast of Wicklow, province of Munster, 5 miles south of Wicklow head.

MAGUNIBY in the county of Kerry, province of Munster, Ireland.

MAHALLAGH, a village in the county of Cork, province of Munster, Ireland, standing on the river Lee, 5 miles east of Macroomp.

MAHON, a river in the county of Waterford, province of Munster, Ireland, which falls into the sea 11 miles east of Dungarvan.

MAIDEN BRADLEY, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Mere, Wilts, 7 miles from Hindon, and 103 from London; containing 91 houses and 510 inhabitants. Here is Bradley house, the seat of the duke of Somerset. Fair, 25th April and 21st September.

MAIDENHEAD, a market town partly situated in the parish of Bray, and partly in that of Cookham, hundred of Cookham, Berkshire, 26 miles from London, on the banks of the Thames, over which it has a very commodious bridge of 13 arches, erected in 1772 at the expence of 20,000*l.* The barge-pier bridge is maintained by the corporation, for which they receive toll. This town was anciently called South Allington. It was first incorporated by Edward III., and afterwards by James II., under a mayor and aldermen, with liberty to choose a high steward and deputy. From the 10 aldermen two bridge-masters are annually chosen. The mayor is justice of the peace, coroner, and clerk of the market, and he is also judge of a court which he must hold once in three weeks, exclusive of two sessions in the year. It has a gaol for debtors and felons, and there are eight almshouses for poor men and women, who are allowed 4*s.* per week, and 1*l.* 10*s.* per annum for coals. The principal trade of this town, is in malt, meal, and timber. In the neighbourhood are several handsome seats of the nobility and gentry. Maidenhead Thicket, two miles distant, was formerly much frequented by highwaymen. The market is on Wednesday. Fairs, Whit Wednesday, Michaelmas and St. Andrew's day. It has a neat chapel.—Maton's Tour.

MAIDEN NEWTON, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Tollesford, division of Dorchester, Dorset, standing on the river Frome, 8 miles from Dorchester, and 127 from London; containing 68 houses and 428 inhabitants. The church, in the centre of the village, is a large ancient building, consisting of a body and cross ailes, with an embattled tower. Here is also a dissenting meeting house. This town had formerly a market, and was otherwise more considerable than at present.

MAIDEN WELL, a hamlet in the parish of Ruckland, in the hundred of Louth Eske, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 6 miles from Louth. The population is included with Farforth.

MAIDFORTH, a parish in the hundred of Greens Norton, Northampton, 5 miles from Towcester, and 64 from London; containing 47 houses and 228 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*

MAINS MORTON, a parish in the hundred of Buckingham, Bucks, 1 mile from Buckingham, and 57 from London; containing 65 houses and 259 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 18*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.*

MAIDSTONE, a borough in the hundred of Maidstone, and lathe of Aylesford: the county-town of Kent, 3½ miles from London, on the river Medway, over which it has a bridge of seven arches, and whence it is supposed to have derived its name. It contains 1350 houses and 8027 inhabitants, viz. 3835 males, and 4192 females, of whom 5196 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures, and 1306 in agriculture. It consists of four principal streets, which meet at the market-cross. The church is a large handsome building, and is the most spacious parish church in the county, with a good library. Its spire was destroyed by lightning in 1730, and has not been rebuilt. Here is also a building called Faith's church, which was formerly used by the people who fled from the persecution of the duke of Alva, in the Netherlands, and who settled here in the reign of queen Elizabeth. These people established a considerable linen manufactory here, which is still continued. But the greatest trade of the town arises from the extensive hop plantations in the neighbourhood, and large orchards of apples and cherries, peculiar to this part of the county. The tide renders the river navigable here, for vessels of 50 or 60 tons, by which great quantities of timber and corn are conveyed. The county gaol is a very extensive, strong, and modern building, and the assizes for the county are held here. On the Chatham road, at the distance of about half a mile, are very extensive barracks. The town is governed by a mayor and aldermen, under a charter granted by George II. in 1748, and has returned two members to parliament since the first of Edward VI., who are elected by the freemen not receiving alms, in number about 700. The returning officer is the mayor. The archbishop of Canterbury had formerly a palace here, and there were likewise an hospital and convent of grey friars. On the opposite side of the Medway stands Gibraltar house, an agreeable place of resort during the summer season. Here are four charity schools, and a neat modern built theatre, and during the winter season there is a well-conducted weekly concert. One mile from the town stands The Moat, an ancient mansion, the seat of the earl of Romney, who has built a large handsome house near the road, commanding a fine prospect. In the park is erected a pavilion, on the spot where his majesty's marquee stood at the review of the volunteer corps of the county of Kent, 1st August 1799, and where the royal family were entertained with the greatest splendour and festivity. Five miles from Maidstone is Leed's castle, the seat of Dr. Fairfax, a magnificent building of stone, which, although built at different times, and in various styles of architecture, has a beautiful appearance; it stands in a park surrounded by a stream of water, which falls into the Medway. This stream is particularly noted for pike, some of which grow so large as to weigh 30 or 40 pounds. The market is on Thursday, and the second Tuesday in every month, which was granted by George II. in 1751. Fairs, 13th February, 12th May, 20th June, and 17th of October. The church is a curacy, of exempt jurisdiction, the patron of which is the earl of Romney.—Hasted's Kent.

MAIDWELL, a parish in the hundred of Rothwell, Northampton, 9 miles from Northampton, and 74 from London; containing 42 houses and 208 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 8*s.* 1*d.*

MAINLAND OF ORKNEY, the largest of the Orkney islands. See POMONA.

MAINLAND OF SHETLAND, the largest island in the same cluster, being 60 miles long, and nearly 16 broad, projecting into the sea, and having many irregular bays and promontories; the interior is mountainous, and full of bogs. The mainland is divided into 8 parochial districts. The land is cultivated in the rudest manner, the ploughs are formed of a small crooked piece of wood, at the end of which is placed a slender piece of oak, which is fastened to the yokes laid across the necks of the oxen; the person conducting the plough walks by its side, and directs it by a handle fixed on the top; the driver going before pulls the oxen by a rope tied to their horns. The hills are mostly covered with heath, and afford excellent pasture for black cattle and sheep, which are suffered to run wild. Shetland has long been noted for a small hardy breed of horses, called Shetland ponies, and a peculiar breed of swine, having very delicate flesh. Birds of prey are numerous here, and destructive to the lambs. Although the island is bare of trees at present, many of considerable size have been dug up in the mosses. The principal manufacture is a little linen and woollen cloth for home use, and worsted stockings, some of which of very fine texture, are exported; but the principal employment of the inhabitants is fishing.—Pennant's Tour.

MAISS, a parish in the shire of Forfar, Scotland, formerly called Strath Dighty, being a part of that Strath in which the Dighty directs its course to the Tay. It is 6 miles from Dundee; and contains 175 houses and 939 inhabitants. Near the church is an old ruinous castle, for a long time the residence of the Grahams of Fintry.

MAINSFORTH, a hamlet in the parish of Bishop Middleham, in Stockton ward, Durham, 10 miles from Stockton, and 258 from London; containing 10 houses and 55 inhabitants.

MAINSTONE, a parish in the hundred of Purslow, Salop, 4 miles from Bishop's Castle, and 160 from London; containing 44 houses and 263 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

MAISEY HAMPTON, a parish in the hundred of Crowthorne, Gloucester, 6 miles from Cirencester, and 82 from London; containing 69 houses and 315 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 26*l.* 17*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, with the chapel of Manton annexed.

MAISMORE, a parish in the hundred of Dudstone and King's Barton, Gloucester, 3 miles from Gloucester, and 109 from London; containing 51 houses and 343 inhabitants. The church was formerly a chapel to the parish church of St. Mary de Lode, Gloucester, but is now a detached curacy in the patronage of the bishop of Gloucester.

MAKER, a parish in the hundred of East, Cornwall, 2 miles from Plymouth, and 224 from London; containing 233 houses and 1691 inhabitants, of whom 102 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. The steeple of the church, called Maker Tower, is a noted sea mark, standing above Hamoaze on a hill between Mount Edgecomb and the Ramhead. It is a vicarage, value 23*l.* 14*s.* the patron of which is the king. On the heights near the village is a very strong battery, and the military are often encamped here. Maker tower, lat. 50. 20. 51. Long. 4. 10. 16. west.

MAKERSTON, a parish in the shire of Roxburgh, Scotland, on the north bank of the Tweed, 2 miles from Kelso, and 38 from Edinburgh; containing 82 houses and 368 inhabitants. The river is not navigable, but it abounds with excellent salmon.

MALBROOK, a hamlet in the parish of Alwington, in the hundred of Shebbear, Devon, 4 miles from Bideford, and 205 from London, near the sea coast.

MALCHWAY, a river in Radnor, Wales, which falls into the Wye, near Llanstephan.

MALDEN or MALDON, a borough and market-town in the hundred of Dengy, Essex, 8 miles from Chelmsford, and 37 from London; pleasantly situated on the river Blackwater. It is thought by some antiquaries to have been the ancient Camelodunum, the first Roman colony in Britain. The town consists of one principal street, near a mile long, with another something smaller, from which runs a number of back lanes. It contains 439 houses and 2358 inhabitants, viz. 1141 males, and 1217 females, of whom 309 were returned as being employed in various trades. Of late years the town has been much improved, and has many modern well-built houses, and a bath. The haven is very convenient, both the Chelmer and Blackwater falling into the channel. At spring tides vessels of deep burthen can come up to the town, but the colliers generally lie in deep water below, the coals being conveyed by lighters. Vast quantities of chalk rubbish is brought from the Kentish coast for making lime, and for manure. It has likewise a considerable trade in salt, brandy, wine, deals, iron, &c. The river Blackwater is noted for the Wallfleet oysters. Malden contains three parishes, All Saints, St. Peter's, and St. Mary's; the two first are united, being vicarages, value 10*l.* The church of St. Peter's has been converted into a school-room, over which is a good public library, for the use of the minister, and the clergy of the neighbourhood; several of whom reside here, owing to the unhealthiness of their own parishes. The church yard still remains as the burial ground for the parish. St. Mary's is a small rectory. The custom of Borough English is still preserved here, that is, the youngest, and not the eldest son succeeds to the burgage tenure at the death of his father. Here formerly stood a Carmelite priory, and an hospital for lepers. The town was incorporated in the reign of Philip and Mary, and is governed by 2 bailiffs, 8 aldermen, a steward, recorder, and 18 capital burgesses. It has sent two members to parliament ever since the second of Edward III. the right of election being in such freemen only as do not receive alms, and are entitled to their freedom by birth, marriage, and servitude, in number about 200. The two bailiffs are the returning officers. The market on Saturday is well supplied with corn. Fair 18th September.—Salmon's and Morant's Essex.

MALDEN. See MAULDON, Surry.

MALHAM, a township in the parish of Kirby Malhamdale, wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, west riding of York, 3 miles from Settle, and 233 from London; containing 60 houses and 262 inhabitants. Fairs, 25th June, and 4th October.

MALHAM-MOOR, a hamlet to the foregoing township, half a mile distant, and containing 17 houses and 98 inhabitants.

MALLERSTANG, a township and chapelry in the parish of Kirby Stephen, in East ward, Westmoreland, 4 miles from Kirby Stephen, and 261 from London; containing 67 houses and 314 inhabitants. Pendragon castle, the ruins of which are still to be seen here, is said to have been first built in the time of Vortigern.

MALLING, EAST, a parish in the hundred of Larkfield, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 1 mile from Town Malling, 3 miles from Maidstone, and 31 from London; containing 165 houses and 1302 inhabitants, of whom 190 were returned employed in various trades. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.*

MALLING WEST, or TOWN MALLING, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Larkfield, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 30 miles from London on the Maidstone road, standing on a brook which falls into the Medway; it contains 186 houses and 1093 inhabitants, of whom 131 were returned employed in various trades. The tower of the church is a handsome building, erected by Gundulph, bishop of Rochester, who also founded here a convent of Benedictine nuns, the ruins of which are observable in part of the offices and out-buildings of the mansion-house of the Honeywood family. At some distance stands an ancient ruin called the old gaol, which tradition says was the abbey prison. Here is a free-school. In the neighbourhood are some extensive hop grounds. The market is on Saturday. Fairs, 12th August, 2d October, and 17th November. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.*—Hasted's Kent.

MALLWYD, a parish in the hundred of Talybout, Merioneth, Wales, 1½ mile from Dinas y Mowddu, and 203 from London; containing 208 houses and 960 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 15*s.* 5*d.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph. The church yard is remarkable for several large yew trees.

MALLOW, a considerable town in the county of Cork, province of Munster, Ireland, seated on the river Blackwater, 14 miles north of Cork; here are several considerable linen manufactories, and a fine spring of tepid water, much resembling the waters at the hot-wells Bristol. Here is also a good market.

MALMSBURY, the name of a hundred in Wiltshire, lying at the north-western extremity of the county on the borders of Gloucestershire.

MALMSBURY, a borough, market-town, and parish in the hundred of Malmsbury, Wilts, 12 miles from Cricklade, and 95 from London; containing 198 houses and 1027 inhabitants, of whom 83 were returned employed in trade. Its first monastic institution appears to have been a house of British nuns, under Dinoth, abbot of Banchor, about the year 600. These being suppressed for incontinence, soon after, one Maldulphus, a Scottish monk, erected an hermitage here, set himself up as a teacher, and by degrees collected a company together, to live under regular discipline; thence it was called Maldulfsburg, or the town of Maldulf, and afterwards, by contraction, Malmsbury: after him, Aldhelm, one of his pupils, by the help of Eleutherius, bishop of Winchester, turned this little society into a stately abbey, of which he became first abbot. It received various endowments from king Edgar, Edward the Confessor, William the Conqueror, &c. The abbey consisted of a very large and spacious body, with a fine front to the west, and a steeple in the centre. This was furnished with 16 bells, and the western tower with 2. Notwithstanding it was written on one of the bells, "may he never go to heaven who shall steal this bell from the seat of the blessed Aldhelm," there are none left in it; and those which serve for the use of the parish, are in a low spire steeple of one of the two ancient churches, at the end of the cemetery. The town is pleasantly situated on a hill, nearly surrounded by the river Avon, and had formerly a castle, but no remains of it are to be seen. Here is an alms house for 4 men and 4 women; and near the south bridge formerly stood an hospital for lepers. It has also a small manufactory of woollen cloth. This town was first incorporated by Edward king of the West Saxons, but received its present charter from William III, and is governed by an alderman and 12 capital burgesses. Malmsbury has sent two members to parliament ever since the 23d of Edward I., and by a determination of the house of commons in 1796, the right of election was declared to be in the alderman and 12 capital burgesses. The famous William of Malmsbury, the historian, was a native of this place, as well as Thomas Hobbs, the philosopher. Egelmer, an astrologer, who died in 1060, having attempted the art of flying by artificial wings, from one of the towers, in so doing he fell and broke his thighs, which was the occasion of his death. The market is on Saturday. Fairs, 17th March, 17th April, and 26th May. It is a curacy.—Oldfield's Boroughs, and Brixton's Beauties of Wilts.

MALPAS, a market town and parish in the hundred of Broxton, Chester, standing on a high hill near the river Dee, 5 miles from Whitchurch, and 166 from London; containing 191 houses and 906 inhabitants. It consists of three streets tolerably well built and paved, but its name is supposed to be derived from Mal-Pas, signifying a bad-road. Its ancient castle belonging to the Cholmondeley family, has been long since decayed. The market is on Monday. Fairs, 25th March, 25th June, and 8th December. The rectory is very valuable, and is divided into two portions the first portion, value 48*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* has St. Chad's chapel annexed; the second portion, value 44*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.* has Whitwell chapel annexed. The ministers officiate alternately.—Norden's. History of Cheshire.

MALPAS, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Wentloodge, Monmouth, 2 miles from Newport, and 149 from London; containing 38 houses and 178 inhabitants.

MALTBY IN MARISCO, a parish in the hundred of Calceworth, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 3 miles from Alford, and 143 from London; containing 40 houses and 208 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 17*s.* 8*d.*

MALTBY, a small hamlet in the parishes of Hallington and Raithby, hundred of Louth Esk, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 3 miles from Louth, and 150 from London; containing 7 houses and 30 inhabitants.

MALTBY, a township in the parish of Stainton, in Langborough wapentake, north riding of York, 4 miles from Stokesley, and 246 from London; containing 37 houses and 141 inhabitants.

MALTBY, a parish in the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of York, 8 miles from Bawtry, and 12 from Sheffield; containing 101 houses and 527 inhabitants. There formerly stood here a preceptory for knights Templars. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

MALTON, a borough, market-town, and parish in Rydall wapentake, north riding of York, 17½ miles from York, and 214 from London; situated on the river Derwent, over which it has a handsome stone bridge; it contains 600 houses and 3047 inhabitants, viz.

1458 males and 1589 females, of whom 2026 were returned employed in various trades and manufactures, and 447 in agriculture. The town is about half a mile long, and has 3 parish churches. There are still some remains observable of a castle here built in the reign of Henry I.; and the greater part of its ancient monastery was blown down in 1732, but its ruinous chapel is still standing. In 1785, during the sitting of the quarter sessions in the town-hall, the centre beam of the building gave way, and above 300 persons fell into the area below, about 12 feet deep, but without the loss of any lives. The river is navigable to the town. Malton has returned 2 members to parliament ever since the 23d of Edward I. the right of election being vested in the holders of about 100 burgage tenures. The town is governed by a bailiff. The parish church is a curacy in the patronage of earl Fitzwilliam. The market is on Tuesday and Saturday; the latter has a good supply of horses and black cattle. Fairs, Saturday before Palm Sunday and Whit Sunday, and the 10th and 11th of October.

Malton Old, one mile distant from New Malton, from which it is divided by the river Derwent; it contains 151 houses and 741 inhabitants. Here was formerly a priory of Gilbertine canons.

Malvern Great, a parish in the hundred of Pershore, Worcester, 8 miles from Worcester, and 106 from London; containing 165 houses and 819 inhabitants, and is a well built village. An hermitage or religious society was founded here during the reign of Edward the Confessor, and by the munificence of various devotees, it became a magnificent monastery; the church of which still remains, it having been purchased by the inhabitants, and rendered parochial at the dissolution. It is still a magnificent structure, with an embattled and pinnacled tower rising from the centre, 124 feet high. The windows have some remains of stained glass. Some parts of the choir are ornamented with a tesselated pavement containing the coats of arms of several ancient families, and the church has many ancient tombs. Malvern has long been noted for two medicinal springs; that called St. Ann's Well, about a quarter of a mile above the church, is bituminous; the other, which is a chalybeate in the meadows below the village, is quite neglected. The church is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* and is in the patronage of lord Foley.—Nash's Worcestershire.

Malvern Little, a hamlet in the parish of Great Malvern, hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 3¼ miles distant from the foregoing. It was formerly a separate parish, and was once a very considerable village. It now contains 6 houses and 34 inhabitants. The church is in a ruinous state. A benedictine monastery was founded here in 1171.

Malvern Hills, situated in Worcester and Herefordshires, give name to the two foregoing villages; they stretch in length for about 9 miles, and are from 1 to 2 in breadth; the highest parts are the hills called the Worcestershire and Herefordshire beacons, the former rising 1300 feet above the level of the plain, and the latter 1260 feet. They are distant about ¼ miles. They have the appearance of being one vast rock, chiefly of limestone towards the west, and of a species of quartz towards the east; from these hills issue innumerable springs of various qualities. The one called Holy-Well, about half way up the summit, and about 2 miles from Great Malvern, is accounted very salutary in various disorders. The district called Malvern Chase, contains 7115 acres in Worcestershire, 241 acres called the priory land, 619 acres in Herefordshire, and 163 acres in Gloucestershire. The views from the Malvern hills are very extensive and delightful, over the counties of Wales, Hereford, Gloucester, and Worcester.

Malwood Castle, near Beaulieu, in the New Forest, Hants. Near this place king William Rufus was killed, and it has long been noted in history for an oak, said to bud on Christmas day, and to wither before night.

Mamble, a parish in the hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 7 miles from Bewdley, and 135 from London; containing 56 houses and 338 inhabitants. The parish is 14 miles in circumference. The living is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.* and is united with Bayton, in the patronage of the king.

Mamhead, a parish in the hundred of Exminster, Devon, 4 miles from Chudleigh, and 178 from London; containing 48 houses and 250 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*

Mamhilad, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Llanever, hundred of Abergavenny, Monmouth, 7 miles from Abergavenny, 3 from Usk, and 141 from London; containing 43 houses and 205 inhabitants.

Mam Tor, a considerable mountain in Derbyshire, containing lead mines in the peak near Castleton.

Man or Maun, a river in Nottinghamshire, which falls into the Meden at Houghton.

Man, the Isle of, is situated in the Irish sea, about 30 miles from the coast of England, 18 from Scotland, 26 from Ireland, and 40 from the extreme point of Anglesey, being about 30 miles long and 12 miles broad; it contains 17 parishes called kirks, and the chief towns are Ruthin, Douglas, and Peele. The regular ports of the island are, Douglas, Derby haven, Peele, and Ramsey, each having several dependant creeks. From Liverpool the passage is generally performed in two tides, but the packet from Whitehaven generally performs its voyage in 12 hours: it sails every Monday. The two extremities of the island consist of good arable and pasture land. The south end has different soils, but the greater part is loam, in others clay and sand occur, and the sea weed driven on shore is used for manure. The climate is something milder than in the neighbouring parts of Great Britain and Ireland, and frost and snow is of but short continuance, but the summers want the necessary heat for vegetation, which causes late harvests;—the grain in consequence is small and the straw bad, and husbandry is much checked by easterly winds. The fishery is the most important occupation, and it employs about 5000 of the male inhabitants; the women being mostly employed in husbandry. The sheep here are small and hardy, and the flesh excellent; the mountain breed average about 8lb. per quarter. A peculiar breed called Laughton, of which the fleece is in the greatest repute among the inhabitants for cloth and stockings, is of the colour of Spanish snuff. Poultry of all kinds are numerous and cheap, and fish and eggs plentiful and reasonable; besides salmon and rock cod. Here is a marine animal called the battlecock, usually found sticking to the rocks, having almost the qualities of the turtle; but herrings are the chief support of the island. The better sorts of fruits are not to be reared here; thin oat-cakes are the common bread of the inhabitants. The fuel chiefly consists of furze and heath, with some very deep peat bogs. About the rocks of the island an incredible number of wild fowl breed, particularly on the Calf of Man, an island about 3 miles in circuit, before the south promontory of Man, and separated by a narrow channel: here are annually taken about 5000 young puffins. This island was originally granted by Henry IV. to the Stanley family, afterwards created earls of Derby, and by marriage and defaults of heirs it came to the duke of Athol; but the British revenue suffering much by the smuggling carried on here, the government purchased the island of the family. It is a bishopric under the title of the bishop of Sodor and Man. The prelates of the western isles being joined there, Soter or Sodor in Danish signifies western. The language spoken in the island is a dialect of the Erse, but the inhabitants in general understand English. The government is vested in a governor, council, deemsters, and keys, being four separate estates, the concurrence of the whole being necessary for establishing a law, and when assembled, form what is called a court of Tinwald. A general court is held annually, at the Tinwald hil, an old mount of earth forming the court of justice; here the acts are read publicly, and afterwards become binding on the people. The deemsters are officers of great dignity, the chief judges of the isle, and frequently hold their courts for the administration of justice. On an island, at the south extremity of the bay, called Peele Holm, and sometimes Soder, stands a castle, separated from the main land by a little rivulet scarcely knee deep at low water. It was formerly joined to the land by a strong stone quay. The walls enclose an irregular polygon of about two acres, flanked with towers, built of a coarse grey whinstone, and faced in many parts with a red grit. A new handsome pier and light-house was erected in 1798. At Derby haven is a regular custom-house, and the entrance is defended by pieces of cannon. The mountain of Snaefield is 550 yards above the level of the sea, and on a clear day commands a most extensive prospect of England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales. The exports of this island to Great Britain are, potatoes, butter, eggs, pork, beef, skins, honey, kelp, wool, linen, yarn, and lead ore. The naval power was formerly greater than it is at present, as it is recorded that the Manks made frequent conquests in Ireland, and that they forced the Scots to a peace on dishonourable terms; and in 1205 Reginald, king of Man, sailed to Ireland with John de Courcy, his brother-in-law, with a fleet of 100 sail. On this island the duke of Athol has a handsome seat. Several ruins of abbeys and monasteries are observable in different parts of it. Lat. 54. 25. Long. 4. 26. west, at the north end. —Robertson and Feltham's Tour to the Isle of Man.

MANACAN, a parish in the hundred of Kerrier, Cornwall, 5 miles from Helstone, and 275 from London; containing 92 houses and 489 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 16*s.* in the patronage of the bishop of Exeter.

MANATON, a parish in the hundred of Teignbridge, Devon, 6 miles from Chudleigh, and 189 from London; containing 51 houses and 348 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.*

MANAVON or MANATON, a parish in the hundred of Newtown, Montgomery, Wales, near Newton, and 178 miles from London; containing 60 houses and 326 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 10*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

MANBY, a parish in the hundred of Louth Eske, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 5 miles from Louth, and 158 from London; containing 31 houses and 144 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 10*s.* 2*d.*

MANBY, a small hamlet in the parish of Broughton, in Manley wapentake, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 5 miles west of Glandford Brigg, and 160 from London. Population included with Broughton.

MANCESTER, a parish in the hundred of Hemlingford, Warwick, 1 mile from Atherstone, and 106¼ from London; standing on an eminence by the river Anker, and borders of Leicestershire. It is supposed to have been the ancient city called Manduessedum of the Romans, vestiges of their intrenchments being still to be seen. It contains 56 houses and 257 inhabitants. The church is the mother church of Atherstone, and is a vicarage; value 10*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

MANCHESTER, a town in the hundred of Salford, Lancaster, very ancient and extensive, standing on the Ashton, Bolton, Manchester, and Bridgewater canal, 186 miles from London by Derby and Leek, and 188 by Litchfield, at the conflux of the rivers Irk and Irwell; containing 42,547 houses inhabited by 84,020 persons, viz. 39,110 males, and 44,910 females, of whom 44,500 were returned as being employed in trade, handicraft, and manufacture, and 129 in agriculture. The Irwell is the principal stream, and receives the Irk at the north-west angle of the town. On the west side of the Irwell, is a distinct township called Salford, under a separate jurisdiction, but it may be reckoned as the little Southwark of Manchester; its population is included in that of Manchester, separately amounting to 13,611 persons. This suburb is connected to the town by three bridges. The middle bridge is of timber, and is only passable on foot: passengers from the Manchester side must descend to it by near 40 steps. The lower bridge is handsomely built of stone, sufficiently wide for three carriages to run abreast, and the road level: it consists of two arches; and here a toll is taken. The old or upper bridge is very high on the Manchester side, and slopes into Salford. There are four bridges over the Irk; three being for carriages, and the fourth only admitting a single horse at a time. The collegiate church is a handsome Gothic structure, ornamented with some beautiful sculpture; the tabernacle work over the hall is very curious, and it has a large and powerful organ. It is dedicated to the Virgin Mary, St. George and St Dennis. The collegiate body consists of a warden, four fellows, two chaplains, two clerks, four choristers, and four singing men. Besides the College church, St. Mary's, built by the clergy of the collegiate church, is a very elegant building, having a curious carved choir, and a clock which shews the age of the moon. St. Ann's is a handsome edifice, erected in 1723. St. Paul's, a very spacious building, principally of brick, which has lately had a strong lofty tower added to it. St. James's, built of brick and stone, with a small stone steeple. St. Michael's also of brick and stone, with a square tower. The New Jerusalem Church, St. Clement's, St. Thomas's, St. George's, and St. Peter's, which last is a strong and elegant stone structure, having a high spire, and six semicircular windows. The two last have been lately erected. There is also Trinity Church, and St. Stephen's, at Salford, besides a capacious catholic chapel, quaker meeting-house, and many chapels of different dissenting congregations. This town can boast three other good foundations, viz. an hospital, free-school and library, each of them well endowed. The hospital was founded by H. Cheetham, and incorporated by Charles II. for the maintenance of 40 boys; but the funds of the charity being improved, it now contains above double that number. This gentleman also erected a spacious library, well furnished with books, and settled a salary upon the librarian, and an annual sum for increasing the collection. The free-school was founded by Hugh Oldham, bishop of Exeter, but he dying before this noble work was completed, it was finished by his heirs. In this school the greater part of the clergy of the town and neighbourhood have received their early education. There are also several charity and Sunday schools. The Exchange has been pulled down, and its site forms a convenient area, much to the advantage of the surrounding houses. The theatre is a very neat building. The gentlemen's concert room is elegant and capacious, and will accommodate 1200 persons. This is supported by a voluntary subscription, and strangers are admitted with a subscriber's ticket. There are also new and commodious assembly rooms. The Circus is a handsome building, for equestrian and dramatic exhibitions, similar to the Circus of London. The New Bailey, or Penitentiary House, particularly deserves attention. In a large room over the entrance are held the sessions, with commodious adjoining rooms, for the magistrates, jurors, &c. Beyond this in the centre of a large area, enclosed by very high walls, stands the prison; an extensive building, forming a cross three stories high. This prison is kept surprisingly neat and healthy, and such of the prisoners as are mechanics, and not confined for capital crimes, are allowed to work at their trades. In an airy situation and on a pleasant elevated spot, stand the infirmary, dispensary, lunatic asylum, and public baths; a pleasant grass plat and gravel walk extending in front of the buildings, having a canal between that and the street, fenced with iron palisades. The lying-in hospital is in Salford, at the end of the old bridge, where a new building has also been erected for the poor. In the town is also a new workhouse, and here is established a literary and philosophical society, and the Lancashire humane society, for the recovery of persons apparently drowned. Amongst the numerous and extensive manufactures with which it supplies most of the European markets, the most important branch is the cotton trade, and by its late improvements with the intermixture of silk, it resembles the manufacture of Genoa, in various articles of foreign traffic. It is also noted for its velverets and checks, and numerous small articles, such as filleting, tapes, laces, gartering, &c. A silk manufactory has been lately established here, and that for making and finishing hats is carried on to great extent. Vast quantities of these goods are exported. Here are two market-places, the old and the new, which are well supplied on Tuesdays and Saturdays; the latter is the principal, the former being mostly for transacting the manufacturing business of the town and country traders. The town, which contains about 600 streets, is well paved and lighted by about 2000 lamps, and nightly guarded by 200 watchmen. For parochial affairs it is divided into 14 districts. This town is not incorporated, but is governed only as a manor by courts leet and baron. It gives title of duke to the Montague family. Here is a constant intercourse by water carriage on the Irwell, which has been rendered navigable, to Liverpool at a great expence for vessels of 20 and 30 tons, and the duke of Bridgewater's canal has opened a passage to the Mersey at 30 miles distance. The first navigable canal was begun by the duke of Bridgewater in 1758, from Worsley to Salford; but it being found that the navigation would be more beneficial if carried over the Irwell near Barton bridge to Manchester, the duke procured a second act of parliament for that purpose, and to extend a side branch to Longford bridge in Stratford. After which it was found most advisable to extend it from Longford bridge by Dunham, to fall into the river Mersey near the Hemp Stones, below Bank quay, so as to bring vessels into the canal at the lowest neap tides; this was accordingly done under a third act, notwithstanding the opposition of the proprietors of the Old Mersey and Irwell navigation. A Roman station is mentioned by Antoninus called Mancunium, and a camp appears to have been formed in that part called Castle field. The rampart is pretty entire all round, as are also some vestiges of the ditches. Many curiosities have been found here, particularly several Roman and Saxon rings and coins, several of which are preserved in the British Museum. Fairs, Whit Monday, 1st October, and 17th November.—Aikin's Tour round Manchester, and Whitaker's History of Manchester.

MANEWDON, a parish in the hundred of Clavering, Essex, 4 miles from Bishop's Stortford, and 34 from London; containing 93 houses and 487 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 14*l*.

MANFIELD, a village in Gilling wapentake, north riding of York, 3½ miles from Richmond, and 235 from London; containing 51 houses and 229 inhabitants.

MANGOTSFIELD, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Barton Regis, Gloucester, 4½ miles from Bristol, and 111 from London, and is sometimes included in the liberties of Bristol; it contains 488 houses and 2492 inhabitants, viz. 1259 males, and 1233 females, of whom 697 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures, and 120 in agriculture. At Bury hill near it, is supposed to have been a camp of Ostorius.

MANGUSBURY or MANGERSBURY, a village in the hundred of Slaughter, Gloucester, near Stowe-in-the-Wold; containing 21 houses and 120 inhabitants.

MANLEY, the name of a wapentake in the division of Lindsay, Lincolnshire, at the north-western extremity of the county, bounded on the north by the Humber, and on the west by the Dun.

MANNINGFORD ABBOTTS, a parish in the hundred of Swanborough, Wilts, 9 miles from Ludgershall, and 80 from London; containing 21 houses and 131 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l*. 10*s*. 9*d*.

MANNINGFORD BOHUN, a hamlet in the parish of Manningford Bruce, 9½ miles from Ludgershall; containing 26 houses and 163 inhabitants.

MANNINGFORD BRUCE, a parish in the hundred of Swanborough, Wilts, 9½ miles from Ludgershall, and 81 from London; containing 36 houses and 213 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l*. 3*s*. 4*d*.

MANNINGHAM or MANNINGTON, a parish in the hundred of South Erpingham, Norfolk, 5 miles from Aylsham; containing 2 houses and 24 inhabitants.

MANNINGHAM, a township in the parish of Bradford, Morley wapentake, west riding of York, near Bradford, and 200 miles from London; containing 270 houses and 1357 inhabitants, of whom 448 were returned employed in various trades and manufactures.

MANNINGTREE, a market-town in the parish of Mistley Thorne, hundred of Tendring, Essex, 1½ miles from Harwich, 9 from Colchester, and 61 from London; it contains 125 houses and 1016 inhabitants, of whom 953 were returned employed in various trades. It is very conveniently situated on a branch of the river Stour, called Manningtree water. The market on Thursday is well attended. Fair Thursday in Whitsun week. It is a curacy under Mistley.

MANSBRIDGE, the name of a hundred in Hampshire, in the centre of the county to the north of Southampton.

MANSELGAMAGE, a parish in the hundred of Grimsworth, Hereford, 8 miles from Hereford, and 143 from London; containing 24 houses and 120 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l*. 6*s*. 8*d*.

MANSEL HOPE. See HOPE MANSEL.

MANSEL LACEY, a parish near the foregoing, containing 55 houses and 276 inhabitants.

MANSERGH, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Kirby Lonsdale, in Lonsdale ward, Westmoreland, 3½ miles from Kirby Lonsdale, and 254 from London; containing 50 houses and 234 inhabitants.

MANSFIELD, a market town and parish in the hundred of Broxtow, Notts, 14 miles from Nottingham, and 158½ from London, in the forest of Sherwood; containing 1201 houses and 5988 inhabitants, viz. 2798 males, and 3190 females, of whom 1573 were returned as being employed in various trades, &c. and 271 in agriculture. Its principal trade is in corn and malt; and a small manufactory for stockings; formerly it was noted for that of soap. When the forest of Sherwood was a royal chase, here was a villa which the kings of England kept as a hunting seat, and the manor of Cokeney was held by the service of shoeing the king's palfry, when he came here; and by an ancient custom of the same manor, the heirs are declared of age as soon as born. Here is a charity school. Several noble mansions are within a few miles, viz. Worksop manor, the seat of the duke of Norfolk; Clumber, the duke of Newcastle's; Thoresby, lord Newark's; and Welbeck, the seat of the duke of Portland. The market on Thursday is well stocked with corn and cattle. Fairs, 10th July and second Thursday in October, for cattle and cheese. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* and is in the patronage of the dean of Lincoln. —Dickinson's Nottingham.

MANSFIELD WOODHOUSE, a township and chapelry to Mansfield, and distant therefrom 2 miles; containing 211 houses and 1112 inhabitants, of whom 541 were returned as being employed in various trades. A Roman building, 20 yards by 14, was discovered near this place in a corn field, a mosaic pavement at which was in excellent preservation.

MANSHEAD, the name of a hundred in Bedfordshire, at the south-western extremity of the county, bordering on Buckinghamshire.

MANSRIGGS, a hamlet in the parish of Ulverstone, hundred of Lonsdale, Lancaster, 1 mile from Ulverstone, and 271 from London; containing 12 houses and 64 inhabitants.

MANSTON, a small village in the hundred of Redlane, division of Sherborn, Dorset, 2 miles north of Stourminster; containing 19 houses and 109 inhabitants.

MANTHORP, a hamlet to the parish of Thurlby, hundred of Ness, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 3 miles from Bourne, and 95 from London; containing 20 houses and 95 inhabitants.

MANTHORPE, a hamlet in the parish of Grantham, in the liberty of Grantham soke, Lincolnshire, 1 mile from Grantham, and 112 from London; containing 91 houses and 446 inhabitants.

MANTON, a small village in Manley wapentake, Lindsay division, Lincoln, near Burton-on-Stather; containing 10 houses and 52 inhabitants.

MANTON, a parish in the hundred of Martinsley, Rutland, between Martinsthorp and Normanton, 92½ miles from London; containing 43 houses and 187 inhabitants. Here was formerly a chantry, endowed by the earl of Leicester, the manor of which was granted to lord St. John, in the reign of queen Elizabeth. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.*

MANTON, a hamlet in the parish of St. Mary's, Marlborough, in the hundred of Selkley, Wilts, 1½ mile from Marlborough, and 75½ from London. The population returned with St. Mary's.

MANTON, a small village near Worksop, in Nottinghamshire.

MANUDEN. See MANEWDEN, Essex.

MANWORTHY, a hamlet in the parish of Holdsworthy, hundred of Black Torrington, Devon, ½ mile from Holdsworthy, and 214½ from London. The population included with Holdsworthy.

MANYAN, a river in Denbighshire, Wales, which falls into the Clwyd, opposite Llanelidan.

MAPERTON, a parish in the hundred of Catash, Somerset, 3 miles from Wincanton, and 113 from London; containing 22 houses and 171 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 8*s.* 7*d.*

MANYFOLD, a river in Staffordshire, which falls into the Dwe, near Alsop.

MAPPERLEY, a township in the parish of Standley, hundred of Appletree, Derby, 6 miles from Derby, and 126 from London; containing 55 houses and 275 inhabitants.

MAPPERTON, a parish in the hundred of Beaminster, division of Bridport, Dorset, standing on an eminence 2 miles from Beaminster, and 136 from London; containing 14 houses and 72 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 3*s.* 1*d.*

MAPPLEBECK, a parish in the hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, 6 miles from Newark, and 150 from London; containing 25 houses and 152 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the duke of Newcastle.

MAPPLEDURHAM, or MAPLEDERHAM, a parish in the hundred of Langtree, Oxford, standing near the Thames, 4 miles from Reading, and 41 from London; and containing 99 houses and 452 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 12*l.* 16*s.* in the patronage of Eton College.

MAPPLEDURWELL, a parish and curacy in the hundred and division of Basingstoke, Hants, 3 miles from Basingstoke, and 49½ from London; containing 54 houses and 160 inhabitants. At the distance of 1 mile is Hackwood Park, the residence of lord Bolton, a most elegant and rural situation. The park is 8 miles in circumference, and before each front is a fine sheet of water; some of the walks may be seen a mile long, beautifully planted on each side with chesnut and lime trees; at proper distances are statues, urns, obelisks, and particularly a very fine equestrian statue of George I. It is well stocked with all kinds of game. The mansion is equal to the grounds in magnificence, the internal decorations and furniture displaying the greatest taste. The gallery of pictures is furnished with the best performances of the different Flemish and Italian masters.

MAPPLESTEAD GREAT, a parish in the hundred of Hinckford, Essex, 2½ miles from Halstead, and 49 from London; containing 45 houses and 331 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

MAPPLESTEAD LITTLE, a parish also in the same hundred, ½ mile distant from the foregoing; containing 42 houses and 298 inhabitants. The church, which is remarkable as a round building, is a donative.

MAPPLETON, a parish united with Ashborn, in the hundred of Wirksworth, Derby, 1 mile from Ashborn, and 141 from London; containing 36 houses and 162 inhabitants.

MAPPLETON, a parish in Holderness wapentake, east riding of York, 2 miles from Horasea, and 197 from London; containing 29 houses and 159 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 15*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the archdeacon of the east riding of York.

MAPPOWDER, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Buckland Newton, division of Sherborn, Dorset, 5 miles from Cerne Abbas, and 120 from London; containing 30 houses and 229 inhabitants.

MARAZION, or MARKET JEW, a market town in the parish of St. Hilary, hundred of Penwith, Cornwall, standing on an arm of the sea, called Mound's bay, 3 miles from Penzance, and 278 from London, by Lesskeard; containing 206 houses and 1009 inhabitants, of whom 165 were returned as being employed in various trades. It is called by Leland Marhasdethon or Forum Jovis. The buildings are mean, and the harbour very indifferent. The mother church of St. Hilary stands a mile from the town. Here are 2 meeting-houses, one for quakers, and the other for methodists. In the reign of Henry VIII. this town was burnt by the French. The market is on Thursday. Fairs, 3 weeks before Easter eve, and on the 29th of September.—Polwhele's Cornwall.

MARBROOK, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Leeke, hundred of Totmonslow, Stafford, adjoining to Leeke, and the population included therewith.

MARBROOK, a river in Shropshire, which falls into the Severn below Bridgnorth.

MARBURY, a hamlet in the parish of Whitchurch, in Salop, although situate in the hundred of Bucklow, Chester, 3 miles from Whitchurch, and 163 from London; containing 4 houses and 20 inhabitants.

MARCH, a market town in the parish of Doddington, Isle of Ely, Cambridgeshire, standing on the river Nen, 26 miles from Cambridge, and 81 from London; containing 563 houses and 2514 inhabitants, viz. 1251 males and 1263 females, of whom 234 were returned as being employed in various trades, and 559 in agriculture. In forming the road between this town and Wisbeach in 1730, 3 urns full of burnt bones and some small Roman coins were dug up. The market is on Friday. Fairs, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, before Easter, Monday and Tuesday before Whitsuntide, 2d Tuesday in October, and 2 following days. It is a chapelry to Doddington.

MARCHAM, a parish in the hundred of Ock, Berks, 3 miles from Abingdon, and 58 from London; containing 144 houses and 607 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 15*s.* 7*d.* in the patronage of the dean and canons of Christ church, Oxford.

MARCHAMLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Hodnett, hundred of North Bradford, Salop, 5 miles from Drayton, and 160 from London. The population is included with Hodnett.

MARCH or MARSH BALDEN. See BALDEN MARCH, Oxford.

MARCHINGTON, a township and chapelry in the parish of Hanbury, hundred of Offlow, Stafford, 3 miles from Uttoxeter, and 135 from London; containing 102 houses and 470 inhabitants.

MARCHWIEL, or MARCHWYEL, a parish in the hundred of Broomfield, Denbigh, Wales, 4 miles from Ruthin, and 212 from London; containing 76 houses and 493 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph.

MARCLE LITTLE, a parish in the hundred of Radlow, Hereford, 2 miles from Ledbury, and 123 from London; containing 20 houses and 128 inhabitants. It is recorded by Dr. Fuller, that in 1575, at Marcley-hill, many acres of earth, after having been subterraneously convulsed for 3 days, were removed to a considerable distance, overbrowing Kinnaston chapel in their way, as well as several houses, leaving a gap 400 feet long and 320 broad. And in April, 1793, a spot of ground called Caplow Wood, was removed for the extent of 4 acres, filling up the adjoining road 12 feet high: a yew tree was removed perfectly upright, without any injury, for 40 yards. It is a curacy, and was formerly a chapelry to Ledbury.

MARCLE MUCH, or GREAT MARCLE, a parish in the hundred of Greytree, Hereford, 4 miles from Ledbury, and 125 from London, near the foregoing; containing 118 houses and 628 inhabitants. In this neighbourhood formerly stood 2 ancient castles, Mortimer's castle, near the church, and Ellingham castle, the site of which is now grown over with wood. It is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 5*d.* with Kinnston chapel annexed.

MARCROSS, a small parish in the hundred of Ogmore, Glamorganshire, Wales, 8 miles from Cowbridge; containing 13 houses and 64 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.* patron the archdeacon and chapter of Llandaff.

MARDALE, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Shap, in West ward, Westmoreland, although part of this hamlet is situated in the township and parish of Bampton. The population is returned with both these parishes.

MARDEN, the name of a hundred in the lathe of Scray, Kent, near the centre of the county.

MARDEN, a parish in the hundred of Broxash, Hereford, 5 miles from Hereford, and 140 from London, on the river Lug; containing 25 houses and 132 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 13*s.* 5*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Hereford.

MARDEN, a parish in the hundred of Marden, lathe of Scray, Kent, 7 miles from Maidstone, and 41 from London, near the river Twist; containing 225 houses and 1650 inhabitants, of whom 78 were returned as being employed in trade. It was once more considerable, and had a market. The fair is on the 10th of October. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury.

MARDEN EAST, a parish in the hundred of Westbourne and Singleton, Chichester rape, Sussex, 6 miles from Midhurst, and 64 from London; containing 7 houses and 46 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.*

MARDEN NORTH, a parish in the same hundred, lying ½ mile north of the foregoing, rather nearer Midhurst; contains only 3 houses and 20 inhabitants.

MARDEN WEST, a hamlet in the parish of Compton, in the same hundred, about ½ mile westward of East Marden; containing 44 houses and 255 inhabitants.

MARDEN, a parish in the hundred of Swanborough, Wilts, 4 miles from Market Lavington, and 87 from London; containing 41 houses and 162 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l*. 17*s*. 6*d*. in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Bristol.

MAREFIELD, a hamlet in the parish of Owston, hundred of Guthlaxton, Leicester, 7 miles from Melton Mowbray, and 95 from London; containing 5 houses and 27 inhabitants.

MAREHAM LE FEN, a parish in Horncastle soke, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 4 miles from Tattershall, and 134 from London; containing 76 houses and 386 inhabitants. It is so called from its situation in the west fen, to distinguish it from another village of the same name, near Horncastle. It is a rectory, value 13*l*. 10*s*. 10*d*.

MAREHAM ON THE HILL, a hamlet in the parish of Horncastle, in Horncastle soke, Lindsay division, Lincoln, ½ mile from Horncastle, and 136 from London; containing 20 houses and 110 inhabitants.

MARESFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Rushmonden, Pevensey rape, Sussex, 11 miles from East Grinstead, and 40½ from London; containing 170 houses and 960 inhabitants. Fair 4th of September. It is a rectory, value 12*l*.

MARFLEET, a parish and curacy in Holderness, east riding of York, 2 miles from Hull, and 177 from London; containing 21 houses and 116 inhabitants.

MARGAM, a parish in the hundred of Newcastle, Glamorganshire, Wales, standing near the sea coast, 186½ miles from London; containing 321 houses and 1809 inhabitants, of whom 203 were returned as being employed in various trades. At the foot of a high mountain here stood an abbey of Cistercians, supposed to have been erected in 1147, by William earl of Gloucester. Part of its offices are still remaining, particularly the ruins of the chapter-house, which has been a circular building, about 42 feet in diameter, with 12 pointed windows, the roof resting on a single column in the centre. Behind it are the ruins of part of the cloisters, which joined it to the church. In 1761, the tomb of one of the abbots was discovered laying over a drain. In that part of the village called Margam-street, stood an ancient cross.

MARGARET'S ST. AT CLIFF, a parish in the hundred of Bewsborough, lathe of St. Augustine, Kent, 3½ miles north-east of Dover, on a bay of the same name; containing 43 houses and 419 inhabitants.

MARGARET ST. a parish in the hundred of Ewias Lacey, Herefordshire, 11 miles from Hereford; containing 61 houses and 284 inhabitants.

MARGARET'S ST. a hamlet in the parish of Amwell, hundred of Hertford, Herts, 1½ mile from Hoddesdon, and 19 from Ware, anciently called Stansted Thele; containing 10 houses and 65 inhabitants.

MARGARET'S ST. a small village situate between St. Mary's Cray and Gravesend.

MARGARET'S MARCH, a hamlet in the parish of Melbury, hundred of Stourminster Newton, division of Sherborn, Dorset, 2 miles from Shaftesbury, and 103 from London; containing 12 houses and 65 inhabitants.

MARGATE, a market town on the sea coast, in the parish of St. John's, in the liberties of Dover, Kent, 72 miles from London; containing 1004 houses and 4766 inhabitants, viz. 2191 males, and 2575 females, of whom 873 were returned as being employed in various trades. The town is pleasantly seated on the ascent of a hill, and that part of it which was originally the little fishing town of St. John's, is now the High-street, and its name Meregate is derived from a gate for letting a mere or stream of water run into the sea. It stands on the north side of the isle of Thanet, and is a member of the port of Dover. There was also another detached village lying in a valley called Lucas Lane, but it is now likewise joined by ranges of building. The principal improvements of Margate have taken place since 1787, when an act of parliament was obtained to rebuild the pier with stone, and the town underwent considerable improvements, since which it has become a very fashionable resort for sea bathing. From the increase of company new buildings became necessary for their accommodation and almost a new town has sprung up to the southward of the old one. On that part next the coast there are many commodious rooms, which are the morning resort of the company, and whence they are driven by turns in the sea by the machines, being four-wheeled carriages covered with canvas, and having a shade of the same material at the end, dropping down to the water. There are also 4 marble salt water baths filled from the sea, which may be brought to any temperature. The church of St. John stands about ½ mile from the lower end of the town; it is a large building of flint, rough cast, consisting of 3 long low aisles, separated by pillars of various forms. At the west end of the north aile, is a square tower with a low spire, containing 6 bells. It has many monuments of antiquity, with a good organ. The lecturer has his subscription book lying at the different libraries and reading rooms. Here is also a meeting-house for the Baptists, and another for the followers of Wesley. Among the public buildings is Cecil-square, erected in 1769, consisting of very spacious houses and commodious shops. Hawley-square, erected in a contiguous field, a uniform and handsome range of houses. The Union Crescent, opposite Cecil-square, is perhaps the most elegant among the piles of building; and on the forts and several other places are several very handsome mansions, commanding beautiful land and sea views. Northward of the town, on a spot called the Fort, which had formerly a mounted battery, Neptune-square has been erected, which has now a small neat battery mounted on the new construction. On Hooper's hill opposite, are also several good buildings. The assembly room stands at the south corner of Cecil-square, and is a splendid apartment 87 feet long, and 43 broad. It is adorned with busts of his present majesty and the late duke of Cumberland; attached are corresponding tea-rooms, card-rooms, billiard-rooms, &c. and the house is one of the best conducted and largest taverns in the kingdom. A very neat theatre was erected here in 1787, and cost 4000*l.* the exterior of which is of brick and; the interior is handsomely fitted up. Here is a general sea-bathing infirmary opened in 1796, near the town at Westbrook, a very neat but plain building, under the patronage of the prince of Wales, and projected by Dr. Lettsom. The libraries are in the first style of elegance, and have a very choice collection of books, as well as all the periodical publications: the one situated at the north-west corner of Hawidy-square, is a new and elegant structure; a second is on the north-east side of Cecil-square; and the third at the lower end of High-street, commanding a most delightful prospect of the sea. Attached to the Prospect hotel, on Hooper's-hill, is a large bowling-green, fitted up for the accommodation of tea parties. Draper's Hospital, standing on a rising ground, erected in 1709, by a quaker, has 9 dwellings, and the generality of the pensioners are quakers. In the middle of the building is a meeting-house for that fraternity. About 1½ mile from the town stands the rural spot of Dandelion, where are the remains of an ancient mansion and fortification, once of great strength, and belonging to the family of Dandelion. This place is now in great repute, and has alcoves, a bowling-green, a platform for dancing, an orchestra, and every accommodation for company. Between Dandelion and Draper's Hospital is the ancient mansion of Salmstone, formerly belonging to Christchurch, Canterbury; the lessee of which is bound to pay several charities, amongst others, a dish of peas to every poor person who claims them between the 3d of May and 24th of June. The mayor of Dover appoints a deputy here, but he is invested with no other power than that of constable. This appointment has been often strongly opposed by the inhabitants, and as strenuously maintained by the magistrates of Dover. In 1774, a grant was obtained for a market on Wednesday and Saturday, since which time it has been well supplied with all sorts of provisions.—Guide to the Watering Places, and Hasted's Kent.

MARGRETTING, a parish in the hundred of Chelmsford, Essex, 2 miles from Ingatestone, 4 from Chelmsford, and 25½ from London; containing 67 houses and 395 inhabitants.

MARHAM CHURCH, a parish in the hundred of Stratton, Cornwall, 1½ mile from Stratton, and 220 from London; containing 74 houses and 414 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 11*s.*

MARHAM, a parish in the hundred of Clackclose, Norfolk, 5 miles from Downham, and 88 from London; containing 74 houses and 491 inhabitants. It is a vidarage, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

MARHOLM, a hamlet in the parish of Helpestone, hundred of Nassaburgh, Northampton, 5 miles from Peterborough, and 86 from London; containing 17 houses and 108 inhabitants.

MARI LOCH, a lake in the shire of Ross, in the parish of Gairlock, Scotland, about 16 miles long and 1½ mile broad, in which are 20 islands, beautified with various kinds of wood. On the largest, called Ilan Mari, are the remains of a druidical building. This lake falls into an arm of the sea called Loch Ew.

MARK, a parish in the hundred of Bempstone, Somerset, 7 miles from Glastonbury, and 134 from London; containing 162 houses and 875 inhabitants.

MARIS, a hamlet in the parish of Winrush, Gloucestershire.

MARKAT, or MERKAT, in the road from St. Alban's to Dunstable, Herts.

MARKBY, a parish in the hundred of Calceworth, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 2 miles from Alford, and 142 from London; containing 11 houses and 61 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

MARKEATON, a township in the parish of Mackworth, in the hundred of Morleston, Derby, 1½ mile from Derby, and 128 from London; containing 34 houses and 184 inhabitants.

MARKET BOSWORTH, a market town and parish in the hundred of Sparkenhoe, Leicester, 7 miles from Hinckley, and 107 from London; containing 120 houses and 791 inhabitants. It stands on a pleasant eminence, in a very fertile part of the country. This place is noted in history for a bloody battle fought on a plain about 3 miles from the town, between Richard III. and Henry earl of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII. wherein Richard lost his crown and life. Many pieces of armour and weapons have been found in tilling the earth, and are shewn to the curious traveller in almost every inn or public-house in the place. Market on Wednesday. Fairs 8th May and 10th July. It is a rectory, value 55*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*—Nichols's Leicestershire.

MARKET HARBOROUGH. See HARBOROUGH MARKET.

MARKET JEW. See MARAZION, Cornwall.

MARKET DEEPING. See DEEPING MARKET, Lincoln.

MARKET LAVINGTON. See LAVINGTON EAST, Wilts.

MARKET OVERTON, a parish in the hundred of Alstoe, Rutland, 4 miles from Oakham, and 95 from London; containing 82 houses and 419 inhabitants. It takes its name of Overton from its situation on a high ground, and had anciently a market. It is supposed to have been a Roman station. The living is a rectory, value 14*l.* 11*s* 3*d.*

MARKET STAINTON, or STAINTON LE HOLE, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Gartree, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 7 miles from Horncastle, and 146½ from London; containing 91 houses and 493 inhabitants.

MARKET STREET, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Caddington, part being situate in the hundred of Manshead, Bedford, and the other part in the hundred of Dacorum, Herts, 3 miles from Dunstable, and 29 from London; that part in Bedfordshire returned 28 houses and 235 inhabitants. The remainder, containing about 100 houses, were included with Caddington. Here was formerly a nunnery of Benedictines, on the site of the mansion now called Market Cell.

MARKFIELD, a hamlet in the parish of Tilton, hundred of East Goscote, Leicester, 8 miles from Leicester. Population included with that of Tilton.

MARKFIELD, a parish united with Thornton, in the hundred of Sparkenhoe, Leicester, 10 miles from Hinckley, 8 from Leicester, and 106 from London, on the borders of Charnwood forest; containing 155 houses and 591 inhabitants.

MARKHAM EAST, a parish in the hundred of Basset Law, Notts, 2 miles from Taxford, and 140 from London; containing 129 houses and 665 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the duke of Newcastle, with West Drayton chapel annexed.

MARKHAM WEST, or LITTLE, a parish near the foregoing; containing 37 houses and 176 inhabitants. It has a charity-school, and is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.* united with Bevercotes, in the patronage of the duke of Newcastle.

MARKINCH, a parish in the shire of Fife, Scotland, on the banks of the Leven, 8 miles from Kirkcaldie; containing 645 houses and 3130 inhabitants, viz. 1435 males and 1695 females, of whom 382 were returned as being employed in trade, and 353 in agriculture. The chief village of Markinch contains about 500 inhabitants, the remainder being in 6 or 7 other villages, viz. Dubieside, Balgonie, Balbirnie, &c. The road from Kinghorn to Cupar, and from Dundee Waterside, passes through this parish. At Balgonie is an ancient castle, the seat of the earl of Leven, and whence his eldest son takes the title of baron. It is of a rectangular form, on the south bank of the Leven. The tower on the north side is 80 feet high, the roof being surrounded with battlements, projecting beyond the walls, the whole forming a noble specimen of castellated architecture. About ¼ mile east is Balfour castle, an ancient building surrounded with good plantations. Balbirnie castle is also a fine old structure in a very romantic situation. The whole of the parish produces good marl, freestone and coal.

MARKINGTON, a township in the parish and liberties of Rippon, west riding of York, near Rippon, and 222 miles from London; containing 87 houses and 389 inhabitants.

MARK ST. a village near Bristol, in the hundred of Hartcliffand Bedminster, Somerset.

MARKSBURY, a parish in the hundred of Keynsham, Somerset, 6½ miles from Bath, 7 from Bristol, and 113 from London; containing 63 houses and 283 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*

MARLAIS, a river in Pembrokeshire, Wales, falling into the Culbeth, near Letterstone.

MARLAND, a hamlet in the parish of Rochdale, Lancaster, from which it is distant 2 miles.

MARLBOROUGH, a township and chapelry in the parish of West Allington, hundred of Stanborough, Devon, 3 miles from Kingsbridge, and 210 from London; containing 190 houses and 1056 inhabitants, of whom 277 were employed in various trades.

MARLBOROUGH, a borough and market town, consisting of 2 parishes, in the hundred of Selkley, Wilts, standing on the banks of the river Kennett, 10 miles from Hungerford, and 74 from London; and containing 441 houses and 2367 inhabitants, viz. 1178 males and 1189 females, of whom 579 were returned as being employed in various trades. It was anciently called Cunetio. Its present name is supposed to have been derived from Marli, signifying chalk, with which this part of the country abounds. The town consists chiefly of one broad street, with piazzas along one side of it. The churches, dedicated to St. Mary's and St. Peter's, have both square towers and 6 bells in each. King John had a castle here, which, on his revolt from his brother, Richard I. was stormed by Hubert, archbishop of Canterbury. Here also was held the parliament, which passed the statute of Marlborough for suppressing riots. On the site of the castle the earl of Hertford built a mansion. In the neighbourhood were anciently several religious houses. The town is governed by a mayor, 2 justices, 12 aldermen, 24 burgesses, a town clerk, and inferior officers. This town gave title to the celebrated warrior, John Churchill, who was created earl of Marlborough by William III. in 1689, and duke of Marlborough by queen Anne. The town has no trade of any consequence, except the supply of corn and cheese to the market. Marlborough has sent two members to parliament since the 28th of Edward I. the right of election being vested in the mayor, who is the returning officer, two bailiffs, and [illegible] capital burgesses. The forest of Marlborough, or, as it is called, Savernake forest, is 12 miles in circumference, and is plentifully stocked with deer, and rendered very pleasant by the many delightful walks and vistas cut through the coppices and woods with which it abounds. The present stately edifice which stands on the site of the one destroyed by fire belonging to the earl of Hertford, was built under the direction of the late earl of Burlington; it consists of 4 fronts, having 4 towers, each of them greatly beautified and adorned, and to which are now added 4 wings, in these are the rooms of state and a room for a library; on the opposite side are the remains of a large house called Wolfe hall, the seat of sir John Seymour, father of the protector Somerset, now converted into a farm-house. Here it is supposed king Henry VIII. celebrated his nuptials with lady Jane Seymour, and kept his wedding dinner in a large barn, hung with tapeestry on the occasion. The market is on Saturday. Fairs, 29th June, 20th July, 15th August, 21st September, and 11th November. St. Peter's is a rectory, value 12*l.* patron the bishop of Salisbury. St. Mary's, a vicarage, value 10*l.*, 9*s.* patron the dean of Salisbury.—Britton's Beauties of Wilts.

Marlden, a hamlet in the parish of Paignton, hundred of Haytor, Devon, 6 miles from Brixham, lying near the coast, and 193 from London; containing 56 houses and 364 inhabitants.

Marlesford, a parish in the hundred of Loes, Suffolk, 5 miles from Framlingham and 83 from London, near the river Deben; containing 48 houses and 315 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Marlewood, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Thornbury, Gloucester.

Marlingford, a parish in the hundred of Forehoe, Norfolk, 6 miles from Wymondham, and 106 from London; containing 18 houses and 123 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.*

Marlow, a parish in the hundred of Roose, Pembrokeshire, Wales, 7 miles from Milford haven; containing 75 houses and 327 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* in the patronage of the prince of Wales.

Marlow Great, a borough, market town and parish, in the hundred of Desborough, Bucks, standing on the banks of the river Thames, under the Chiltern hills, 17 miles from Aylesbury, and 31 from London; containing 617 houses and 3236 inhabitants, viz. 1436 males and 1800 females, of whom 306 were returned as being employed in trade and manufactures, principally in those of black silk lace and paper, there being several paper mills on the river Lodden between this town and High Wycombe. The church and town-hall are both handsome buildings, and over the Thames a new bridge has lately been erected by a subscription of the nobility and gentry of the neighbourhood. The foot paths of the town have been paved by voluntary subscription. The Thames conveys various goods from the neighbouring towns, especially meal and malt from High Wycombe, and beech from several parts of the county, with which it particularly abounds. In the neighbourhood are frequent horse races. At the Temple Mills near the town, is an extensive manufactory of copper and brass, and a mill for pressing oil from rape and linseed. This borough has sent 2 members to parliament ever since the 28th of Edward I. the right of election being in the inhabitants paying scot and lot, in number about 233. The returning officers are the constables. The market is on Saturday. Fairs 29th October and 2 following days, for cattle, pedlery, provisions, &c. It is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Gloucester.—Malon's Tour.

Marlow Little, a parish in the hundred of Desborough, Bucks, 1 mile distant from Great Marlow; containing 128 houses and 723 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.*

Marston Meys. See Tring, Herts.

Marney Layer, a parish in the hundred of Winstree, Essex, 5 miles from Witham, and 42 from London; containing 26 houses and 188 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.*

Marnham, a parish in the hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, 3 miles from Tuxford, and 136 from London; containing 65 houses and 279 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.*

Marnhull, a parish in the hundred of Buckland Newton, division of Sherborn, Dorset, 5 miles from Shaftesbury, and 108 from London, on the river Stour; containing 165 houses and 1075 inhabitants, of whom 119 were returned employed in various trades. The church is a very ancient and lofty building, with a modern tower. It is a rectory, value 31*l.* 6*s.* 10*d.*

Marnoch, a parish in the shire of Banff, Scotland, on the banks of the Deveron, 40 miles from Aberdeen; containing 417 houses and 1687 inhabitants, mostly employed in agriculture.

Marnoch. See Inch Marnoch.

Marple, a township and chapelry in the parish of Stockport, hundred of Macclesfield, Chester, 3 miles from Stockport, and 179 from London, near the river Etherow, and the Peak forest canal; containing 340 houses and 2031 inhabitants, viz. 993 males and 1038 females, of whom 1448 were returned employed in various trades, and 53 in agriculture. It has a chapel of ease.

Marr, a parish and curacy in Strafforth wapentake, west riding of York, 4 miles from Doncaster, and 166 from London; containing 33 houses and 165 inhabitants.

Marr, a district in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, lying between the rivers Dee and Don. It is subdivided into the districts of Braemar, Cromar, and Midmar, the first denoting the highest part, the second the lower and best cultivated, and the latter from its equi-distance from the 2 rivers. It anciently gave title of earl to the Erskine family.

MARRICK, a parish and curacy in Gilling West wapentake, north riding of York, 10 miles from Richmond, and 244 from London; containing 102 houses and 474 inhabitants.

MARROW. See MAREHAM LE FEN, Lincoln.

MARSDEN, a township and chapelry in Aybrig wapentake, west riding of York, partly situated in the parish of Huddersfield, and partly in that of Almondbury, 7 miles from Huddersfield, and 180 from London, on the banks of the Huddersfield canal, near the source of the river Colne. It contains 354 houses and 1958 inhabitants, of whom about 800 were returned employed in various trades and manufactures, there having been some extensive cotton mills erected here, employing a number of hands, particularly children, many of whom are sent from the workhouses of the metropolis.

MARSFIELD, or MARSHFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Wentloodge, Monmouth, 5 miles from Newport, and 152 from London; containing 86 houses and 395 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* Its church appears once to have been a very handsome building.

MARSH, a hamlet belonging to Newport Pagnel, in Buckinghamshire.

MARSHALL, a parish in the hundred of Lexden, Essex, 2 miles from Coggeshall, and 46 from London; containing 4 houses and 35 inhabitants.

MARSHALL, a hamlet in the parish of Fletching, Sussex.

MARSHALE HAMPSTEAD. See HAMPSTEAD MARSHALL, Berks.

MARSHLAND, in the east riding of York, lying between the rivers Aire, Don, Ouse, and Trent, and with Ditchmarsh, forming a river island of about 15 miles.

MARSHLAND, a marshy peninsula in Norfolk, opposite to King's Lynn, almost surrounded with the Ouse and other navigable rivers, and an arm of the sea. It seems formerly to have been recovered from the ocean, and has suffered considerably from inundations. This tract contains about 30,000 acres, principally occupied in grazing, and contains upwards of 120 brick bridges. The air is unhealthy, and the inhabitants much afflicted with the ague.

MARSH CHAPEL, a hamlet in the parish of North Coates, in the hundred of Bradley, Haverstoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 3 miles from Saltfleet, and 158 from London; containing 65 houses and 354 inhabitants.

MARSHAM, a parish in the hundred of South Erpingham, Norfolk, 2 miles from Aylsham, and 116 from London; containing 128 houses and 565 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 12*s.* 9*d.*

MARSHFIELD, a market town and parish in the hundred of Thornbury, Gloucester, 11 miles from Bristol, and 102 from London, situated on the borders of Somerset and Wilts. It principally consists of one main street of old buildings; containing 262 houses and 1246 inhabitants, of whom 335 were returned employed in various trades. The church is a large handsome building. Here is also an almshouse well endowed, with a chapel belonging to it, and a good charity-school. The chief traffic of this town is in malt, and it is governed by a bailiff. The parish is 16 miles in circumference. The market is on Thursday. Fairs, 14th May and 24th October. At a place called the Rocks, near this town, are the 3 shire stones of Gloucester, Wilts, and Somerset. It is a vicarage, value 29*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.* and is in the patronage of New College, Oxford.—Rudge's Gloucestershire.

MARSH GIBBON, a parish in the hundred of Buckingham, Bucks, 4 miles from Bicester, and 52 from London; containing 105 houses and 534 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 21*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.* the patronage of which is in the king.

MARSHWOOD, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Whitchurch, division of Bridport, Dorset, lying between Lyme Regis and Beaminster, 4 miles from Whitchurch; containing 85 houses and 449 inhabitants. It was formerly a chapelry, but the chapel was destroyed in the civil wars.

MARSKE, a parish in Gilling West wapentake, north riding of York, near Richmond, 240 miles from London; containing 42 houses and 239 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.*

MARSTON, a township in the parish of Budworth, hundred of Bucklow, Chester, 2 miles from Northwich, and 175 from London; containing 53 houses and 284 inhabitants.

MARSTON, a parish in the hundred of Lowden, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 4 miles from Grantham, and 115 from London; containing 72 houses and 326 inhabitants.

MARSTON, a parish in the hundred of Bullington, Oxford, 1 mile from Oxford, and 55 from London; containing 43 houses and 264 inhabitants. It is a vicarage.

MARSTON, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of St. Mary's, Stafford, in the hundred of Pirehill, Stafford, 3 miles from Stafford, and 143 from London; containing 18 houses and 99 inhabitants.

MARSTON, a village united with Lea, in the hundred of Hemlingford, Warwick, 3 miles from Coleshill, and 106½ from London. Population included with Lea.

MARSTON, a small hamlet in the parish of Wolston, hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, 8 miles from Coventry, and 90 from London. The population returned with Copston.

MARSTON, a tything in the parish of West Lavington, hundred of Pottern and Canning, Wilts, 3 miles from Devizes, and 90 from London; containing 31 houses and 152 inhabitants.

MARSTON MORTAINE, a parish in the hundred of Redborne stoke, Bedfordshire, 2½ miles from Ampthill, and 48 from London; containing 130 houses and 709 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 33*l.* 17*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of St. John's College, Cambridge.

Marston North, a parish in the hundred of Ashendon, Bucks, 3 miles from Winslow, and 47 from London; containing 77 houses and 478 inhabitants. It is a donative.

Marston Fleet, a parish in the hundred of Ashendon, Bucks, 2½ miles from Aylesbury. The population was omitted to be returned to government. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.*

Marston on Dove, a parish in the hundred of Appletree, Derby, 4 miles from Burton on Trent, and 131 from London; containing 16 houses and 100 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.*, in the patronage of the duke of Devonshire.

Marston Montgomery, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Appletree, Derby, 4 miles from Uttoxeter, and 134 from London; containing 85 houses and 438 inhabitants.

Marston Sicca, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Kiftsgate, Gloucester, 5 miles from Campden, and 95 from London; containing 51 houses and 242 inhabitants.

Marston Long, a hamlet in the parish of Puttenham, hundred of Dacorum, Herts, 3 miles from Tring, and 34 from London; containing 51 houses and 259 inhabitants.

Marston Potters. See Potters Marston, hundred of Sparkenhoe, Leicester.

Marston St. Lawrence, a parish in the hundred of King Sutton, Northampton, 4 miles from Banbury, in Oxfordshire, and 68 from London; containing 82 houses and 371 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 20*l.* and is united with Warkworth.

Marston Trussell, a parish in the hundred of Rothwell, Northampton, 2 miles from Market Harborough, and 85 from London; containing 47 houses and 212 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.*

Marston Bigott, a parish in the hundred of Froome, Somerset, near Froome, 107 miles from London; containiug 65 houses and 366 inhabitants. Here is the seat of the earl of Cork and Orrery.

Marston Magna, a parish in the hundred of Horethorne, Somerset, 5 miles from Sherborn, and 120 from London; containing 51 houses and 303 inhabitants.

Marston Mevsey, a village in the hundred of Highworth and Cricklade, Wilts, 3 miles from Cricklade, and 87 from London; containing 35 houses and 185 inhabitants.

Marston South, a tything in the parish and hundred of Highworth, Wilts, 3 miles from Highworth, and 79 from London; containing 40 houses and 252 inhabitants.

Marston Long, or Hutton Wansley, a parish in the liberties of York Ainstey, east riding of York, 3 miles from York, and 201 from London; containing 69 houses and 399 inhabitants.

Marstow, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Selleck, hundred of Greytree, Hereford, 5 miles from Ross, and 126 from London; containing 19 houses and 97 inhabitants.

Marsworth, a parish in the hundred of Cotslow, Bucks, ¼ mile from Ivinghoe, and 38 miles from London; containing 40 houses and 259 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 9*s.* 5*d.* in the patronage of Trinity College, Cambridge.

Martha St. an extra parochial chapelry in the hundred of Blackheath, Surry, 1½ mile from Guildford, and 31 from London. The chapel stands on the top of a steep hill, and tradition says, that this and St. Catherine's chapel, standing in a similar situation, about a mile distant, were founded by two sisters. The situation is very delightful, and commands a fine view of the neighbouring counties. Here are 12 houses and 112 inhabitants.

Marthall, a township in the parish of Knutsford, hundred of Bucklow, Chester, 2 miles from Knutsford, and 171 from London; containing 47 houses and 260 inhabitants.

Martham, a parish in the hundred of West Flegg, Norfolk, 6 miles from Caistor and 121 from London; containing 103 houses and 639 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Martinhoe, a parish in the hundred of Sherwill, Devon, 9 miles from Barnstaple, and 200 from London; containing 30 houses and 165 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.*

Martin, St. a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Mawgan, hundred of Kertiar, Cornwall, 4 miles from Helstone, and 275 from London; containing 70 houses and 363 inhabitants.

Martin's St. at Stamford bridge, an out parish of the town of Stamford, in Lincolnshire, divided from that town by the river Welland, and lies in the hundred of Nassaburgh, Northampton, 85½ miles from London, by Ware. It is connected with the town of Stamford, by a stone bridge, and contains 107 houses and 1033 inhabitants, of whom 94 were employed in trade, &c. See Stamford.

Martin's St. a parish in the hundred of Oswestry, Salop, 3 miles from Oswestry, and 181 from London; containing 268 houses and 1476 inhabitants, of whom 632 were employed in various trades.

Martin Hussingtree, a parish in the hundred of Pershore, Worcester, 3½ miles from Worcester, and 115 from London; containing 29 houses and 194 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 14*s.* 4*d.*

Martindale, a township and chapelry in the parish of Barton, West ward, Westmoreland, 3 miles from Penrith, and 283 from London; containing 36 houses and 165 inhabitants.

Martin's Isle, or Isle Martin, a small fishing village, in the shire of Ross, 5 miles north of Ullapool.

Martin's St. a parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, united with Cambusmichael, lying on both sides of the Tay, 5 miles north of Perth; containing 212 houses and 1136 inhabitants.

MARTINSLEY, the name of a hundred in Rutland, near the centre of the county to the north of Uppingham.

MARTLESHAM, a parish in the hundred of Carlford, Suffolk, 5 miles from Ipswich, and 75½ from London; containing 43 houses and 269 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 104. 18s. 9d.

MARTLETHWY, a parish in the hundred of Narberth, Pembrokeshire, Wales, 4 miles from Narberth, and 260 from London; containing 120 houses and 558 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

MARTLEY, a parish in the hundred of Doddingtree, Worcester, 7 miles from Worcester, on the banks of the Teme, and 119 from London; containing 173 houses and 1050 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 22*l.* 10*s.*

MARTOCK, the name of a hundred in Somerset, near the southern side of the county, bounded on the west by the Parrot, and on the north by the Yeo.

MARTOCK, a market town and parish in the hundred of Martock, Somerset, 7 miles from Somerton, and 130 from London; containing 352 houses and 2102 inhabitants, of whom 176 were returned as being employed in various trades. The church is a large and elegant structure, and formerly contained some excellent paintings on glass. It has a superb altar-piece, and a good organ. In the center of the town stands the market-place, and near it a handsome fluted column with a dial, being a model of the celebrated pillar of Trajan at Wilton House, the seat of earl Pembroke. The market is on Wednesday and Saturday. Fair 1st August. It is a vicarage, value 15*l.* 10*s.*—Collinson's Somerset.

MARTON, a township in the parish of Prestbury, hundred of Macclesfield, Chester, 3 miles from Congleton, and 166 from London; containing 55 houses and 310 inhabitants.

MARTON, a township to Little Budworth, in the hundred of Eddisbury, Chester, 3 miles from Northwich, and 170 from London, near Delamere forest; containing 78 houses and 431 inhabitants.

MARTON, a township in the parish of Poulton, hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, 2 miles from Poulton, and 238 from London; containing 173 houses and 972 inhabitants.

MARTON, a parish in the hundred of Well, Lindsay division, Lincoln, standing on the Trent, 4 miles from Gainsborough, and 150 from London; containing 75 houses and 374 inhabitants. Here is a ferry over the Trent into Nottinghamshire. At the end of the village are the vestiges of the Roman road to Lincoln. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*

MARTON, a parish in the hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, 4½ miles from Southam, and 86 from London, on the river Leame; containing 52 houses and 371 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 14*s.* 8*d.*

MARTON, a parish in East ward, Westmoreland, 5 miles from Appleby, and 280 from London, on the small river Troutbeck; containing 112 houses and 432 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 21*l.* 15*s.* 7*d.*

MARTON, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Swine, in Holderness wapentake, east riding of York, 5 miles from Hull, and 180 from London; containing 19 houses and 121 inhabitants.

MARTON LE MOOR, a township and chapelry in the parish of Topcliff, Hallikeld wapentake, north riding of York, 5 miles from Aldborough, and 218 from London; containing 34 houses and 166 inhabitants.

MARTON, a parish in Langborough wapentake, north riding of York, 5 miles from Stokesley, and 246 from London; containing 80 houses and 342 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 18*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of the archbishop of York.

MARTON, a parish in Pickering lythe, north riding of York, near Pickering, 225 miles from London; containing 35 houses and 192 inhabitants.

MARTON, a parish in Claro wapentake, west riding of York, 3 miles from Aldborough, and 210 from London; containing 61 houses and 393 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 2*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of St. John's college, Cambridge.

MARTON BROOK, a rivulet in Derbyshire, which falls into the Derwent, near Derby.

MARTORAM LOCH, a small lake in the parish of Coylton, shire of Ayr, Scotland, which discharges itself into the river Ayr. It is about 1 mile long, and ¼ mile broad.

MARWOOD, a parish in the hundred of Braunton, Devon, 3 miles from Barnstaple, and 196 from London; containing 132 houses and 632 inhabitants.

MARWOOD, a hamlet in the parish of Gainford, Darlington ward, Durham, on the river Tees, 7 miles from Barnard Castle, and 246 from London; containing 21 houses and 156 inhabitants.

MARYANNSLEIGH, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Witheridge, Devon, 3 miles from South Moulton, and 180 from London; containing 42 houses and 199 inhabitants.

MARYBURGH, a village in the shire of Inverness, Scotland, but a small distance from Fort William, on the south side of Locheil. It was built soon after Fort Inverlochy, and was first named Gordonsburgh, from the name of its proprietor; but on the accession of the Orange family, it took the name of Fort William, whilst the village was named Mary Burgh in honour of queen Mary. Fort William and Maryburgh contains about 1200 inhabitants, who are chiefly employed in the fisheries.

MARYBURGH, a small village in the parish of Cleish, shire of Kinross, Scotland, 5 miles from Kinross, on the road from North ferry; containing about 100 inhabitants.

MARYCHURCH ST. a parish in the hundred of Haytor, Devon, 2 miles from Torbay, and 190 from London; containing 172 houses and 801 inhabitants.

Marvoultur, a parish in the shire of Kincardine, Scotland, on the south bank of the river Dee, 8 miles from Aberdeen; containing 169 houses and 710 inhabitants. The parish, which extends from the river to the Grampian hills, is rocky, and encumbered with large stones.

Marykirk, a parish in the shire of Kincardine, Scotland, on the north bank of the North Esk, 6 miles from Montrose; containing 360 houses and 1530 inhabitants, of whom 139 were returned employed in various trades. It contains 2 small villages called Luthermoor and Marykirk.

Marylebone St, an extensive parish of the metropolis lying in the hundred of Ossulton, Middlesex, at the north-west side of London; containing 7209 houses and 63,982 inhabitants, viz. 27,012 males, and 36,970 females, of whom 7977 were returned employed in various trades. The remarkable disproportion between the return of male and females in this parish, is accounted for from its being the residence of so many of the nobility and gentry, who keep a number of female servants. The workhouse belonging to this parish is particularly deserving notice, being a most extensive and convenient building, situate on the Paddington new road, erected in 1775; containing on an average about 1000 paupers.—Lysons's Environs of London.

Mary St. Cray. See Cray St. Mary's, Kent.

Mary St, a parish in the Isle of Ely, Cambridgeshire, 4 miles from Peterborough, and 80 from London; containing 221 houses and 1117 inhabitants, of whom 101 were employed in various trades.

Mary St, a parish in the hundred of Hoo, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 5 miles from Rochester, and 34 from London; containing 34 houses and 314 inhabitants.

Marystow, a parish in the hundred of Lifton, Devon, 5 miles from Launceston, and 210 from London; containing 36 houses and 297 inhabitants.

Marytavey, a parish in the hundred of Lifton, Devon, 10 miles from Oakhampton, and 200 from London; containing 58 houses and 376 inhabitants.

Maryton, a parish in the shire of Forfar, Scotland, on the south bank of the South Esk, where it forms the bason of Montrose, 4 miles from Montrose. It is divided into 2 estates, viz. Old Montrose and Dysart, the boundaries between each being a high bank. It contains 173 houses and 596 inhabitants. The soil in general is very fertile.

Masham, a market town and parish in Hang East wapentake, north riding of York, 9 miles from Rippon, and 224 from London, on the river Ure; containing 151 houses and 1012 inhabitants, of whom 243 were returned employed in various trades. It has a small cloth manufactory. In the neighbourhood across Ellingstring moor are the remains of Jervaux abbey, founded in 1145, for Cistertians. At the dissolution, its site was granted to the earl of Lennox. The outward walls appear to have been a mile in circuit. The market is on Tuesday. Fair 18th September. It is a vicarage, value 30*l.* and is in the patronage of Trinity college, Cambridge, with Kirby Malzeard annexed.

Mashbury, a parish in the hundred of Dunmow, Essex, 4½ miles from Chelmsford, and 33 from London; containing 13 houses and 98 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 14*s.* 7*d.* united with Chignall St. James.

Mason, a hamlet in the parish of Ponteland, Castle ward, Northumberland, 7 miles from Newcastle, and 283 from London; containing 21 houses and 112 inhabitants.

Mask. See Marske, Yorkshire.

Masselek, a river in Cardiganshire, Wales, which falls into the Irish sea near Aberystwith.

Massingham Great, a parish in the hundred of Freebridge Lynn, Norfolk, 6 miles from Swaffham, and 99 from London; containing 91 houses and 569 inhabitants. It was formerly a market town, and had a priory of Augustines. Fair, St. Simon and St. Jude. It is a rectory, value 35*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Massingham Little, a parish ¼ of a mile distant from the foregoing; containing 14 houses and 93 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Maston, a small hamlet near Highworth, Wilts.

Matching, or Maching, a parish in the hundred of Harlow, Essex, 6 miles from Epping, and 23 from London; containing 94 houses and 540 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 12*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.* in the nomination of the bishop of London.

Matfen East, a hamlet in the parish of Stamfordham, Tindal ward, Northumberland, 10 miles from Newcastle, and 280 from London; containing 29 houses and 114 inhabitants.

Matfen West, another hamlet in the same parish, ½ a mile distant from the foregoing; containing 50 houses and 222 inhabitants.

Matford, a hamlet in the parish of Offington, near Exeter, Devon.

Matham, a hamlet in the parish of Benenden, hundred of Rolvenden, lathe of Scray, Kent, 3 miles from Tenterden, and 50 from London.

Matharn, a small village in Herefordshire, near the Malvern hills.

Mathern, a parish in the hundred of Caldicot, Monmouth, 2 miles from Chepstow, and 130 from London, near the mouth of the Severn; containing 53 houses and 310 inhabitants. It lies about ½ a mile from St. Pierre, between which and Mathern, runs a small rivulet into the Severn. In a farm house here may be traced the ancient episcopal residence of the bishops of Landaff, where bishop Godwin treasured up many antiquities found at Caerleon; but on the decay of the palace they were mostly removed to Morriscourt, in the neighbourhood of Chepstow. The name is supposed to be derived from Merthur Tewdric, or the martyrdom of Theoderick, a British prince, for whom there is an inscription in the church. Monks Court is supposed to have been originally a religious house. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of the archdeacon and chapter of Landaff.—Coxe's Tour in Monmouthshire.

MATHANAN, a rivulet in the Isle of Anglesey, which falls into the Irish sea below Llanbedrick.

MATHERN, a river in Cardiganshire, which falls into the Tivy, at Llanbeder.

MATHON, a parish in the hundred of Pershore, Worcester, 7 miles from Worcester, on the east side of the Malvern hills, and 115 from London; containing 89 houses and 547 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Westminster.

MATHRAVAL, or MATHRAFEL, in Montgomery, Wales, 5 miles north-west of Welsh Pool, supposed to have been the site of an ancient city called Mediolanum, now reduced to a single farm-house, on the spot where the castle stood, which was burnt by king John.

MATLASK, a parish in the hundred of North Erpingham, Norfolk, 5 miles from Aylsham, and 122 from London; containing 23 houses and 166 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* the patronage of which is in the king, as duke of Lancaster.

MATLOCK, a parish in the hundred of Wirksworth, Derby, situated on the banks of the river Derwent, 12 miles from Buxton, and 144 from London; containing 475 houses and 2354 inhabitants, viz. 1084 males, and 1270 females, of whom 482 were returned employed in various trades, &c. chiefly in the lead-mines and cotton manufactures. The village stands about 1¼ mile from the Matlock bath, and has a neat stone bridge over the river. The church is small but neat. The village, constituting what is called the Bath, consists principally of 3 inns, known by the name of the Old Bath, the New Bath, and the Hotel, and of 2 commodious lodging-houses, all on the south-east side of the Derwent, offering accommodation for about 500 visitors. The buildings are elegantly constructed of stone. The warm springs were first discovered in 1698, and were soon after enclosed, and buildings erected for the accommodation of visitants. Two other springs have since been discovered about 400 yards from the old ones, and they are now a place of considerable resort during the season, which commences in April, and ends in October. The waters in quality much resemble those of Bristol, but are not so warm, their heat being about 68 degrees; they are recommended in glandular affections, rheumatism, and in the early stages of consumption; the usual time for drinking the waters being before breakfast and before dinner. About a mile distant stands what is called the Boat-house, built on the base of a rock, with a good garden and an assembly-room. The walks, and picturesque scenery on the banks of the Derwent, are beyond description, being beautifully diversified with rugged rocks at intervals, contrasted by the finest verdure. At Cromford, on the bank of the river, is established a cotton manufactory, which was the first mill erected by sir Richard Arkwright, who was originally a barber, but of the greatest mechanical genius. After the establishment of his machinery he built an elegant mansion for his residence, in a delightful spot near the extremity of Matlock dale. The house is of white stone, and the gardens are very tastefully laid out. Near the western bank of the Derwent is a petrifying spring. Among the curiosities shewn by the keeper of the spring, is an old wig and hair broom petrified. The spars of Derbyshire, here form a considerable traffic; which being turned into vases and chimney ornaments, bear a variegated polish equal to the finest porphyry. Matlock from the time of Edward I. to the reign of Charles I., formed a part of the duchy of Lancaster. Although it has no market, provisions of all kinds are plentiful. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* and is in the patronage of the dean of Lincoln.—Pilkington's Views in Derby.

MATSHALL. See MATTISHALL, Norfolk.

MATRAVERS NORTH and SOUTH, two small hamlets in the parish of Loders, hundred of Eggarton, division of Bridport, Dorset, 3 miles from Bridport.

MATSON, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Dudstone and King's Barton, Gloucester, 2 miles from Gloucester, and 108 from London; containing 8 houses and 51 inhabitants.

MATTERDALE, a township in the parish of Greystock, in Leath ward, Cumberland, 7 miles from Penrith, and 290 from London; containing 61 houses and 297 inhabitants.

MATTERSEY, a parish in the hundred of Basset Law, Notts, 3 miles from Bawtry, and 150 from London. It contains 71 houses and 327 inhabitants, and is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of the archbishop of York. Near Bawtry is a stone bridge over the river Idle.

MATTINGLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Hartley Waspall, hundred of Holdshot, division of Basingstoke, Hants, 7 miles from Basingstoke, and 38 from London; it contains 39 houses and 248 inhabitants.

MATTISHALL, a parish in the hundred of Midford, Norfolk, 3 miles from East Dereham, and 100 from London; containing 113 houses and 751 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 7*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of Gonvil and Caius college, Cambridge.

MATTISHALL BURGH, a hamlet to the foregoing, ½ mile distant; containing 25 houses and 173 inhabitants.

MAUGHAN'S ST. a parish and curacy in the hundred of Skenfreth, Monmouth, near the sea shore, 4 miles from Monmouth; containing 33 houses and 132 inhabitants.

Maulden, a parish in the hundred of Redborn stoke, Bedford, 2 miles from Ampthill, and 44 from London; containing 125 houses and 738 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*

Maulden, a parish in the hundred of Kingston, Surrey, 3 miles from Kingston and 15 from London; containing 24 houses and 210 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 5*s.* united with Chesilden.

Maulswick, a hamlet in the parish of Newent, Gloucestershire.

Maumbury. See Melcomb Regis.

Maumbury, the name given by the inhabitants to the amphitheatre, a celebrated Roman antiquity, first discovered by sir Christopher Wren; standing on a plain ¼ of a mile south-west of Dorchester, on a gentle ascent alongside the Roman highway. On the highest part is a terrace 12 feet broad, exclusive of the parapet. There are 3 ways leading to it; a walk 8 feet broad gradually ascending to the top, from the ends upon the longest diameter to its greatest elevation in the middle and upon the short diameter, where it reaches half way to the whole series of the seats. The receptacle for the wild beasts was at the upper end, where are still vaults under the body of the work. It covers an acre of ground, and was originally 140 feet in diameter the shortest, and 220 feet the longest way. It was capable of containing 129,600 persons, and is supposed to have been constructed by Agricola. Several Roman coins have been dug up within it.

Maunby, a township in the parish of Kirby Wisk, Gilling East wapentake, north riding of York, 4 miles from North Allerton, and 225 from London; containing 49 houses and 244 inhabitants.

Mavestone, a parish in the hundred of Offlow, Stafford, 5 miles from Litchfield, and 129 from London; containing 71 houses and 486 inhabitants.

Mawdesley, a township in the parish of Croston, hundred of Leyland, Lancaster, 4 miles from Chorley, and 205 from London; containing 119 houses and 659 inhabitants.

Mawgan, a parish in the hundred of Kerriar, Cornwall, 2 miles from Helstone, and 278 from London; containing 127 houses and 785 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 35*l.* 10*s.* 1*d.*

Mawgan's St. a parish in the hundred of Pydar, Cornwall, 2 miles from St. Columb, and 250 from London; containing 100 houses and 543 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 26*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Mawgersbury, a hamlet in the parish of Stow in the Wold, Gloucestershire.

Mawnan, a parish in the hundred of Kerriar, Cornwall, 3 miles from Falmouth, and 273 from London; containing 85 houses and 427 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.*

Maws St. a borough town in the parish of St. Just, hundred of Powder, Cornwall, 1 mile from Falmouth, and 272 from London, on the east side of Falmouth harbour. The town is not incorporated, although it has sent 2 members to parliament ever since the year 1562. It consists only of one street under a hill, fronting the sea. King Henry VIII. erected a castle here opposite to Pendennis, for the security of Falmouth. It is chiefly inhabited by fishermen, and is governed by a portreeve, who is complimented with the title of mayor. Fair, the Friday after St. Luke's day.—Polwhele's Cornwall.

Maxey, a parish in the hundred of Nassaburgh, or Peterborough liberty, Northampton, standing on the river Welland, opposite to West Deeping, 90 miles from London; containing 57 houses and 343 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Peterborough.

Maxtock, a parish in the hundred of Hemlingford, Warwick, 3 miles from Coleshill, and 100 from London; containing 64 houses and 355 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Maxton, a parish in the shire of Roxburgh, Scotland, on the south bank of the river Tweed, 4 miles from Melrose; containing 82 houses and 368 inhabitants. In the neighbourhood are the remains of an old fortified tower, and of a Roman encampment and causeway.

Maxworth, a hamlet in the parish of North Petherwin, hundred of Black Torrington, Devon, 3 miles from Launceston, and 216 from London. The population is included with North Petherwin.

May, a small island in the mouth of the Frith of Forth, Scotland, lying 6 miles east of Anstruther Wester, being about 1 mile long, and ½ of a mile broad. Here are the ruins of a priory, and St. Adrian's chapel, the shrine of whose patron was formerly much resorted to in cases of barrenness. On a tower 45 feet high, is erected a light-house, to which vessels pay 2*d.* per ton in passing the island. It is much frequented by sea fowl, and produces numbers of rabbits.

May, a river in Carnarvonshire, Wales, which falls into the Irish channel, 3 miles from Crickheith.

May, a river in Perthshire, rising in the Ochil hills, and falls into the Erne near Dupplin castle. On its banks is the beautiful mansion of Invermay, and in its course it forms several romantic water-falls, particularly the Humble Bumble, so named from its noise, and at the Linn of Muckarsey it falls over a perpendicular rock of 30 feet.

May, a river which rises in the county of Mayo, Ireland, and forms the boundaries of Mayo and Sligo, and falls into the Atlantic ocean at Sligo bay. On the west side of it stands the port town of Killala.

Maybole, a parish in the shire of Ayr, Scotland, in the district of Carrick, watered by the rivers Doon and Girvan; containing 537 houses and 3162 inhabitants, viz. 1554 males, and 1608 females, of whom 1312 were returned employed in trade and manufacture, principally in the making of blankets and coarse woollen cloth. The town of Maybole stands on a small eminence, with hills rising entirely round it, defending it on all sides from the winds. It is 8 miles from Ayr, and 70 from Edinburgh; and is particularly noted for the health and longevity of its inhabitants. Near the town is an old building called the College, the ground round it being used as the burial place of the Cassilis family, to whom the grant of a burgh of barony was given in 1516. The mansion of the earl of Cassilis is pleasantly seated on the banks of the Girvan.

Mayfield, a parish in the hundred of Totmonslow, Stafford, 2 miles from Ashborn, and 140 from London; containing 115 houses and 626 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Mayfield, a parish in the hundred of Lexfield Pelham, rape of Pevensey, Sussex, 5 miles from Uckfield, and 42 from London; containing 269 houses and 1849 inhabitants, of whom 115 were returned employed in various trades. Here are the remains of St. Dunstan's palace, which once belonged to the archbishop of Canterbury. It formerly had a market. Fairs, 30th May and 13th November. It is a vicarage, value 17*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Mayland, a parish in the hundred of Dengy, Essex, 6 miles from Maldon, and 40 from London; containing 21 houses and 171 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the governors of St. Bartholomew's hospital.

Mayland, a village near Bishop Auckland, Durham.

Maynooth, a neat and well-built town in the county of Kildare, province of Leinster, Ireland, situated 12 miles west of Dublin.

Mayo, a county in the province of Connaught, Ireland, bounded on the west by the Atlantic ocean, on the north and north-east by the ocean and Sligo, on the east and south-east by Roscommon and Galway, and on the south by Galway; being about 50 miles long, and 44 broad; containing 68 parishes, about 27,970 houses, and 140,000 inhabitants. The western coast is mountainous, and scarcely inhabited, but the interior produces excellent pasturage, and is watered by several lakes and rivers. On the coast are some good harbours. Mayo, which was the county town, is gone to decay. Its chief town now is Ballinrobe, but the assizes are held at Castle-bar.

Mealfourmonie, or Mealfourvonie, a mountain in the shire of Inverness, Scotland, on the west side of Loch Ness, 3060 feet above the level of the sea. It is the first land-mark seen on entering the Moray Frith. On the summit is a lake of very cold water, about 30 fathoms long, and 6 broad, which never freezes.

Mealrigg, a hamlet in the parish of Broomfield, Allerdale ward, below Derwent, Cumberland, 7 miles from Wigton, and 305 from London. The population is included with Langrigg.

Meare, a parish in the hundred of Glaston, Somersetshire, 2 miles from Glastonbury, and 129 from London; containing 125 houses and 753 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.*

Mean East and West. See East Meon, Hants.

Mearns. See Kincardineshire, Scotland.

Mearns, a parish in the shire of Renfrew, Scotland, lying between the towns of Glasgow and Paisley, from which it is distant 2 miles. It contains 265 houses and 1714 inhabitants, of whom 320 were returned employed in various trades. The land in this parish chiefly consists of excellent pasturage, and there are 3 small lakes in it. The castle of Mearns is a fine piece of antiquity; it is a large square tower seated on a rocky eminence, surrounded by a strong wall and ditch, the entrance being secured by a drawbridge. In the neighbourhood are several elegant modern mansions.

Measham, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Repton and Gressley, Derby, 3 miles from Ashby de la Zouch, and 113 from London; containing 210 houses and 1036 inhabitants.

Measham, a parish in the hundred of Reigate, Surry, 3½ miles from Reigate, and 20 from London; containing 92 houses and 481 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 22*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury.

Meath, a county in the province of Leinster, Ireland, bounded on the north by Cavan and Louth, on the east by the Irish channel, on the south by Kildare and Dublin, and on the west by Longford and West Meath. It is about 30 miles long from north to south, and from 25 to 35 broad from east to west; containing 147 parishes, about 22,468 houses and 112,400 inhabitants. The country is extremely fertile and pleasant, abounding with corn, and gives pasturage to innumerable flocks and herds of cattle. There is a considerable manufacture of coarse linens established in different parts of the county. Trim is the county town.

Meath, West, a county in the province of Leinster, Ireland, bounded on the west by Longford and Roscommon, on the north by Longford and Cavan, on the east by Meath and Kildare, and on the south by King's County. It is 38 miles long and 21 broad, contains 62 parishes, about 13,700 houses and 70,000 inhabitants: besides Lough Ree, which is formed by the Shannon on its western extremity, it is watered by a number of other lakes, as Lough Lein, Derrinagh, Iron, Ennel, Drin, and Bannean Annagh, and several small rivers. It is in general very fertile, particularly in pasturage, the greatest attention being paid to the grazing, and dairy farming, notwithstanding which, it produces much more corn than serves for the consumption of its population. The chief town is Mullingar, which is the second great fair in Ireland for wool. The assizes for this county are held at Mullingar.

Meavy, a parish in the hundred of Roborough, Devon, 3 miles from Tavistock, and 205 from London; containing 37 houses and 239 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 5*s.* in the patronage of the king.

Medbourne, a parish in the hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 4 miles from Market Harboro', and 85 from London; containing 105 houses and 441 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 55*l.* 14*s.* united with Holt, in the patronage of St. John's College, Cambridge.

Medlar, a township in the parish of Kirkham, hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, 2 miles from Kirkham, and 227 from London; containing 39 houses and 216 inhabitants.

Medley, a small village in the west riding of York, 5 miles north-east of Wakefield, situated between the rivers Aire and Calder, near which the latter falls into the Aire.

Medlock, a river in Lancashire, which falls into the Irwell, near Manchester.

Medmenham, a parish in the hundred of Desborough, Bucks, 3 miles from Marlow, and 34 from London; containing 58 houses, and 284 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 7*s.* 1*d.*

Medomsley, a township and chapelry in the parish of Lanchester, in Chester ward, Durham, 5 miles from Durham, and 267 from London; containing 137 houses and 754 inhabitants.

Medringham. See Methringham, Lincoln.

Medsted, a parish in the hundred of Fawley, Hants, 3 miles from Winchester, and 62 from London; containing 61 houses and 393 inhabitants.

Medway, a river which falls into the Thames at Sheerness. It rises in the wealds of Sussex, and runs north-easterly towards Maidstone, whence it passes to Rochester and Chatham, where it is navigable for ships of any burthen. Trading vessels can go up it to Rochester bridge, and barges and boats even higher than Maidstone. It is about 17 miles from its mouth at Sheerness to Rochester-bridge, and in this part the channel is so deep, as to render it one of the best and safest harbours in the world. Ships of 80 guns can ride afloat at low water within musket-shot of the bridge: but in the severe tempest in 1703, the Royal Charlotte was driven ashore here and lost. On the shore are 2 castles for its defence, the one at Upnor, the other at Gillingham, beside 2 or 3 mounted batteries. In 1667, the Dutch fleet sailed up to Blackstakes, and 7 of their largest vessels to Upnor, meeting no opposition from the unserviceable state of the batteries, where they carried off the Royal Charles of 100 guns; and burned several others. The principal place of its defence now is the Castle at Sheerness.

Medwin, a small river in the shire of Lanark, Scotland, which rises in the parish of Dunsyne. Near its source it is so divided by a mill-pond, that one half of its waters falls into the Clyde, and the other into the Tweed.

Medina, a river in the Isle of Wight, between the towns of East and West Cowes, on the north shore of the island, which runs as far as Newport. West Cowes is the principal port of the island.

Meeching. See Newhaven, Sussex.

Mees, a hamlet in the parish of Quinton, hundred of Kiftsgate, Gloucester, near Campden.

Meer, a parish united with Caverswall, in the hundred of Totmonslow, Stafford, 3 miles from Cheadle, and 147 from London. Population included with Caverswall.

Meer. See Mare, Stafffordshire.

Meer. See Mere, Chester and Wilts.

Meers Ashby, a parish in the hundred of Hamfordshoe, Northampton, 2½ miles from Wellingborough, and 68 from London; containing 83 houses and 369 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.*

Meesden, a parish in the hundred of Edwintree, Herts, 5 miles from Standon, and 31 from London; containing 20 houses and 122 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Meeson, a hamlet in the parish of Bolas, hundred of South Bradford, Salop, 5 miles from Newport, and 148 from London. Population included with Bolas.

Meeth, a parish in the hundred of Shebbear, Devon, 8 miles from Hatherleigh, and 203 from London; containing 43 houses and 257 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*

Megget, a parish in the shire of Peebles, Scotland, united with Lyne. See Lyne.

Megget, a river in the shire of Peebles, which passes through the parish of Megget, and falls into St. Mary's Loch, after a course of 8 miles.

Meig, a river in Shropshire, which falls into the Severn, at Shrewsbury.

Meig, a river in the shire of Ross, Scotland, which rises near the parish of Lochcarron, and falls into the Lichart.

Meigle, a parish in the shire of Angus, Scotland, lying in the center of Strathmore. The town of Meigle stands in the center of the parish, on a small rivulet of the same name, between two turnpike roads, 12 miles from Dundee, 6½ from Cupar, and 5½ from Glamiss. The parish contains 220 houses and 1448 inhabitants, of whom about 300 are resident in the town. It is very ancient, and has two annual fairs which are well attended. In the neighbourhood are 3 beautiful seats, particularly Belmont Castle, which is fitted up in the most elegant and commodious manner; the others are Drum- kilho and Kinloch, both very pleasantly situated. In the church-yard are the remains of the sepulchral monument of Vanora, said to have been the wife of prince Arthur of England, who was taken prisoner by the Scots, and died at Angus. The monument, which is now nearly destroyed, was composed of many stones, covered with a variety of hieroglyphic figures, of which Mr. Pennant has given accurate drawings.—Pennant's Tour.

Meikly Loch, a lake in the parish of Urquhart, Inverness, Scotland, about one mile long, and half a mile broad; discharging itself into Loch Ness, near the church of Kilmore, by the small river Enmerick.

Melbecks, a township in the parish of Grinton, Gilling West wapentake, north riding of York.

Melbourn, a parish in the hundred of Armingford, Cambridge, 2 miles from Royston, and 49 from London; containing 130 houses and 819 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 19*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Ely.

Melbourn, a parish in the hundred of Repton and Gresley, Derby, 6 miles from Derby, and 120 from London; containing 352 houses and 1861 inhabitants, of whom 363 were returned employed in various trades. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Carlisle.

Melbourne, a township in the parish of Thornton, Holme Beacon division, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 8 miles from Howden, and 192 from London; containing 52 houses and 308 inhabitants. At this village is the seat of sir Henry Vavasor, bart.

Melbury Abbas, a parish in the hundred of Six Penny Handley, division of Sturston, Dorset, 2 miles from Shaftesbury, and 102 from London; containing 55 houses and 302 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 18*s.* 1*d.*

Melbury Bubb, a parish in the hundred of Yetminster, division of Sherborn, Dorset, 8 miles from Sherborn, and 124 from London; containing 16 houses and 107 inhabitants.

Melbury Osborn, a parish in the same hundred and division, 2 miles distant from the preceding, containing 65 houses and 335 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

Melbury Sampford, a hamlet in the parish of Melbury Bubb, hundred of Tollesford, division of Dorchester, Dorset, 5 miles from Beaminster, and 130 from London; containing 5 houses and 32 inhabitants.

Melchbourn, a parish in the hundred of Stodden, Bedford, 11 miles from Bedford, and 62 from London; containing 40 houses and 229 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* in the patronage of lord St. John.

Melcomb Horsey, a parish in the hundred of Whitway, division of Sherborn, Dorset, 2 miles from Milton Abbey, and 117 from London; containing 18 houses and 118 inhabitants.

Melcomb Regis, a borough and market town in the parish of Radipple, hundred of Colliford Tree, division of Dorchester, Dorset, 127 miles from London, situated at the mouth of the river Wey, which separates it from Weymouth, over which river there is a wooden bridge of 17 arches. It contains 423 houses and 2350 inhabitants, viz. 962 males, and 1388 females, of whom 425 were returned employed in various trades. It has a good market-place and town-hall, in which the members of the corporation of Weymouth attend public business. This borough has sent two members to parliament ever since the reign of Edward I. It is united to Weymouth as a sea port, corporation, and market-town. It was appointed one of the staple towns for wool in the reign of Edward III, and in the next reign the French burnt it, when it was rendered so desolate that the remaining inhabitants prayed and obtained a discharge from the customs. On account of its quarrels with Weymouth, in the reign of Henry VI. its privileges as a port were removed to Poole, but in that of queen Elizabeth they were restored by act of parliament. In the east part of the town, in Maiden street, stood a priory and nunnery. The joint corporation of Weymouth and Melcombe Regis consists of a mayor, recorder, two bailiffs, aldermen, and 24 capital burgesses; and whoever has been mayor is afterwards alderman for life. For market days, &c. see Weymouth.

Meldon, a parish in Castle ward, Northumberland, 5½ miles from Morpeth, and 92 from London; containing 12 houses and 54 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 7*s.* 11*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Durham.

Meldreth, a parish in the hundred of Armingford, Cambridge, 3 miles from Royston, and 41 from London; containing 73 houses and 444 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 15*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Ely.

Meldrum, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, 15 miles from Aberdeen, containing 410 houses and 1530 inhabitants.

Meldrum Old, a town in the parish of Meldrum, shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, 17 miles from Aberdeen, on the road to Banff; containing 783 inhabitants. It is a burgh of barony, and is governed by two bailies, elected by the superior. It has a good weekly market, and a fair in January.

Melford Long, a parish in the hundred of Babergh, Suffolk, near the river Stour, 3 miles from Sudbury, and 57 from London; containing 453 houses and 2204 inhabitants, viz. 1031 males, and 1173 females, of whom 1837 were returned employed in various trades. The village is very pleasant and nearly a mile in length, from which it is called Long Melford. The church is a beautiful Gothic building. In the neighbourhood are several very elegant mansions. It has a fair on Whit Tuesday. The living is a rectory, value 28*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*

Melgam, a considerable stream in the shire of Angus, Scotland, which rises in the parish of Glentrathen, and forming a cataract near the church of that parish, falls into the Isla under the walls of Airly castle.

Melingy Court, a village in Glamorganshire, Wales, 7 miles from Neath near Cadoxtone, on the road to Brecon, where there is one of the finest water-falls in the principality.

Melkeridge, a hamlet in the parish of Haltwhistle, Tindal ward, Northumberland, 1 mile from Haltwhistle, and 313 miles from London; containing 43 houses and 246 inhabitants.

Melksham, the name of a hundred in Wilts, lying toward the western side of the county, and west of Devizes.

Melksham, a market town and parish in the hundred of Melksham, Wilts, 7 miles from Devizes, and 99 from London; containing 759 houses and 4030 inhabitants, viz. 1864 males, and 2166 females, of whom 1300 were returned employed in various trades and manufactures, and 570 in agriculture. Most of the houses are well built of freestone, but not regular. It has one parish church, and three newbuilt meeting houses for quakers, independants, and baptists. With respect to its manufactures, it is chiefly noted for its broad cloths. It has a market every other Thursday for cattle, but no regular market for provisions. The living is a vicarage, value 33*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Salisbury.

Melliden, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Prestaign, Flintshire, Wales, 9 miles from Holywell; containing 87 houses and 427 inhabitants.

Mellins, a parish in the hundred of Lonsdale, Lancaster, near the river Grata, 10¾ miles from Lancaster, and 250 from London; containing 30 houses and 156 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of the king.

Melling, a township in the parish of Halsall, hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 7 miles from Prescot, and 207 from London; containing 66 houses and 402 inhabitants.

Mellion, St. a parish in the hundred of East, Cornwall, 4 miles from Saltash, and 224 from London; containing 54 houses and 284 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*

Mellis, a hamlet in the parish of Wenhaston, hundred of Hartismere, Suffolk, 2½ miles from Eye, and 86 from London; containing 52 houses and 371 inhabitants.

Mellis, a parish 2 miles from Frome Selwood, in Somersetshire. See Mells.

Mellons, St. a parish in the hundred of Wentloodge, Monmouth, 7 miles from Newport, and 151 from London; containing 104 houses and 451 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 1*s.* 5*d.* united with Lanedern.

Mellor, a township in the parish of Glossop, hundred of High Peak, Derby, 6 miles from Chapel-en-le-frith, and 172 from London; containing 270 houses and 1670 inhabitants, of whom 945 were returned employed in various trades.

Mellor, a township in the parish and hundred of Blackburn, Lancaster, 2 miles from Blackburn, and 211 from London; containing 225 houses and 1439 inhabitants, of whom 577 were returned employed in various trades.

Mells, the name of a hundred in Somerset, on the eastern side of the county, and to the west of Froome.

Mells, a parish in the hundred of Kilmersden, Somerset, 2 miles from Froome, and 107 from London, lying between the Froome canal and a branch of the Avon; it contains 236 houses and 1113 inhabitants. The remains of two Roman encampments are observable near Newbury hill. This parish abounds with coals, lead, pipe-clay, manganese, and fullers-earth. Here is a charity-school, and a small manufactory of broad-cloth. Fairs, Monday after Trinity week, and Michaelmas-day, for cattle, sheep, and pedlary. The living is a vicarage, value 33*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.* with Lye chapel annexed.

Mellyndyder, a river in Denbighshire, which falls into the Conway, near Caerhaven.

Melmerby, a parish in Leath ward, Cumberland, 6 miles from Penrith, and 292 from London; containing 44 houses and 223 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 1*s.* 5*d.*

Melmerby, a hamlet to the parish of Coverham, Hang West wapentake, north riding of York, 3 miles from Middleham, and 2 5 from London; containing 19 houses and 106 inhabitants.

Melmerby, a township in the parish of Wath, in Hallikeld wapentake, north riding of York, 4 miles from Ripon, and 226 from London; containing 36 houses and 229 inhabitants.

Melrose, a considerable town in the shire of Roxburgh, Scotland, on the north side of the Eildon hills, about a mile long, intersected by the river Tweed. The parish contains 1355 houses and 6947 inhabitants, viz. 3300 males, and 3647 females, of whom 668 were returned employed in various trades and manufactures, principally in those of linen and woollen cloth. It is 4 miles from Galashiels, and 30 from Edinburgh; many of the houses are well built and pleasantly situated. It is a free burgh of barony, with a magistracy elected by the burgesses. About one mile from the town is the site of old Melrose abbey, said to have been the first that was established by the Culdees in this part of the kingdom; all that now remains of it has been converted into a small house. At the village of Newstead, a mile further, was another, called the Red abbey. Between these is the bridge of Drygange, thrown over the Tweed at its junction with the Lauder. A short distance from the town, on the south side of the Tweed, stands the later abbey of Melrose, formerly one of the largest and most magnificent in the kingdom, and the admiration of strangers; it was founded in 1136 by David, king of Scotland, and was built in the form of a cross. The east window, under which was the high altar, is of beautiful sculpture. The niches, pillars, pedestals, &c. are of exquisite workmanship, and adorned with curious sculptured figures.

Melsonby, a parish in Gilling West wapentake, north riding of York, 4 miles from Richmond, and 238 from London; containing 88 houses and 338 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.* in the patronage of University college, Oxford.

Melta, a river in Brecknockshire, Wales, which falls into the Hepsey, near Istradwelthy.

Meltham, a township and chapelry in the parish of Aldmondbury, Aybrig wapentake, west riding of York, 4½ miles from Huddersfield, and 183 from London; containing 237 houses and 1278 inhabitants, of whom 538 were returned employed in various trades and manufactures.

Melton, a parish in the hundred of Wilford, Suffolk, 1 mile from Woodbridge, and 78 miles from London; containing 63 houses and 501 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Ely.

Melton, a hamlet in the parish of Welton, in the wapentake of Howdenshire, east riding of York; 6 miles from Hull, 20 from Howden, and 180 from London; containing 13 houses and 98 inhabitants. This village lies on the banks of the Humber, and several of the opulent merchants of Hull have country houses at it.

Melton Constable, a parish in the hundred of Holt, Norfolk, 5 miles from Holt, and 117 from London; containing 19 houses and 149 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* united with Burgh Parva.

Melton High, a parish and curacy in the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of York, 4 miles from Rotherham, and 162 from London; containing 32 houses and 165 inhabitants.

Melton-Magna, a parish in the hundred of Humble Yard, Norfolk, 3 miles from Norwich, and 106 from London; containing 58 houses and 329 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Melton-Parva, a parish half a mile distant from the foregoing, containing 22 houses and 189 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of Emanuel College, Cambridge.

Melton Mowbray, a market town and parish in the hundred of Framland, Leicester, 8½ miles from Oakham, 15 from Nottingham, and 104½ from London; standing on the river Eye, over which it has 2 good bridges, and contains 342 houses and 1776 inhabitants, of whom 358 were returned employed in various trades and manufactures. The church is a large and handsome structure in the form of a cross. The houses are in general well built, and it has a good free-school. The market is on Tuesday, and is one of the largest in the kingdom for cattle. Fairs, first Tuesday after January 17th, Whit-Tuesday, and 21st of August. It is a vicarage, value 16*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*

Melton Ross, a parish in the hundred of Yarborough, Lindsay division, Lincoln, near Barton on Humber, and 168 miles from London; containing 19 houses and 102 inhabitants. The church is a curacy, belonging to the prebend thereof in Lincoln cathedral.

Meltonby, a hamlet in the parish of Pocklington, in the division of Wilton Beacon, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 1½ mile from Pocklington, and 197 miles from London; containing 7 houses and 41 inhabitants.

Melverley, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Oswestry, Salop, 9 miles from Shrewsbury, and 173 from London; containing 40 houses and 216 inhabitants.

Melwood, High and Low, two small hamlets in the parish of Owston, Manley wapentake, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 4 miles from Gainsborough. Population included with Owston.

Membris, a hamlet in the parish of Walcott, hundred of Pershore, Worcester, 2 miles from Pershore, and 105 from London.

Membury, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Axminster, Devon, 3 miles from Axminster, and 150 from London; containing 112 houses and 709 inhabitants. Fair 10th of August.

Menabilly, a village 2 miles distant from Fowey, Cornwall.

Menag, a peninsula in Cornwall, near Helstone, south of the rivers Hel and Lo, and washed on the east, south, and west, by the sea. It is about 8 miles long, and in the southern part of the hundred of Kerriar, containing several villages. The extremity of this peninsula is the Lizard point.

Menai, Straight of, dividing Anglesey from the other parts of Wales. At Plasnewydd, about one mile distant on the right, is the elegant mansion of the earl of Uxbridge.

Mendham, East and West, the two divisions of the Isle of Wight, commonly called East and West Medina, being divided by the river Medina, which runs from Cowes.

Mendham, a parish in the hundred of Hoxne, Suffolk, on the banks of the river Waveney, 2 miles from Harleston, and 98 from London; containing 64 houses and 541 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.*

Mendham, a hamlet to the foregoing, in the hundred of Earsham, Norfolk, situate on the opposite side of the river Waveney, containing 43 houses and 196 inhabitants.

Mendip Hills, Somerset, famous for the produce of lead and coals. They stretch nearly from Frome on the east, to Axbridge, and from Bedminster on the north, to Glastonbury. Among these hills rises the river Frome. They supply Bath, Wells, Shepton Mallet, Frome, and even Bristol and Wadminster with coals. The lead ore is not so easily melted as that of Derbyshire, and is chiefly manufactured into bullets and shot. These hills were anciently called Moinedrop, having many knotts upon them of steep ascent, and on the highest part is a considerable flat containing some swamps which often prove dangerous to travellers. They are now covered for a vast extent with heath and fern, and several large flocks of sheep are kept upon them.

MENDLESHAM, a parish in the hundred of Hartismere, Suffolk, 18 miles from Bury, and 82 from London, near the rise of the river Deben; containing 179 houses and 1054 inhabitants, of whom 246 were returned employed in various trades. It is situated in a deep miry soil, and is altogether a miserable place, but its church is a handsome structure. It was formerly a market town. Toward the latter end of the 17th century there was dug up here an ancient silver crown, which weighed 60 ounces, supposed to have belonged to one of the kings of the East Angles. Fair, on Holy Thursday. It has a vicarage, value 14*l.* 9*s.* 2*d.*

MENGALAY or MINGALAY, an island belonging to the Hebrides, lying 12 miles from the Isle of Barray, to which parish it belongs. It is about 2 miles long and nearly the same broad, containing 8 houses and 44 inhabitants. Close to this island is a very high rock with a rich pasturage on its summit. The inhabitants, at the risk of their lives, climb to the top, and by means of ropes pull up their sheep after them, which they leave there during the season. It is frequented by innumerable flocks of sea fowl during the breeding season.

MENHINIOT, a parish in the hundred of East, Cornwall, 2 miles from Liskard, and 220 from London; containing 150 houses and 918 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 21*l.* 15*s.* 4*d.*

MENMUIR, a parish in the shire of Forfar, Scotland, 4 miles from Brechin, and 8 from Forfar; containing 85 houses and 591 inhabitants. It is watered by several considerable streams, and the northern part is very hilly being covered with heath. The hill of Caterthun is remarkable for a very strong fortification on its summit, consisting of an immense quantity of loose stones, arranged in an oval form; round the external base is a deep ditch. The area is covered with a fine soft grass, whilst without the ring it is all heath and moss: in the center is a fine spring of the coldest water.

MENNYTHORPE, a township in the parish of Weston, in Buckrose wapentake, east riding of York, 2 miles from Malton, and 115 from London; containing 19 houses and 104 inhabitants.

MENTHORPE, a township in the parish of Hemmingborough, in the wapentake of Ouze and Derwent, east riding of York, 5 miles from Howden, and 185 from London; containing 9 houses and 61 inhabitants. There is a ferry over the river Derwent at this village.

MENTMORE, a parish in the hundred of Cotslow, Bucks, 2½ miles from Ivinghoe, and 136 from London; containing 23 houses and 148 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 17*s.*

MENVER, ST. a parish in the hundred of Trigg, Cornwall, 2 miles from Padstow, and 141 from London; containing 157 houses and 788 inhabitants.

MENWITH, a township in the parish of Hampsthwaite, Claro wapentake, west riding of York, 4 miles from Ripley, and 218 from London; containing 100 houses and 554 inhabitants.

MEOLE BRACE, a parish in the liberties of Shrewsbury, Salop, 2 miles from Shrewsbury, and 160 from London; containing 176 houses and 1253 inhabitants, of whom 873 were returned employed in various trades and manufactures. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.*

MEOLS GREAT and LITTLE, two hamlets in the parish of West Kirby, hundred of Wirrall, Chester, 7 miles from Liverpool, and 198 from London, lying at the extremity of the county, between the rivers Dee and Mersey; the one containing 24 houses and 140 inhabitants; the other 25 houses and 125 inhabitants.

MEONSTOKE, the name of a hundred in Hampshire, toward the eastern side of the county, near Bishop Waltham.

MEONSTOKE, a parish in the hundred of Meonstoke, division of Portsdown, Hants, 3 miles from Bishop Waltham, and 64 from London; containing 50 houses and 289 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 46*l.* 2*s.* 11½*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Winchester.

MEON WEST, a parish in the hundred and division of Fawley, Hants, 5 miles from Bishop Waltham, and 58½ from London; containing 83 houses and 536 inhabitants.

MEOPHAM, a parish in the hundred of Toltingtrough, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 4 miles from Gravesend, and 26 from London; containing 108 houses and 748 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 16*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury.

MEPPERSHALL, a parish in the hundred of Clifdon, Bedford, 4½ miles from Biggleswade, and 40 from London; containing 51 houses and 309 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 22*l.* in the patronage of St. John's College, Cambridge.

MARCASTON, a hamlet in the parish of Mugginton, hundred of Appletree, Derby, 4½ miles from Derby, and 130 from London; containing 29 houses and 153 inhabitants.

MERCOTT, a small village united with Fencott, in the hundred of Ploughley, Oxford, on the borders of Otf-Moor, 6 miles from Oxford, and 58 from London.

MERE, the name of a hundred in Wilts, lying on the western side of the county, at the termination of the counties of Somerset and Dorset.

MERE, a township in the parish of Knutsford, hundred of Bucklow, Chester, 7 miles from Northwich, 2 from Knutsford, and 178 from London; consisting of two hamlets, called Mere and Mere Town, at the cross roads from Manchester and Warrington; containing 72 houses and 498 inhabitants. Adjoining it is Tatton Park, the seat of Mr. Egertons.

Mere, a market town and parish in the hundred of Mere, Wilts, standing in an angle of the county, bordering on Somersetshire and Dorsetshire, 6 miles from Hindon, and 102 from London; containing 181 houses and 881 inhabitants. Its name is supposed to have been derived from a Saxon word, Mere, signifying a boundary. It is a very straggling town, indifferently built, and has a small cross or market house. The women here are principally employed in the manufactory of bed-ticking. Two miles distant is Stourhead house, an elegant mansion. See Stourton. Market on Thursday. Fairs, 6th May and 29th September, for cattle and pedlery. The living is a vicarage, value 23*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of the dean of Salisbury. —Housman's Tour.

Merevale, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Hemlingford, Warwick, 1 mile from Atherston on Stour, and 108 from London, near the Coventry canal; containing 25 houses and 116 inhabitants.

Merewonth, a parish in the hundred of Littlefield, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 6¼ miles from Maidstone, on the road to Tunbridge, and 30 from London; containing 109 houses and 597 inhabitants. The parish is very extensive, and in it are many handsome mansions. It is watered by a stream which falls into the Medway. It is a rectory, value 44*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*

Meriden, a parish in the hundred of Hemlingford, Warwick, 5¾ miles from Coventry, and 96½ from London; containing 140 houses and 821 inhabitants. The church stands on high ground, and contains some good monuments. One of the seats of the earl of Aylesford, a noble building, is now converted into an inn, the Bull's head, having very extensive pleasure grounds, a bowling-green, shrubbery, &c. ornamented with handsome summer-houses and Chinese pagodas, and is much resorted to by the inhabitants of Coventry. In the park belonging to the same estate, one mile farther toward Coleshill, is a small neat stone monument, under an elm tree, to the memory of William Cawsey, farrier, who was there struck dead by lightning, in 1789. The park is well stocked with deer, and has an extensive bason of water. The mansion of the earl of Aylesford here, is a neat but very extensive building.

Merionethshire, a county of North Wales, bounded on the north by Carnarvonshire and Denbighshire, on the east by Denbighshire and Montgomeryshire, on the south by Cardiganshire, and on the west by the Irish sea and Carnarvonshire. It is 35 miles long and 25 broad, and contains 500,000 acres of land, of which 350,000 are pasturage and 50,000 arable. It is divided into five hundreds, viz. Arduddwy, Edernion, Estimaner, Penllyn, and Talybont; and contains 37 parishes, 4 market towns, Bala, Dolgelly, Harlech, and Dinasmouthy, and 5787 houses inhabited by 29,506 persons, viz. 13,896 males, and 15,610 females, of whom 2711 were employed in various trades, manufactures, and handicraft, and 10,308 in agriculture. The total return of income under the property tax in 1806, was 156,251*l.*, and the amount of money raised for the poor in 1803, was 9449*l.* being at the rate of 6*s.* 4*d.* in the pound. This county lies in the diocese of Bangor, and returns one member to parliament. Its principal rivers are the Dee, the Defunny, Dyffi, Avon, and Drwrydh. The face of the country is varied throughout with the most romantic scenery, less dreary than Carnarvon, being better clothed with wood, and not less fertile in objects that impress the mind with awful astonishment. At the north-east angle, spreads a fine valley in which flows the river Dee, and which leads to the lake of Bala or Pimblemeer, a most beautiful expanse of water, well stored with fish. Southerly begins the Welsh Alpine region, with narrow deep vallies, between high verdant hills and extensive moors, affording peat, the only fuel of the country. Near Dolgelly stands the lofty Cader Idris, beyond which, towards the sea, are some excellent meadows and extensive sheep walks, which furnish many manufactures with wool for stockings and flannels. In winter the air is very sharp, and the soil consequently poor, but it is healthy, and the inhabitants are generally long-lived. Most of the lakes, as well as the rivers, abound with fish, particularly the guiniad, salmon, and trout. Among the principal antiquities may be reckoned Cymmer Abbey, two miles from Dolgelly, founded for Cistertian monks. Part of the church still remains, and exhibits a specimen of its ancient grandeur.—Likin's Wales.

Merriot, a parish in the hundred of Crewkern, Somerset, 1½ mile from Crewkern, and 132 from London; containing 188 houses and 1017 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 11*s.* 5*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Bristol.

Merrington, a parish in Darlington ward, Durham, 3 miles from Bishop Auckland, and 257 from London; containing 55 houses and 228 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Durham.

Merrow, a parish in the hundred of Woking, Surry, 2 miles from Guildford, and 28 from London; containing 29 houses and 169 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 2*d.*

Merrys, St. a parish and curacy in the hundred of Pydar, Cornwall, 1 mile from Padstow, and 243 from London; containing 92 houses and 425 inhabitants.

Mersea or Mersey, East, a parish in the hundred of Winstree, Essex, 7½ miles from Colchester, and 50 from London; containing 31 houses and 230 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 21*l.* in the patronage of the king.

MERSEA WEST, a parish in the hundred of Winstree, Essex, 7 miles from Colchester, and 49 from London; containing 121 houses and 660 inhabitants. These two parishes form an island, called the Isle of Mersey, being of an oval form, separated from the main land by a stream that runs from the Mersey to the Blackwater. It is a vicarage, value 22*l.*

MERSEY, a river that runs through the counties of Lancaster, York, and Chester, and falls into the Irish sea at Liverpool. By the canal navigation it communicates with the rivers Dee, Ribble, Ouse, Trent, Derwent, Severn, Humber, Thames, and Avon.

MERSHAM, a parish in the hundred of Chart and Longbridge, lathe of Scray, Kent, 2½ miles from Ashford, and 57 from London; containing 81 houses and 571 inhabitants. It is a rectory value 26*l.* 16*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury.

MERSTON, a hamlet in the parish of Buckleburv, hundred of Reading, Berks, 4 miles from Newbury, and 53 from London.

MERSTON. See MARSTON.

MERSTON BUTLERS. See BUTLERS MERSTON, Warwick.

MERSTON, a parish in the hundred of Box and Stockbridge, Chichester rape, Sussex, 2 miles from Chichester, and 62 from London; containing 14 houses and 77 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.*

MERTHER, a township in the parish of Probus, hundred of Powder, Cornwall, 3 miles from Grampound, and 251 from London; containing 59 houses and 305 inhabitants.

MERTHER, a parish in the hundred of Elvet, Carmarthenshire, Wales, 1½ mile from Carmarthen, and 230 from London; containing 49 houses and 300 inhabitants.

MERTON, a parish in the hundred of Shebbear, Devon, near Black Torrington, and 197 miles from London; containing 77 houses and 689 inhabitants.

MERTHYR TYDVIL, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Narberth, Glamorganshire, Wales, 24 miles from Cardiff, and 184 from London; containing 240 houses and 1256 inhabitants. From a small village, it has risen to be a town of considerable trade, being situated in the midst of several mines of coal and iron. It is surrounded with numerous iron forges, at Cynfarfar, Dowlain, Plymouth, and Pen-y-Darsan, and it is supposed that there are forged weekly upwards of 250 tons of iron, with a consumption of as many tons of coal. At Mr. Crawshay's iron works, there has been lately erected an overshot wheel, supposed to be the largest in the world; it is 50 feet in diameter, and is entirely of cast-iron, and cost 4000*l.* the water that turns it is brought from a stream in the hills, at 5 miles distant, in an aqueduct of wood, supported chiefly by stone pillars, except in one place, where it crosses a bridge, and is elevated 80 feet above the bed of the river Taf. Three miles distant are the ruins of Merlais castle, said to have been the residence of the kings of Brecknock. The neighbourhood contains several lead mines, supposed to have been wrought in the time of the Romans. A canal has been made to the town of Cardiff, with a branch to Aber-daer. The market is on Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs, 18th November and 2d December, which are held in a large mountain, called the Wayn, about a mile distant. It is a rectory, value 20*l.* 5*s.* 7*d.*—Pennant's Tour, and Monthly Magazine, August 1803.

MERTHYR MAWR, a parish in the hundred of Ogmore Glamorgan, Wales, near Cowbridge; and 170 miles from London; containing 30 houses and 138 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

MERTON, a parish in the hundred of Wayland, Norfolk, 2 miles from Watten, and 90 from London; containing 14 houses and 134 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 5*d.*

MERTON, a parish in the hundred of Bullington, Oxford, near Oxford, and 55 miles from London; containing 22 houses and 152 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.*

MERTON, a parish in the hundred of Brixton, Surry, pleasantly situated on the banks of the river Wandle, 7 miles from London; containing 147 houses and 813 inhabitants. With respect to trade, it has of late years become considerable for its calico manufactures and bleach-fields. The church is an old building of flint, and has been lately repaired and ornamented. The bridge here over the Wandle was built in 1633, and is the boundary of the three parishes of Wimbledon, Mitcham, and Merton. It was here that Walter de Merton, bishop of Rochester and chancellor of England, on his manor of Maldon, first erected Merton College, in the year 1274, but removed it to Oxford ten years afterwards, a short time before his death. During the civil wars a party of the parliament forces were in garrison here. Lord Nelson had a good house at Merton, in which he resided when not on naval duty. Henry III. held a parliament at this village the day after his coronation, at which he enacted "The Provisions of Merton," which are the most ancient body of laws after Magna Charta. It is a curacy.—Lysons's Environs of London.

MERTON TINMOUTH, a hamlet in the parish of Gainford, Darlington ward, Durham, 5 miles from Barnard Castle, and 240 from London; containing 5 houses and 29 inhabitants.

MESHAW, a parish in the hundred of Witheridge, Devon, 4 miles from South Moulton, and 190 from London; containing 22 houses and 135 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 4*s.*

MESSING, a parish in the hundred of Lexden, Essex, 4 miles from Coggeshall, and 44 from London; containing 95 houses and 542 inhabitants. Fair first Tuesday in July. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.*

MESSINGHAM, a parish in Manley wapentake, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 4 miles from Glandford Brigg, and 160 from London; containing 108 houses and 377 inhabitants. Fair Trinity Monday. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Lincoln, and dean and chapter of Lincoln, alternately.

METHAM, a township in the parish of Howden, in Howdenshire, east riding of York, 3 miles from Howden, and 180 from London; containing 5 houses and 38 inhabitants. The ancient family of Metham took their name from, and had their residence at this village for several hundred years.

METHERINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Langoe, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 7 miles from Sleaford, and 123 from London; containing 48 houses and 536 inhabitants.

METHILL, a small sea port town in the shire of Fife, Scotland, on the coast of the Frith of Forth, in the parish of Wemyss, 8 miles from Kirkcaldy, containing 60 houses and 314 inhabitants. It was erected into a free burgh of barony, by the bishop of St. Andrew's, with a weekly market and two annual fairs.

METHLEY, a parish in Aybrig wapentake, west riding of York, 5 miles from Pontefract, and 182 from London; containing 287 houses and 1234 inhabitants, of whom 48 were employed in various trades, &c. It is a rectory, value 25*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.*

METHLICK, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, on the banks of the river Ythan, which falls into the sea ten miles below; it lies 18 miles from Aberdeen, and contains 293 houses and 1215 inhabitants.

METHOP, a township in the parish of Beetham, Kendal ward, Westmoreland, near Burton, in Kendaland, 252 miles from London; containing 11 houses and 90 inhabitants.

METHVEN, a parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, seated on the river Almond, 6 miles from Perth; containing 486 houses and 2073 inhabitants. The principal manufacture is the weaving of linen, and at Woodland are two extensive paper mills. In the course of the river Almond, which bounds the parish on the north, are many waterfalls.

METHVEN, a small river in the shire of Lanark, which falls into the Clyde.

METHWOLD, a parish in the hundred of Grimshoe, Norfolk, 6 miles from Brandon, and 84 from London; containing 133 houses and 865 inhabitants. It is celebrated for its rabbit warren, and is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 3*s.* 1*d.*

METTERS, a parish in the hundred of North Erpingham, Norfolk, 5 miles from North Walsham, and 129 from London; containing 17 houses and 77 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.*

METTINGHAM, a parish in the hundred of Wangford, Suffolk, 2 miles from Bungay, and 105 from London; containing 28 houses and 270 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 3*d.*

MEVAGESSEY, a parish in the hundred of Powder, Cornwall, 4 miles from St. Austle's, and 247 from London; containing 309 houses and 2052 inhabitants, viz. 897 males, and 1155 females, of whom 299 were employed in various trades, and 91 in agriculture.

MEUX, a hamlet in the parish of Waghen, in Holderness division, east riding of York, 3 miles from Beverley, and 184 from London; containing 7 houses and 49 inhabitants.

MEWAN'S, ST. a parish in the hundred of Powder, Cornwall, 1 mile from St. Austle, and 245 from London; containing 130 houses and 780 inhabitants.

MEXBOROUGH, a parish in the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill, west riding of York, 5 miles from Rotherham, and 163 from London; containing 83 houses and 417 inhabitants.

MEYSEY HAMPTON. See HAMPTON MEYSEY, Gloucester.

MICHAEL'S, ST. CARHAIRS, a parish in the hundred of Powder, Cornwall, 16 miles from Bodmin, and 250 from London; containing 13 houses and 86 inhabitants.

MICHAEL'S, ST. PENKEVIL, a parish in the hundred of Powder, Cornwall, 3 miles from Truro, and 254 from London; containing 36 houses and 184 inhabitants.

MICHAEL CHURCH, a parish in the hundred of Wormelow, Hereford, 10 miles from Hereford, and 130 from London; containing 33 houses and 116 inhabitants.

MICHELSTOW, a parish in the hundred of Lesnewth, Cornwall, 3 miles from Camelford, and 231 from London; containing 28 houses and 158 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.*

MICHAEL'S, ST. a borough situated in the parishes of Newlin and St. Enoder, Cornwall, 250 miles from London; containing about 50 houses and 160 inhabitants. It was a place of note during the time of the Saxons, and was formerly called Modishole. It is governed by a superior or high lord, a portreeve, and five deputy lords. It has sent two members to parliament ever since the sixth of Edward VI.

MICHAEL'S ST. ESKELEY, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Ewias Lacy, Hereford, 8 miles from Hay and 150 from London; containing 75 houses and 397 inhabitants.

MICHAELSTOW, a parish in the hundred of Wentlooge, Monmouth, near Pontipool, and 156 from London; containing 41 houses and 176 inhabitants.

MICHAELSTOW, a parish in the hundred of Neath, Glamorganshire, Wales, 4 miles from Neath, and 200 from London; containing 20 houses and 120 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.*

MICHAELSTOW LE PITT, a parish in the hundred of Dinas Powis, Glamorganshire, Wales, 4 miles from Cardiff, and 164 from London; containing 11 houses and 68 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 14*s.* 7*d.*

MICHELEY, a township in the parish of Lyth, in Langborough wapentake, north riding of York, near Whitby, and 246 miles from London; containing 40 houses and 176 inhabitants.

MICHAELMERSH, a parish in the hundred of Published Jan.y 1.st 1808. by R. Phillips, Bridge Street, Blackfriars London.

Cooper del.t et sculp.

Buddlesgate, division of Fawley, Hants, 8 miles from Winchester, and 70 from London; containing 131 houses and 664 inhabitants.

Michelltroy, a parish in the hundred of Ragland, Monmouth, 2 miles from Monmouth, and 130 from London; containing 43 houses and 220 inhabitants.

Mickfield, a parish in the hundred of Bosmere and Claydon, Suffolk, 1 mile from Debenham, and 82 from London; containing 33 houses and 173 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 11*s.*

Micklefield, a hamlet in the parish of Sherburn, Barkston Ash wapentake, west riding of York, 9 miles from Leeds, and 185 from London; containing 35 houses and 135 inhabitants.

Mickleham, a parish in the hundred of Copthorne, Surrey, 3 miles from Dorking, and 20 from London; containing 53 houses and 389 inhabitants. It is pleasantly seated at the foot of Box hill, watered by the river Mole, and is a rectory, value 13*l.*

Micklehurst, a small village in Cheshire, near Manchester, on the borders of Lancashire.

Mickleover, a parish in the hundred of Morlestone and Litchurch, Derby, 3 miles from Derby, and 128 from London; containing 97 houses and 507 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 11*s.* 5*d.*

Mickleton, a parish in the hundred of Kiftsgate, Gloucester, 4 miles from Campden, and 94 from London; containing 98 houses and 430 inhabitants. The church is a large handsome building. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 14*s.* 4*d.* patron the king.

Mickleton, a township in the parish of Rumboldkirk, Gilling West wapentake, north riding of York, 7 miles from Barnard Castle, and 253 from London; containing 76 houses and 330 inhabitants.

Mickley, a hamlet in the parish of Ovingham, in Tindal ward, East division, Northumberland, 9 miles from Newcastle upon Tyne, and 285 from London; containing 36 houses and 186 inhabitants.

Middle, a parish in the hundred of Pirehill, Salop, 3 miles from Shrewsbury, and 167½ from London; containing 154 houses and 779 inhabitants. A very stately and elegant castle was destroyed here in 1688, by an earthquake. The living is a rectory, value 12*l.* 7*s.* 3*d.*

Middleby, a parish in the shire of Dumfries, Scotland, 22 miles from Moffat; containing 284 houses and 1507 inhabitants. Near the church are the vestiges of an ancient military station.

Middleborough, or Middleburgh, a small parish in Langborough West wapentake, north riding of York, 8 miles from Gisborough, near the mouth of the Tees; containing 6 houses and 26 inhabitants.

Middleham Bishops, a parish in Stockton ward, Durham, 9 miles from Durham, and 250 from London; containing 77 houses and 331 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.* in the patronage of the king.

Middleham, a market town and parish in Hang West wapentake, north riding of York, standing on the river Ure, 10 miles from Richmond, and 232 from London; containing 141 houses and 728 inhabitants, a considerable number of whom are employed in the woollen manufacture. The church is a handsome building, for which Richard duke of Gloucester obtained a licence from his brother Edward IV. to make it collegiate, but it never was completed. It has the ruins of a once stately castle, in which Richard III. was born, and where Edward IV. was confined after having been taken prisoner in his camp, by Nevil earl of Warwick. The market is on Monday. Fairs, 6th and 7th of November. Near it is Jervaise Abbey. It is a deanery in the patronage of the king.

Middlemarsh, a hamlet to Great Minstern, in Dorsetshire.

Middlesclough, a hamlet in the parish of St. Mary's, Carlisle, in Leath ward, Cumberland, adjoining to Carlisle, and containing 56 houses and 176 inhabitants.

Middlesex, an inland county of England, situate on the south-eastern part of the island. It is bounded on the north by Hertfordshire, on the east by Essex, from which it is separated by the river Lea; on the south by Surrey, from which it is divided by the river Thames; and on the west by Buckinghamshire, from which it is separated by the river Colne. It is of a very irregular shape, and is about 25 miles long, and 14 broad, containing 280 square miles, or 179,200 acres, of which about 100,000 are in pasturage, 40,000 arable, and 15,000 occupied by market-gardens, cultivated for the supply of the metropolis with vegetables and roots. It is divided into 6 hundreds, viz. Edmonton, Elthorne, Gore, Isleworth, Kensington, and Spelthorn; and 3 divisions, Finsbury, Holborn, and the Tower Division. Beside these it contains the city of London within and without the walls, and the city and liberties of Westminster. It is subdivided into 230 parishes, precincts, and extra-parochial jurisdictions, whereof 122 are within the city of London, 10 in the city and liberties of Westminster, and 98 in the rest of the county. According to the return made to parliament in the year 1801, this county contained 112,912 houses, inhabited by 818,129 persons, of whom 373,655 were males, and 444,474 females; of this number 162,260 were employed in trade, and 13,417 in agriculture. The amount of money raised for the relief of the poor, in 1803, was 490,144*l.* at the rate of 3*s.* 5½*d.* in the pound. In 1806, the total amount of the value of property returned under the property tax act, was 21,082,653*l.* This county contains the two cities of London and Westminster, and 9 market towns, viz. Barnet, Southall, Finchley, Uxbridge, Brentford, Hounslow, Edgware, Stains, and Enfield. It is most excellently and abundantly supplied with water by means of the rivers Thames, Lea, Colne, Brent, and the New River. The soil in some places is loamy, in others gravel, clay, or sand; but that part of the county which lies round London, owing to the great plenty of manure, is converted into rich pasture; whilst toward Buckinghamshire, there are some considerable tracts of arable land, which produce good crops of corn. On the sides of the rivers Thames, Colne, and Lea, there are very extensive meadows. The number of cows kept by the cow-keepers in Middlesex, for the supply of the inhabitants of the metropolis with milk, amounts to 7200; besides 1300 kept in Surrey and Kent. There are still several extensive heaths in this county, particularly that of Hounslow, and Finchley Common, which latter stretches to the borders of Enfield Chace, a large tract of wood land, well stocked with deer, and extends nearly to Epping Forest, in Essex. The produce of hay for the London market, is the principal object of the farmers in this county. The whole county may be considered as a sort of demesne to the metropolis, being covered with the villas of the principal nobility and gentry, intersected by the innumerable roads leading to it, or laid out in gardens, pastures, and enclosures of all sorts, for its convenience and support. The increase of buildings and other improvements within the last century, are astonishing, and Chelsea, Islington, Paddington, Pancras, &c. formerly villages at a distance from the metropolis, are now completely united with it. Among the many seats of superior architecture, several of them encompassed by fine parks, may be mentioned, Bruce Castle, Bush Hill, Caen Wood, Cannons, Chiswick House, Dereham Park, Enfield Park, Fulham Palace, Grove House, Holland House, Kempton, Littleton, Marble Hall, Osterley, Sion House, Twickenham, and Wrotham; beside the royal palaces of Kensington, and Hampton Court, the duke of Clarence's seat at Bushy. Middlesex received its name from having been inhabited by a party of Saxons, who being situated in the midst of the three petty kingdoms of the East, West, and South Saxons, called themselves, or were called by their neighbours Middle Saxons, which in common conversation was soon abbreviated into Middlesex. This county possesses superior advantages over every other, in comprising the capital of the British empire: where all the families of the first rank and wealth occasionally reside, which is generally during the sitting of parliament, and where the business of the richest merchants, bankers, and citizens is carried on, to an extent that is unequalled in any other part of the globe. It sends 8 members to parliament, viz. 2 for the county, 4 for London, and 2 for Westminster.

MIDDLESOY, a parish in the hundred of Whitley, Somerset, 3 miles from Bridgwater, and 135 from London; containing 95 houses and 494 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 12*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Bath and Wells.

MIDDLETON, a township in the parish of Merrington, Darlington ward, Durham, 2 miles from Bishop Auckland, and 257 from London; containing 17 houses and 78 inhabitants.

MIDDLETHORP, a village in the parish of St. Mary's, Bishop's Hill, in the liberty of the Ainstey, York, 1 mile from York, and 200 from London; containing 7 houses and 41 inhabitants.

MIDDLETHORPE, a small village in the parish of Norwell, near Willoughby, Notts.

MIDDLETON, a township in the parish of Youlgrave, hundred of Wirksworth, Derby, 3 miles from Bakewell, and 150 from London; containing 39 houses and 183 inhabitants.

MIDDLETON, a township in the parish and hundred of Wirksworth, Derby, 1 mile from Wirksworth, and 141 from London; containing 154 houses and 693 inhabitants.

MIDDLETON IN TEESDALE, a parish in Darlington ward, Durham, 7 miles from Barnard Castle, and 253 from London; containing 139 houses and 796 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 25*l.* 17*s.* in the patronage of the king.

MIDDLETON ST. GEORGE, a parish in Stockton ward, Durham, 3 miles from Yarm, and 247 from London; containing 45 houses and 215 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.*

MIDDLETON, a parish in the hundred of Hinckford, Essex, 1 mile from Sudbury, and 54 from London; containing 15 houses and 94 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.*

MIDDLETON ON THE HILL, a parish in the hundred of Wolphy, Hereford, 5 miles from Leominster, and 140 from London; containing 56 houses and 308 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the bishop of Hereford.

MIDDLETON, a village in the parish of Lancaster, in the hundred of Lonsdale, Lancashire, 2 miles from Lancaster, and 240 from London; containing 26 houses and 161 inhabitants.

MIDDLETON, a market town and parish in the hundred of Salford, Lancashire, 6 miles from Manchester, and 190 from London lying between Manchester and Rochdale containing 614 houses and 3065 inhabitants viz. 1534 males, and 1731 females, of whom 2376 were employed in trade and manufacture. The market is on Friday. It is a rectory, value 56*l.* 3*s.* 11*d.*

MIDDLETON, a parish in the hundred of Freebridge Lynn, Norfolk, 2 miles from Lynn, and 94 from London; containing 41 houses and 467 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.*

MIDDLETON, a parish in the hundred of Corby, Northampton, 8 miles from Kettering, and 82 from London; containing 84 houses and 411 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* 15*s.* 10*d.*

MIDDLETON CHEVNEY, a parish in the hundred of King's Sutton, Northampton, 3 miles from Banbury, in Oxfordshire, and 70 from London; containing 226 houses and 1153 inhabitants, of whom 617 were employed in various trades, &c. It is a rectory, value 31*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of Brazen Nose college, Oxford.

MIDDLETON, a hamlet in the parish of Belford, Bamborough ward, Northumberland, 1 mile from Belford, and 326 from London; containing 8 houses and 56 inhabitants.

MIDDLETON NORTH, MIDDLETON SOUTH, and MIDDLETON HALL, 3 hamlets in the parish of Ilderton, Morpeth ward, Northumberland, 2 miles from Woolter, and 320 from London; containing together 33 houses and 189 inhabitants.

MIDDLETON NORTH, and MIDDLETON SOUTH, 2 hamlets in the parish of Hartburn, Coquetdale ward, north division, Northumberland, 6 miles from Morpeth, and 297 from London; containing together 26 houses and 105 inhabitants.

MIDDLETON STONEY, a parish in the hundred of Ploughley, Oxford, 2 miles from Bicester, and 57 from London; containing 58 houses and 309 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 16*s.* in the patronage of the bishop of Lincoln.

MIDDLETON SCRIVEN, a parish in the hundred of Stoddesden, Salop, 3 miles from Bridgnorth, and 141 from London; containing 13 houses and 80 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

MIDDLETON, a parish in the hundred of Blything, Suffolk, 2 miles from Saxmundham, and 92 from London; containing 68 houses and 488 inhabitants.

MIDDLETON, a parish in the hundred of Avisford, rape of Arundel, Sussex, on the coast, 4 miles from Arundel, and 64 from London; containing 6 houses and 40 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 10*s.*-10*d.* in the patronage of the king.

MIDDLETON, a parish in the hundred of Hemlingford, Warwick, 6 miles from Coleshill, and 109 from London; containing 95 houses and 544 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

MIDDLETON, a township and chapelry in the parish of Kirby Lonsdale, in Lonsdale ward, Westmoreland, 1 mile from Kirby Lonsdale, and 250 from London; containing 52 houses and 303 inhabitants.

MIDDLETON, a parish in the division of Bainton Beacon, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 8 miles from Beverley, and 192 from London; containing 46 houses and 286 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

MIDDLETON TYAS, a parish in Gilling East wapentake, north riding of York, 5 miles from Richmond, and 239 from London; containing 114 houses and 526 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 15*l.* 10*s.* in the patronage of the king.

MIDDLETON QUERNHOW, a village in the parish of Wath, in Hallikeld wapentake, north riding of York, 5 miles from Rippon, and 227 from London; containing 17 houses and 87 inhabitants.

MIDDLETON, a hamlet in the parish of Rudby, Langborough wapentake, north riding of York, 3 miles from Stokesley, and 245 from London; containing 20 houses and 110 inhabitants.

MIDDLETON, a parish in Pickering lythe, north riding of York, 1 mile from Pickering, and 226 from London; containing 45 houses and 235 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

MIDDLETON, a parish in Aybrig wapentake, west riding of York, 187 miles from London; containing 161 houses and 831 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*

MIDDLETON, a village in the parish of Ilkley, in Claro wapentake, west riding of York, 7 miles from Otley, and 212 from London; containing 40 houses and 201 inhabitants.

MIDDLETON MALSOR. See MILTON, Northampton.

MIDDLEWICH, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Northwich, Cheshire, 7 miles from Northwich, and 166 from London; containing 261 houses and 1190 inhabitants, of whom 298 were employed in trade and manufacture. It is pleasantly situated between the small rivers Wheelock and Dane that fall into the Wever, 7 miles distant. It has also the benefit of canal navigation, the grand trunk running through the town, and taking a circuitous track by Northwich, joins the Mersey at Runcorn Gap. This parish is very extensive, having several townships belonging to it. The church is spacious, and on the south side of it there is a college, founded by Thomas Savage, archbishop of York, and an oratory, founded by the Leighs, of Lyme. There is also a free school. This town, as well as most of those in this county, whose names terminate with wich, has been long noted for the great quantities of salt manufactured from the salt springs, the water of which is said to yield one fourth of its weight in salt. A tolerable manufacture of cotton has been established here of late years. The market is on Tuesday. Fairs, Holy Thursday, 25th August, and 29th October. It is a vicarage, value 14*l.*—Norden's Cheshire.

MIDDLEWOOD, a small village near Bredwardine Castle, Herefordshire.

MIDFORD, the name of a hundred in Norfolk, in the center of the county around East Dereham.

MIDGHAM, a village in the parish of Thatcham, in the hundred of Faircross, Berks, 4½ miles from Newbury, and 52 from London; containing 43 houses and 340 inhabitants.

MIDGLEY, a township in the parish of Halifax, in Morley wapentake, west riding of York, 4 miles from Hallifax, and 199 from London; containing 259 houses and 1209 inhabitants, of whom 807 were employed in trade and manufacture.

MIDDOP, a village in the parish of Gisburn, wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, west riding of York, near the river Ribble, and 220 miles from London; containing 12 houses and 87 inhabitants.

MIDHURST, a borough, market town, and parish in the hundred of Westbourne, rape of Chichester, Sussex, 12 miles from Chichester, and 51 from London; containing 182 houses and 1073 inhabitants, of whom 194 were employed in trade, &c. It is pleasantly situated on the banks of the river Arun, its name in Saxon signifying Middlewood. The town is in general well built, and is a borough by prescription, governed by a bailiff, who is chosen annually at the court leet of the lord of the manor. This borough has sent 2 members to parliament ever since the 4th of Edward III. the right of election being in about 120 burgage tenures, which it is said were sold by the trustees of lord Montague for 40,000 guineas. The returning officer is the bailiff. In 1672, a free grammar-school was founded here for 12 boys. Near the town are the remains of Cowdry House, once the magnificent seat of lord Montague, and the most perfect model of a castellated mansion of the time of Henry VIII. the interior of which was fitted up in the most princely stile, and adorned with paintings by the first Italian masters; but it was burned down in 1793, nearly at the same time that the noble owner was drowned in the river Rhine, as he was rashly venturing to sail down the cataracts of Schauf hausen. The park is extensive, and the grounds well laid out; the latter contain some of the largest chesnut trees in England. The market is on Thursday. Fairs, 5th of April, Whit Tuesday, and 29th of November. The church is a curacy.

MIDLAVANT, a parish in the hundred of Westbourne, rape of Chichester, Sussex, 2 miles from Chichester, and 63 from London; containing 182 houses and 1073 inhabitants, of whom 194 were employed in trade. It is a curacy.

MIDLEY, a parish in the hundred of Longport, lathe of Shepway, Kent, 2 miles from Romney, and 71 from London; containing 4 houses and 29 inhabitants. It has no church.

MIDMAN, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, 13 miles from Aberdeen; containing 203 houses and 803 inhabitants.

MIDRIDGE, a township in the parish of St. Andrew's Auckland, in Darlington ward, Durham, 10 miles from Darlington, and 253 from London; containing 56 houses and 259 inhabitants.

MIDRIGE GRANGE, a village in the parish of Heightington, in Darlington ward, Durham, 1¼ mile from the foregoing; containing 26 houses and 141 inhabitants.

MINSOMMER NORTON, a parish in the hundred of Chewton, Somerset, 9 miles from Froome, and 114 from London; containing 316 houses and 1552 inhabitants, of whom 65 were returned as being employed in various trades.

MINNEINT BRYDYR-HALEN, a remarkable mountain in the parish of Festiniog, Merionethshire, Wales, near Tally Bwich, where there are some remarkable stone monuments, called Bedheu Gwŷr Ardudwy, or the graves of the men of Ardudwy; supposed to have been monuments to the memory of some persons of note slain in battle here.

MILBORN ST. ANDREW'S, a parish in the hundred of Piddletown, division of Dorchester, Dorset, 8 miles from Blandford, and 111 from London; containing 44 houses and 217 inhabitants. The church is a low building, with an embattled tower, and is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* with Dewlish chapel annexed. In the neighbourhood is Milton abbey, now the seat of the earl of Dorchester.

MILBORN STILEHAM, a parish in the hundred of Beer, division of Blandford, Dorset, near Beer Regis, and 109 miles from London; containing 48 houses and 217 inhabitants.

MILBORN, and MILBORN GRANGE, 2 small hamlets in the parish of Ponteland, in Castle ward, Northumberland, 10 miles from Newcastle, and 286 from London; containing together 22 houses and 113 inhabitants.

MILBORN PORT, a borough and parish in the hundred of Horethorne, Somerset, 12¼ miles from Shaftesbury, 2½ from Sherborne, and 117 from London; situated on a branch of the river Parrot, and containing 198 houses and 953 inhabitants, of whom 400 were employed in various trades, and in the manufacture of dowlas, ticking, linsey, stockings and shoes. The parish is divided into 3 hamlets, called Milborn Port, Kingsbury Regis, and Milborn Wyke; however, the borough and that part called Kingsbury, lie in many places promiscuously intermixed, both in the main town and at Milborn Wyke, which lies about 1 mile north. That part called Kingsbury Regis, has land-tax and parochial assessments different from the borough, but one has the same church as the other, and the same poor, excepting that the charity called Commonalty, is given only to the poor of the borough. At Kingsbury an annual court baron is held, wherein the lord's rents are paid, presentments made, and a constable, tythingman, and hayward appointed; the hayward serves in and for both districts; the other two officers for Kingsbury only. It is a borough by prescription, and has sent 2 members to parliament since the 20th of Edward I. but ceased to enjoy that privilege from the 35th of the same king, until the 4th of Charles I. The right of election is in the capital bailiffs and their deputies, in the commonalty stewards, and in the inhabitants paying scot and lot; number of voters being about 110. The church is a good building, with a square tower, containing 6 bells, with a set of chimes, and there is also a dissenting meeting-house.

Fairs, 5th June, and 28th October, for cattle and pedlary. It is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of Winchester college. Lat. 50° 57′ 58″. Long. 2° 27′ 9″ west.—Collinson's Somersetshire.

MILBORN, a township and chapelry in the parish of Kirby Thore, in East ward, Westmoreland, 7 miles from Appleby, and 277 from London; containing 46 houses and 237 inhabitants.

MILBORN, a tything in the parish and hundred of Malmsbury, Wilts, ½ a mile from Malmsbury, and 96 from London; containing 18 houses and 97 inhabitants.

MILBRACE. See MEOLBRACE, Salop.

MILBROOK. See MILLBROOK, Bedford and Hants.

MILCOMBE, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Bloxham, Oxford, 4 miles from Banbury, and 71 from London; containing 42 houses and 201 inhabitants.

MILCOTT, a hamlet in the parish of Weston, in Gloucestershire, although situate in the hundred of Barlichway, Warwick, 2 miles from Stratford on Avon, and 92 from London; containing 3 houses and 21 inhabitants.

MILDEN, a parish in the hundred of Babergh, Suffolk, 4 miles from Sudbury, and 58 from London; containing 21 houses and 130 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

MILDENHALL, a market town and parish in the hundred of Lackford, Suffolk, 9 miles from Newmarket, and 71 from London, seated on a branch of the Ouse called the Lark; which is navigable for barges, and has considerably added to the trade and enlargement of the town, which contains 355 houses and 2283 inhabitants, viz. 1095 males and 1188 females. The church is very commodious, and has a tower or steeple 100 feet high. Many of the buildings here are new. The market on Friday is well supplied, particularly with fish and wild fowl. It is a vicarage, value 22*l.* 8*s.* 1*d.*

MILDENHALL, a parish in the hundred of Selkley, Wilts, 1 mile from Marlborough, and 76 from London; containing 73 houses and 376 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 17*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*

MILE END, a hamlet in the parish of Stepney, in the hundred of Ossulton, Middlesex, so called from its situation, 1 mile from Whitechapel church, London. That part called the New Town, is greatly encreased of late years, stretching on the road to Stratford. The whole parish contains 2257 houses and 15,101 inhabitants, viz. 6340 males, and 8761 females, of whom 2180 were employed in various trades, handicraft and manufacture.

MILEHAM, a parish in the hundred of Launditch, Norfolk, 5 miles from East Dereham, and 106 from London; containing 48 houses and 323 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.*

MILFORD, a parish in the hundred of Christchurch, New Forest division, Hants, 2 miles from Lymington, and 97 from London; containing 190 houses and 1012 inhabitants.

MILFORD, a hamlet to Salisbury, in the hundred of Underditch, Wilts, near Salisbury, and 80 miles from London; containing 69 houses and 419 inhabitants.

MILFORD, a township in the parish of Sherburn, Barkston Ash wapentake, west riding of York, 7 miles from Pontefract, and 184 from London; containing 91 houses and 457 inhabitants.

MILFORD NORTH, a hamlet in the township of Kirby Wharf, parish of Sherburn, Barkston Ash wapentake, west riding of York, 1 mile distant from the foregoing. Population returned with Kirby Wharf.

MILFORD, a hamlet in the parish of Godalming, Surrey, 1¼ mile from Godalming, and 35 from London. Population included, in Godalming.

MILFORD, or MILFORD HAVEN, a township in the parish of Harbrandstone, in Pembrokeshire, Wales, 257 miles from London, by Brecon, and 272 by Swansea. It is a new built town on the north side of the haven, 6 miles from Pembroke, and 6 from Haverfordwest. The haven appears like an immense lake, formed by an advance of the sea inland for about the space of 10 miles from the south to Pembroke, and is the most commodious harbour in Great Britain. This harbour was fortified in 1758, when 10,000*l.* was expended on the fort of Neyland, which sum was found insufficient for its completion, and it now remains in an unfinished state. It is exposed to all points of the compass, in the approaches toward it, and is extremely dangerous in tempestuous weather, either to get out or in, except in particular winds. This harbour has 16 creeks, 5 bays, and 13 roads, in which 1000 sail of shipping may ride in perfect security. A quay and several new buildings have lately been erected by a society of Quakers, who have established themselves here from America. The first attempt at erecting a fort, appears to have been in the reign of queen Elizabeth; ruins being still visible at the place called the Nangle, and at Dale Blockhouse. It was at this place that the earl of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII. landed on his enterprise against Richard III. This bay produces great quantities of excellent oysters, and some of the cliffs have produced appearances of small veins of copper. On the point called St. Ann's, is an old lighthouse and block-house. The church of Harbrandston is a rectory, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the prince of Wales. Lat. 51° 45′. Long. 5° 20′ west.—Malkin's and Evans' Tours in South Wales.

MILK, a small river in the shire of Dumfries, Scotland, which rises in the parish of Hutton, and after a course of 15 miles, falls into the Annan, near the church of St. Mungo.

habitants, of whom 807 were employed in trade and manufacture.

MIDDOP, a village in the parish of Gisburn, wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, west riding of York, near the river Ribble, and 220 miles from London; containing 12 houses and 87 inhabitants.

MIDHURST, a borough, market town, and parish in the hundred of Westbourne, rape of Chichester, Sussex, 12 miles from Chichester, and 51 from London; containing 182 houses and 1073 inhabitants, of whom 194 were employed in trade, &c. It is pleasantly situated on the banks of the river Arun, its name in Saxon signifying Middlewood. The town is in general well built, and is a borough by prescription, governed by a bailiff, who is chosen annually at the court leet of the lord of the manor. This borough has sent 2 members to parliament ever since the 4th of Edward III. the right of election being in about 120 burgage tenures, which it is said were sold by the trustees of lord Montague for 40,000 guineas. The returning officer is the bailiff. In 1672, a free grammar-school was founded here for 12 boys. Near the town are the remains of Cowdry House, once the magnificent seat of lord Montague, and the most perfect model of a castellated mansion of the time of Henry VIII. the interior of which was fitted up in the most princely stile, and adorned with paintings by the first Italian masters; but it was burned down in 1793, nearly at the same time that the noble owner was drowned in the river Rhine, as he was rashly venturing to sail down the cataracts of Schauf hausen. The park is extensive, and the grounds well laid out; the latter contain some of the largest chesnut trees in England. The market is on Thursday. Fairs, 5th of April, Whit Tuesday, and 29th of November. The church is a curacy.

MIDLAVANT, a parish in the hundred of Westbourne, rape of Chichester, Sussex, 2 miles from Chichester, and 63 from London; containing 182 houses and 1073 inhabitants, of whom 194 were employed in trade. It is a curacy.

MIDLEY, a parish in the hundred of Longport, lathe of Shepway, Kent, 2 miles from Romney, and 71 from London; containing 4 houses and 29 inhabitants. It has no church.

MIDMAN, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, 13 miles from Aberdeen; containing 203 houses and 803 inhabitants.

MIDRIDGE, a township in the parish of St. Andrew's Auckland, in Darlington ward, Durham, 10 miles from Darlington, and 253 from London; containing 56 houses and 239 inhabitants.

MIDRIDGE GRANGE, a village in the parish of Heightington, in Darlington ward, Durham, 1½ mile from the foregoing; containing 26 houses and 141 inhabitants.

MIDSOMER NORTON, a parish in the hundred of Chewton, Somerset, 9 miles from Froome, and 114 from London; containing 316 houses and 1552 inhabitants, of whom 65 were returned as being employed in various trades.

MIKNEINT RHYD-AR-HALEN, a remarkable mountain in the parish of Festiniog, Merionethshire, Wales, near Tally Bwlch, where there are some remarkable stone monuments, called Bedhau Gwŷr Arduduy, or the graves of the men of Arduduy; supposed to have been monuments to the memory of some persons of note slain in battle here.

MILBORN ST. ANDREW'S, a parish in the hundred of Piddletown, division of Dorchester, Dorset, 8 miles from Blandford, and 111 from London; containing 44 houses and 217 inhabitants. The church is a low building, with an embattled tower, and is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* with Dewlish chapel annexed. In the neighbourhood is Milton abbey, now the seat of the earl of Dorchester.

MILBORN STILEHAM, a parish in the hundred of Beer, division of Blandford, Dorset, near Beer Regis, and 109 miles from London; containing 48 houses and 217 inhabitants.

MILBORN, and MILBORN GRANGE, 2 small hamlets in the parish of Ponteland, in Castle ward, Northumberland, 10 miles from Newcastle, and 286 from London; containing together 22 houses and 113 inhabitants.

MILBORN PORT, a borough and parish in the hundred of Horethorne, Somerset, 1¾ miles from Shaftesbury, 2¼ from Sherborne, and 117 from London; situated on a branch of the river Parrot, and containing 198 houses and 953 inhabitants, of whom 400 were employed in various trades, and in the manufacture of dowlas, ticking, linsey, stockings and shoes. The parish is divided into 3 hamlets, called Milborn Port, Kingsbury Regis, and Milborn Wyke; however, the borough and that part called Kingsbury, lie in many places promiscuously intermixed, both in the main town and at Milborn Wyke, which lies about 1 mile north. That part called Kingsbury Regis, has land-tax and parochial assessments different from the borough, but one has the same church as the other, and the same poor, excepting that the charity called Commonalty, is given only to the poor of the borough. At Kingsbury an annual court baron is held, wherein the lord's rents are paid, presentments made, and a constable, tythingman, and hayward appointed; the hayward serves in and for both districts; the other two officers for Kingsbury only. It is a borough by prescription, and has sent 2 members to parliament since the 20th of Edward I. but ceased to enjoy that privilege from the 35th of the same king, until the 4th of Charles I. The right of election is in the capital bailiffs and their deputies, in the commonalty stewards, and in the inhabitants paying scot and lot; number of voters being about 110. The church is a good building, with a square tower, containing 6 bells, with a set of chimes, and there is also a dissenting meeting-house.

Fairs, 5th June, and 28th October, for cattle and pedlary. It is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of Winchester college. Lat. 50° 57′ 58″. Long. 2° 27′ 9″ west.—Collinson's Somersetshire.

MILBORN, a township and chapelry in the parish of Kirby Thore, in Eastward, Westmoreland, 7 miles from Appleby, and 277 from London; containing 46 houses and 257 inhabitants.

MILBORN, a tything in the parish and hundred of Malmsbury, Wilts, ½ a mile from Malmsbury, and 96 from London; containing 18 houses and 97 inhabitants.

MILBRACE. See MEOLBRACE, Salop.

MILBROOK. See MILLBROOK, Bedford and Hants.

MILCOMBE, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Bloxham, Oxford, 4 miles from Banbury, and 71 from London; containing 42 houses and 201 inhabitants.

MILCOTT, a hamlet in the parish of Weston, in Gloucestershire, although situate in the hundred of Barlichway, Warwick, 2 miles from Stratford on Avon, and 92 from London; containing 3 houses and 21 inhabitants.

MILDEN, a parish in the hundred of Babergh, Suffolk, 4 miles from Sudbury, and 58 from London; containing 21 houses and 130 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

MILDENHALL, a market town and parish in the hundred of Lackford, Suffolk, 9 miles from Newmarket, and 71 from London, seated on a branch of the Ouse called the Lark; which is navigable for barges, and has considerably added to the trade and enlargement of the town, which contains 355 houses and 2283 inhabitants, viz. 1095 males and 1188 females. The church is very commodious, and has a tower or steeple 100 feet high. Many of the buildings here are new. The market on Friday is well supplied, particularly with fish and wild fowl. It is a vicarage, value 22*l.* 8*s.* 1*d.*

MILDENHALL, a parish in the hundred of Selkley, Wilts, 1 mile from Marlborough, and 76 from London; containing 75 houses and 376 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 17*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*

MILE END, a hamlet in the parish of Stepney, in the hundred of Ossulton, Middlesex, so called from its situation, 1 mile from Whitechapel church, London. That part called the New Town, is greatly encreased of late years, stretching on the road to Stratford. The whole parish contains 2237 houses and 15,101 inhabitants, viz. 6340 males, and 8761 females, of whom 2180 were employed in various trades, handicraft and manufacture.

MILEHAM, a parish in the hundred of Launditch, Norfolk, 5 miles from East Dereham, and 106 from London; containing 48 houses and 323 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.*

MILFORD, a parish in the hundred of Christchurch, New Forest division, Hants, 2 miles from Lymington, and 97 from London; containing 190 houses and 1012 inhabitants.

MILFORD, a hamlet to Salisbury, in the hundred of Underditch, Wilts, near Salisbury, and 80 miles from London; containing 69 houses and 419 inhabitants.

MILFORD, a township in the parish of Sherburn, Barkston Ash wapentake, west riding of York, 7 miles from Pontefract, and 184 from London; containing 91 houses and 457 inhabitants.

MILFORD NORTH, a hamlet in the township of Kirby Wharf, parish of Sherburn, Barkston Ash wapentake, west riding of York, 1 mile distant from the foregoing. Population returned with Kirby Wharf.

MILFORD, a hamlet in the parish of Godalming, Surrey, 1¼ mile from Godalming, and 35 from London. Population included in Godalming.

MILFORD, or MILFORD HAVEN, a township in the parish of Harbrandstone, in Pembrokeshire, Wales, 257 miles from London, by Brecon, and 272 by Swansea. It is a new built town on the north side of the haven, 6 miles from Pembroke, and 6 from Haverfordwest. The haven appears like an immense lake, formed by an advance of the sea inland for about the space of 10 miles from the south to Pembroke, and is the most commodious harbour in Great Britain. This harbour was fortified in 1757, when 10,000*l.* was expended on the fort of Neyland, which sum was found insufficient for its completion, and it now remains in an unfinished state. It is exposed to all points of the compass, in the approaches toward it, and is extremely dangerous in tempestuous weather, either to get out or in, except in particular winds. This harbour has 16 creeks, 5 bays, and 13 roads, in which 1000 sail of shipping may ride in perfect security. A quay and several new buildings have lately been erected by a society of Quakers, who have established themselves here from America. The first attempt at erecting a fort, appears to have been in the reign of queen Elizabeth; ruins being still visible at the place called the Nangle, and at Dale Blockhouse. It was at this place that the earl of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII. landed on his enterprise against Richard III. This bay produces great quantities of excellent oysters, and some of the cliffs have produced appearances of small veins of copper. On the point called St. Ann's, is an old light-house and block-house. The church of Harbrandston is a rectory, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the prince of Wales. Lat. 51° 45′. Long. 5° 20′ west.—Malkin's and Evans' Tours in South Wales.

MILK, a small river in the shire of Dumfries, Scotland, which rises in the parish of Hutton, and after a course of 15 miles, falls into the Annan, near the church of St. Mungo.

MILBOURNE, a small river in Northumberland, which falls into the Tyne, near Wilam.

MILBRIDGE, a township in the parish of Haltwhistle, Tindal ward, West division, near Haltwhistle, and 314 miles from London; containing 43 houses and 226 inhabitants.

MILLBROOK, a parish in the hundred of Redborne stoke, Bedfordshire, 2 miles from Ampthill, and 47 from London; containing 67 houses and 327 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 16*s.* 5*d.* in the patronage of the duke of Bedford.

MILLBROOK, a parish in the hundred of Buddlesgate, division of Fawley, Hants, 2 miles from Southampton, and 70 from London; containing 250 houses and 1504 inhabitants, of whom 205 were employed in various trades. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 6*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Winchester.

MILLFIELD, a township to the parish of Kirk Newton, in Glendale ward, Northumberland, 4 miles from Wooler, and 328½ from London, near the river Glen; containing 36 houses and 193 inhabitants.

MILLHILL, a delightful little hamlet on the brow of a hill in the parish of Hendon, Middlesex, 10 miles from London; containing 6 houses and 36 inhabitants.

MILLINGTON, a hamlet in the parish of Rosthern, hundred of Bucklow, Chester, 4 miles from Knutsford, and 176 from London; containing 36 houses and 196 inhabitants.

MILLINGTON, a parochial chapelry in the division of Wilton beacon, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 3 miles from Pocklington, and 200 from London; containing 53 houses and 183 inhabitants.

MILLOM or MILLUM, a parish in Allerdale ward, above Derwent, Cumberland, lying between the rivers Dudden and Esk. 7 miles from Ravenglass, and 286 from London; it is the most southerly manor in the county, and contains 125 houses and 589 inhabitants. The ruins of an ancient mansion, the seat of the Hudlestons, are to be seen with an extensive park, beyond which rises Blackcomb mountain; whence in a clear day, may be distinctly seen seven English counties, and a great part of Scotland, Wales, and the Isle of Man. Millom, was formerly a market town. The chief business carried on is at the iron mills and mines in the neighbourhood. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 5*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the king as duke of Lancaster.

MILLSTREET, a small town in the county of Cork, province of Munster, Ireland, 136 miles from Dublin, which has considerably encreased of late years from the establishment of several manufactures of linen.

MILTHORPE, a small hamlet in the parish of Cokeney, Notts.

MILTHORPE, a market town in the parish of Heversham, in Kendal ward, Westmoreland, 8 miles from Kendal, and 252 from London; containing 208 houses and 968 inhabitants, pleasantly seated on the river Betha, which soon after joins the Ker near its mouth, and over which is a handsome stone bridge. In the neighbourhood are 2 paper mills. The market is on Friday. Fair, old May day.

MILLTOWN, a town in the county of Kerry, province of Munster, Ireland, 152 miles from Dublin.

MILLTOWN, a small village in the county of Dublin, province of Leinster, Ireland, 2 miles from Dublin.

MILLTOWN, a town in the county of Westmeath, province of Leinster, Ireland.

MILNROW, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Rochdale, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 1 mile from Rochdale, and 197 from London. Population returned included with Hundersfield.

MILSON, a hamlet in the parish of Neen Sollers, hundred of Overs, Salop, 3 miles from Tenbury, and 137 from London; containing 37 houses and 134 inhabitants.

MILSTON, a parish in the hundred of Amesbury, Wilts, 2 miles from Amesbury, and 79 from London, near the river Avon; containing 23 houses and 139 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.*

MILTON, the name of a hundred in the lathe of Scray, Kent, on the southern banks of the river Medway, and including the Isle of Shepey.

MILTON, a parish in the hundred of Ock, Berkshire, 7 miles from Wallingford, and 52 from London; containing 66 houses and 310 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 17*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*

MILTON, a parish in the hundred of Northstow, Cambridge, 3 miles from Cambridge, and 54 from London; containing 40 houses and 273 inhabitants. Four miles hence, at Denny island, was an abbey of benedictines, founded in 1169. In the following century it was in the possession of the knights Templars, and in the century after Mary de St. Paul, widow of the earl of Pembroke, founded a convent for nuns here of the order of St. Clare. The rectory, value 4*l.* 7*s.* 1*d.* is a sinecure in the patronage of King's College, Cambridge.

MILTON, or, as it is sometimes called, MILTON ROYAL, a market town and parish in the hundred of Milton, lathe of Scray, Kent, a place of great antiquity, situated at the head of a creek, that runs into the Swale, which separates the Isle of Shepey from the German ocean, 8½ miles from Chatham, and 40 from London; containing 253 houses and 1622 inhabitants, of whom 314 were employed in various trades. This was anciently the residence of the kings of Kent, whence it was termed the royal villa of Milton or Middleton, from its situation between the Downs and Deptford; but the royal palace was burnt down by earl Godwin in the reign of Edward the Confessor. The church is a neat building, but stands, at a considerable distance from the town, and contains some curious monuments. The town is tolerably well built, and is governed by a portreeve, who is supervisor of the weights and measures in the hundred. It has a port for barges, and is particularly noted for the produce of delicious oysters called Milton oysters. The market is on Saturday. Fair 24th July. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.*—Hasted's Kent.

Milton, a parish in the hundred of Toltintrough, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, forming the east side of Gravesend, and 22½ miles from London; containing 316 houses and 2056 inhabitants, viz. 953 males and 1103 females, of whom 299 were employed in trade, and the remainder principally in seafaring avocations. In the reign of queen Elizabeth it was made an incorporated market town with Gravesend, under the name of the portreeve, jurats, and inhabitants of the towns of Gravesend and Milton. It has a block-house and platform for the defence of the river, first erected in the reign of Henry VIII. Fair 25th January. The church stands near the sea shore, about 1 mile from the town of Gravesend, built of flints and rag stones, around which formerly stood the village of Milton, but it has now only one solitary farm-house.—Vide Gravesend. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.*—Pocock's Hist. of Gravesend and Milton.

Milton, a hamlet in the parish of Adderbury, in the hundred of Bloxham, Oxford, 5½ miles from Banbury, and 71 from London; containing 28 houses and 105 inhabitants. This place is noted for its spungy kind of earth used as a cement for walls in buildings.

Milton, a hamlet in the parish of Shipton under Wichwood, in the hundred of Chadlington, Oxford, 3 miles from Burford, and 75 from London; containing, in both upper and lower Milton, 111 houses and 495 inhabitants. On Milton heath formerly stood Bruern abbey.

Milton, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Milford, in the hundred of Christchurch, New Forest division, Hants, 3 miles from Lymington, and 98 from London; containing 113 houses and 522 inhabitants.

Milton, a small fishing village in the parish of Ecclesgreig, shire of Kincardine, Scotland; containing about 200 persons.

Milton Abbas, or Abbey Milton, a parish in the hundred of Whitway, division of Sherborne, Dorset, 111 miles from London; containing 70 houses and 544 inhabitants. It is supposed to have taken its name from an abbey which formerly stood here, and according to Camden, was founded by king Athelstan, to atone for the murder of his brother Edwin. The greater part of its remains were taken down in 1771 by the earl of Dorchester, then lord Milton, the owner: but the church is still standing. It has a well endowed almshouse and free-school. It is a rectory, value 10*l.*

Milton Abbotts, a parish in the hundred of Tavistock, Devon, 4 miles from Tavistock, and 209 from London, near Brent Torr; containing 152 houses and 862 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 19*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of the duke of Bedford.

Milton Bryant, a parish in the hundred of Manshead, Bedfordshire, 2 miles from Woburn, and 39 from London; containing 64 houses and 333 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of the king.

Milton Damerell, a parish in the hundred of Black Torrington, Devon, 8 miles from Hatherleigh, and 209 from London; containing 80 houses and 469 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 26*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.* with Cookbury chapel annexed.

Milton Earnest, a parish in the hundred of Stodden, Bedford, 5 miles from Bedford, and 55 from London; containing 59 houses and 300 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Milton Great, a parish in the hundred of Thame, Oxford, 4 miles from Thame, and 50 from London; containing 100 houses and 509 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 15*l.*

Milton Keynes, a parish in the hundred of Newport, Bucks, 3 miles from Newport Pagnel, and 47 from London; containing 57 houses and 280 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 20*l.*

Milton Lilbourn, a parish in the hundred of Kinwardstone, Wilts, 7 miles from Great Bedwin, and 78 from London; containing 108 houses and 573 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.*

Milton Little, a hamlet to the foregoing, 1 mile distant; containing 60 houses and 325 inhabitants.

Milton, or Middleton Malsor, a parish in the hundred of Wymersley, Northampton, 3 miles from Northampton, and 62 from London; containing 60 houses and 327 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* 15*s.* 10*d.*

Milton South, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Allington, hundred of Stanborough, Devon, 1¼ mile from Kingsbridge, and 208 from London; containing 45 houses and 302 inhabitants.

Milverton, the name of a hundred in Somerset, at the south-western extremity of the county and borders of Devonshire.

Milverton, a market town and parish, and formerly a borough in the hundred of Milverton, Somerset, 3 miles from Wellington, and 152 from London; containing 309 houses and 1669 inhabitants, of whom 666 were employed in trade and manufacture, particularly in those of serges and druggets, but not so considerable as formerly. The market is on Friday. Fairs, Tuesday in Easter week, 25th July, and 10th October. It is a vicarage, value 21*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.* with Langford chapel annexed, in the patronage of the archdeacon of Taunton.

MILVERTON, a parish in the hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, near the river Avon, 2 miles from Warwick, and 92 from London; containing 36 houses and 230 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

MILWICH, a parish in the hundred of Pirehill, Stafford, 4½ miles from Stone, 7½ from Uttoxeter, and 138 from London; containing 90 houses and 397 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

MIMERE, a river in Hertfordshire, which falls into the Bean above Ware.

MIMS NORTH, a parish in the hundred of Edmonton, Middlesex, 2 miles from Hatfield, and 12 from London, united with MIMS SOUTH, a parish near the foregoing, and 14 miles from London; containing 293 houses and 1698 inhabitants. The tower of the church, which stands by the road side, is entirely covered with ivy, and presents a very picturesque object. The windows contain some curious specimens of stained glass. It is a vicarage, value 12*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

MINALL. See MILDEN HALL, Wilts.

MINCHINGHAMPTON, a market town and parish in the hundred of Longtrees, Gloucester, 10 miles from Cirencester, and 100 from London; containing 692 houses and 2439 inhabitants, viz. 1549 males and 1890 females, of whom 451 were employed in trade and manufacture. Its name is supposed to have been derived from its having originally been the property of the Minchens or nuns of Caen and Sion. The clothing branch is carried on very extensively in this town and some of its dependent hamlets. The church is a large building in the form of a cross. In the north aisle are inscriptions for numerous benefactors to the parish, and in the south aisle is the statue of a man lying cross legged, with a sword and shield by his side, and his wife lying at his feet. In one of the districts of the parish is a very romantic valley called Golden Vale, and another at a place called St. Mary's hill, where it is supposed the famous Roger Bacon resided. There are a number of pleasant residences in the environs, particularly Bowsham House, Thuscomb, Rodborough, and Hampton and Gatcomb Park. The living is very good, and is a rectory, value 41*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*—Rudge's Gloucestershire.

MINDTOWN, a parish and curacy in the hundred of Purslow, Salop, 3 miles from Bishop's Castle, and 161 from London; containing only 6 houses and 38 inhabitants.

MINDRAM, or MINDRUM, a small hamlet on the borders of Scotland, in Northumberland, near the river Beaumont, 334 miles from London.

MINEHEAD, a seaport, borough and market town, in the hundred of Carhampton, Somerset, 24 miles from Bridgewater, and 168 from London, on the borders of Exmouth forest; containing 303 houses and 1168 inhabitants, of whom 111 were employed in trade and manufacture; but its consequence has much declined of late years, and its manufactures of woollen are now nearly gone to decay, its chief traffic being in the coal trade and a small herring fishery. The harbour is very safe and commodious, and easy of access. From the salubrity of the air and pleasant situation, Minehead is now much resorted to during the summer, for sea-bathing, and the accommodations are tolerably commodious. Its ancient name appears to have been Minsterved, or Mincheved, and it was incorporated as a borough by queen Elizabeth, who conferred extensive privileges on it, on condition that the corporation should keep the quay in repair; but its trade falling off, the quay was neglected and the charter lost. In the reign of king William an act was obtained for recovering the quay, by which the corporation were to have the profits of it and the pier, for 36 years, to defray the expence of rebuilding it. It is now considerably improved, by having a new head built to the quay, and the beach cleared, whereby vessels of the largest burthen may enter and ride safe in the harbour. The town is governed by two constables; and has sent 2 members to parliament since the first of Elizabeth. The right of election is in the parishioners of Dunster and Minehead, being housekeepers in the borough and not receiving alms: the number of voters are about 170. The returning officers are the constables. About 6 miles distant toward the south is the lofty mountain of Dunkerry, whose base is 12 miles in circumference, rising 1770 feet above the level of the sea. It appears to have been used as a beacon to alarm the country in cases of invasion, &c. having several fire hearths observable at it. The market is on Wednesday. Fair, Wednesday in Whitsun week. Post only 3 times per week to Taunton. It is a vicarage, value 18*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*—Collinson's Somersetshire.

MININGSBY, a small village in the hundred of Bolmbroke, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 3 miles from Spilsby, and 132 from London; containing 19 houses and 105 inhabitants.

MINNAGAFF, a parish in the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, 24 miles in length, adjoining Newton Douglas, and 96 miles from Edinburgh; containing 335 houses and 1609 inhabitants. It has a very rocky and hilly surface, some of the hills being 1660 feet above the sea. Cultivation has made but little improvement in this district, it being chiefly occupied by extensive sheep walks and for rearing black cattle and goats. Some of the mountains contain lead which is very advantageously worked.

MINSHULL CHURCH, a township and chapelry in the parish of Goppenhall, in the hundred of Nantwich, Chester, on the banks of the river Weyer, 4 miles from Nantwich, and 168 from London; containing 60 houses and 417 inhabitants.

MINSHULL VERNON, a hamlet to the foregoing, situated on the opposite side of the Wever, and in the hundred of Nortwich; containing 67 houses and 357 inhabitants.

MINSKIPP, a township in the parish of Aldborough, Claro wapentake, west riding of York, 1¼ mile from Aldborough, and 207 from London; containing 49 houses and 204 inhabitants.

MINSTEAD, a parish in the hundred of New Forest East, Hants, 8 miles from Romsey, and 81 from London; containing 139 houses and 764 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*

MINSTER, a parish in the hundred of Lesnewth, Cornwall, 3½ miles from Camelford, and 231 from London; containing 70 houses and 311 inhabitants. It is a donative.

MINSTER, a parish in the hundred of Ford, lathe of Scray, Kent, 4 miles from Queenborough, and 49 from London, on the north side of the island of Sheppey; containing 666 houses and 4139 inhabitants, viz. 1296 males, and 2143 females, of whom 525 were employed in trade. The present church is supposed to have been part of an ancient monastery, founded by Sexburgha, wife of Ercombert, king of Kent. On the vane of the church is the figure of the head of a horse, and on the right side of the monument of sir Robert de Shurland, is represented the head of a horse emerging from the sea, whence it is supposed that family were benefactors to it. The church contains three aisles, and 18 stone stalls supposed collegiate in the choir. —Hasted's Kent.

MINSTER IN THANET, a parish in the hundred of Rinslow, lathe of St. Augustine, Kent, 3½ miles from Sandwich, and 68 from London; containing 149 houses and 707 inhabitants. It received its name from a convent or abbey of nuns founded by a Saxon lady about the year 700. The monastery was several times burnt and plundered by the Danes. It is a vicarage, value 33*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury.

MINSTERLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Westbury, hundred of Ford, Salop, 10 miles from Shrewsbury, and 163 from London. Population returned included with Westbury.

MINSTER LOVELL, a parish in the hundred of Chadlington, Oxford, 2 miles from Witney, and 68 from London; containing 49 houses and 283 inhabitants. Near the parish church are the ruins of an ancient priory, formerly a cell to one of the Norman abbies. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*

MINSTERWORTH, a parish in the liberty of the duchy of Lancaster, in Gloucestershire, near the river Severn, 4 miles from Gloucester, and 108 from London; containing 72 houses and 354 inhabitants. On the south side next the river is a large common. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Bristol.

MINSTONE, a township in the parish of Otley, Skyrack wapentake, west riding of York, 1 mile from Otley, and 205 from London; containing 37 houses and 193 inhabitants.

MINTERN, a parish in the hundred of Cerne Totcomb, division of Sherborn, Dorset, standing in a pleasant vale, 2 miles from Cerne Abbas, and 122 from London; containing 28 houses and 324 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.*

MINTING, a parish in the hundred of Gartree, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 5 miles from Wragby, and 140 from London; containing 36 houses and 190 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 7*s.* 11*d.*

MINTLING, a hamlet to Lynn in Norfolk, half a mile distant; containing 2 houses and 17 inhabitants.

MINTO, a parish in the shire of Roxburgh, Scotland, on the banks of the Teviot, 7 miles from Hawick, and 10 from Melrose; containing 95 houses and 477 inhabitants: the village itself contains about 120 persons, and has a very extensive nursery, established by the Dicksons, from which originated the one near Perth, carried on by the same family as well as the extensive one at Edinburgh. From this village the family of Elliot take the title of baron, and in the neighbourhood is the elegant and ancient seat of lord Minto.

MINTY, a parish in the hundred of Crowthorne, Gloucester, although it is a detached part of the county, entirely surrounded by Wiltshire, 6 miles from Malmsbury, 6 from Cirencester, and 90 from London; containing 109 houses and 479 inhabitants.

MINTY ROWE, a hamlet to the foregoing parish, situated in the hundred of Malmsbury, Wilts.

MINWORTH, a hamlet in the parish of Curdworth, hundred of Hemlingford, Warwick, 3 miles from Coleshill, and 105 from London; containing 51 houses and 291 inhabitants.

MIRABLES, near St. Lawrence, in the Isle of Wight, a most romantic and picturesque situation, commanding a beautiful view of the ocean, with a neat little cottage. At the distance of about 3 miles are Knowls and Pitlands, a rude rocky scenery, with fine water, breaking immediately from under the stupendous cliffs of St. Catherine's.

MIRFIELD, a parish in Aybrig wapentake, west riding of York, 5 miles from Huddersfield, and 185 from London; containing 704 houses and 3724 inhabitants, viz. 1807 males and 1857 females, of whom 1887 were employed in various trades and manufactures, and 112 in agriculture.

MISERDEN, a parish in the hundred of Bisley, Gloucester, 2½ miles from Bisley, 9 from Gloucester, and 97 from London; containing 91 houses and 469 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

MISSENDEN GREAT, a parish in the hundred of Aylesbury, Bucks, 5 miles from Amersham, and 31 from London; containing 259 houses and 1411 inhabitants. The private mansion called the Abbey House, stands on the site of an abbey of black canons founded by sir William de Missenden, in 1183. The church is a neat building, and the living is a vicarage.

Missenden Little, a parish 2 miles from the foregoing, and containing 182 houses and 625 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 5*s.* 9*d.*

Misson, a parish in the hundred of Basset Law, Nottingham, on the river Idle, to which place it is navigable from the Trent, 2 miles from Bawtry, and 155 from London; containing 101 houses and 482 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.*

Misterton, a parish in the hundred of Basset Law, Notts, 4 miles from Gainsborough, and 156 from London; containing 118 houses and 612 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 17*l.* 10*s.* with Stockwith chapel annexed, and is in the patronage of the dean and chapter of York.

Misterton, a village in the hundred of Guthlaxton, Leicester, 1½ mile from Lutterworth. The population of this place was omitted to be returned.

Misterton, a parish in the hundred of Crewkern, Somerset, 1 mile from Crewkern, and 131 from London; containing 70 houses and 368 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Winchester.

Mistley, or generally called Mistley Thorn, a parish in the hundred of Tendring, Essex, ¼ mile from Manningtree, and 61½ from London; containing 105 houses and 554 inhabitants. Its port here on the river Orwell, called Ipswich Water, is joined with Manningtree, and has several small vessels in the coasting and London trade. In Lavington creek, there are immense shoals of muscles. The origin of its second name is recorded in a religious story of a large thorn that grew here, but has been long since destroyed. The ancient house of Mistley hall is a very handsome edifice. The living is a vicarage, value 16*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* with Manningtree chapel annexed.—Morant's Essex.

Misty Law, a hill in the parish of Lochwinnoch, Ayrshire, Scotland, 1240 feet above the level of the sea.

Mitcham, a parish in the hundred of Wallington, Surry, 7½ miles from London, on the road to Ryegate; containing 640 houses and 3466 inhabitants, viz. 1529 males and 1937 females, of whom 313 were employed in trade. There are some mills for grinding corn, tobacco, dyer's wood, &c. as well as some bleachfields, and there is also some calico printing done here. About 250 acres in this parish are employed in the cultivation of medicinal plants, and it has a considerable quantity of common. The little river Wandle here is much noted as a trout stream, and on its banks the Grove House, which has extensive plantations, has a charming appearance. The chancel of the church contains a monument to the memory of sir Ambrose Crowley, alderman of London, who died in 1713, and is celebrated in No. 73 of the Tatler, under the name of sir Humphrey Greenhat. In 1637 its church was destroyed by lightning, and 10 bells in part melted. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 10*d.*—Lysons's Environs of London.

Mitcham. See Mileham, Norfolk.

Mitcherdean or Great Dean, a market town and parish in the hundred of St. Briavell's, Gloucester, the chief town of that once extensive tract, The Forest of Dean, containing 30,000 acres of lands covered with forest timber, lying 12 miles from Gloucester, and 119¼ from London; and containing 117 houses and 563 inhabitants. The town consists principally of one street. There is a good church which has a handsome spire. The principal trade or manufacture is in cloth and pins, but both are now very inconsiderable. In some of the adjoining hamlets, in the forest, are a number of iron forges, which have considerably lessened its once immensity of timber. The market is on Monday. Fairs, Easter Monday and 10th October. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 16*s.*—Rudge's Gloucestershire.

Mitcheldever, the name of a hundred in Hampshire, lying between Winchester and Whitchurch.

Mitcheldever, a parish in the hundred of Mitcheldever, Hants, 7 miles from Winchester, and 55 from London; containing 84 houses and 145 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 26*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Mitchelstown, a town in the county of Cork, province of Munster, Ireland, 23 miles from Cork, and 102 from Dublin; is neat and well-built, and has a considerable share in the linen manufacture. It has a college or hospital for 12 decayed men and as many women, who have 40*l.* per annum with handsome apartments; the chaplain has 100*l.* per annum with a house; he officiates daily in a neat chapel belonging thereto.

Mitford, a parish in Morpeth ward, West division, Northumberland, 2¼ miles from Morpeth, and 292 from London; containing 42 houses and 199 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Durham.

Mitton, a hamlet in the parish of Whalley, hundred of Blackburn, Lancaster, 2 miles from Clitheroe, and 213 from London; containing 11 houses and 76 inhabitants.

Mitton Lower, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Kidderminster, hundred of Doddingtree, Worcester, 3¼ miles from Kidderminster, and 122 from London; containing 301 houses and 1603 inhabitants, of whom 234 were employed in various trades.

Mitton Upper, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Breedon, hundred of Doddingtree, Worcester, near Tewkesbury, and 106 miles from London; containing 31 houses and 147 inhabitants.

Mitton, a parish in the wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, west riding of York, 3 miles from Clitheroe, and 218 from London; containing 91 houses and 552 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 7*s.* 8*d.*

MIXBURY, a parish in the hundred of Ploughley, Oxford, 6½ miles from Bicester, and 61 from London; containing 67 houses and 304 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.*

MOAT, a township in the parish of Kirk Andrews on Eske, in Eskdale ward, Cumberland, 3 miles from Longtown, and 316 from London; containing 48 houses and 291 inhabitants.

MOBBERLEY, a parish in the hundred of Bucklow, Chester, 1 mile from Knutsford, and 172 from London; containing 201 houses and 993 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 23*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

MOCCAS, a parish in the hundred of Webtree, Hereford, 10 miles from Hay, and 150 from London; containing 31 houses and 143 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.*

MOCHRUM, a parish in the shire of Wigton, Scotland, on the bay of Luce, 6 miles from Wigton, and 10 from Newton Douglas; containing 234 houses and 1113 inhabitants. At the fishing town of Port William is a convenient harbour for vessels of 200 tons burthen. The castle of Mochrum is a picturesque ancient building, surrounded with lakes, the property of the earl of Galloway, formerly belonging to the Dunbars knights of Mochrum. On the banks of one of the lakes, is a very elegant modern mansion, the residence of sir William Maxwell, of Monreith. It commands an extensive prospect of the bay, the shores of Galloway, the Isle of Man, and the mountains of Cumberland.

MOCHTREL, a parish in Montgomery, Wales, 9 miles from Montgomery; containing 88 houses and 432 inhabitants.

MODBURY, a market town and parish, formerly a borough, in the hundred of Ermington, Devon, 2 miles from Totness, and 210 from London; containing 296 houses and 1813 inhabitants, of whom 862 were employed in trade and manufacture. It is much noted for its liquor called white ale. The market is on Thursday. Fair 23d April. It is a vicarage, value 19*l.* 12*s.*, in the patronage of Eton College.

MODNEY, a hamlet in the parish of Helgay, in Norfolk, near the river Ouse.

MOLASH, a parish in the hundred of Felborough, lathe of Scray, Kent, 5 miles from Ashford, and 52 from London; containing 42 houses and 294 inhabitants.

MOLD or MOULD, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Mold, Flintshire, Wales, 13 miles from Wrexham, and 207 from London; containing 632 houses and 4235 inhabitants, viz. 2007 males, and 2228 females, of whom 827 were employed in trade and manufacture. It consists principally of one long and very wide street, and some of the houses tolerably well built. Its name in Welsh is Yr Wyddgryg, or the conspicuous Barrow, from a hill in the neighbourhood, on which stood a castle which being besieged in 1263, was taken and burnt to the ground. The church erected in the reign of Henry VIII. is a neat building, and contains some handsome monuments. One mile distant, at Gaes Garmon, is an obelisk erected in 1730, to commemorate a victory obtained there over the Pagans, Picts, and Saxons. The market is on Saturday. Fairs, 13th February, 21st March, 12th May, 2d August, and 22d November.—Bingley's Tour in North Wales.

MOLE, a river in Surry, which runs under ground from Boxhill, near Darking, when it rises again near Leatherhead, from thence it continues its course northerly till it falls into the Thames opposite to Hampton Court, in Middlesex.

MOLESCROFT, a hamlet in the parish of St. John's Beverley, in the east riding of York. Population returned included with that parish.

MOFFAT, a parish chiefly situated in the shire of Dumfries, Scotland, having a small part in the shire of Lanark, 20 miles from Dumfries, and 48 from Edinburgh; containing 326 houses and 1619 inhabitants, of whom 140 were employed in trade and manufacture, principally in that of Scotch plaid. The village of Moffat stands at the head of a valley extending for 20 miles along the banks of the Annan, and is encompassed on all sides, except the south, by hills of different heights, and consists of one main and spacious street. The church is a very handsome building, and being surrounded with trees produces a good effect. The houses are not ill built, but all turned with their gable ends to the market-place. The surface of this extensive parish is rugged and mountainous, and one of the hills called Hartfel is 3300 feet above the level of the sea. This place, from the salubrity of its air and delightful scenery, is much resorted to by invalids during the summer season. Moffat has also been long celebrated for its mineral waters; they are of two kinds, sulphureous and chalybeate: the former has long been called the Moffat well, standing about 1½ mile from the village. The other is called Hartfel Spaw. There is also another chalybeate at the end of the town, on the Dumfries road, near Evan bridge. All these springs are much resorted to in scrophulous, herpetic, and rheumatic complaints. Among the natural curiosities of this parish is the Belle Craig rock, and the cascade called the Grey Mare's Tail, the latter formed by the waters which issue from Loch Skeen, falling from one precipice to another, with a tremendous noise, into a dark pool, which is almost hidden from the spectator: the water by its precipitous fall, is so broken by the air, as to appear as white as snow. The neighbouring hills are said to contain iron and copper. This was the place where lord Kenmuir erected the standard of rebellion in 1715, in favour of the chevalier St. George. —Pennant's Tour, and Lettice's Letters.

Molesden, a hamlet in the parish of Mitford, in Castle ward, Northumberland, 3 miles from Morpeth, and 290 from London; containing 6 houses and 38 inhabitants.

Molesworth, a parish in the hundred of Leightonstone, Hunts, 7 miles from Kimbolton, and 69 from London; containing 23 houses and 160 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 10*s.* 8*d.*

Molland, a parish in the hundred of South Moulton, Devon, 3 miles from South Moulton, and 179 from London; containing 90 houses and 473 inhabitants.

Mollington, Great and Little, two adjoining hamlets in the parish of Backford, hundred of Wirrall, Chester, 3 miles from Chester, and 183 from London; containing 21 houses and 134 inhabitants.

Mollington, a village and part of a parish in the hundred of Bloxham, in Oxfordshire, the remaining part being in the parish of Farnborough, hundred of Kineton, Warwick, 6½ miles from Banbury, and 76 from London; containing 62 houses and 322 inhabitants.

Molton North, or North Moulton, a parish in the hundred of South Molton, Devon, on the river Mole or Moule, 2 miles from South Molton, and 180 from London; containing 288 houses and 1541 inhabitants, of whom 801 were employed in various trades, &c. Fairs, Tuesday after 11th May and 12th November. It is a vicarage, value 16*l.* 16*s.*

Molton South, a market town and parish in the hundred of South Molton, Devon, on the river Mole or Moule, 12 miles from Barnstaple, and 179 from London, by Bridgewater; containing 559 houses and 2753 inhabitants, 1180 males, and 1573 females, of whom 2000 were employed in trade and manufacture, principally that of serges, shalloons, and felts. Many of the houses are well-built, and the church is a handsome structure, containing a beautiful altar piece, and some good monuments. The guildhall is large and commodious. The town is incorporated under a mayor and aldermen, and once sent members to parliament. The market is on Saturday, and is well supplied; and those on the Saturdays after 13th February, before 23d April, 1st August, 10th October, and 12th December have generally a great shew of cattle. Fairs, Wednesday before 22d June and 26th August. The church is a curacy, and was originally a rectory.—Polwhele's Devonshire.

Monaghloggdu, a parish in the hundred of Kemess, Pembrokeshire, Wales, 10 miles from Cardigan, and 243 from London; containing 82 houses and 352 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Moncaster, See Muncaster, Cumberland.

Monance, St. formerly called Abercrombie, a parish in the shire of Fife, Scotland, lying on the Frith of Forth, between the towns of Ely and Pittenween, 20 miles from Perth; containing 149 houses and 852 inhabitants. The coast consists of free and limestone rocks, and the town has a tolerably good harbour, being formerly one of the most considerable towns on the coast of Fife. The parish church is part of an old convent, situated on a rock projecting into the Frith, and is a stately Gothic pile in the form of a cross, but the eastern part is all that now remains as a place of worship.

Monckton Combe, a parish in the hundred of Bath Forum, Somerset, 2½ miles from Bath, and 106 from London; containing 65 houses and 369 inhabitants.

Monckton West, a parish in the hundred of Whitley, Somerset, near Bridgewater, and 149 miles from London; containing 121 houses and 794 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 26*l.*

Monedie, a parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, united with Logie Amon, 6 miles north-west of Perth; containing 269 houses and 157 inhabitants. This place is noted in Scottish history as the residence of the distinguished beauties, Bessy Bell and Mary Gray.

Monewden, a parish in the hundred of Loes, Suffolk, 5½ miles from Framlingham, and 82 from London; containing 23 houses and 157 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Mongham Great, a parish in the hundred of Cornilo, lathe of St. Augustine, Kent, 1¼ mile from Deal, and 72 miles from London; containing 59 houses and 248 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 18*l.* 5*s.* and is in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury. Fair 18th October.

Mongham Little, a hamlet to the foregoing, three quarters of a mile distant; containing 17 houses and 105 inhabitants.

Monifieth, a parish in the shire of Forfar, Scotland, lying on the Frith of Tay, near its fall into the German Ocean, 5 miles from Dundee; containing 282 houses and 1467 inhabitants. The parish consists of three villages, viz. the East Ferry, Monifieth, and Drumsturdy Muir. On a point of land projecting into the Tay, near East Perry, stands the castle of Broughty, formerly the key to the navigation of the river, but now in ruins. The remains of the ancient house of Grange, near the fall of the small river Dichty into the Tay, still displays marks of ancient magnificence. The chief employment of the labouring poor is in the various branches of the coarsest kinds of linen cloth for the Dundee market.

Monikie, a parish in the shire of Forfar, Scotland, the extremity of the parish stretching to the mouth of the river Tay; it lies 9 miles from Dundee, and contains 225 houses and 1276 inhabitants. At the village of Camus Town is a large upright stone, said to point out the place of interment of the Danish general Camus, who fell at the battle of Parrie in 1010. The parish contains several small hamlets.

Monimail, a parish in the shire of Fife, Scotland, between Cupar and Kirkcaldy, containing 223 houses and 1066 inhabitants. Melville house is the seat of the earl of Leven and Melville; and Ruthven castle is the seat of lord Ruthven. The ruins of Fairney are supposed to be those of one of Macbeth's castles.

Monington on Wye, a parish in the hundred of Grimsworth, Hereford, 9 miles from Hereford, and 144 from London; containing 27 houses and 135 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 27*l.* 12*s.* 10*d.*

Monivaird, a parish united with Strowna, in the shire of Perth, Scotland, lying in the upper part of Strathern, and on the banks of the Erne, 4 miles from Crieff, and 12 from Perth; containing 136 houses and 641 inhabitants. Some of the mountains in this parish are near 3000 feet above the level of the sea, but there are many parts well cultivated, and several extensive plantations newly made. On the lake of Monivaird is Ochtertyre, the seat of sir Pat. Murray, which has a most beautiful front of cut and polished granite.

Monk Bretton. See Bretton Monk, Staincliffe wapentake, west riding of York.

Monken Hadley, a parish in the hundred of Edmonton, Middlesex, 1 mile from Barnet, and 11¼ miles from London; containing 113 houses and 584 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Monkey Island, in the parish of Bray, Berks, lying in the Thames between Maidenhead and Windsor, 24 miles from London; it contains about three acres, and there is a neat house on it with convenient offices, built by the late duke of Marlborough. In the room called Monkey hall, is a variety of figures painted on the ceiling, &c. representing monkies, mermaids, dolphins, &c. It is said the fitting up of this cot cost the duke 10,000*l.* and the lease at public auction in 1787, for 30 years, brought only 240 guineas.

Monk Fryston, a parish in Barkston Ash wapentake, west riding of York, 13 miles from Leeds, and 180 from London; containing 50 houses and 277 inhabitants.

Monkhill, a hamlet to Pontefract, in the west riding of York, and nearly adjoining thereto.

Monk Hopton, a hamlet in the parish of Wenlock, in Wenlock franchise, Salop, 3 miles from Wenlock, and 145 from London; containing 41 houses and 212 inhabitants.

Monkland, a parish in the hundred of Stretford, Hereford, near the river Arrow, 2½ miles from Leominster, and 139 from London; containing 44 houses and 190 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 9*d.* in the patronage of the dean and canons of Windsor.

Monkland, a district in the shire of Lanark, Scotland, so named from the monks of Newbottle, to whom it originally belonged.

Monkland New, is the most northern parish in the shire of Lanark, stretching 10 miles in length and about 7 in breadth, the whole being a very beautiful champaign country, agreeably diversified with hill and dale. In this parish is situated the village of Airdrie, 7 miles from Glasgow. New Monkland contains 793 houses and 4613 inhabitants, viz. 2184 males and 2429 females, of whom 766 were employed in trade and manufacture, and 763 in agriculture.

Monkland Old, lies betwixt New Monkland and the river Clyde, 5½ miles from Glasgow, and contains 683 houses and 4006 inhabitants, viz. 2006 males and 2000 females, of whom 997 were employed in trade and manufacture, and 459 in agriculture. The whole parish is inclosed, and has the appearance of an extensive garden, ornamented with the numerous seats of the merchants of Glasgow. The Monkland canal from Glasgow has been the means of considerably increasing its trade and opulence. The principal manufactures here are of brick and tile, with several potteries, bleach and print fields, and the extensive Clyde iron works.

Monkleigh, a parish in the hundred of Shebbear, Devon, 2 miles from Black Torrington, and 206 from London; containing 60 houses and 379 inhabitants. In the church is a monument to the memory of sir William Hankford, chief justice of the King's Bench; when retiring here, he gave orders to his servants to kill any person, who, in the night, should not tell their name and business, when he fell a victim to the obedience of his own orders. It is a vicarage, value 12*l.* 14*s.* 7*d.*

Monk Oakhampton, a parish in the hundred of Black Torrington, Devon, 3 miles from Hatherleigh, and 198 from London; containing 44 houses and 182 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 14*s.* 7*d.*

Monkrider, a hamlet in the parish of Elsden, Coquetdale ward, Northumberland, 31 miles from Newcastle, and 307 from London; containing 15 houses and 98 inhabitants.

Monkseaton, a hamlet in the township of Whitley, in the parish of Tynemouth, Castle ward, Northumberland, 8 miles from Newcastle, and 284 from London; containing 98 houses and 427 inhabitants.

Monksherborn, a parish in the hundred of Chuteley, in the division of Kingsclere, Hants, 2 miles from Basingstoke, and 47 from London; containing 70 houses and 407 inhabitants.

Monks Illeigh, a parish in the hundred of Babergh, Suffolk, 1 mile from Bildeston, and 62 from London; containing 79 houses and 452 inhabitants.

Monksilver, a parish in the hundred of Williton and Freemanners, Somerset, 157 miles from London; containing 42 houses and 260 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 8*s.* 1*d.* and is in the patronage of the dean and canons of Windsor.

Monksoham, a parish in the hundred of Hoxne, Suffolk, 7 miles from Eye, and 85 from London; containing 46 houses and 329 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 19*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.*

Monkswood, a hamlet and chapelry to Usk, in Usk lower division, Monmouth, 2 miles from Usk, and 146 from London; containing 30 houses and 110 inhabitants. It derives its name from an extensive wood in which there formerly stood a monastery.

Monkton, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Colyton, Devon, 5 miles from Lyme, and 161 from London; containing 18 houses and 121 inhabitants.

Monkton, a township in the parish of Jarrow, in Chester ward, Durham, 4 miles from Gateshead, and 276 from London; containing 306 houses and 1566 inhabitants, of whom 363 were returned as being employed in various trades, &c.

Monkton, a parish in the hundred of Ringslow, lathe of St. Augustine, Kent, 4 miles from Ramsgate, and 70 from London, containing 59 houses and 300 inhabitants. The church appears to have been once collegiate, and the name of the place taken from a monastery formerly here. It is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.*

Monkton Farley, a parish in the hundred of Bradford, Wilts, 2 miles from Bathford, on the borders of Somerset, and 104 from London; containing 58 houses and 264 inhabitants. Some labourers at work on the estate of Webb Seymour, esq. discovered a stone pillar, and about four feet below the earth, part of a very curious pavement, as of a church, chequered and adorned with various figures, with several gravestones having French and Latin inscriptions on them, and near that part supposed to have been the chancel, a sepulchre, which contained the skeleton of a man, about six feet long, and by the hieroglyphics emblematical of his character on his tomb stone, supposed to have been the founder of an abbey of Cluniacs, of which this was conjectured to have been the church, and on the ground adjoining stood a yew tree, from which that part appears to have been the cemetery to it. It is a rectory, value 17*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.*—Britton's Wiltshire.

Monkton Moor, a parish in the Ainsty of York, 7 miles from York, and 205 from London; containing 38 houses and 256 inhabitants.

Monkwearmouth, a parish in Chester ward, Durham, 1 mile from Sunderland, and 275 from London, by Stockton, divided from Bishops Wearmouth by the river Wear, from which it is named, and from an extensive monastery which stood here, but from the various incursions of the Scots, was at length removed to Durham. It contains 175 houses and 1105 inhabitants. The connection with Bishops Wearmouth over the river is by a bridge of one arch, of cast iron, except the pins binding the several pieces together, which are of wrought iron. It is of sufficient height to admit colliers to pass with their top-masts up. See Sunderland and Bishops Wearmouth. The church is an ancient building, and is a curacy in the patronage of sir Hedworth Williamson.

Monkwearmouthshore, a hamlet to the foregoing, so called from its lying on the banks of the river Wear, containing 421 houses and 4239 inhabitants, viz. 1998 males, and 2241 females, of whom 956 were employed in various trades and manufactures, there being several small dock-yards, roperies, &c. necessary for the repair and equipment of the many vessels in the coal trade, belonging to the port of Sunderland. It is to be observed that the actual population is far greater than above stated, as all the seamen belonging to the registered vessels, and that numerous class called Keelmen, or men who convey the coals from the interior of the country in keels or barges to the colliers, which lay below the town of Sunderland, are not included, having been returned to government separately; the number of these cannot be less than 800 persons. Three miles distant, near the banks of the Wear, stands that antique mansion, Hilton castle, formerly belonging to a family of that name, who were called the bishops barons. It now belongs to the family of Bowes.

Monmouth, a borough, market, and the county-town of Monmouthshire, situated at the conflux of the Munnow and Wye, 25 miles from Gloucester, and 132 from London; containing 638 houses and 3345 inhabitants, viz. 1512 males, and 1833 females, of whom 6 9 were returned employed in various trades, and 380 in agriculture. Over each of the rivers is a handsome stone bridge, and another over the small river Trothy, which falls into the Wye. A broad and handsome street leads to the market-place, in which stands the town-hall built on pillars, forming a handsome colonnade, and ornamented with the statue of Henry V., who was born in this place, and from hence was called Henry of Monmouth. At the extremity of the town is the gaol, a massive stone building, commodiously built, and under excellent regulations. St. Mary's church is another stone building, having a spire 200 feet high. A little to the north are the remains of an alien priory of Benedictines, founded in the reign of Henry I., by Wihenoc, lord of Monmouth. There was a strong fortress here in the Saxon times, and the ruins of the walls with the four gates, were visible in the time of Leland; at present there are only part of two round towers discoverable, which belonged to the eastern gate; the gate and bridge of the Munnow, some traces of the moat, and the ruins of the castle. A free-school was founded here by a William Jones, a native of Newland in Gloucestershire, who having amassed a considerable fortune in menial service, returned in disguise to his native village and asked relief, and being referred to Monmouth, where he had been in service, he repaired thither and received relief from the towns people, on which he founded, a free-school, and endowed almshouses for 20 poor people, who receive 3s. 6d. per week, and allowed a stipend of 100l. per annum to a lecturer. There is a considerable iron manufactory in the town; and many of the inhabitants derive subsistence from the preparation of bark, which is brought from the forests of Wye and sent to Chepstow. Monmouth is a corporate town, and joins with Newport and Usk in returning one member to parliament. The returning officers are the mayor and bailiffs. It is governed by a mayor, recorder, two bailiffs, 15 common councilmen, a town-clerk, and two serjeants at mace. That memorable author of British history, Geoffry of Monmouth, was a native of this place. On the summit of Kymin hill, in the neighbourhood, is erected a pavilion, which commands an extensive prospect; the hill is crowned with a beautiful wood called Beaulieu Grove, through which walks are made terminating in seats, presenting a most beautiful view of the town and surrounding country. Half a mile from the town is Troy house, the seat of the duke of Beaufort, where is shewn the cradle in which Henry V. was rocked, and the armour he wore at the battle of Agincourt. The market is on Saturday, and is well supplied with corn and all kinds of provisions. Fairs, Whit Tuesday, 4th September, and 22d November. The church is a vicarage, value 94 2s. 3d.—Coxe's Tour in Monmouthshire.

Published Janr. 1. 1808, by R. Phillips, Bridge Street, Blackfriars London.

Cooper sculpt.

Monmouthshire, a county of England, bounded on the north-west by Brecknockshire, on the north-east by Herefordshire, on the east by Gloucestershire, on the south by the Severn, and on the west by Glamorganshire. It is about 24 miles long and 20 broad, containing 340,000 acres of land, having about 100,000 acres arable, 215,500 acres in pasturage, and about 20,000 acres uncultivated, including woodlands. It is divided into six hundreds, viz. Abergavenny, Caldicot, Ragland, Skenfreth, Usk, and Wentloodge, containing one borough, Monmouth; six market towns, viz. Abergavenny, Caerleon, Chepstow, Newport, Pontypool, and Usk, with 127 parishes, 8948 houses, inhabited by 45,582 persons, viz. 22,173 males, and 23,409 females, of whom 5540 were employed in trade and manufacture, and 12,871 in agriculture. The amount of money raised under the poors rate in 1803 was 25,048l. being at the rate of 7s. 11¼d. in the pound. The total amount of property returned in 1806, as liable to the income-tax, was 374,057l. The average scale of mortality for 10 years, appears to have been 1 to 58 of the existing population. Monmouthshire sends three members to parliament, viz. two for the county and one for the borough of Monmouth; it lies in the diocese of Llandaff, and province of Canterbury. This was formerly reckoned one of the Welsh counties, and from the names of its towns and villages, its mountainous appearance, and its situation beyond the river Wye, which seems to be a natural boundary between England and Wales, it certainly partakes of the character of the latter country. Its principal rivers are the Usk, the Wye, and the Mymow. The Usk divides the county into two equal portions, of which the eastern or largest is very fertile in corn and pasturage and well wooded; it abounds with limestone, which is burnt on the spot and makes excellent manure. The smaller western part is mountainous, and mostly unfavourable for cultivation, being principally devoted to the feeding of sheep. It has several long narrow vallies, watered by small streams which fall into the Bristol Channel. All the rivers above mentioned abound with fish, particularly salmon and trout. The river Avon empties itself into the Usk at Caerleon, and turns several mills for the working of iron plates, in a manufactory of japanned ware (once very considerable) at Pontypool on its banks. The principal manufacture of the county is flannels. The air in general is very temperate and healthy, and the soil tolerably fruitful. The language used by the lower class is Welsh, but the English is daily growing more familiar. At the Roman invasion it was part of the territory of the Silures, and was then considered as a part of Wales, and by the natives called Gwent, until the reign of Charles II. when it was taken into the Oxford circuit, and deemed a county of England.

Montacute, a parish in the hundred of Tintinhull, Somerset, 4 miles from Ilchester, and 123 from London; containing 169 houses and 827 inhabitants. Its ancient name appears to have been Logoresburg, but it received its present name from a sharp hill, covering about 20 acres of land, on which the earl of Moreton, brother of William the Conqueror, built a castle, and named it after his friend Drogo de Montacute, who came over to England with him: his son and successor erected a monestery, and endowed it with the borough and market of Montacute. On the summit of the hill on an area of about half an acre, where the castle once stood, is a round tower 60 feet high, on which a flag is occasionally displayed On this hill is a fair the first Wednesday after the 6th of May.—Collinson's Somerset.

Montieth, a district or formerly a division of Perthshire, being the south-west part of that county, being all the lands that lie upon the streams discharging themselves into the Forth, except the parish of Balquhidder. It formerly gave title of earl to a branch of the Graham family.

Montieth Loch, a beautiful expanse of water in the above district, five miles in circumference, in which are two islands and a peninsula covered with trees. It abounds with excellent pike, perch, and trout, and discharges itself into the river Forth

Montgomery, a borough, market and the county town of Montgomeryshire, Wales, 23 miles from Ludlow, and 169 from London; containing 155 houses and 972 inhabitants. It is situated on the ascent of a hill, near the right bank of the Severn, and was formerly surrounded with walls. Of late years it has received considerable improvements, and many of the buildings are large and handsome. The castle is situated on an eminence north of the town, and appears to have been a very stately building, supposed to have been erected by Baldwyn, lieutenant of the marches to William the Conqueror. During the civil wars, this castle under its governor lord Herbert of Cherbury, held out for the king, but was taken by the parliamentary army in 1644, and soon after dismantled by their order. The reliques of this fortress are very small; it has been divided by 4 fosses cut out of the rock, and each supposed to have a drawbridge. Toward the end it is a precipice, a little short of which is a level spot, which was the yard or parade of the place. At the bottom of the hill in the valley is a small fortification, having in it a high mount. On a hill near the castle is a stupendous British post; the approach is guarded by 4 great ditches, having 2 or 3 entrances toward the principal work. This was made a borough town in the reign of Henry III. and is governed by two bailiffs, a town clerk, and 2 serjeants at mace. It has sent 1 member to parliament ever since the 27th of Henry VIII. the number of voters being about 80. The church is a handsome structure, in the form of a cross, and is dedicated to St. Nicholas. At this place are held the general quarter-sessions and county courts, alternately with Machynleth, and it has a gaol and house of correction. The market is on Tuesday. Fairs, 1st Monday in March, 26th March, Saturday before Good Friday, 1st Thursday in May, 7th June, 5th Sept. 24th October, and 12th November. It is a rectory, value 17*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.*

MONTGOMERYSHIRE, a county in Wales, bounded on the north by Denbighshire, on the north-east and east by Salop, on the south east by Radnorshire, on the south-west by Cardiganshire, and on the west by Merionethshire. It is about 37 miles long, and 35 broad, and contains 500,000 acres of land, having about 60,000 arable, 180,000 pasturage, and about 250,000 uncultivated, including wood lands. It is divided into 9 hundreds, viz. Cawrse, Deuddwr, Llanfyllin, Llanidloes, Machyuleth, Mathrafel, Montgomery, Newton, and Pool; containing 5 market towns, or rather boroughs, as they jointly return 1 member to the imperial parliament, viz. Llanidlos, Llanvilling, Machynleth, Montgomery, and Welchpool. The county contains 47 parishes, 8725 houses and 47,878 inhabitants, viz. 22,914 males, and 25,064 females, of whom 6233 were employed in trade, handicraft, and manufacture, and 13,802 in agriculture. Amount of money raised for the maintenance of the poor in 1803, was 22,988*l.* at the rate of 5*s.* 11¼*d.* in the pound. The amount of assessment under the property tax in 1806, was 315.61*l.* and the average scale of mortality for 10 years appears to have been as 1 to 59 of the existing population. It sends 2 members to parliament, and lies in the dioceses of St. Asaph, Bangor, and Hereford, in the province of Canterbury, and is included in the north-east circuit. Montgomery, though barren and mountainous in many parts, has a greater mixture of fertile vale and plain than many other neighbouring counties. The most considerable of its level tracts is that through which the Severn flows. This fine river rising in the huge mountain of Plynlimmon, situated partly in this county and partly in Cardiganshire, runs first almost across the southern side of the shire, and turning northwards enters Salop from the east above the Brythen hills. The other principal streams are the Vyrnew, formed of two uniting branches of the same name, which cross the county from its western side, and the Tannat forming part of the Denbighshire boundary, meeting the Vyrnew before it joins the Severn. These rivers are all remarkable for their great variety of fish, particularly salmon, which penetrate up the Severn almost to the foot of Plynlimmon. The riches of this county proceed from its sheep and wool, and the flannels and coarse cloth manufactured therefrom. The hilly tracts are almost entirely sheep walks, and the flocks like those of Spain, are driven from distant parts to feed on them during summer, the farms in the vallies being only a sort of appendages for winter habitations and provisions. The manufactures are collected and sent to Welshpool in a rough state, to be finished and exported. Montgomeryshire also affords many mineral treasures, particularly lead. Near the conflux of the Vyrnew and Severn, is a large slate quarry, whence vast quantities are sent down that river to Bristol. Coals are not produced in this county, and the only fuel is wood or peat. Vast quantities of lime are burnt here, and carried to a considerable distance. The air is pleasant and salubrious, and the inhabitants are mostly a healthy race. In the time of the Romans this county was peopled by the Ordovices.

MONYQUHITTER, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, 14 miles from Peterhead, and 54 from Aberdeen; containing 405 houses and 1710 inhabitants. It is watered by 2 considerable rivulets, the one falling into the Deveron, and the other into the Ythan, which render their borders very fertile. The village of Cuminestown, in this parish, containing about 400 inhabitants, is a new establishment under the agricultural exertions and improvements of the late landholder, Joseph Cumine, of Auchry.

MONTROSE, a royal borough and sea-port town in the shire of Angus or Forfar, Scotland, seated on a peninsula, formed by the South Esk, a large expanse of water called the Bason, formed by that river and the German ocean, 12 miles from Aberbrothick, 36 from Aberdeen, and 70 from Edinburgh; containing 1010 houses and 7974 inhabitants, viz. 3380 males, and 4594 females, of whom 1422 were employed in various trades and manufactures, and 382 in agriculture. The town is neatly built, and principally consists of one spacious street, but the houses in general have their gable ends toward the street. The parish church is a large new building, very elegantly finished, being 98 feet long, and 65 feet broad. The episcopal chapel, to the eastward of the town, in the Links, is a neat building, with a fine organ. The old town house is situated in the middle of the main street, and has been lately repaired as a prison. The new town house is a neat low building, having piazzas below, and chambers for public business above. The lunatic hospital is a plain and commodious building, erected in 1779, and situated in the Links: used not only for the reception of lunatics, but for the indigent sick. Of late the town has received a great improvement by the erection of a fine bridge over the South Esk by the island of Inchbrayock, and from the end of it a new street has been formed to the middle of the town, by cutting through the Fort hill. The harbour here is commodious, and admits vessels of large burthen, having dry and wet docks for the building and repairing of ships. There are upwards of 100 vessels belonging to this port, which are chiefly employed in the coasting and Baltic trades. The principal manufactures are linen yarn, thread, sheeting, and sail-cloth, beside the erections for which there is an extensive tannery, and several rope-walks. It joins with Aberdeen, Aberbrothick, Bervie, and Brechin, in sending 1 member to the imperial parliament; and gives title of duke, as it did formerly of earl and marquis, to the chief of the noble family of Graham. The corporation consists of 19 members, viz. a provost, 5 bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer, hospital master, 10 merchant counsellors, and 2 counsellors from the trades: the counsellors are self-elected, and no change of the merchants is required, but the trades must be changed every two years. In general it is reckoned a very gay place, being more the residence of persons of opulence and fashion than of commerce or trade, having a theatre, monthly assemblies, and other annual places of public amusement. In the neighbourhood are several very elegant seats, and here are mineral springs, both chalybeate and sulphureous. The tide flows into the lake or bason, washing the garden walls of the houses on the west side, but it is nearly dry at low water. At this place the Pretender landed on the 22d December, 1715, and embarked on the 14th February following.—Lat. 56° 40′. Long. 2° 32′ west.

Monyash, a township and chapelry in the parish of Bakewell, hundred of High Peak, Derby, 3 miles from Bakewell, and 157 from London; containing 66 houses and 330 inhabitants. The curacy is in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Litchfield.

Monymusk, a parish in the district of Garioch, shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, 9 miles from Old Rain, and 124 from Edinburgh; containing 269 houses and 901 inhabitants. The river Don runs through the parish, and in general it is well cultivated.

Monxton, a parish in the hundred and division of Andover, Hants, 3 miles from Andover, and 66 from London; containing 59 houses and 297 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 12*s.* 11*d.* in the patronage of King's college, Cambridge.

Monzie, a parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, 3 miles from Crieff, and 14 from Perth; containing 233 houses and 1157 inhabitants. It is watered by the rivers Amond, Keltie, and Skaggie, and being very mountainous, has several romantic cascades. The tomb of Ossian was supposed to have been discovered here at the time of making the Highland road.

Moonzie, a small parish in the shire of Fife, Scotland, 2 miles from Cupar; containing 39 houses and 201 inhabitants.

Moor, a hamlet in the parish of Tamworth, in the hundred of Offlow, Staffordshire. The population was returned included with the hamlet of Coton.

Moorby, a parish in Horncastle soke, Lindsay division, Lincolnshire, 3 miles from Horncastle, and 136 from London; containing 21 houses and 79 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Carlisle.

Moore, a hamlet in the parish of Fladbury, hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 2 miles from Pershore, and 103 from London. Population returned included with Hill.

Moorhouse, a township in the parish of Burgh, Cumberland ward, Cumberland, 4 miles from Carlisle, and 308 from London; containing 55 houses and 264 inhabitants.

Moorhouses, a hamlet in the parish of Houghton Le Spring, in Easington ward, north division, Durham, 5 miles from Durham, and 265 from London; containing 4 houses and 23 inhabitants.

Moorlinch, a parish in the hundred of Whitley, Somerset, situated at the bottom of the Polden hill, 4 miles from Bridgewater, and 137 from London; containing 40 houses and 234 inhabitants.

Moorsholm, a township in the parish of Leverton, in Langborough wapentake, north riding of York, 4 miles from Gisborough, and 247 from London; containing 65 houses and 302 inhabitants.

Moorsley, a hamlet in the parish of Houghton Le Spring, in Easington ward, north division, 4 miles from Durham, and 264 from London; containing 7 houses and 36 inhabitants.

Moorton, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Thornbury, Gloucester, 1 mile from Thornbury, and 123 from London; containing 84 houses and 486 inhabitants.

Moortown, a hamlet in the parish of Brandsburton, Holderness wapentake, east riding of York, 4 miles from Hornsea, and 190 from London; containing 4 houses and 32 inhabitants.

Moorwinstow, a parish in the hundred of Stratton, Cornwall, 4 miles from Stratton, and 225 from London; containing 140 houses and 874 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Exeter.

Moray, or Murray, a shire in Scotland, which formerly comprehended the shire of Nairn, Moray Proper or Elgin, and the greater part of the shire of Banff, and was formerly a bishopric. It is now a synod, comprehending a considerable part of Inverness, and gives title of earl to a branch of the Stuart family.

Moray Proper, or Elginshire, is bounded on the north by that branch of the German ocean called the Moray Frith, on the east and south-east by the shire of Banff, on the south-west by Inverness, and on the west by Inverness and Nairn, being about 42 miles long and 20 broad, and containing 2 royal boroughs Elgin and Forres, 18 parishes, and several considerable towns, the whole containing 5992 houses inhabited by 26,705 persons, viz. 11,763 males, and 14,942 females, of whom 4410 were employed in trade, handicraft, and manufacture, and 8131 in agriculture. Its principal rivers are the Spey, Findhorn, and Lossie, all of which abound with salmon. The southern part is rocky and mountainous, called the District of Braemoray, and is occupied by extensive forests. The lower parts toward the north are rich and fertile, and capable of great improvement in cultivation. Except freestone and limestone, no mineral substance of any value has been discovered here.

Moray Frith, a considerable inlet of the German ocean, lying between Tarbetness in Ross shire on the north, and Kinnaird's head in the district of Buchan on the South, extending in a westerly direction as far as Inverness. Its breadth opposite the point of Ardersier, on which Fort George is built, is contracted to about 2 miles, above which it expands into a considerable bay, having safe anchorage.

Morban, a parish in the hundred of Normancross, Huntingdon, 2 miles from Stilton, and 79 from London; containing 14 houses and 71 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 6*s.* 10*d.*

Morbath, a member of Chideoke, in the parish and hundred of Whitchurch, division of Bridport, Dorset.

Morbattle, a small parish in the shire of Roxburgh, Scotland, 8 miles from Jedburgh, and 7 from Kelsoe; containing 133 houses and 785 inhabitants. It is watered by the rivers Eyemont and Kail, which flow at the foot of the Cheviot hills, and fall into the Tweed.

Morchard Bishops, a parish in the hundred of Crediton, Devon, 7 miles from Crediton, and 187 from London; containing 310 houses and 1698 inhabitants, of whom 413 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. It is a rectory, value 36*l.*

Morcott, a parish in the hundred of Wrandike, Rutland, 4 miles from Uppingham, and 86 from London; containing 69 houses and 364 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.*

Morden, a parish in the hundred of Loes Barrow, division of Shaston, Dorset, 5 miles from Wareham, and 106 from London; containing 127 houses and 587 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.*

Morden, a hamlet in the parish of Sedgfield, in Stockton ward, Durham, 8 miles from Stockton, and 256 from London; containing 29 houses and 101 inhabitants.

Morden, a parish in the hundred of Wallington, Surrey, 9¼ miles from London; containing 65 houses and 512 inhabitants. In the neighbourhood are several elegant villas, particularly Coombe house, belonging to earl Spencer. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 12*s.* 11*d.*

Morden Guilden. See Guilden Morden, Cambridge.

Morden Steeple. See Steeple Morden, Cambridge.

Mordiford, a parish in the hundred of Greytree, Hereford, on the banks of the Wye, near Hereford, 132 miles from London; containing 103 houses and 490 inhabitants. It is rectory, value 10*l.* 6*s.* 5*d.*

Mordington, a parish in the shire of Berwick, Scotland, situated in the south-east corner of the county adjoining to the land belonging to the town of Berwick on Tweed; containing 59 houses and 350 inhabitants. It is bounded on the east by the ocean, and on the south by the river Whittadder. In 1650 the parish of Lamerton was annexed to it, the church of which is noted as the place where king James IV. of Scotland, was married to Margaret the daughter of Henry VII. Edington castle, the ruins of which shew its former strength, is situated on the top of a steep rock, at the foot of which flows the Whittadder. At the hill called the Witches Knoll, several unfortunate women were burnt for witchcraft, so late as the beginning of the seventeenth century.

More, a parish in the hundred of Purslow, Salop, 3 miles from Bishop's Castle, and 160 from London; containing 56 houses and 288 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 6*s.* 2*d.*

More, a hamlet in the parish of Rickmansworth, Herts.

Morebath, a parish in the hundred of Bampton, Devon, 2 miles from Bampton, and 166 from London; containing 65 houses and 420 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*

Moreen, a village in the county of Dublin, province of Leinster, Ireland, 4 miles from Dublin, on the road to Bray, a very picturesque situation, remarkable for a desperate battle fought some centuries since by two neighbouring families, who having satiated their revenge, erected, by way of expiation, a church in the valley where the battle was fought.

Moreleigh, a parish in the hundred of Stanborough, Devon, 5 miles from Totness, and 200 from London; containing 21 houses and 127 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 8*s.* 1*d.*

Morestead, a parish in the hundred and division of Fawley, Hants, 3 miles from Winchester, and 65 from London; containing 9 houses and 44 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Winchester.

Moreton, the name of a hundred in Berks, on the eastern side of the county, separated from Oxfordshire by the river Thames.

Moreton North, a parish in the hundred of Moreton, Berks, 3 miles from Wallingford, and 48 from London; containing 55 houses and 282 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.*

Moreton South, a parish in the same hundred, 1 mile distant from the foregoing; containing 72 houses and 320 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 15*s.* 5*d.*

Moreton, a township in the parish of Church Over, in the hundred of Wirrall, lower division, Chester, 6 miles from Parkgate, and 198 from London; containing 39 houses and 210 inhabitants.

Moreton, a hamlet in the parish of Astbury, hundred of Northwich, Chester, 3 miles from Congleton, and 160 from London; containing 20 houses and 116 inhabitants.

Moreton, a parish in the hundred of Winfrith, division of Blandford, Dorset, 7 miles from Wareham, and 117 from London; containing 50 houses and 256 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.*

Moreton, a parish in the hundred of Ongar, Essex, 5 miles from Epping, and 21¼ from London; containing 63 houses and 360 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 20*l.* in the patronage of St. John's college, Cambridge.

Moreton Corbett, a parish in the hundred of North Bradford, Salop, 8 miles from Shrewsbury, and 160 from London; containing 29 houses and 180 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.*

Moreton by Sea, a hamlet in the parish of Hodnett, in the hundred of North Bradford, Salop, 3 miles from Drayton, and 160 from London; containing 123 houses and 683 inhabitants.

Moreton, a township in the parish of Church Eaton, hundred of Cuttlestone, Stafford, 4 miles from Newport, and 156 from London; containing 118 houses and 658 inhabitants.

Moreton Hampstead, a market town and parish in the hundred of Teignbridge, Devon, situated on a small eminence surrounded by hills, 14 miles from Exeter, and 183¾ from London, on the borders of Dartmoor forest; containing 402 houses and 1768 inhabitants, of whom 599 were employed in trade and manufacture, particularly that of woollen cloth and yarn. The church is handsome. Here are also a good charity-school, and 3 meeting-houses. The town is governed by a portreeve chosen annually at the court leet of the lord of the manor. It has the vestiges of 2 castles or forts, and in its neighbourhood are a Druidical temple, a very large rocking-stone, and a cromlech, all which are worthy observation from the antiquary. The market is on Saturday. Fairs, 1st Saturday in June, 3d Thursday in July, and last Thursday in November. It is a rectory, value 49*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.* —Polwhele's Devonshire.

Moreton in the Marsh, a township in the parish of Bourton on the hill, in the hundred of Westminster, Gloucester, 4 miles from Stow, and 82 from London; containing 169 houses and 829 inhabitants. It was formerly a market town, but the market has been long since discontinued. The ancient fosse way runs through the town from the west to the north of England. Fairs, 25th March, and 12th November. Here is a chapel of ease.

Moreton Maids. See Maids Moreton, Bucks.

Moreton Pinckney, a parish in the hundred of Green's Norton, Northampton, 5 miles from Towcester, and 64 from London; containing 83 houses and 420 inhabitants. The church is a curacy, in the patronage of Oriel college, Oxford.

Morham, a parish in the shire of Haddington, Scotland, the smallest in the country, and containing only 1000 acres of land. It lies 4 miles from Haddington, and contains 52 houses and 254 inhabitants.

Moriston, a river in the shire of Inverness, Scotland, rising in Glensheal, and falling into Loch Ness, forming near its entry into the lake a grand cascade, giving the name of Glenmoriston to the vale through which it runs.

Morland, a parish in West ward, Westmoreland, 4 miles from Appleby, and 274 from London; containing 52 houses and 273 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 18*s.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Carlisle.

Morlestone, the name of a hundred in Derbyshire, lying in the southern part of the county around Derby.

Morley, the name of a wapentake in the west riding of York, at the south-western extremity of the county and borders of Lancashire.

Morley, a parish in the hundred of Morlestone and Litchurch, Derby, 4½ miles from Derby, and 130 from London; containing 47 houses and 256 inhabitants. The church is greatly admired on account of its painted windows and handsome tombs. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

MORLEY ST. BOTOLPHS, a parish in the hundred of Forehoe, Norfolk, 2 miles from Wymondham, and 98 from London; containing 29 houses and 133 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 11*s.* 5*d.*

MORLEY ST. PETER'S, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Morley St. Botolphs, ¾ of a mile from the foregoing; containing 19 houses and 124 inhabitants.

MORLEY, a township in the parish of Batley, in Morley wapentake, west riding of York, 4½ miles from Leeds, and 190 from London; containing 422 houses and 2108 inhabitants, viz. 1094 males, and 1014 females, of whom 397 were employed in trade and manufacture, and 45 in agriculture.

MORLTON GRANGE, a hamlet in the parish of Houghton Le Spring, in Easington ward, north division, Durham, 6 miles from Durham, and 265 from London; containing 33 houses and 188 inhabitants.

MORNINGTHORPE, a parish in the hundred of Depwade, Norfolk, 10 miles from Norwich, and 100 from London; containing 18 houses and 136 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* in the patronage of the king.

MORPETH, the name of a ward in Northumberland, lying on the eastern side of the county, having the river Wensbeck on the south, and the Coquet on the north.

MORPETH, a borough, market town, and parish in Morpeth ward, west division, Northumberland, 15 miles from Newcastle, and 292 from London, on the north side of the river Wensbeck; containing 413 houses and 2951 inhabitants, viz. 1342 males, and 1609 females, of whom 689 were employed in trade and manufacture, and 116 in agriculture. The church is a plain structure on the south side of the river, opposite to which is the rectory house, a handsome new building. Near the bridge is the county gaol, also a new structure. A grammar school was founded here by Edward VI. endowed with the revenues of two dissolved chantries. The school house of which with a neat chapel, has been lately erected on the banks of the river near the bridge which leads to Newcastle. An elegant town house was built here by the Carlisle family in 1714, in which their manorial court is held, as well as the quarter sessions for the county. The structure is of hewn stone, having a piazza ornamented with rustic work, and the superstructure decorated with turrets. The market place is conveniently situated near the centre of the town, though it is rather confined, and in 1783, a new market cross was erected at the expence of the corporation. Near the market place is a tower, containing a good ring of bells, the church being about ¼ of a mile distant from Morpeth. Is a borough by prescription, and is governed by 2 bailiffs and 7 aldermen, annually elected from the free burgesses, being inhabitants, and paying scot and lot. It has sent 2 members to parliament ever since the reign of queen Mary, who are elected by the bailiffs and free burgesses, and returned by the bailiffs, the number of voters being about 200. In the year 1215, this town was burnt by the inhabitants, out of revenge to king John. It had formerly an abbey and a castle, built by William lord Greystock, in the reign of Edward III. situated on an eminence near the river. The tower has formerly had angular turrets at the north-east and south-east corners, with a communication by an open gallery, which was supported by projecting pillars. The market is on Wednesday, and is well supplied with live cattle. Fairs, Holy Thursday, and St. Magdalen's day. It is a rectory, value 32*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

MORRESBY, a parish in Allerdale ward, above Derwent, Cumberland, 2 miles from Whitehaven, and 303 from London; containing 83 houses and 371 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 2*s.* 3*d.*

MORRICK, a hamlet in the parish of Warkworth, in Morpeth ward, east division, 11 miles from Morpeth, and 302 from London; containing 12 houses and 49 inhabitants.

MORSTON, a parish in the hundred of Holt, Norfolk, 5 miles from Holt, and 122 from London; containing 15 houses and 99 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 18*l.*

MORTHOE, or MORETHOE, a parish in the hundred of Braunton, Devon, 9 mile from Barnstaple, and 202 from London; containing 44 houses and 254 inhabitants. There is an ancient tomb in the church to the memory of sir William Tracey, said to have been one of the murderers of Becket. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 19*s.* 3*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Exeter.

MORTIMER STRATFIELD. See STRATFIELD MORTIMER, Berks.

MORTLACH, a parish in the shire of Banff, Scotland, 16 miles from Fochabers, and 50 from Aberdeen; containing 404 houses and 1876 inhabitants, of whom 110 were employed in various trades. It is watered by the two beautiful rivulets the Fiddich and the Dullan, both tributary to the Spey. Its appearance is very prettily variegated with hill, dale, arable, and pasturage land; containing 3 old castles at Auchindune, Balvenie, and Edinglassie. Mortlach was raised to an episcopal see by Malcolm, in gratitude for a signal victory he here obtained over the Danes; but it was soon after translated to Aberdeen. This parish claims the origin of the two Scottish songs, "Roys Wife in Aldivaloch," and "Tibby Fowler in the Brae."

MORTLAKE, a parish in the hundred of Brixton, Surrey, near the banks of the Thames, 7 miles from London; containing 328 houses and 1748 inhabitants, of whom 738 were employed in various trades. In the church-yard of this place was interred the celebrated astrologer Partridge, well known for his almanacks. He was first apprenticed to a shoemaker, but being fond of reading, taught himself Latin, Greek and Hebrew; he also studied physic, obtained a diploma, and was appointed physician to Charles II. William III. and queen Mary. He died in 1715. A great part of this parish is enclosed in Richmond park. The stone Lodge upon the hill, was built after a design of Henry earl of Pembroke, and was intended by George I. as a place of refreshment after the fatigues of hunting; but was not finished till the late princess Amelia, became ranger of the park. Great quantities of asparagus are raised in this parish for the London market, and at the extremity toward Richmond his majesty has a farm of about 100 acres in his own occupation, which is in a high state of cultivation, worked by teams of oxen. It was first established about the year 1787. The manor, which is now included in that of Wimbledon, once belonged to the see of Canterbury, and the manor house was the occasional residence of the archbishop. It was afterwards exchanged with Henry the VIIIth, and at the dissolution granted to the newly erected chapter of Worcester with the great tithes of the church of Wimbledon, on condition of their appointing three perpetual curates to serve the church there and the 2 chapels of Mortlake and Putney, but it is now a distinct parish and curacy.—Manning's Surry and Lysons's Environs of London.

Morton, a parish in the hundred of Scarsdale, Derby, 17 miles from Derby, and 143 from London; containing 24 houses and 109 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 10*s.*

Morton, a parish in the hundred of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 5½ miles from Folkingham, and 96 from London; containing 127 houses and 603 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 1*s.* 10*d.* united with Haconby, in the patronage of the bishop of Lincoln.

Morton, a parish in the hundred of Corringham, parts of Lindsay, Lincoln, 1 mile from Gainsborough, and 143 from London; containing 99 houses and 390 inhabitants.

Morton, a parish in the hundred of Eynesford, Norfolk, 7 miles from Reepham, and 112 from London; containing 22 houses and 125 inhabitants.

Morton, a parish in the hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, 2 miles from Southwell, and 124 from London; containing 24 houses and 101 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Morton, a hamlet in the parish of Aindersby Steeple, in Gilling East wapentake, north riding of York, 2 miles from North Allerton, and 230 from London; containing 49 houses and 184 inhabitants.

Morton, a township in the parish of Bingley, Skyrack wapentake, west riding of York, 6 miles from Bradford, and 202 from London; containing 140 houses and 658 inhabitants.

Morton Bagots, See Bagots Morton, Warwick.

Morton Jeffery's, a parish in the hundred of Radlow, Hereford, 6 miles from Bromyard, and 132 from London; containing 9 houses and 64 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Hereford.

Morton Valence, a parish in the hundred of Whitstone, Gloucester, 5 miles from Stroud, and 107 from London; containing 47 houses and 265 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Morton Morrell, a parish in the hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, 2 miles from Rugby, and 82 from London; containing 45 houses and 183 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.*

Morton, a parish in the shire of Dumfries, Scotland, bounded by the rivers Nith, Carron, and Campie; containing 271 houses and 1255 inhabitants, nearly the whole parish is the property of the duke of Queensberry. The remains of Morton Castle are still very great, and from the traces of its foundation it must have been of much greater extent. It formerly belonged to the earls of Morton.

Morvan, a parish in the hundred of Penwith, Cornwall, 3 miles from Penzance, and 292 from London; containing 40 houses and 282 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Morval, a parish in the hundred of West Cornwall, 2 miles from East Looe, and 253 from London; containing 82 houses and 533 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of the king.

Morven, or Morvern, a parish in the shire of Argyle, Scotland, situated on the banks of the sound of Mull, 14 miles from Fort William; containing 353 houses and 2083 inhabitants. The shore is indented with many bays, and the only trade of any consequence is produced by the manufacture of kelp. The principal antiquity is the ruins of a castle called Ardterinish, on the banks of the Mull, where M'Donald of the isles used to reside and hold his parliaments. Its name is supposed to be derived from the gaelic word Mor Erran or the great division. This district being 20 miles long and 10 broad.—McLeod's Statis. Acct.

Morven, a hill in the parish of Latheron, shire of Caithness, Scotland, 1 mile above the level of the sea. There is also another hill of the same name on the borders of Logie Coldstone, shire of Aberdeen, upwards of 3100 feet above the level of the sea.

Morvil, a parish in the hundred of Brimstrey, Salop, 2 miles from Bridgnorth, and 141 from London; containing 59 houses and 309 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Mose, a parish united with Beaumont, in the hundred of Tendring, Essex, 10 miles from Colchester, and 7 from Harwich. Population returned with Beaumont.

Muse, a river that runs through Leicestershire, Derby, and Stafford, and falls into the Trent near Croxall.

Mosborrow, a small village in the hundred of Northwich, Chester; containing 4 houses and 27 inhabitants.

Moseley, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Bromsgrove, hundred of Halfshire, Worcester, near Bromsgrove, and 117 miles from London. Population returned included with Bromsgrove.

Mosley, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Ashton under line, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 1 mile from Ashton under line, and 180 from London. Population included with Ashton.

Moss, a village in the wapentake of Osgoldness, west riding of York, near Snaith, and 174 from London; containing 45 houses and 226 inhabitants.

Mossdale, a hamlet in the parish of Caldbeck, near Hesket, Cumberland.

Mosser, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Brigham, Allerdale ward, above Derwent, Cumberland, near Cockermouth, and 302 miles from London; containing 22 houses and 101 inhabitants.

Mossidr, a hamlet to Manchester, in the hundred of Salford, Lancaster; containing 24 houses and 150 inhabitants.

Mosterton, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of South Perrott, hundred of Beaminster, division of Bridport, Dorset, 4 miles from Beaminster, and 137 from London; containing 42 houses and 242 inhabitants.

Moston, a township in the parish of Manchester, hundred of Salford, Lancaster, near Manchester, and 185 miles from London; containing 91 houses and 618 inhabitants.

Motcombe East, a parish in the hundred of Redlane, division of Shaston, Dorset, near Shaftesbury, and 103 miles from London; containing 138 houses and 917 inhabitants, including the hamlet of West Motcombe adjoining. Anciently the town of Shaftesbury was supplied with water from hence on the backs of horses, and for which the mayor and corporation annually went in procession and paid tribute.

Mote, a small hamlet, 1 mile from Maidstone, Kent.

Motherley, a hamlet in the parish of Greystock, in Leath ward, Cumberland, 4 miles from Penrith, and 287 from London; containing 20 houses and 78 inhabitants.

Mothvey, a parish in the hundred of Perfidd, Carmarthenshire, Wales, near Carmarthen, and 230 miles from London; containing 202 houses and 934 inhabitants.

Mottisfont, a parish in the hundred of Thorngate, division of Andover, Hants, 5 miles from Stockbridge, and 71 from London; containing 80 houses and 368 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 18*s.* 11*d.*

Mottiston, a parish in the liberty of West Medina, in the Isle of Wight, Hants, on the sea coast, 5 miles from Newport; containing 25 houses and 159 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.*, and is united with Shorewell vicarage.

Mottram, a parish in the hundred of Macclesfield, Chester, 4 miles from Macclesfield, and 170 from London; containing 153 houses and 948 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 32*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.*

Mottram, St. Andrews, a township to the foregoing, 1 mile distant; containing 66 houses and 319 inhabitants.

Mottray, a small river in the shire of Fife, which falls into the Eden, near the bay of St. Andrews.

Mouldsworth, a hamlet in the parish of Alvanley, hundred of Eddisbury, Chester, 9 miles from Chester, and 180 from London; containing 22 houses and 142 inhabitants.

Moulin, a highland parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, situated at the junction of the Tummel and Garry, 50 miles from Edinburgh; containing 449 houses and 1908 inhabitants. The village of Moulin, containing about 200, and the small village of Pitlochy, about 160, near the junction of the Tummel and Garry, is the famous pass of Killiecrankie, noted for the defeat of the royal forces of king William by the Highlanders under viscount Dundee.

Moule, a river in Devonshire, which falls into the Towridge, near the Severn sea.

Moulsford, a tything in the parish of Cholsey, hundred of Moreton, Berks, 4 miles from Wallingford, and 44 from London; containing 32 houses and 152 inhabitants.

Moulsoe, a hamlet in the parish of Newport Pagnel, hundred of Newport, Bucks, ½ mile from Newport Pagnel, and 49 from London; containing 62 houses and 282 inhabitants.

Moulsey East, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Kingston on Thames, hundred of Elmbridge, Surry, 1 mile from Kingston, and 14 from London; containing 95 houses and 462 inhabitants.

Moulsey West, a parish in the hundred of Elmbridge, Surry, 1½ mile from Kingston; containing 53 houses and 320 inhabitants. This place, as well as the foregoing, takes its name from the river Moule, or Mole which runs between them. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the bishop of Winchester.

Moulsham, a hamlet to Chelmsford, in the hundred of Chelmsford, Essex, distant therefrom 1 mile.

Moulton South, the name of a hundred in Devonshire, in the northern part of the county, bounded on the west by the river Mole, and on the east by Somersetshire.

Moulton, a small village in the hundred of Northwich, Chester, near Sandbach; containing 18 houses and 103 inhabitants.

Moulton, a parish in the hundred of Eloe, parts of Holland, Lincoln, 4 miles from Spalding, and 105 from London; containing 276 houses and 1228 inhabitants, of whom 112 were employed in various trades. It is a vicarage, value 28*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

MOULTON, a parish in the hundred of Depwade, Norfolk, 11 miles from Norwich, and 100 from London; containing 58 houses and 354 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 6*s.* 3*d.* and is united with Tonstall.

MOULTON, a parish in the hundred of Waisham, Norfolk, 3 miles from Acle, and 117 from London; containing 12 houses and 170 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

MOULTON, a parish in the hundred of Spelloe, Northampton, 4 miles from Northampton, and 69 from London; containing 194 houses and 833 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.*

MOULTON, a parish in the hundred of Resbridge, Suffolk, 3 miles from Newmarket, and 64 from London; containing 36 houses and 249 inhabitants. The rectory of this parish is valued at 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* and the vicarage at 4*l.* 7*s.* 8*d.* They are both peculiars of the archbishop of Canterbury.

MOULTON, a township in the parish of Middleton Tyas, Gilling East wapentake, north riding of York, 4 miles from Richmond, and 238 from London; containing 35 houses and 174 inhabitants.

MOUNT BURES, a parish in the hundred of Lexden, Essex, 5 miles from Halstead, and 51 from London; containing 35 houses and 250 inhabitants. It is called Mount Bures to distinguish it from Bures St. Mary, on the opposite side of the Stour, in the county of Suffolk, and from a considerable artificial mount near the church, whereon is supposed to have been originally a fortification or castle. The church is in the form of a cross, and is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

MOUNT GABRIEL, a conical hill in the county of Cork, province of Munster, Ireland, about 300 yards above the level of the sea. On its summit is a deep well: the hill affords a prospect of vast extent over a rude uncultivated country from the Mizen head to Ross.

MOUNT GARRET, a village in the county of Wexford, province of Leinster, Ireland.

MOUNT MELLICK, a very neat town in Queen's county, province of Leinster, Ireland, (seated on a small river, which runs into the Barrow,) 5 miles from Maryborough, and 41 from Dublin. It has a considerable trade in woolcombing, malting, tanning, and in the manufacture of coarse cottons.

MOUNTHEELEY, a hamlet in the parish of Rothbury, in Coquedale ward, Northumberland, near Rothbury, and 306 miles from London; containing 7 houses and 24 inhabitants.

MOUNTNESSING, a parish in the hundred of Chelmsford, Essex, 9 miles from Romford, and 21 from London; containing 74 houses and 381 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 11*l.*

MOUNTON, formerly a parish in the hundred of Caldicot, Monmouth, 2 miles from Chepstow, and 131 from London; containing 7 houses and 40 inhabitants. This parish has not a church.

MOUNT'S BAY, an extensive bay of the English-channel, near Penzance, which takes its name from St. Michael's Mount, nearly opposite Marazion. On the top of the mount is a church, occasionally used for divine service, in the tower of which is a good ring of bells. At the bottom are docks for repairing small vessels, with houses for the habitation of the artificers. At low water there is a dry passage to it from the main land.

MOUNT SORREL, a market town, situated in the parishes of Barrow and Rothley, in the hundred of West Goscote, Leicester, 4 miles from Loughborough, and 105 from London; containing 218 houses and 1233 inhabitants, of whom 766 were employed in various trades. Its original name, according to Camden, was Mount Soar-Hill, from its being built on a steep craggy hill over the river Soar, formerly belonging to the earl of Leicester. It was famous for its castle in the reign of Henry III. which was besieged and demolished in 1217 by the country people in revenge for the injuries they had sustained from the depredations of the garrison. At Barrow on Soar, 1 mile distant, is dug a stone of great durability, of which many of the houses are built and the streets paved. It is often dug up in perfect cubes, and being too hard to be cut or broken, the smoothest face is laid outward in beds of lime, which is also made here of peculiar quality and of so good a nature, that great quantities are exported for the use of works which are constructed in water. Here were formerly two chapels, but now there is only one, which is a tolerably neat building. The market is on Monday. Fair, 10th July.—Nicholls's Leicestershire.

MOUNTRATH, a town in Queen's county, province of Leinster, Ireland, 6 miles west of Maryborough, and 46 south-west of Dublin. It has a very considerable woollen manufacture, and there are several iron forges and furnaces in the neighbourhood.

MOURNE, a barony in the county of Down, province of Ulster, Ireland, is named from a ridge of high mountains called the Mountains of Mourne.

MOURNE, a village in the county of Cork, province of Munster, Ireland. See BALLYNAMONA.

MOURNE, a river of Donnegal, Ireland, which issues from a lake of the same name in that county, and runs into the Foyle at Lifford.

MOUSON, a hamlet in the parish and ward of Balmbrough, Northumberland, 2 miles from Belford, and 323 from London; containing 10 houses and 51 inhabitants.

MOUSELEY, a hamlet in the parish of Knaptoft, hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 12 miles from Lutterworth, and 85 from London; containing 54 houses and 248 inhabitants.

Moy, a river of Connaught, Ireland, separating the counties of Mayo and Sligo, and falling into the Atlantic ocean below the port of Killala.

Moyallen, a village in the county of Down, province of Ulster, Ireland, 3 miles from Portadown, and 63 from Dublin. It has considerably increased of late years from its linen manufacture.

Moylgrove, a parish in the hundred of Kemess, Pembrokeshire, Wales, near Newport, and 264 miles from London; containing 69 houses and 352 inhabitants.

Moynes, in Hemsted, a small village near Colchester, Essex, the church of which has been annexed as a chapel to the vicarage of Great Samford.

Moy and Dalarossie, an united parish in the district of Badenoch, in the shire of Inverness, 30 miles long, mostly barren and mountainous, except toward the banks of the river Findhorn. The lake of Moy is about 2 miles long, and ½ broad, having in the middle an island of about 2 acres, on which are the remains of a house where the lairds of Mackintosh resided in the time of any disturbance. The remains of the foundations of houses are still to be seen in which his attendants lodged, as well as a garrison of 400 men. The lake abounds with char and trout. The united parish contains 302 houses and 1,321 inhabitants.

Moydart. See Moidart.

Moyle, a river in the county of Tyrone, province of Ulster, Ireland, which falls into the Maurne, 5 miles south of Strabane.

Muchelney, a river island on the south side of Langport, Somerset, formed by the conflux of the Ivel with another small river, and on which stood a monastery of black canons. It contains 30 houses and 283 inhabitants.

Muck, one of the Hebrides islands belonging to the parish of small Isles, and the shire of Argyle, lying 4 miles west from the island of Eigg; containing about 200 inhabitants. The coast is rocky and indented with several creeks, affording good shelter for fishing boats. The cod and ling fishery is very productive, and a considerable quantity of oil is extracted from the livers of the sun fish, called by the natives Cearban, and sold annually to the Glasgow merchants.

Muckart, a parish in the shire of Perth, Scotland, on the banks of the Devan, 8 miles from Kinross, and 15 from Perth; containing 123 houses and 538 inhabitants.

Mucking, a parish in the hundred of Barnstaple, Essex, 3 miles from Grays, and 27 from London; containing 24 houses and 109 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of St. Paul's.

Muckelford, a hamlet in the parish of Bradford Peverel, hundred of St. George's, division of Dorchester, Dorset, 4 miles from Dorchester, and 120 from London. Population included with Bradford.

Muckleston, a parish in the hundred of Perchill, Stafford, 4 miles from Brayton, and 158 from London; containing 106 houses and 683 inhabitants. From the tower of this church, Margaret of Anjou, the faithful consort of Henry IV. beheld the fatal battle of Blorehea h, where her husband's troops were defeated. It is a rectory, value 20*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.*

Mucklewick, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Chirbury, Salop, 3 miles from Montgomery, and 163 from London; containing 14 houses and 54 inhabitants.

Much Marcle, a parish in the hundred of Greytree, Hereford, 7 miles from Ross, and 120 from London; containing 113 houses and 626 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 0*s.* 5*d.*

Muckton, a parish in the hundred of Louth Esk, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 4 miles from Louth, and 148 from London; containing 18 houses and 91 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.*

Mudford, a parish in the hundred of Stone, Somerset, 2 miles from Yeovil, and 120 from London; containing 52 houses and 352 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Wells.

Muggerhanger, a hamlet in the parish of Blunham, hundred of Wixamtree, Bedford, 4 miles from Biggleswade, and 49 from London; containing 43 houses and 345 inhabitants.

Muggleswick, a parish in Chester ward, Durham, near Durham, and 264 miles from London; containing 42 houses and 201 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Durham.

Mugginton, a parish in the hundred of Appletree, Derby, 5½ miles from Derby, and 131 from London; containing 51 houses and 308 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.*

Muick, a small river in Aberdeen, Scotland, which rises in the Grampian mountains, and passing through Glenmuick falls into the Dee, after a course of 10 miles. Opposite Glenmuick church it forms a waterfall, near which it has a beautiful bridge of 3 large arches.

Muiravonside, a parish in the shire of Stirling, Scotland, on the west bank of the Avon, 8 miles from Borrowstounness; containing 241 houses and 1070 inhabitants. On the banks of the river are the ruins of an old abbey and castle.

Muirhouse, a parish in the shire of Forfar, Scotland, 5 miles from Dundee, on the road to Brechin; containing 85 houses and 591 inhabitants.

Muirkirk, a parish in the district of Kyle, shire of Ayr, Scotland, 20 miles from Ayr, and 52 from Edinburgh; containing 377 houses and 2560 inhabitants. The village is at a small distance from the church, situated on the brow of a rising ground called Garan hill, which gives its name to the place. Owing to the introduction of the coal, tar, and iron manufacture, it has greatly encreased of late years.

MUKER, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Grinton, Gilling West wapentake, north riding of York, 5 miles from Askrigg, and 252 from London; containing 236 houses and 1119 inhabitants.

MULBARTON, a parish united with Bracon Ash, in the hundred of Humbleyard, Norfolk, 5 miles from Norwich, and 104 from London; containing 49 houses and 358 inhabitants.

MULL, a large island of the Hebrides, belonging to the shire of Argyle, Scotland, about 25 miles long and nearly as many broad, intersected by several small arms of the sea, and separated from the district of Lorne by a narrow sound. It is divided into 3 parochial districts, Killinichen, Kilninian, and Torosay, and comprehends the adjacent isles of I-colm-hill, Staffa Ulva, Gometree, &c. and contains a population of 8367 persons. The interior is very hilly and covered with heath, from which great numbers of black cattle are annually exported. According to the statistical account of Scotland, agriculture throughout the island is performed in a slovenly manner, and the principal manure is obtained from the sea weed or shell sand. The climate is very moist, the rains being frequent and heavy and the roads rugged and mountainous. The hill of Benmore is 3000 feet above the level of the sea. The only village of any considerable size is Tobermory at the northern extremity. Upon a bold headland projecting into the sea, is situated Dowart castle, formerly the seat of the Macleans, proprietors of one half of the island: it is now mostly in ruins, one part of it being made habitable for a detachment from the garrison at Fort William to repress smugglers. In many places the rocks are Basaltic and often assume a regular columnar form. Near the small village Aros some of the rocks are of white lava. Seams of coal have been discovered in some places lying under a strata of Basaltes, and in others, Basaltes incumbent on that mineral, perhaps the only instance of the kind in the world. At Balphetrish is the Ringing Srone, 7 feet long, 6 broad, and 4¼ thick, it is of a dull grey colour spotted with stars of black Mica, and so hard that it is impossible with a common hammer to break off the smallest bit; when struck with a stone or other hard substance it yields a sound like brass or cast iron.

MULL, SOUND OF, a narrow arm of the sea, lying between the island of Mull and the mainland of Argyle and Inverness, from 2 to 10 miles broad.

MULLA, a river in Montgomeryshire, Wales, which falls into the Severn at Castle Dolvern.

MULLION, a parish in the hundred of Kerriar, Cornwall, 4 miles from Helstone, and 200 from London; containing 102 houses and 529 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of Exeter.

MUMBY, a parish in the hundred of Calceworth, Lindsay division, Lincoln, near Alford, and 140 miles from London; containing 93 houses and 461 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 12*s.* 3*d.*

MUNCASTER, a parish in Allerdale ward, above Derwent, Cumberland, adjoining Ravenglass, and 287 miles from London; containing 79 houses and 354 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

MUNDEN, a parish in the hundred of Dengy, Essex, 4 miles from Maldon, and 40 from London, on a small creek opposite to Steeple; containing 27 houses and 283 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 13*l.*

MUNDEN, or MUNDANE GREAT, a parish in the hundred of Broadwater, Herts, 3 miles from Standon, and 29 from London; containing 77 houses and 396 inhabitants. At Rowney, in the neighbourhood, anciently stood a convent of benedictine nuns. The church stands on a hill and is a rectory, value 21*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.* in the patronage of the king.

MUNDEN LITTLE, a parish 1 mile distance from the foregoing, nearer Ware; containing 85 houses and 453 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.*

MUNDFORD, a parish in the hundred of Grimshoe, Norfolk, 3 miles from Brandon, and 81 from London; containing 56 houses and 274 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 17*s.* 4*d.*

MUNDHAM, a parish united with Heckingham, in the hundred of Lodden, Norfolk, 6 miles from Bungay, and 114 from London; containing 46 houses and 242 inhabitants.

MUNDHAM, a parish in the hundred of Box and Stockbridge, rape of Chichester, Sussex, 2 miles from Chichester, and 65 from London; containing 65 houses and 324 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 0*s.* 10*d.*

MUNDSLEY, a parish in the hundred of North Erpingham, Norfolk, 3 miles from North Walsham, and 127 from London; containing 40 houses and 204 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.*

MUNGO, ST. a parish in the shire of Dumfries, Scotland, in the district of Annandale, near Moffat; containing 125 houses and 644 inhabitants. It is watered by the rivers Milk and Annan, both of which abound with excellent salmon.

MUNGO ST. A small island in Loch Lunnhè, having the ruins of a chapel dedicated to St. Mungo. In the church yard the neighbouring district still bury their dead.

MUNGRISDALE, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Greystock, in Leath ward, Cumberland, 8 miles from Penrith, and 291 from London; containing 34 houses and 169 inhabitants.

MUNGWELL, a village in the hundred of Langtree, Oxford, 1 mile from Wallingford, and 45 from London; containing 21 houses and 125 inhabitants.

MUNSELLEIGH. See MONKS ILLEIGH, Suffolk.

MUNSLEY, a parish in the hundred of Radlow, Hereford, 3 miles from Ledbury, and 124 from London; containing 30 houses and 159 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*

MUNSLOW, the name of a hundred in Salop, lying on the southern side of the county and bordering on Herefordshire.

MUNSLOW, a parish in the hundred of Munslow, Salop, 11 miles from Ludlow, and 154 from London; containing 109 houses and 610 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 21*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.* with Thongland chapel annexed.

MURCOT, a hamlet in the parish of Wickham, Gloucestershire, 6 miles from Campden.

MURCOT, a hamlet in the parish of Long Buckby, hundred of Guildsborough, Northampton, 10 miles from Northampton, and 75 from London. Population returned with Long Buckby.

MURRAY, county of, or ELGIN. See MORAY.

MURRAH, a hamlet to Greystock, in Leath ward, Cumberland, 8 miles from Penrith, and 291 from London. Population returned with Berrior.

MURSTON, a parish in the hundred of Milton, lathe of Scray, Kent, ½ mile from Milton, and 40 from London; containing 17 houses and 128 inhabitants It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 12*s.* 2*d.*

MURSLEY, a parish in the hundred of Cotslow, Bucks, 2 miles from Winslow, and 50 from London; containing 65 houses and 318 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 11*l.*

MURTON, a hamlet in the parish of Dalton le Dale, in Easington ward, Durham, 6 miles from Sunderland, and 270 from London; containing 16 houses and 75 inhabitants.

MURTON, a hamlet in the parish of Osbaldwick, in the Ainstey of York, 3 miles from York, and 99 from London; containing 22 houses and 110 inhabitants.

MURTON, a hamlet in the parish of Lamplugh, Allerdale ward, above Derwent, Cumberland, 4 miles from Whitehaven, and 300 from London; containing 30 houses and 139 inhabitants.

MURTON, a hamlet in the parish of St. Michael's Bondgate, East ward, Westmoreland, 2 miles from Appleby, and 270 from London. Population returned with Bondgate. Near it is a remarkable hill called Murton Pike resembling a pyramid.

MUSBURY, a parish in the hundred of Axminster, Devon, 3 miles from Axminster, and 147 from London; containing 63 houses and 280 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 19*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*

MUSBURY, a township in the parish of Bury, hundred of Blackburn, Lancaster, near Burnley, and 212 miles from London; containing 81 houses and 463 inhabitants.

MUSKHAM NORTH, a parish in the hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, 3½ miles from Newark, and 128 from London; containing 78 houses and 361 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

MUSKHAM SOUTH, a parish 1 mile distant from the foregoing; containing 49 houses and 284 inhabitants. It is also a curacy.

MUSCOAT, a hamlet in the parish of Kirby moorside, Rydall division, north riding of York, 1 mile from Kirby, and 229 from London; containing 8 houses and 70 inhabitants.

MUSGRAVE, a parish in East ward, Westmoreland, 1 mile from Brough, and 260 from London; containing 29 houses and 139 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* 1*s.* 11*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Carlisle.

MUSGRAVE LITTLE, a hamlet in the parish of Crossby Garret, in East ward, Westmoreland, 2 miles from Brough, and 260 from London; containing 12 houses and 68 inhabitants.

MUSSELBURGH, a considerable sea-port town in Mid Lothian, or shire of Edinburgh, Scotland, seated at the mouth of the river Esk, in the parish of Inveresk, 6 miles south-east of Edinburgh, and the suburb of Fisher row, which is united to Musselburgh by a bridge over the Esk, and is considered as part of the burgh and under the same magistracy. The burgh contains 4015 inhabitants, viz. 2130 resident in Musselburgh and 1885 in Fisher-row. It is a very ancient burgh of regality and was once named Musselburghshire. It is governed by a town council of 18 members, 10 elected from Musselburgh and 8 from Fisher-row; out of these 2 bailies and a treasurer are annually elected. There are also 7 incorporated trades. The magistrates are empowered to hold a court of record, and it possesses all the privileges of a royal burgh, except voting for the election of a member of parliament and of sending a delegate to the convention of Burghs. Between the sea and the town lie the extensive downs called Musselburgh Links, much frequented for the healthful exercise of the Golf.

MUSTON, a parish in the hundred of Framland, Leicester, standing on the river Dean, 6 miles from Grantham, and 117 from London; containing 41 houses and 204 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 13*s.* in the patronage of the king.

MUSTON, a parish in Dickering Lyth, east riding of York, 2 miles from Hunmanby, and 212 from London; containing 57 houses and 236 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 10*s.*

MUSWELL HILL, 1 mile north of Highgate, where are several pleasant mansions: it was formerly called Pinsenhall hill, but took its present name from a spring or well to which was ascribed peculiar virtues. By it was a chapel with an image of our lady of Muswall, to which a great number of pilgrims resorted. Some years since the manor house was converted into a place of public entertainment.

MUTFORD and LOTHINGLAND, the name of a hundred in Suffolk, being the most northern extremity of the county.

Mutford, a parish in the hundred of Mutford and Lothingland, Suffolk, 4 miles from Lowestoffe, and 110 from London; containing 57 houses and 290 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 17*s.* 1*d.* and is united with Barnby rectory, in the patronage of Gonvil and Caius College, Cambridge.

Muthill, a parish in the shire of Perth, situated on the borders of the Highlands, on the great military road to Inverness, by Taybridge, 4 miles from Crieff, 17 from Stirling, and 16 from Perth; containing 589 houses and 2880 inhabitants, viz. 1323 males and 1557 females, of whom 455 were employed in various trades. Besides the rivers Erne and Allan, it is watered by the rivulets Mackany and Knaick, all of which abound with salmon and trout. About a mile from the village stands Drummond Castle, the ancient seat of the Perth family: and Ardoch, the seat of sir William Stirling, a venerable and extensive edifice.

Muthvey, a river in Carmarthenshire, which runs into the Towy near Llangadock.

Myrhwey, a river in Merionethshire, which runs into the Avon at Kemmer Abbey; there is also another river of the same name in Cardiganshire, which falls into the Towy.

Myerscough, a hamlet to St. Michael's Garstang, in the hundred of Amounderness, Lancashire, 8 miles from Preston, and 224 from London; containing 76 houses and 464 inhabitants.

Mylor, a parish in the hundred of Kerriar, Cornwall, three quarters of a mile from Falmouth, and 270 from London; containing 328 houses and 1665 inhabitants.

Myms, North and South. See Mims North and South, Herts.

Mynow, a river in Monmouthshire, which runs into the Wye at Monmouth.

Mychinghampton. See Minchinghampton, Gloucester.

Mythe, a small hamlet near Tewkesbury, in Gloucestershire.

Myton, a parish in Bulmer wapentake, north riding of York, 2 miles from Aldborough, and 207 from London; containing 26 houses and 126 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* in the patronage of the archbishop of York.

Naas, the county-town of the county of Kildare, province of Leinster, Ireland, situated on the great post-road between Dublin and Munster, near the grand canal, 15 miles from Dublin. It was formerly celebrated as the residence of the kings of Leinster. Near the entrance of the town is one of those Danish mounds or Raths so frequently to be met with in Ireland, at the foot of which are the remains of a house for hermits of the order of St. Augustine, and in the centre of the town, those of a monastery for Dominican friars. Many of the houses evince the dreadful effects of the civil war in 1798.—Carr's Stranger in Ireland.

Nabee Loch, a small lake in Morayshire, Scotland, in the parish of St. Andrew's, Lhanbryd, about 3 miles in circumference, and in which is a beautiful island, covered with wood, frequented by innumerable flocks of wild geese, ducks, and occasionally swans.

Naburn, a hamlet in the parish of St. George's York, in the east riding of York. 1 mile from York, and 200 from London; containing 65 houses and 363 inhabitants.

Nackington, a parish in the hundred of Bridge and Petham, lathe of St. Augustine, Kent, 1¼ mile from Canterbury, and 56 from London; containing 21 houses and 124 inhabitants. It is a curacy in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury.

Nacton, a parish in the hundred of Colneis, Suffolk, 3 miles from Ipswich, and 72 from London; containing 51 houses and 461 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 7*s.* 1*d.* united with Levington.

Nadder, a river that rises near Donhead, on the borders of Dorsetshire, and falls into the Willy, at Wilton.

Nafferton, a hamlet in the parish of Ovingham, in Tindal ward, East division, Northumberland, 10 miles from Newcastle, and 286 from London; containing 10 houses and 41 inhabitants.

Nafferton, a parish in Dickering lythe, east riding of York, 1 mile from Great Driffield, and 198 from London; containing 159 houses and 721 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 15*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the archbishop of York.

NAILSEA, a township and chapelry in the parish of Wraxall, hundred of Portbury, Somerset, 7 miles from Bedminster, and 120 from London; containing 174 houses and 1093 inhabitants, of whom 198 were employed in trade and manufacture.

NAILSTON, a parish in the hundred of Sparkenhoe, Leicester, 8½ miles from Hinckley, and 108 from London; containing 101 houses and 492 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 24*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of the king.

NAILSWORTH, a hamlet in the parish of Horsley, hundred of Longtrees, Gloucester, 2 miles from Minchinghampton, and 100 from London. Population included with Horsley.

NAIRN, SHIRE OF, a part of the ancient county of Moray, Scotland, bounded on the North by the Moray Frith, surrounded on all the other parts by the shires of Elgin and Inverness. It is about 18 miles long and 10 broad; containing one royal borough NAIRN, and four parochial districts, 1940 houses inhabited by 8257 persons, viz. 3639 males, and 4618 females, of whom 898 were employed in various trades and manufacture, and 2901 in agriculture. The general appearance is agreeable, rising into considerable mountains toward the south, but toward the north level and the soil abundantly fertile. It is watered by the rivers Findhorn and Nairn, besides several small brooks, the banks of which are covered with woods and plantations. It sends one member to parliament alternately with the county of Cromarty.

NAIRN, a royal borough and the county town of Nairn, situated on the coast of the Moray Frith, where the river Nairn flows into that arm of the sea, 8 miles from Fort George, and 10 from Forres; containing 543 houses and 2215 inhabitants, viz. 930 males, and 1285 females, of whom 621 were employed in trade and manufacture. The town is neatly built and has a small and convenient harbour, capable of being highly improved. Its situation has undergone several changes, it being originally placed at least half a mile from where it now stands, defended by a castle, the ruins of which are covered by the sea. From the coast of the Frith it has a regular ascent to the hill of Urchany, which is elevated 300 feet above the level of the sea. On the side of the hill of Geddes are the vestiges of Finlay castle, formerly a very strong building, and on the east side of the same hill are the remains of the castle of Rait, once the residence of the family of Cumin. The government of this town is vested in 17 persons, viz. a provost, three bailies a dean of guild, treasurer, and 11 counsellors. It formerly gave title of baron to the Nairn family.

NAIRN RIVER, in Gaelic Uisg Nearne, or the water of Alders, from the number of trees of that species growing on the banks: It rises in the shire of Inverness, and passing through Nairn falls into the Moray Frith after running a course of 50 miles.

NANDDEE, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Cantraff, in the hundred of Penkelly, Brecon, Wales, 10 miles from Brecon, and 160 from London; containing 17 houses and 96 inhabitants.

NANTGYNNLLE, a parish in the hundred of Pennarth, Cardiganshire, Wales, 9 miles from Lampeter, and 213 from London; containing 99 houses and 457 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

NANTMEL, a parish in the hundred of Rhaidar, Radnorshire, Wales, 6 miles from Rhayader, and 172 from London; containing 102 houses and 609 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of St. David's.

NANTON, a small hamlet in the hundred of Kiftsgate, Gloucester, near Winchcombe, containing 7 houses and 60 inhabitants.

NANTWICH, the name of a hundred in Cheshire, being the most southern point of the county, bordering on Salop.

NANTWICH or NAMPTWICH, a market-town and parish in the hundred of Nantwich, Chester, situated on the river Wever, 14 miles from Chester, and 164¼ from London, by Newcastle; containing 758 houses and 3463 inhabitants, viz 1612 males, and 1851 females, of whom 1434 were employed in various trades and manufactures, and 152 in agriculture. It is one of the largest and best built towns in the county, the streets are regular, and many of the houses handsome. The church has a semicircular choir, and on its roof are many wicker baskets, such as are used for draining salt in. This town appears to have been considered as the chief salt work in the time of the Romans, and is by Ravenna called Salinis. The salt springs are 30 miles from the sea, and lie mostly on the banks of the river Wever. Large mines of rock salt were also discovered here in the beginning of the 18th century. The salt quarries, with their pillars and chrystal roof, extend over several acres, and afford a very pleasing and picturesque appearance. This town has twice suffered by fire, in 1438 and in 1583; and in 1604 the plague carried off about 500 persons. In the reign of Charles it also suffered greatly, being strongly garrisoned by the parliament forces, and besieged by the royal army. Exclusive of its trade in salt, Nantwich is no less noted for the quantity of excellent cheese made in the neighbourhood; and the manufacture of shoes forms a very considerable branch of its trade for the London market. It has two good charity schools, several almshouses, and a dissenting meeting-house. It gives the title of baron to the earl of Cholmondeley, who, as lord of the manor, holds a court baron in this town, with the power of attaching body and goods for debts under 10*l.* It has the advantage of a navigable canal to Chester, passing Beeston castle, and joins the Dee and Mersey junction canal. The market is on Saturday, and well supplied with corn and cattle. Fairs, 26th March, 4th September, and 13th of December. The church is a rectory.—Norden's Cheshire, Nappa, a hamlet in the parish of Gisburn, wapentake of Staincliff and Ewcross, west riding of York, 8 miles from Skipton, and 220 from London; containing 6 houses and 32 inhabitants.

Napton, a parish in the hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, 2½ miles from Southam, and 80 from London; containing 205 houses and 787 inhabitants. It had formerly a market, with a chapel of ease, now gone to decay. Fair on the Assumption of the Virgin Mary. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 14*s.* in the patronage of the king.

Narberth, a market-town and parish, consisting of two townships, North and South, in the hundred of Narberth, Pembrokeshire, Wales, pleasantly seated on the summit of a hill, 12 miles from Pembroke, and 254 from London; containing 332 houses and 1534 inhabitants. The market is on Wednesday. Fairs, 21st March, 4th June, 5th July, 26th September, and 11th December. It is a rectory, value 25*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.* with Robeston chapel annexed, in the patronage of the prince of Wales.

Narborough, a parish in the hundred of Sparkenhoe, Leicester, 5 miles from Leicester, and 91 from London; containing 107 houses and 541 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Peterborough.

Narborough, a parish in the hundred of South Greenhoe, Norfolk, 5 miles from Swaffham, and 95 from London; containing 19 houses and 268 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 10*s.* and is united with Narford.

Narford, a parish united with Narborough, in the hundred of South Greenhoe, Norfolk, 5 miles from Swaffham, containing 5 houses and 71 inhabitants. This was a Roman station.

Naseby, a parish in the hundred of Guildsborough, Northampton, 12 miles from Northampton, and 77 from London; containing 105 houses and 538 inhabitants. Adjacent to this village, was fought the unfortunate battle between the royalists and parliamentary army in 1645. In this battle both Charles I. and Cromwell fought in person, and it terminated in the total route of the royalist army. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.*—Bridge's Northampton.

Nash, a hamlet in the parish of Great Haywood, hundred of Cotslow, Bucks, 2 miles from Winslow, and 52 from London; containing 58 houses and 265 inhabitants.

Nash, a parish in the hundred of Caldicot, lower division, Monmouth, 3 miles from Newport, and 150 from London; containing 39 houses and 183 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 15*s.* in the patronage of Eton College.

Nash, a parish in the hundred of Overs, Salop, 3 miles from Tenbury, and 137 from London; containing 52 houses and 251 inhabitants.

Nash, a parish in the hundred of Castle Martin, Pembrokeshire, Wales, 260 miles from London; containing 22 houses and 95 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.* with Upton chapel annexed.

Nash, a small village in the county of Wexford, province of Leinster, Ireland.

Nashrod, a hamlet in the parish of Knill, in the hundred of Wigmore, Hereford, 2 miles from Presteign, and 151 from London; containing 18 houses and 129 inhabitants.

Nash, a hamlet in the parish of Broad Windsor, near Beaminster, Dorsetshire.

Nass, a hamlet in the parish of Lydney, in Gloucestershire.

Nassaburgh, the name of a hundred in Northamptonshire, being the north-eastern extremity of the county and borders of Lincoln, from Stamford to Crowland.

Nassington, a parish in the hundred of Willybrook, Northampton, 5 miles from Oundle, and 87 from London; containing 99 houses and 441 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 13*s.* belonging to the prebend thereof in Lincoln cathedral, Nateby, a hamlet in the parish of Garstang, in the hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, 1 mile from Garstang, and 228 from London; containing 55 houses and 272 inhabitants.

Nateby, a township in the parish of Kirby Stephen, in East ward, Westmoreland, near Kirby Stephen, and 265 from London; containing 28 houses and 108 inhabitants.

Nately Up, a hamlet to Bassingstoke, in the hundred and division of Basingstoke, Hants, 1½ miles from Basingstoke, and 44 from London; containing 22 houses and 134 inhabitants.

Nately Scures, a parish in the hundred and division of Basingstoke, Hants, 2 miles from Basingstoke, and 43 from London; containing 31 houses and 176 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Natland, a township and chapelry in the parish of Kendal, Kendal ward, Westmoreland, and 260 miles from London; containing 30 houses and 205 inhabitants.

Naughton, a parish in the hundred of Cosford, Suffolk, 1 mile from Bildeston, and 63 from London; containing 20 houses and 120 inhabitants, It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 15*s.*

Naunton, a parish in the hundred of Slaughter, Gloucester, 6 miles from Stow-in-the-Wold, and 87½ from London; containing 85 houses and 433 inhabitants. The church is a very handsome building. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Worcester.

Naunton, a hamlet in the parish of Winchcombe, hundred of Kiftsgate, Gloucester.

Naunton, a hamlet in the parish of Tewkesbury, Gloucester.

Naunton Beauchamp, a parish in the hundred Persnore, Worcester, 3 miles from Persnore, and 105 from London; containing 21 houses and 115 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* and is in the patronage of the king.

NAVENBY, a parish in the hundred of Boothby Graffo, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 9 miles from Sleaford, and 125 from London; containing 101 houses and 479 inhabitants. Fairs, 18th August, and 17th October. It is a rectory, value 17*l.* 10*s.* in the patronage of Christ church college, Cambridge.

NAVESTOCK, a parish in the hundred of Ongar, Essex, 4 miles from Romford, and 16 from London; containing 131 houses and 623 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

NAVISFORD, the name of a hundred in Northampton, lying on the eastern side of the county, and borders of Huntingdonshire.

NAWORTH, a township in the parish of Brampton, in Eskdale ward, Cumberland, 311 miles from London; containing 58 houses and 308 inhabitants.

NAWTON, a township in the parish of Kirby Moorside, Rydall wapentake, north riding of York, 4 miles from Helmsley, and 228 from London; containing 39 houses and 197 inhabitants.

NAYLAND, a township in the parish of Stoke, hundred of Babergh, Suffolk, 17 miles from Braintree, and 57 from London; containing 147 houses and 881 inhabitants.

NAYLAND POINT, Kent, near Margate Bay.

NAZE, or NESS, a projecting point of land, on the south coast of England, southward of Harwich, being a hooked promontory, inclosing a few low islands, from which the land declines to the west, and forms the north shore of the river Thames.

NEACH, a river in Denbighshire, which runs into the Conway, 6 miles below Llanwrst.

NEANTHEAD, a hamlet in the parish of Aldstone Moor, Cumberland, from which it is distant 4 miles, and principally inhabited by the lead-miners in the neighbourhood, who work at the mines belonging to Greenwich hospital.

NEASBIT, a hamlet in the parish of Stamfordham, Tindal ward, East division, Northumberland, 10 miles from Newcastle, and 286 from London; containing 8 houses and 41 inhabitants.

NEASHAM, a township in the parish of Hurworth, Stockton ward, Durham, 3 miles from Darlington, and 241 from London; containing 40 houses and 206 inhabitants.

NEATH, a market town and parish in the hundred of Neath, Glamorganshire, Wales, situated on the river Neath, 32 miles from Llandaff, and 197 from London; containing 540 houses and 2502 inhabitants, viz. 1082 males, and 1420 females, of whom 270 were employed in trade and manufacture. The streets are extremely irregular and narrow, and the houses with few exceptions, ill built. It has two extensive copper works, and some iron forges, and the coal-pits in the neighbourhood are the means of creating a considerable branch of trade to London and Bristol, the river being navigable for vessels. It has also lately had a canal cut to the interior part of the country. From the situation of this town at the bottom of a valley, and the smoke of the copper-works, the air of the place is very unwholesome. About ½ mile from the town, on the western side of the river, are the picturesque remains of its abbey, founded by Richard de Granville and his wife, for Cistertian monks. In this abbey Edward II. took refuge till he was taken by the earl of Leicester in 1326. Its mouldering remains are patched up as tenements for the families of the labourers in the neighbouring works. The town is incorporated under a portreeve, 12 aldermen, a recorder, and capital burgesses. On an eminence near Neath, stands Knoll castle, an elegant seat, most delightfully situated, built by the late sir Herbert Mackworth, and 5 miles distant is the celebrated cascade of Mellincourt, where the river Clydaugh falls down a precipice 80 feet perpendicular. The market is on Saturday, and is well supplied. Fairs, Trinity Thursday, 31st July, and 12th September. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* 2*s.* 3*d.*—Warner's Tour in Wales.

NEATH, a river in Brecknockshire and Glamorganshire, which runs into the Bristol channel near Coydfrank forest.

NEAB, or NEB, a river in the Isle of Man, which runs into the Irish sea, at Peel Castle.

NEATHAM, a tything in the hundred and division of Alton, Hants, near Alton; containing 12 houses and 87 inhabitants.

NEATISHED, a parish in the hundred of Tunstead, Norfolk, 9 miles from Norwich, and 118 from London; containing 110 houses and 489 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 3*l.* 13*s.* 1*d.*

NECTON, a parish in the hundred of South Greenhoe, Norfolk, 3 miles from Swaffham, and 96 from London; containing 90 houses and 663 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

NEDGING, a parish in the hundred of Cosford, Suffolk, 1 mile from Bildeston, and 62 from London; containing 26 houses and 143 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 12*s.* 11*d.*

NEEDHAM, a parish in the hundred of Earsham, Norfolk, ¾ mile from Harleston, and 99 from London; containing 42 houses and 276 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

NEEDHAM MARKET, a market town and chapelry, in the parish of Barking, in the hundred of Bosmere and Claydon, Suffolk, 9 miles from Ipswich, and 74 from London, on the river Orwell; containing 257 houses and 1348 inhabitants, of whom 242 were employed in various trades and manufactures; but of late years this town has much declined. It is tolerably well built, and has a market on Wednesday. Fair, 28th October. The church is a chapel of ease to Barking.

NEEDINGWORTH, a hamlet in the parish of Hollywell, hundred of Hurstingstone, Hunts, 1 mile from St. Ive's, and 59 from London; population returned with Hollywell.

NEEDLES, rocks so called, about 18 miles distant from Newport, in the Isle of Wight; several of them are at a considerable distance from the land, as well as from each other: one of these solid pyramids, 120 feet above the level of the water, fell about 20 years ago in a great storm, to the no small surprise of those who were within hearing of the mighty crash.

NEEDWOOD FOREST, a hamlet in the parish of Hanbury, hundred of Offlow, Stafford, 5 miles from Burton, and 132 from London; containing 58 houses and 310 inhabitants. This district is celebrated for the fineness of its turf.

NEEN SOLLARS, a parish in the hundred of Overs, Salop, 2 miles from Cleobury, and 134 from London; containing 32 houses and 197 inhabitants.

NEEN SAVAGE, a parish in the hundred of Stoddesdon, Salop, 3 miles from Cleobury, and 138 from London; containing 80 houses and 469 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l*.

NEENTON, a parish in the hundred of Stoddesdon, Salop, 4 miles from Bridgenorth, and 138 from London; containing 25 houses and 120 inhabitants.

NEITHROP, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Banbury, Oxford, ½ mile from Banbury, and 76 from London; containing 229 houses and 1055 inhabitants, of whom 150 were employed in trade.

NEN, the principal river of Northamptonshire, which rises in the western part of the county, and is navigable at Northampton, leaving the county at Peterborough, and crossing the Isle of Ely, forms part of the western boundary of Norfolk. It falls into the Lincolnshire Washes. It communicates by several channels with the great Ouse.

NENAGH, a town of Tipperary, in the province of Munster, Ireland, seated on a branch of the river Shannon, 75 miles from Dublin.

NEOTS ST. a parish in the hundred of West, Cornwall, 4 miles from Leskeard, and 226 from London; containing 141 houses and 906 inhabitants. It is supposed to owe its name to a near relation of king Alfred, who died here in 899, and was removed from thence to St. Neots in Huntingdon. The church was before dedicated to St. Guerir, and it is said that Alfred being sick, prostrated himself in prayer before the altar of the saint, and recovered his health. The church is a modern edifice. It is a vicarage, value 9*l*. 4*s*.—Polwhele's Cornwall.

NEOTS ST. a market town and parish in the hundred of Toseland, Hunts, seated on the river Ouse, over which it has a good stone bridge, 20 miles from Cambridge, and 56 from London; containing 362 houses and 1752 inhabitants. The town is well built, and is supposed to have taken its name from a priory of black canons subordinate to Ely, said to have been founded by St. Neotus. The church is a handsome, strong building, with a beautiful spire. Here is a well endowed charity-school for 25 poor children, and a good market on Thursday. Fairs, 29th January, Ascension day, 23d June, 1st August, and 17th December. It is a vicarage, value 10*l*.

NEMPNETT, a tything in the parish of Compton Martin, hundred of Keynsham, Somerset, 7 miles from Wells, and 128 from London; containing 33 houses and 253 inhabitants.

NESDEN, or NEESDEN, a hamlet in the parish of Wilsdon, hundred of Ossulton, Middlesex, 3 miles south-east of Harrow on the Hill. Population returned included with Wilsdon.

NESS, the name of a hundred in the division of Kesteven, Lincolnshire, being the most southern extremity of the county, bounded by the river Welland.

NESS GREAT, a parish in the hundred of Pimhill, Salop, 7 miles from Shrewsbury, and 163 from London; containing 96 houses and 531 inhabitants.

NESS LITTLE, a hamlet in the parish of Great Ness, ½ mile distant, and containing 27 houses and 201 inhabitants.

NESS EAST, a hamlet in the parish of Hovingham, in Rydall division, north riding of York, 4 miles from Kirby Moorside, and 224 from London; containing 14 houses and 74 inhabitants.

NESS WEST, a hamlet in the parish of Stonegrave, in Rydall division, north riding of York, 4½ miles from Kirby Moorside, and 223½ from London; containing 11 houses and 49 inhabitants.

NESS, a township in the parish of Neston, in the hundred of Wirrall, higher division, Chester, on the banks of the Dee, 9 miles from Chester, and 190 from London; containing 70 houses and 347 inhabitants.

NESS LOCH, a beautiful lake in the shire of Inverness, Scotland, being about 22 miles long, and 2 broad, and from 60 to 135 fathoms deep: after rain it sometimes rises 8 and 10 feet above the low water mark: and is so deep even at its sides that a ship of the line might sail within her length of the shore from end to end. The surrounding banks present a very rich scene of landscape. The water is esteemed very salubrious, never freezing in the severest winter, being covered with a thick hoar or mist, having the appearance of smoke in frosty weather. It abounds with trout. On the 1st November, 1755, at the time of the great earthquake at Lisbon, it was agitated in a most extraordinary manner; the water rose rapidly and flowed up the lake from east to west with an amazing impetuosity, the waves being carried 200 yards up the river Oich, breaking over its banks which are 5 feet above the level of the river. It continued ebbing and flowing for about an hour, when a wave much greater than the rest terminated the commotion, overflowing the northern bank of the lake for 30 feet. Into this lake several rivers pour themselves, and it discharges itself into the Moray Frith by the river Ness. It is navigated by a king's galley, which supplies the garrison of Fort Augustus with stores.—Pennant's Tour in Scotland.

NESSTON GREAT, a parish in the hundred of Wirrall, Chester, near Parkgate, 10 miles from Chester, and 190 from London; containing 317 houses and 1436 inhabitants, of whom 313 were employed in various trades. It is a vicarage, value 11*l.* 5*s.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Chester.

NESSTON LITTLE, a hamlet in the foregoing, about ¼ mile distant; containing 53 houses and 254 inhabitants.

NESBITT, a hamlet in the parish of Doddington, Glendale ward, East division, Northumberland, 2½ miles from Wooler, and 325 from London; containing 11 houses and 63 inhabitants.

NESS RIVER, rising at the eastern extremity of Loch Ness, and falls into the Moray Frith at Inverness, of which its estuary forms the harbour; in the midst of it is an island covered with trees.

NESTFIELD, a township in the parish of Ilkley, in Claro wapentake, west riding of York, 7 miles from Otley, and 212 from London; containing 42 houses and 201 inhabitants.

NESWICK, a hamlet in the parish of Bainton, in the division of Bainton Beacon, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 6 miles from Driffield, and 203 from London; containing 8 houses and 54 inhabitants.

NETHAN, a river in the shire of Lanark, Scotland, rising in the hills between Lesmahogue, and Muirkirk, and joins the Clyde near the village of Abbey Green.

NETGROVE, a village in the hundred of Bradley, Gloucester, 4 miles from Northleach, and 86 from London; containing 44 houses and 214 inhabitants.

NETHERBURY, a parish in the hundred of Beaminster, division of Bridport, Dorset, 2 miles from Beaminster, and 136 from London; containing 262 houses and 1505 inhabitants, of whom 486 were employed in various trades.

NETHERBY, a hamlet in the parish of Kirby Overblow, Claro wapentake, west riding of York, 4 miles from Wetherby, and 194 from London. Population included with Kirby Overblow.

NETHERGRAVESHIP, a hamlet in the parish and ward of Kendal, Westmoreland, near Kendal, and 260 miles from London; containing 8 houses and 37 inhabitants.

NETHERHAVEN, a parish in the hundred of Elstub and Everley, Wilts, 4 miles from Amesbury, and 80 from London; containing 89 houses and 479 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

NETHERIX, a hamlet in the parish of Thorverton, hundred of Hayridge, Devon, 4 miles from Exeter, and 170 from London; containing 14 houses and 86 inhabitants.

NETHERHAMPTON. See HAMPTON NETHER, Wilts.

NETHERLEY, a township in the parish of Kirkandrews on Eske, in Eskdale ward, Cumberland, 3 miles from Longtown, and 316 from London; containing 64 houses and 397 inhabitants.

NETHERMORE, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Chippenham, Wilts, adjoining Chippenham, and 94 miles from London. Population returned included with Chippenham.

NETHERSTAVELEY, a hamlet in the parish and ward of Kendal, Westmoreland, near Kendal, and 260 miles from London. Population returned included with Kendal.

NETHERSTOKE, a hamlet in the parish of Halstock, Dorsetshire, and population returned therewith.

NETHERTON, a hamlet in the parish of Bellington, Chester ward, Durham, 5 miles from Durham, and 264 from London; containing 17 houses and 98 inhabitants.

NETHERTON, a hamlet in the parish of Sephton, hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 6 miles from Liverpool, and 208 from London. Population returned included with Sephton.

NETHERTON, NORTH and SOUTH, two hamlets in the parish of Alwhinton, in Coquetdale ward, west division, Northumberland, 6 miles from Rothbury, and 312 from London; containing 20 houses and 91 inhabitants.

NETHERTON, a hamlet in the parish of Elmley Castle, hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 2 miles from Evesham, and 99 from London; containing 16 houses and 82 inhabitants.

NETHERWASDALE, a hamlet in the parish of St. Bees, in Allerdale ward, above Derwent, Cumberland, 3 miles from Whitehaven, and 303 from London; containing 28 houses and 137 inhabitants.

NETHY, a river in the shire of Inverness, rising in the hills of Badenoch, and falling into the Spey near the church of Abernethy NETLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Hound, in the hundred of Mainbridge, division of Fawley, Hants, 6 miles from Southampton. The remains of its once beautiful abbey are seated on the gentle declivity of a hill near Southampton water. It was founded by Henry III. about 1239, for Cistertian monks. The venerable ruins of its church and many of its apartments covered with ivy, are generally visited by every traveller who resorts for pleasure to Southampton.

NETTLEBED, a parish in the hundred of Ewelme, Oxford, 4½ miles from Henley, 7 from Reading, and 40 from London; containing 96 houses and 501 inhabitants. This parish is noted for a singular spring, said never to fail in the driest summer. The church is a curacy.

Nettlecombe, a hamlet in the parish of Poorstock, division of Bridport, Dorset.

Nettlecombe, a parish in the hundred of Willerton and Freemanners, Somerset, 3 miles from Watchet, and 160 from London; containing 38 houses and 329 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.*

Nettleden, a parish in the hundred of Cotslow, Bucks, 3 miles from Berkhampstead, and 27 from London; containing 16 houses and 85 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the duke of Bridgwater.

Nettleham, a parish in the hundred of Lawress, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 3 miles from Lincoln, and 136 from London; containing 74 houses and 377 inhabitants. It is a curacy, belonging to the Chancellor of Lincoln cathedral.

Nettlestead, a parish in the hundred of Twyford, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, near the river Medway, 3 miles from West Malling, and 35 from London; containing 28 houses and 167 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 12*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.* and is united with Barming.

Nettlestead, a parish in the hundred of Bosmere and Claydon, Suffolk, 3 miles from Needham Market, and 72 from London; containing 16 houses and 87 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.*

Nettleswell, or Netteswell, a parish in the hundred of Harlow, Essex, 5 miles from Epping, and 21½ from London; containing 50 houses and 288 inhabitants. It has a charity school endowed for educating the poor children of this and the two adjoining parishes. On the side of the church-porch is a curious carving. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Nettleton, a parish in the hundred of Yarborough, Lindsay division, Lincoln, near Glandford Brigg, and 160 miles from London; containing 58 houses and 259 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 19*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.*

Nettleton, a parish in the hundred of North Damerham, Wilts, 8 miles from Chippenham, and 101 from London; containing 61 houses and 338 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 18*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.*

Nettleworth, a hamlet in the parish of Mansfield, hundred of Broxtow, Notts, near Mansfield, and 138 miles from London. Population included with Mansfield Woodhouse.

Nevendon, a parish in the hundred of Barnstaple, Essex, 4½ miles from Billericay, and 27 from London; containing 20 houses and 147 inhabitants.

Nevis, a river which rises near the mountain of Bennevis, in the shire of Inverness, Scotland, and after a rapid course of near 10 miles, forming several romantic cascades, falls into Locheil, near Fort William.

Nevyn, or Nepin, a market town and parish in the hundred of Dinlaen, Caernarvon, Wales, near Caernarvon, and 249 miles from London; containing 242 houses and 1028 inhabitants. At this place Edward I. in 1284, held his triumph after the conquest of Wales, and in imitation of Arthur, had his round table, with dances and tournaments. At present it is an insignificant place. The market is on Saturday. Fairs, 4th April, Saturday before Whitsuntide, and 25th August. Near it is Nant y Gwrtheryn, or Vortigern's Valley, an immense hollow, where it is said Vortigern fled from the rage and persecution of his countrymen.

New Abbey, a parish in the Stewardry of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Nith, on the high road from Dumfries to Kirkcudbright, 1 mile from Dumfries, and 24 from Kirkcudbright; containing 150 houses and 832 inhabitants. Adjoining are the ruins of the famous Cistertian abbey, founded by the mother of John Baliol, king of Scotland: It was first called the Abbey of Sweetheart, from her husband's heart being embalmed and enclosed in a box of ivory and silver, set in a hollow in the wall of the church. The building stands in the middle of a level field of about 20 acres, surrounded by a high wall; it is a lofty and a light building, in the Gothic stile. Its church is 194 feet long, 102 feet broad at the cross, with a tower upwards of 90 feet high. The whole is built of granite, brought from the neighbouring mountains.

Newall, a parish in the hundred of Nantwich, Chester, 5 miles from Nantwich, and 164 from London; containing 120 houses and 819 inhabitants.

Newark, the name of a hundred in Notts, lying on the eastern side of the county and borders of Lincolnshire.

Newark, a hamlet to Peterborough, in the hundred of Nassaburgh, Northampton, 1 mile from Peterborough, and 82 from London. Population included with Eastfield.

Newark, a borough, market town, and parish in the hundred of Newark, Notts, situated on the river Trent, 14 miles from Grantham, 124½ from London, by Hatfield, and 120¼ by Ware; containing 1376 houses and 6720 inhabitants, viz. 3098 males, and 3632 females, of whom 931 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures. The town is neat, and many of the buildings new, and the market-place, though not spacious, is extremely handsome. The town hall is a magnificent stone building, built from the produce of estates that were left by will for the improvement of the town, and cost upwards of 10,000*l.* The church which is reckoned one of the finest in the kingdom, was erected by Henry IV. and has a lofty spire. A magnificent castle was built here in the reign of king Stephen, which was afterwards several times besieged in the royal cause, but Charles I. having surrendered himself to the Scottish army, the governor by his order gave the castle up to the parliamentary forces, when it was rendered untenable. The remains of some of its walls are still to be seen of a very great thickness and height situated by the river side and evincing it formerly to have been of considerable strength and importance. In consequence of the many inundations from the river which often rendered the town impassable, a new turnpike road was made about the year 1770, and raised so high upon arches as to be passed with safety in the greatest floods. It was constructed under the directions of Mr. Smeaton at the expence of 12,000*l.* and near the town there is a bridge constructed for the same purpose, made mostly upon dry land and consisting of 9 arches. This town was incorporated by Charles II. in gratitude for its loyalty to his father, who granted it the privilege of sending members to parliament. It is governed by a mayor and 12 aldermen. In a court before the ruins of the castle is a very fine bowling-green, and near it is an extensive sacking manufactory, but its chief trade is in malting. Lime stone abounds within a mile of the town, particularly from an eminence called Bacon Hill, and at the depth of 20 feet from its surface is found a curious stone, which is burned upon the brick kilns and afterwards ground into a fine powder which is sent in barrels to the more distant parts as a composition for stucco works and ornaments for ceilings. The market is on Wednesday. Fairs, that called Careing fair on the Friday before Careing Sunday, which is the Sunday fortnight before Easter, 14th May, Whit Tuesday, 2d August, 1st November, and Monday before 11th December, and of late a cheese fair is held on the 25th of September. It is a vicarage, value 21*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.*

NEWBATTLE or NEWBOTTLE, a parish in the shire of Midlothian, lying in a beautiful and romantic vale on the banks of the South Esk. It is 2 miles from Dalkeith, and 7 from Edinburgh; containing 317 houses and 1328 inhabitants, of whom 60 were returned as being employed in various trades. The valley is extremely fertile, but it rises gradually for 2 miles to a ridge, and is 680 feet above the level of the sea. In the most sequestered part of the vale stands Newbottle Abbey, the elegant mansion of the marquis of Lothian. It has a very choice gallery of paintings, and a rare collection of books, manuscripts, &c. It was formerly an abbey of Cistertians founded by David I.

NEWBIGGIN, a hamlet in the parish of Dacre, in Leath ward, Cumberland, 3 miles from Penrith, and 286 from London; containing 54 houses and 291 inhabitants.

NEWBIGGIN, a township in the parish of Middleton in Teesdale, Darlington ward, Durham, 10 miles from Barnard Castle, and 265 from London; containing 31 houses and 281 inhabitants.

NEWBIGGIN, a township in the parish of Woodhorn, in Morpeth ward, Northumberland, 7 miles from Morpeth, at the mouth of the river Wansbeck; containg 83 houses and 398 inhabitants, mostly fishermen.

NEWBIGGIN, a hamlet in the parish of Newburn, in Castle ward, Northumberland, 5 miles from Newcastle, and 281 from London; containing 10 houses and 53 inhabitants.

NEWBIGGIN, a parish in East ward, Westmoreland, 6 miles from Appleby, and 276 from London; containing 26 houses and 126 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 4*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.*

NEWBIGGIN, a hamlet in the parish of Aysgarth, in Hang West wapentake, north riding of York; containing 27 houses and 121 inhabitants.

NEWBOLD, a hamlet in the parish of Worthington, hundred of West Goscote, Leicester, 3 miles from Ashby de la Zouch, and 130 from London. Population returned with Worthington.

NEWBOLD, a hamlet in the parish of Owston, hundred of Guthlaxton, Leicester, 5 miles from Melton Mowbray, and 96 from London. Population returned with Owston.

NEWBOLD, a hamlet in the parish of Astbury, hundred of Northwich, Chester, 2 miles from Congleton, and 160 from London; containing 95 houses and 375 inhabitants.

NEWBOLD PACEY, a parish in the hundred of Kineton, Warwick, 4 miles from Warwick, and 90 from London; containing 39 houses and 349 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of Queen's College, Oxford.

NEWBOLD REVEL, a hamlet in the parish of Monks Kirby, hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, 5 miles from Rugby, and 89 from London, containing 1 farm-house and 14 inhabitants.

NEWBOLD on AVON, a parish in the hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, situated near the river Avon, 2 miles from Rugby, and 86 from London; containing 64 houses and 82 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 19*s.* 1*d.* The Oxford canal passes near this place.

NEWBOLD VERDON, a parish in the hundred of Sparkenhoe, Leicester, 5½ miles from Hinckley, and 104 from London; containing 80 houses and 339 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 6*l.* 8*s.* 11*d.*

NEWBOLD NORTH, a parish in the division of Hunsley Beacon, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 3 miles from South Cave, and 198 from London; containing 101 houses and 517 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* belonging to the prebend thereof in York cathedral.

NEWBOLD SOUTH, a hamlet to the foregoing, 1 mile distant; containing 28 houses and 144 inhabitants.

NEWBORN, or NEWBURN, a parish in the hundred of Carlford, Suffolk, 6 miles from Ipswich, and 74 from London. The population of which was omitted to be returned. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*

NEWBOROUGH, a township and chapelry in the parish of Hanbury, hundred of Offlow, Stafford, 4 miles from Abbotts Bromley, and 129 from London; containing 87 houses and 440 inhabitants.

NEWBOROUGH, or NEWBURGH, a market town and parish in the hundred of Menai, Anglesea, Wales, 5 miles from Carnarvon, 12 from Beaumaris, and 257 from London. By the Welsh it is called Rhoswair, and was the residence of the princes of Anglesea, the foundation of the palace being visible in Mr. Rowland's time. It was made a corporation by Edward I, from whence it was called New-Borough. It contains 176 houses and 599 inhabitants, and is noted for its manufactures of mats and ropes of sea weed. It is governed by a mayor, 2 bailiffs, and a recorder. The market is on Tuesday. Fairs, 22d June, 10th and 21st August, 25th September, and 11th November. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 10*s.* in the patronage of the king.

NEWBOROUGH, a hamlet in the parish of Coxwold, Birdforth wapentake, north riding of York, 6 miles from Thirsk, and 218 from London; containing 17 houses and 148 inhabitants.

NEWBOTTLE, a parish in Easington ward, Durham, 7 miles from Durham, and 266 from London; containing 194 houses and 970 inhabitants.

NEWBOTTLE, a parish in the hundred of Kings Sutton, Northampton, 2¼ miles from Brackley, and 65¼ from London; containing 71 houses and 297 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 10*s.* united with Charlton.

NEWBROUGH, a township and chapelry in the parish of Warden, in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 5 miles from Hexham, and 287 from London; containing 82 houses and 429 inhabitants.

NEWBURGH. See WINFRITH NEWBURGH, Dorset.

NEWBURGH. See NEWBOROUGH ANGLESEA, Wales.

NEWBURGH, a town and parish in the shire of Fife, Scotland, situated on the south bank of the Tay, near the northern extremity of the county, 8 miles from Cupar, and 14 from Dundee, containing 260 houses and 1936 inhabitants, of whom 448 were employed in trade and manufacture, principally in that of linen. The houses are mostly new-built, and the streets well paved. The river is navigable to the town for vessels of 500 tons burthen. Here are the ruins of an abbey and two ancient crosses, both of which have been covered with hieroglyphics. This town was made a royal burgh by Charles I. and gives title of earl to the family of Livingstone.

NEWBURN, a parish in Castle ward, Northumberland, situated on the river Tyne, 5¼ miles from Newcastle, and 280 from London; containing 207 houses and 1429 inhabitants, of whom 963 were chiefly employed in the neighbouring coal mines. It is a vicarage, value 16*l.*

NEWBURN, a parish in the shire of Fife, Scotland, seated on the coast of the Frith of Forth, upon Largo bay, 15 miles from Kirkcaldy; containing 80 houses and 412 inhabitants. It has a delightful appearance and is ornamented with many handsome seats.

NEWBURY, a borough, market town, and parish in the hundred of Faircross, Berks, seated in a valley on the banks of the Kennet, 16¼ miles from Reading, and 53 from London; containing 931 houses and 4275 inhabitants, viz. 1901 males and 2374 females, of whom 2806 were returned as being employed in various trades, handicrafts and manufactures, principally in those of druggerts, shalloons, and broad cloths. It has long been famed for its extensive woollen manufacture, and in the reign of Henry VIII. one John Winchcomb, better known by the name of Jack of Newbury, kept 100 looms in his own house. At the expedition to Flodden Field, he marched against the Scots with 100 of his men all armed and clothed at his own expence. He was also a considerable benefactor to the building of its present handsome church. The streets here are very spacious and well paved, with a convenient market place, in which is the Guildhall. Newbury was incorporated by queen Elizabeth, under a mayor, high steward, and alderman. It once sent members to parliament, but was released therefrom on the petition of Jack of Newbury. The town hall is ornamented with a beautiful picture of the surrender of Calais, painted by Price, and purchased by the corporation in 1762. Adjoining the church is a charity-school for 44 boys. In Cheap-street are alms-houses for 12 poor men and women erected in 1793. In Bartholomew-St. are 12 more alms-houses; and Bartholemew's hospital consists of 14 dwelling houses endowed by king John. Besides which there are 12 alms-houses near the church and 3 at West Mills. It carries on a considerable traffic in malting by the Kennet and Avon canal, which comes from Hungerford, in a line with the Kennet, and is continued to Alderman's wharf, where the river becomes navigable and communicates with the Thames at Reading. Under the town hall is held the fish market and butcher's shambles. On the banks of the Kennet have often been dug up strata of petrified wood, with the bones and horns of stags, tusks of boars and sculls of beavers, &c. In the neighbourhood were fought two obstinate battles in 1642 and 4 by the royal and parliamentary armies. The market is on Thursday. Fairs, Holy Thursday, Midsummer Day, St. Bartholomew's Day, and St. Simon and Jude. Here are two banks. The living is a rectory, value 38*l.* 16*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of the king.—Maton's Tour.

NEWBURY, a hamlet in the parish of Ormskirk, hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 5 miles from Wigan, and 206 from London. Population returned with Latham.

NEWBURY HILL, about 4 miles west of Frome, in Somersetshire, where is a camp called Wadbury.

NEWBY, a hamlet to Ithington, in Eskdale ward, Cumberland, near Brampton, and 311 miles from London; containing 18 houses and 106 inhabitants.

NEWBY, a township in the parish of Morland, in West ward, Westmorland, 5 miles from Appleby, and 275 from London; containing 49 houses and 253 inhabitants.

NEWBY WISK, a township in the parish of Kirby Wisk, Gilling East wapentake, north riding of York, 6 miles from Thirsk, and 229 from London; containing 48 houses and 241 inhabitants.

NEWBY, a hamlet in the township of Rainton, in the parish of Topcliffe Hallikeld wapentake, north riding of York, 6 miles from Aldborough. Population returned with Rainton.

NEWBY, a township in the parish of Scalby, Langbrough West wapentake, north riding of York, 3 miles from Scarborough, and 220 from London; containing 30 houses and 127 inhabitants.

NEWBY, a hamlet in the parish and liberty of Ripon, west riding of York.

NEWCASTLE, a small village near Monmouth, in Monmouthshire, where are the remains of a castle.

NEWCASTLE, or, as it is generally called, Newcastle upon Tyne, from its situation on the north side of that river, is a borough and market town in Castle ward, Northumberland, 14 miles from Durham, on the road to Edinburgh, 276 from London, by Durham, and 282 by Sunderland. It consists of 4 parishes containing 3162 houses and 28,366 inhabitants, viz. 12,369 males and 15,997 females, of whom 5705 were returned as being employed in various trades, handicraft, and manufacture. Exclusive of the suburb of Gateshead, which may be reckoned a part thereof, being connected by the bridge over the Tyne, in a similar manner to the borough of Southwark to London, but situate in the county of Durham, and containing 1037 houses and 8597 inhabitants,—Vide GATESHEAD. Its ancient name is supposed to have been Monkcestery or the city of the monks, from the number of religious houses formerly here, and which name it bore till the time of the Norman invasion, when it took the name of Newcastle, from a castle erected here by Robert, eldest son of William I. as a check upon the Scots. The Romans called it Gabro Geutum, and through the town ran the famous Picts wall which extended from sea to sea, and was built to defend the Britons against the incursion of the Picts: at Panden gate, a part thereof, as is supposed, is still to be seen. In the reign of Edward III. the town was surrounded by a strong wall more than 2 miles in circumference, it was defended by several towers and had 7 gates. In 1135 it was taken by David I. king of Scotland, but was soon after restored to king Stephen, and in 1644 it was taken by storm by the Scotish army, but the commander, sir John Marley and part of the garrison still held out for king Charles, withdrew to the castle, where they capitulated: whereupon the parliament disfranchised the corporation and ordered the mayor to be tried by a court-martial. The bridge erected about 1775 consists of 9 elliptic arches as large as those of London Bridge and supports a street of houses. The old bridge originally built of wood, and afterwards of stone, was carried away in a flood and 22 houses thereby thrown down. The houses here are variously built, some of them being very handsome of stone, others of brick, and a great many of timber. It contains 4 churches; that of St. Nicholas is the mother church, a most curious fabric, erected by David King, of Scotland: it is 240 feet long, 75 broad, and its tower 194 feet high, the 4 angles of which are adorned with lofty and highly ornamented spires, on which rest 2 transverse arches which support a lanthern of exquisite lightness and elegance, the angles of which are also surmounted with spires smaller than those of the tower, and from its centre runs up a fifth spire of great beauty and height. The church of All Saints is nearly circular having a very high and elegant spire, and the interior is fitted up very beautifully. St. Andrew's and St. John's are also neat buildings. There are many meeting houses, as the number of separatists from the established church here is very great. There are also 2 Roman Catholic chapels and 1 for the Quakers. There are 4 charity-schools for 300 children, a well endowed and extensive infirmary, a hospital for lunatics, and 1 for lying-in married women, besides many charitable institutions, particularly that for the relief of poor women lying-in at their own house, and many charity and sunday-schools; as well as common hospitals, and alms-houses for the maintenance of the infirm of various descriptions are here in great abundance. The Keelmen's Hospital deserves particular notice, as it was erected and is entirely maintained by small subscriptions from the daily labour of that numerous class of labourers the Keelmen or coal-workers. There is a very valuable library belonging to the church of St. Nicholas, in a room built for the purpose, by sir Walter Blackett. Several institutions also for the promotion of learning have been very successfully carried on, and it can boast of a philosophical and medical society. A set of elegant assembly rooms have been likewise built by subscription as well as a neat theatre and riding-house. Several improvements have been recently made here by the pulling down many narrow parts, particularly by the opening which has been found between Pilgrim and Northumberland-street, by entirely clearing that cumbrous fabric Pilgrim-street gate. The Exchange is a noble building, from which the wall of the town runs parallel with the river, leaving a spacious piece of ground before it, between the water and the wall, which being well wharfed up, forms as commodious a quay as any in England. Without the walls on the west is the Firth, formerly a bowling-green, but now an agreeable promenade. The upper or northern part of the town is occupied by the higher classes, it is by far more pleasant than the part next the river, and has several streets that are level, spacious, and well built. This place has long been noted for its glass works, particularly in the finer sort; it has also a considerable manufacture of broad and narrow cloth, several soap works, and a grindstone manufactory. In the coal trade it is the first port in the world, and has sometimes exported to foreign parts and coastwise upwards of 600,000 chaldrons in a year. Many vessels are built here to great perfection and strength. A considerable manufacture of hardware and wrought iron, after the manner of Sheffield, has also been established, and that of earthenware is greatly encreased, several of the potteries having upwards of 100 persons constantly employed. Newcastle has 4 banks. It is governed by a mayor, sheriff, and 12 aldermen, and has sent 2 members to parliament ever since the reign of Edward I. being one of the first boroughs summoned to send representatives. The number of voters are about 2500, and the returning officer the sheriff. The mayor has a handsome mansion-house, and an allowance of 600*l.* per annum. The liberty of the corporation extends to the gate upon the bridge. The markets are on Tuesday and Saturday. Fairs, 12th of August, which continues till the 22d. and on the 29th of October, which continues till the 6th of November. The living of St. Nicholas is a vicarage, value 50*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Carlisle: the other 3 churches are curacies under the mother church.—Brand's Hist. of Newcastle, and Monthly Mag. 1801.

Newcastle under Lyne, a borough and market town in the parish of Stoke upon Trent, hundred of Pirehill, Stafford, situated on a branch of the Trent, 9 miles from Stone, and 149 from London; containing 977 houses and 4604 inhabitants, viz. 2235 males and 2369 females, of whom 653 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture. Its name is supposed to have been derived from an old castle which stood near it at Chesterton under Lyne. It had formerly 4 churches, but suffering considerably during the baron's wars they were destroyed: one only is now remaining, having a square tower with 8 bells and chimes. It has 20 almshouses endowed by the marquis of Stafford and lord Grenville for 20 women. At the south end of the town was formerly a monastery of black friars. In the neighbourhood are many coal pits, the coal of which is much softer than the Cannal coal, and is cut out in slices, but consumes so fast that it is only fit for forges. There is a greater quantity of stone ware made near this place, than in any other part of England, 100,000*l.* worth having been sometimes exported in a year. The clothing trade also flourishes here, but the chief manufactory is that of hats, under an incorporated company of felt makers. The streets are broad and well paved, but most of the buildings are low and ancient. The town was incorporated by Henry I. and afterwards by queen Elizabeth and Charles II. and is governed by a mayor, 2 justices, 2 bailiffs, and 24 common councilmen. It has sent 2 members to parliament ever since the 27th of Edward III. The returning officer is the mayor, and the number of voters is about 670. The corporation has the power of holding a court for the recovery of debts under 40*s.* In the neighbourhood are frequent horse races. Market on Monday, and a cattle market every Monday fortnight. Fairs Easter Monday, Whit Monday, 6th of July, first Monday in September, and 6th of November. The church is a curacy under Stoke upon Trent.—Shaw's Staffordshire.

Newcastle in Emlyn, a market town in Carmarthenshire, Wales, situated on the river Teifi or Tawy, 17 miles from Carmarthen, and 216 from London. It is but a small town, and its fine castle is now totally gone to ruins. Its situation is dreary and mountainous, which subjects the traveller to imminent danger, particularly from the numerous and imperceptible turf pits with which its neighbourhood abounds. The market is on Friday. Fairs 22d of June, 18th of July, and 22d of November, well supplied with cattle, horses, and sheep.

Newcastle, a parish in the hundred of Newcastle, Glamorganshire, Wales, 3 miles from Bridgend, and 180 from London; containing 149 houses and 611 inhabitants.

Newcastle Little, a parish in the hundred of Kemess, Pembrokeshire, Wales, 7 miles from Haverfordwest, and 260 from London; containing 66 houses and 255 inhabitants.

Newcastle, a town in the county of Dublin, 10 miles west-south-west of Dublin.

Newcastle, a handsome town in the county of Limerick, province of Ulster, Ireland, 114 miles from Dublin.

Newcastle, a village in the county of Meath, province of Leinster, Ireland.

Newcastle, a village in the county of Waterford, province of Munster, Ireland.

Newchurch, the name of a hundred in the lathe of Shepway, Kent, near the southern extremity of the county and Romney Marsh.

Newchurch, a village in the hundred of Wolphy, Hereford, near Leominster, and 140 miles from London; containing 14 houses and 69 inhabitants.

Newchurch, a parish in the hundred of Newchurch, lathe of Shepway, Kent, 4 miles from Romney, and 66 from London; containing 18 houses and 113 inhabitants. The rectory value 8*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.* and the vicarage value 19*l.* 16*s.* are in the patronage of the archbishop of Canterbury.

Newchurch, a township in the parish of Whalley, hundred of Blackburn, Lancaster, 4 miles from Burnley, and 214 from London; containing 793 houses and 5046 inhabitants, viz. 2371 males and 2669 females, of whom 2913 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures, and 145 in agriculture. Fair 1st July.

NEW CHURCH, a parish in the liberty of East Medina, Isle of Wight, Hants, 5 miles from Brading, and 102 from London; containing 339 houses and 2039 inhabitants, viz. 1025 males and 1014 females, of whom 149 were returned as being employed in various trades, and 1042 in agriculture.

NEW CHURCH EAST, a parish in the hundred of Caldicot, Higher division, Monmouthshire, 5 miles from Chepstow, and 136 from London; containing 64 houses and 306 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

NEW CHURCH WEST, a hamlet to the foregoing, three quarters of a mile distant, containing 24 houses and 121 inhabitants.

NEW CHURCH, a parish in the hundred of Elvet, Carmarthenshire, Wales, 3 miles from Carmarthen, and 221 from London; containing 155 houses and 508 inhabitants.

NEWCHURCH, a parish in the hundred of Painscastle, Radnor, Wales, 5½ miles from Hay, and 158 from London; containing 21 houses and 115 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

NEWDIGATE or NEWDICOT, a parish in the hundred of Copthorne, Surry, 5 miles from Dorking, and 28 from London; containing 63 houses and 445 inhabitants. In the eastern part of the parish is a medicinal spring. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the king.

NEWENDEN, a parish in the hundred of Selbrittenden, lathe of Scray, Kent, situated on the river Rother, 4 miles from Tenterden, and 55 from London; containing now only 15 houses and 104 inhabitants. It is said to have been anciently a city, till the year 488, when it was razed to the ground by the south Saxons, and the inhabitants all put to the sword. It was rebuilt in the reign of Edward I. Formerly it had the benefit of a harbour, but the town going to decay, it has gradually diminished to its present state. The church also is ruinous. In the neighbourhood formerly stood a castle and a Carmelite friary founded in 1241. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* in the patronage of the king.

NEWENHAM. See NEWNHAM.

NEWENT, a market town and parish in the hundred of Botloe, situated in the forest of Dean, among several coal-mines, 9 miles from Gloucester, and 108 from London; containing 459 houses and 2354 inhabitants, viz. 1109 males and 1164 females, of whom 101 were returned as being employed in various trades. Its name is supposed to have been derived from a new inn that was first erected here for the accommodation of travellers passing to and from Wales. In general the town is ill built, and has very little trade. The Gloucester canal to Ledbury has a branch to Newent. The market on Friday is very small. Fairs, Wednesdays before Easter, and Whitsuntide, 12th August, and the Friday after the 19th September. It is a vicarage, value 23*l.*—Rudge's Gloucestershire.

NEWENTON. See NEWNTON LONG, Wilts.

NEWFIELD, a hamlet in the parish of St. Andrew's, Auckland, in Darlington ward, Durham, near St. Andrew's, Auckland, containing 2 houses and 11 inhabitants.

NEWFOREST, a hamlet in the parish of Kirby Ravensworth, in Gilling West wapentake, north riding of York, near Kirby Ravensworth; containing 15 houses and 68 inhabitants

NEW FOREST, an extensive tract in Hampshire, situated in that part of the county which is bounded on the east by Southampton water, and on the south by the English channel. It extends from Godshill on the north-west to the sea on the south-east about 20 miles, and from Hardley on the east to Ringwood on the west, being 15 miles; containing 92,565 statute acres: there are nine walks in it, to each of which there is a keeper, under a lord-warden, beside two rangers and a bow-bearer. King Henry VIII. built some castles in it, and it has now several considerable towns and villages. From its situation, with respect to water carriage, and its vicinity to Portsmouth dock-yard, it is far superior to every other forest in the kingdom. When William the Conqueror made or rather enlarged this forest he is said to have laid waste whole towns and villages, and destroying no less than 36 churches. His son William Rufus was killed in this forest, by an arrow shot by Walter Tyrrel, a French knight, which is said to have accidentally glanced against a tree, and afterwards struck the king, to perpetuate the spot a triangular stone was set up in the year 1745, by John lord Delawar.

NEWHALL, a township in the parish of Wrenbury, hundred of Nantwich, Chester, 6 miles from Nantwich, and 160 from London; containing 120 houses and 819 inhabitants.

NEWHALL, a township united with Stanton, in the parish of Stapenhill, hundred of Repton and Grassley, Derby, 2½ miles from Burton, and 125 from London. Population returned with Stanton.

NEWHALL, a township in the parish of Otley, in Claro wapentake, west riding of York, 1 mile from Otley, and 206 from London; containing 46 houses and 203 inhabitants.

NEWHAM, a hamlet in the parish and ward of Bamburgh, Northumberland, 3 miles from Belford, and 325 from London; containing 37 houses and 206 inhabitants.

NEWHAM, a hamlet in the parish of Walton in Castle ward, West division, Northumberland, 14 miles from Newcastle, and 290 from London; containing 12 houses and 70 inhabitants.

NEWHAVEN or MEECHING, a parish in the hundred of Holmstrough, rape of Lewes, Sussex, 7 miles from Lewes, and 60 from London; containing 100 houses and 534 inhabitants. Its harbour at the mouth of the river Ouse, was anciently noted for its convenience and safety, even for ships of considerable burthen, but its piers going to decay, the harbour became choaked with sand, and this once market town, thereby quite neglected; however, in the year 1731, an act having passed for repairing it, some trade has again been brought to the place, and vessels of different sizes have been built here. It is generally the station of a king's cutter, to protect the revenue from the frequency of smuggling here, and the harbour is defended by a small fort at the entrance. Near the entrance of the town, and close to the church yard wall, stands an obelisk to commemorate the melancholy fate of his majesty's ship Brazen, captain Hanson, which was wrecked here in January 1800, and out of 105 persons one only escaped. Fair 10th October. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the king.—Guide to the Watering Places.

Newhaven, a considerable fishing village in Mid Lothian, Scotland, situated about one mile north of Leith harbour. Of late it has been much resorted to as a bathing place, and many new and elegant houses have been erected for the accommodation of its visitors.

Newhills, a parish in the shire of Aberdeen, Scotland, bounded on the north by the river Don, 5 miles from Aberdeen, and 8 from Kintore; containing 297 houses and 1305 inhabitants, mostly employed in agriculture. The hills abound with granite, and the only article of trade is that of cutting and preparing stone for the London market.

Newholme, a township in the parish of Whitby, in the liberties of Whitby Strand, north riding of York, 1 mile from Whitby, and 247 from London; containing 6 houses and 346 inhabitants.

Newick, a parish in the hundred of Barcomb, rape of Lewes, Sussex, 6 miles from Cuckfield, and 45 from London; containing 57 houses and 393 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 17*s.* 8*d.*

Newington Bagpath, a parish in the hundred of Berkley, Gloucester, 5 miles from Wootton, and 104 from London; containing 36 houses and 217 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* with Oldpen chapel annexed.

Newington, a parish in the hundred of Milton, lathe of Scray, Kent, 6 miles from Chatham, and 36 from London; containing 84 houses and 507 inhabitants. It was formerly a market-town, and is supposed to have been a Roman station. It is a vicarage, value 18*l.* in the patronage of Eaton college.

Newington, a parish in the hundred of Folkstone, lathe of Shepway, Kent, 2 miles from Hythe, and 67 from London; containing 61 houses and 429 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* and is united with Cheriton rectory.

Newington Stoke, a parish in the hundred of Ossulton, Middlesex, 2¼ miles from London; containing 298 houses and 1462 inhabitants. It is a pleasant little village lying a little beyond Islington, on the road from Shoreditch. The church is a small low Gothic building, behind it is a grove of tall trees, known by the name of queen Elizabeth's walk. The pious Dr. Watts resided many years in the manor-house here. The living is a rectory, value 10*l.* belonging to the prebend thereof, in the cathedral of St. Paul's.—Browne's History of Stoke Newington.

Newington Green, a hamlet situate partly in the parish of Stoke Newington, and partly in that of Islington, in the hundred of Ossulton, Middlesex; 2 miles from London. It consists of a handsome square of considerable extent, surrounded with houses, one of which, on the south side, is said to have been the residence of the Dudleys. It has a large meeting-house, in which the celebrated Dr. Price, preached many years.

Newington North, a hamlet in the parish of Broughton, hundred of Bloxham, Oxford, 2 miles from Banbury, and 76 from London; containing 45 houses and 262 inhabitants.

Newington South, a parish in the hundred of Wootton, Oxford, 4 miles from Deddington, and 71 from London; containing 79 houses and 395 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* in the patronage of Exeter college.

Newington, a parish in the hundred of Ewelme, Oxford, 5 miles from Wallingford, and 48 from London; containing 28 houses and 195 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 18*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of Exeter college.

Newington, a parish in the hundred of Brixton, Surry, commonly called Newington Butts, 1 mile from London, joined to the borough of Southwark by a row of houses called Newington Causeway; it contains 2365 houses and 14,847 inhabitants, viz. 6450 males, and 8397 females, of whom 1965 were employed in trade, handicraft, and manufacture, but this includes the populous hamlet of Walworth. It extends about a mile in length from Southwark to Kennington Common, towards which are many well-built houses, the residence of opulent merchants and tradesmen in the metropolis. Although the church has been enlarged of late years, it is by far too small for its present population, and is inconveniently situated, the chancel projecting into the narrowest part of the road. Near it are some very handsome and commodious almshouses, belonging to the fishmongers company, with a neat chapel annexed. The company of drapers have also almshouses here. The name of the place is supposed to have been derived from the practice of shooting at Butts, as practised here in the reign of Henry VIII. It is a rectory, value 16*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Worcester.—Lysons's Environs of London, and Manning's Surry.

New Keith, a manufacturing village in the parish of Keith, shire of Banff, Scotland, 46 miles from Aberdeen; containing 1100 inhabitants. It was first began to be erected in 1750, by the late earl of Findlater, upon a barren muir. It has a well supplied weekly market, and four annual fairs, having the best supply of black cattle in the north.

NEWKIRK, a hamlet in the parish of Greystock, near Carlisle, Cumberland.

NEWLAND, a hamlet in the parish of Crosthwait, in Allerdale ward, above Derwent, Cumberland, 3 miles from Keswick, and 2. 2 from London. Population returned with Portingscales.

NEWLAND, a hamlet in the parish, hundred and division of Sherborn, Dorset, adjoining to Sherborn, and 116 miles from London. Population returned included with Sherborne.

NEWLAND, a parish in the hundred of St. Briavells, Gloucester, 3 miles from Monmouth, and 127 from London; containing 482 houses and 2457 inhabitants, viz. 1262 males, and 1195 females, of whom 965 were employed in trade, &c. particularly in the iron mines and coal-pits. It is a vicarage, value 18*l.* 6*s.* 10*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Landaff.

NEWLAND, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Great Malvern, hundred of Pershore, Worcester, 6 miles from Worcester, and 116 from London; containing 20 houses and 132 inhabitants.

NEWLAND, a hamlet in the parish of Stoke, near the isle of Grain, Kent.

NEWLAND, a hamlet in the parish of Cottingham, in Beacon Hunsley division, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York, 2 miles from Hull. Population returned with Cottingham.

NEWLAND, a township in the parish of Drax, in Barkston Ash wapentake, west riding of York, 3 miles from Snaith, and 177 from London. Population returned with Drax.

NEWLAND, a village in the parishes of Howden and Eastrington, in the division of Howdenshire, east riding of York, 4 miles from Howden, and 188 from London.

NEWLAND, a parish in the shire of Peebles, Scotland, situated on the borders of Mid-Lothian, 5 miles from Linton, and 8 from Peebles; containing 195 houses and 950 inhabitants. The parish contains some rich veins of iron ore, and near Lamancha is a chalybeate spring.

NEWLANDSIDE, a township in the parish of Stanhope, in Darlington ward, Durham, 2 miles from Wolsingham, and 262 from London; containing 100 houses and 604 inhabitants.

NEWLYN, a parish in the hundred of Pydar, Cornwall, 9 miles from St. Columb's, and 252 from London; containing 146 houses and 735 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Exeter.

NEWMARKET, a market-town and parish situated partly in the hundred of Chevely, Cambridge, and partly in the hundred of Lackford, Suffolk, 13 miles from St. Edmunds Bury, 14 from Cambridge, and 61 from London; consisting principally of one long street, containing 305 houses and 1792 inhabitants. The town is a great thoroughfare to Norfolk, and has long been noted for its horse races on the adjoining heath, in April and October, which are most numerously attended by the nobility and gentry. King Charles I. erected a house here, for the sake of enjoying the races, and at each meeting his present majesty gives a plate. Queen Anne endowed two charity-schools for 20 boys and 20 girls. The houses in general are well built, and it has a chapel of ease, beside the mother church. In 1683 the town was mostly destroyed by fire, but was soon after rebuilt. The market is on Thursday, and there is a small one on Tuesday. Fairs, 28th October, and Whit Tuesday. The living is a rectory, value 4*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.* united with Wooddittton.

NEWMARKET, a parish in the hundred of Prestaigne, Flintshire, Wales, 4 miles from St. Asaph, containing 93 houses and 451 inhabitants. Fairs, the last Saturday in April, the third Saturday in July, the fourth Saturday in October, and the second Saturday in December.

NEW MILLS, a hamlet in the parish of Stroud, Gloucestershire.

NEWMILNS, a burgh of barony in the parish of Larden, shire of Ayr, Scotland, containing about 1000 inhabitants.

NEWMINSTER ABBEY, a hamlet in the parish of Morpeth, in Castle ward, West division, near Morpeth, Northumberland, 291 miles from London; containing 12 houses and 57 inhabitants.

NEWNHAM, a market town and parish in the hundred of Westbury, Gloucester, situated on the river Severn, 8 miles from Gloucester, and 116 from London; containing 144 houses and 821 inhabitants. It was anciently a borough, incorporated by king John, and the sword is still preserved, which he gave with the charter. It is now governed by two constables, and has a market on Friday. Fairs, 11th June, and 18th October. It is a curacy.

NEWNHAM, a parish in the hundred of Feversham, lathe of Scray, Kent, 3½ miles from Feversham, and 45 from London; containing 41 houses and 262 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*

NEWNHAM, a parish in the hundred and division of Basingstoke, Hants, 4¼ miles from Basingstoke, and 40 from London; containing 33 houses and 260 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 17*l.* 17*s.* 1*d.* in the patronage of Queen's College, Oxford, with Mapledurwell chapel annexed.

NEWNHAM, a parish in the hundred of Fawsley, Northampton, 2 miles from Daventry, and 70 from London; containing 110 houses and 437 inhabitants.

NEWNHAM COURTNEY, a parish in the hundred of Bullington, Oxford, 5 miles from Oxford, and 52½ from London; containing 54 houses and 278 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 6*s.* in the patronage of the earl of Harcourt, who is lord of the manor, and has an elegant mansion and extensive park in the neighbourhood. It consists of one street, or rather two rows of houses, having a garden between and in the front of each, a little distance from the road, and a row of trees in front. The whole erected in 1704, and has one large public-house at the upper end. The church is a beautiful building of the Ionic order, in the stile of an antique temple.

NEWNHAM WARREN, a parish in the hundred of Langtree, Oxford, 1 mile from Wallingford, and 44 from London; containing 44 houses and 213 inhabitants.

NEWNHAM PADDOX, a hamlet in the parish of Monks Kirby, Warwickshire, 5 miles from Rugby. Here is a neat mansion belonging to lord Fielding.

NEW PASSAGE, a ferry on the Severn, about 9 miles from Bristol, and 129¼ from London, where the Severn is about three miles wide. Oliver Cromwell suppressed this ferry on account of a small number of republicans being lost here by the wilful inattention of the boatmen, but it was revived in 1716. From hence the mail is conveyed to Milford-Haven, being much safer than the old passage at Aust ferry, about two miles above it. The price for the passage of a man and horse, is 1s. 6d. and for a foot passenger, 9d.

NEWPORT, a parish in the hundred of Uttlesford, Essex, 3 miles from Saffron Walden, and 39 from London; containing 118 houses and 663 inhabitants. It is situated on the river Grant or Cam, and was formerly a market town, till the market was removed to Walden. Fairs, 17th November, commonly called Colt fair, and on Easter Monday. It is a vicarage, value 9l. 10s.

NEWPORT, the name of a hundred in Bucks, being the most northern point of the county, bordering on Bedford and Northamptonshire.

NEWPORT, a borough in the parish of St. Stephen's, 3 miles from Launceston, and 214 from London, returning two members to parliament. The whole village is the property of the duke of Northumberland, who is lord of the manor, and appoints at his court-leet the returning officers. The two vianders or constables, with the rest of the inhabitants paying scot and lot, are the voters; total number about 24.

NEWPORT, a market town and parish in the hundred of Wentloodge, Monmouth, situate on the river Usk, 12 miles from Cardiff, 16 from Chepstow, and 147 from London; containing 290 houses and 1135 inhabitants, of whom 307 were returned as being employed in various trades. It is a long, narrow, straggling town, built partly on the banks of the Usk, and partly on a declivity, dirty and ill paved, the whole having a very gloomy appearance. Over the river is a handsome stone bridge of five arches, constructed by Mr. David Edwards, son of the architect who built the far famed arch of Pont y Prydd, in Glamorganshire. Its trade has been much benefited by the canal, which conveys to this town for exportation the produce of the foundries in the western mountains. The canal consists of two branches, the one called the Crumlin, and the other the Pont y pool branch, from the places where they commence; they both unite in the plains of Malpas, one mile distant from the town. It was once surrounded with a wall of which no vestiges now remain. In the high street is an old spacious building, called the Murager's house, an officer of great antiquity, in fortified towns, who superintended the walls, &c. Near the bridge stands the shell of the castle, a small but massive structure, supposed to have been erected by the earl of Gloucester and Hereford, in the reign of Henry I. The church of St. Woolos, stands on the outskirts of the town. The tower was erected by Henry III., as a testimony of gratitude for the loyalty of the inhabitants, during the barons wars; the king's statue is placed in a niche in the western front, but the head was broken off by Cromwell's soldiers. Near the banks of the Usk are the remains of a friary, and its chapel a small but elegant specimen of Gothic architecture, was some years ago converted into a cyder-mill. The market is on Saturday. Fairs, Holy Thursday, Whit Thursday, 15th August, and 6th November. It is a vicarage, value 7l. 3s. 11d. and is in the patronage of the bishop of Gloucester.—Coxe's Tour in Monmouthshire.

NEWPORT, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Berkley, Gloucester, 10½ miles from Bristol. The population of which was returned with Berkley.

NEWPORT, a market town and parish in the hundred of South Bradford, Salop, 6 miles from Shiffnal, and 140 from London, on a plain near the borders of Staffordshire, containing 317 houses and 2307 inhabitants, viz. 1174 males and 1136 females, of whom 50 were returned as being employed in trade. The church having a square tower containing six bells, was formerly a college for a master and four secular chaplains. The free-school is well endowed from the munificence of a Mr. Adams, a haberdasher of London, and has a good library, with a house both for the master and usher, each having an acre of ground; near which he also erected two almshouses. The market is on Saturday. Fairs, Saturday before Palm Sunday, 28th May, 27th July, and 10th December. It is a curacy in the patronage of the king.

NEWPORT, a borough and market town in the parish of Carisbrook, in the Isle of Wight, Hants, situate near the middle of the Island, on the river Medina or Cowes, which falls into the sea, 7 miles below this town. It is 79 miles from London, and contains 564 houses and 3585 inhabitants, viz. 1651 males, 1934 females, of whom 640 were returned as being employed in various trades. The town is regularly built, and has some handsome shops and good inns. The principal market-house is an ancient building, above which is a modern built town hall. This town consists, lengthwise, of three parallel streets, which are crossed by three others, having three large squares containing the cattle, corn, and poultry markets, formed by intersections. The church stands in the centre of one of the squares, consisting of a nave with two side ailes, and a square tower. There was no burial ground to it, till the reign of queen Elizabeth, when the plague having visited Newport, for want of sufficient room at Carisbrook, the mother church, a piece of ground was appropriated for that purpose here. The pulpit is of wainscot richly ornamented with carved emblematical figures. Dissenters of various denominations have their different meeting-houses here, and there are several charity and Sunday schools. The free-school is a plain stone building, having convenient apartments for the master; it was erected by by public subscription in the reign of James I. This school is remarkable for being the place in which the commissioners from the parliament held a conference with Charles I. This town appears to have been of little consequence till the reign of Henry II., when its church was erected. It has sent two members to parliament since the 23d of Edward I., and was incorporated by charter in the first of James I. It is now governed by a mayor, 11 aldermen, and 12 burgesses. The mayor, recorder, and two burgesses, are empowered to hold a court weekly, for the trial of causes of debt and trespass within their jurisdiction. The only manufacture carried on here is that of starch. About one mile distant on a commanding eminence, stand the venerable ruins of Carisbrook castle, the principal remains of which consist of the entrance or gateway and the keep. The markets are on Wednesday and Saturday, and are considerable for corn. Fairs, Whit Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday.—Sir R. Worsley's Hist. of the Isle of Wight. Gilpin's and Bullar's Tours, &c.

Newport, a parish in the hundred of Kemeiss, Pembrokeshire, Wales, 244 miles from London; containing 314 houses and 1392 inhabitants. It is pleasantly seated at the foot of a hill, but is an ill-built place, with a handsome church, and the ruins of a castle. The Nevern, a fine navigable river runs by the end of the town, and empties itself into the Bristol channel; near it are a number of Druidical altars; one of which is upwards of 9 feet in diameter, in the shape of a mushroom; and within two miles of the town the road passes close to the remains of several others. It is governed by a mayor, 12 aldermen, a recorder, 2 bailiffs, and 6 constables, but has no market. Fair 27th July for cattle. It is a rectory, value 16*l.*

Newport Pagnell, a market town and parish in the hundred of Newport Pagnell, Buckingham, situated at the union of the small river Lovet with the Ouse, 8 miles from Woburn, and 50½ from London; containing 527 houses and 2048 inhabitants, viz. 914 males, and 1134 females, of whom 419 were returned as being employed in various trades, and 112 in agriculture. The church is an ancient stately building, situated on an eminence and commanding a delightful prospect. In the church yard are seven almshouses, built and endowed by a citizen of London. Over the river Ouse are two good stone bridges, and from that river the inhabitants are well supplied with water, by an hydraulic machine. An hospital was founded here by Anne, queen of James I., for three men and three women, of which the vicar of the town is master. The presbyterians and anabaptists have places of worship here. The town being surrounded with excellent corn and pasture land, all kinds of grain are produced here. The manufacture of bone thread lace, carried on in the town and neighbourhood, as well as that of paper, form the chief branches of employment. In the neighbourhood of this town lived Cowper the poet, who died in April 1800. Market on Saturday for corn and provisions, and a lace market on Wednesday, the latter not so considerable as it used to be. Fairs, 22d February, 22d April, 22d June, 29th August, 22d October, and 22d December, well supplied with cattle. The living is a vicarage, value 10*l.*—Mate's Tour.

Newport Glasgow, commonly called Port Glasgow, a parish and town in the shire of Renfrew, Scotland, situate on the banks of the Clyde, 4 miles above Greenock; containing 435 houses and 2865 inhabitants, viz. 1748 males and 2117 females, of whom 243 were returned as being employed in various trades. It was formerly a barony called Newark, belonging to the parish of Kilmalcolm, but the magistrates of Glasgow in 1668, feuded a piece of ground for forming a harbour for the accommodation of their shipping, and it was erected into a separate parish in 1695. The town of Newport Glasgow and Newark was erected into a burgh of barony in 1775, with a council of 13 trustees; of these, two are elected bailies, who are empowered to administer justice. The harbour is excellent, and there are extensive warehouses on the quay belonging to the Glasgow merchants. It is a custom house port, and has about 125 vessels belonging to it. Contiguous to the town, and near the shore, stands the castle of Newark, a strongly fortified edifice, built in 1599, and is now the property of colonel Hamilton, of Wishaw.

Newston Long, a parish in the hundred of Malmsbury, Wilts, 3 miles from Malmsbury, and 98 from London; containing 25 houses and 196 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 5*s.*

Newston North, a parish in the hundred of Swanborough, Wilts, near Market Lavington, and 88 miles from London; containing 43 houses and 221 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.*

Newport, a town in the county of Tipperary, in the province of Munster, Ireland, 86 miles south-west of Dublin.

NEWPORT PLATT, a sea port town in the county of Mayo, province of Connaught, Ireland, situated on a river which runs into Clew bay, near its mouth, 8 miles west of Castlebar, and 123 north-west of Dublin.

NEWPORT, a newly erected village on the large common called Wallingfen, in the parish of Eastrington, and division of Howdenshire, east riding of York, 8 miles from Howden, and 192 from London. It stands on the banks of the canal from the river Humber to Market Weighton, and contains 38 houses and 169 inhabitants.

NEW RIVER, a fine artificial stream, brought from two springs at Chadwell and Amwell, near Ware, in Hertfordshire, for the supply of the greater part of the metropolis with water. It was finished in 1613, by sir Hugh Middleton, a rich citizen of London, who expended his whole fortune in the undertaking. This river, including its windings, is 58¾ miles long. It is under the management of a corporation called the New River Company.

NEWRY, a considerable town and sea port in the county of Down, province of Ulster, Ireland, situated on the side of a steep hill, at the foot of which is the Newry water, 49 miles north of Dublin. Over the Newry water are two good stone bridges, and there is a third over a navigable canal, open for vessels of 70 tons burthen, by which is has a communication with Lough Neagh, and Carlingford bay. This town has of late years so much increased in its shipping, that it is now the largest town in the county.

NEWSHAM, a hamlet in the parish of Egglescliff, Stockton ward, Durham, situated on the river Tees, 5 miles from Darlington, containing 6 houses and 34 inhabitants.

NEWSHAM, a hamlet in the parish of Kirkham, hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, near Kirkham. The population of which place was returned with Goosnargh.

NEWSHAM, a hamlet in the parish of Kirby Wisk, in Birdforth wapentake, north riding of York, 4 miles from Thirsk, and 227 from London; containing 32 houses and 167 inhabitants.

NEWSHAM, a hamlet partly situate in the parish of Barningham, and partly in that of Kirby Ravensworth, in Gilling West wapentake, north riding of York, 6 miles from Barnard Castle, and 241 from London; containing 81 houses and 491 inhabitants.

NEWSHOLME, a hamlet in the parish of Gisburn, wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, west riding of York, 7 miles from Clitheroe, and 222 from London; containing 14 houses and 78 inhabitants.

NEWSHOLME, a village in the parish of Wrep e, division of Holme Beacon, east riding of York, 2 miles from Howden and 185 from London; it contains jointly with Brind 33 houses and 192 inhabitants. There was formerly a chapel at this village.

NEWSTEAD, a hamlet in the parish and ward of Balmbrough, Northumberland, 4 miles from Belford, and 326 from London; containing 22 houses and 108 inhabitants.

NEWSTED, an extra parochial chapelry in the hundred of Broxtow, Notts, 7 miles from Nottingham, and 134½ from London, near the head of the little river Lynn; containing 20 houses and 143 inhabitants. The Abbey house formerly a priory of black canons, now the seat of lord Byron, is situated in a vale in the midst of an extensive park finely planted. The banks of the lake, which flows nearly up to the house, are ornamented on one side with fine woods, which spread over the edge of a hill down to the water; and on the other there are scattered groves and a park. There are also two castles which appear mounted with cannon, and in the lake are several yachts and boats lying at anchor. The road up the hill leads to a handsome Gothic building, whence the view of the lakes, the abbey, plantations, &c. forms a most beautiful landscape.—Dickinson's Antiquities of Nottinghamshire.

NEWSTEDE, a small village between Stamford and Uffington, Lincolnshire; had formerly a monastery.

NEWTHORP, a hamlet in the parish of Sherborn, Barkston Ash wapentake, west riding of York, 8 miles from Pontefract, and 185 from London; containing 11 houses and 46 inhabitants.

NEWTIMBER, a parish in the hundred of Poynings, rape of Lewes, Sussex, 6 miles from Brighton, and 48 from London; containing 17 houses and 148 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.*

NEWTON BLOSSOMVILLE, a parish in the hundred of Newport, Bucks, 3 miles from Olney, and 52 from London; containing 41 houses and 221 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 8*s.* 1*d.*

NEWTON LONGVILLE, a parish in the hundred of Newport, Bucks, 2½ miles from Fenny Stratford, and 46 from London; containing 90 houses and 459 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 20*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.* in the patronage of New College, Oxford.

NEWTON, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Hawkston, hundred of Thriplow, Cambridge, 3 miles from Cambridge, and 48 from London; containing 18 houses and 114 inhabitants.

NEWTOWN, a parish in the Isle of Ely, Cambridge, 3¼ miles from Wisbeach, and 93 from London; containing 46 houses and 283 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 18*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of Ely, with the chapel of St. Mary's in the Marsh, annexed.

NEWTON, a small village in the hundred of Broxton, lower division, Chester, 1 mile from Chester, and 181 from London; containing 28 houses and 141 inhabitants.

NEWTON, a hamlet in the parish of Dores.

bury, and hundred of Bucklow, Chester, 8 miles from Northwich, and 182 from London; containing 16 houses and 96 inhabitants.

NEWTON, a hamlet to Overton, in the hundred of Eddisbury, Chester, 10 miles from Chester, and 180 from London; containing 12 houses and 108 inhabitants.

NEWTON, a township to Mottram, in the hundred of Macclesfield, Chester, 6 miles from Stockport, and 179 from London, containing 173 houses and 1005 inhabitants, of whom 523 were returned as being employed in various trades, and in the neighbouring salt works.

NEWTON, a village in Leath ward, Cumberland, near Penrith; containing 22 houses and 128 inhabitants.

NEWTON, ST. CYRICK, a parish in the hundred of Crediton, Devon, 2 miles from Crediton, and 178 from London; containing 168 houses and 867 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value, 16*l.* 15*s.* 5*d.*

NEWTON FERRERS, a parish in the hundred of Ermington, Devon, 7½ miles from Modbury, and 215 from London; containing 112 houses and 590 inhabitants.

NEWTON BUSHEL, a market town in the parish of Kingsteignton, hundred of Teignbridge, Devon, 13 miles from Exeter, and 187 from London, near the river Teign; containing 167 houses and 856 inhabitants, including the parish of Kingsteignton. The market is on Wednesday. Fairs, 24th June, first Wednesday in September, and 6th November.

NEWTON TRACEY, a parish in the hundred of Fremington, Devon, 5½ miles from Barnstaple, and 195 from London; containing 12 houses and 86 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 8*s.* 1*d.* in the patronage of the king.

NEWTON, ST. PETROCK, a parish in the hundred of Shebbear, Devon, 9 miles from Hatherleigh, and 209 from London; containing 36 houses and 215 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 5*s.* 7*d.*

NEWTON SOLNEY, a parish in the hundred of Repton and Grassley, Derby, situated on the river Dove, 4 miles from Burton on Trent, and 125 from London; containing 42 houses and 181 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

NEWTON CAP, a hamlet in the parish of St. Andrew's Auckland, in Darlington ward, Durham, 3 miles from Bishop Auckland, and 254 from London; containing 27 houses and 114 inhabitants.

NEWTON BEWLEY, a hamlet in the parish of Billingham, in Stockton ward, Durham, 3 miles from Stockton, and 251 from London; containing 20 houses and 88 inhabitants.

NEWTON LONG, a parish in Stockton ward, Durham, 4 miles from Yarm, and 248 from London; containing 53 houses and 295 inhabitants. It is a rectory value 20*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of Durham.

NEWTON, a parish in the hundred of Ewias Lacey, Herefordshire, 10 miles from Hereford, and 143 from London; containing 49 houses and 215 inhabitants.

NEWTON, a hamlet in the parish of Hope, hundred of Wolphy, Hereford, 9 miles from Hereford, and 144 from London; containing 22 houses and 101 inhabitants.

NEWTON, a hamlet in the parish of Brampton Bryant, hundred of Wigmore, Hereford, 9 miles from Ludlow, and 150 from London. Population returned with Walford.

NEWTON STALBATCH OR STAGBRIDGE, a hamlet in the parish of Leominster, hundred of Wolphy, Hereford, 2 miles from Leominster, and 138 from London; containing 33 houses and 180 inhabitants.

NEWTON, a township in the parish of Kirkham, hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, 1 mile from Kirkham, and 225 from London; containing 54 houses and 269 inhabitants. It has a charity school.

NEWTON, a township and chapelry to Manchester, in the hundred of Salford, Lancaster, 1½ mile from Manchester, and 187 from London; containing 213 houses and 1295 inhabitants, of whom 785 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures.

NEWTON IN THE WILLOWS, a borough town and chapelry in the parish of Winwick, hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 4½ miles from Warrington, and 179 from London; containing 178 houses and 1455 inhabitants, of whom 356 were returned as being employed in various trades. This was once a market town, but the market is now discontinued, although the market cross is still standing in the church yard. It is a borough by prescription, and is governed by a steward, bailiff and burgesses, and has returned two members to parliament since the first year of queen Elizabeth; the right of election is supposed to be in the free burgesses. The returning officers are the steward of the lord of the manor, and the bailiff. It has two charity schools, with a considerable manufacture of fustian and Manchester goods. Fairs, 17th May and 11th August, very considerable for horned cattle. Here is a chapel of ease to the mother church.

NEWTON HARCOURT, a hamlet in the parish of Wistow, hundred of Gartree, Leicester, 5 miles from Leicester, and 91 from London; containing 40 houses and 186 inhabitants.

NEWTON, a parish in the hundred of Aveland, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 3 miles from Folkingham, and 110 from London; containing 29 houses and 127 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.*

NEWTON, a hamlet in the parish of Toft, in the hundred of Walsheroft, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 3 miles from Market Raisin, and 151 from London; containing 10 houses and 51 inhabitants.

NEWTON, a parish in the hundred of Well, parts of Lindsay, Lincoln, 8 miles from Lincoln, and 142 from London; containing 35 houses and 205 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.*

NEWTON, a parish in the hundred of South Greenhoe, Norfolk, 4 miles from Swaffham, and 97 from London; containing 9 houses and 48 inhabitants. It is a vicarage in the patronage of the bishop of Ely.

NEWTON FLOTMAN, a parish in the hundred of Humbleyard, Norfolk, 7 miles from Norwich, and 104 from London; containing 40 houses and 336 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.*

NEWTON, a hamlet in the parish of Great Oakley, hundred of Corby, Northampton, 5 miles from Kettering, and 79 from London; containing 17 houses and 104 inhabitants.

NEWTON BROMSHOLD, a parish in the hundred of Higham Ferrers, Northampton, 3 miles from Higham Ferrers, and 62 from London; containing 18 houses and 101 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

NEWTON, a township in the parish of Embleton, in Balmbrough ward, Northumberland, 7 miles from Alnwick, and 318 from London; containing 42 houses and 200 inhabitants.

NEWTON ON THE MOOR, a township in the parish of Shilbottle, in Coquetdale ward, East division, Northumberland, 4 miles from Alnwick, and 306 from London; containing 31 houses and 162 inhabitants.

NEWTON WEST, a township in the parish of Kirknewton, in Glendale ward, Northumberland, 4 miles from Wooller, and 327 from London; containing 12 houses and 60 inhabitants.

NEWTON UNDERWOOD, a hamlet in the parish of Mitford, in Morpeth ward, Northumberland, 4 miles from Morpeth, and 295 from London; containing 14 houses and 78 inhabitants.

NEWTON, a hamlet in the parish of Bywell St. Peter's, in Tindal ward, Northumberland, 2 miles from Corbridge, and 277 from London; containing 27 houses and 137 inhabitants.

NEWTON HALL, another hamlet in the same parish, one mile distant, containing 18 houses and 107 inhabitants.

NEWTON PURCELL a parish in the hundred of Ploughley, Oxford, 5 miles from Bicester, and 55 from London; containing 22 houses and 93 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 3*l.* 15*s.* 5*d.*

NEWTON ST. LOE, a parish in the hundred of Wellow, Somerset, 4 miles from Bath, and 111 from London; containing 49 houses and 371 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 17*l.* 18*s.* 4*d.*

NEWTON VALENCE, a parish in the hundred of Sambourn, division of Alton, Hants, 4 miles from Alton, and 51 from London; containing 41 houses and 221 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 13*l.* 10*s.* 2*d.*

NEWTON, a borough in the parish of Shalfleet, in East Medina, liberty of Isle of Wight, Hants, situated on a bay on the north-west coast of the island, between Yarmouth and West Cowes, 18 miles from Southampton, and 95 from London. The population was included with the return of Shalfleet. It was originally called Francheville, which name it is supposed to have taken when rebuilt after its destruction by the French in the reign of Richard II. The harbour at highwater is capable of receiving vessels of 500 tons burthen, and affords excellent shelter, yet it is little frequented. It is governed by a mayor and burgesses, and has sent two members to parliament ever since the reign of queen Elizabeth. The number of voters are about 33, and the returning officer is the mayor. The market on Wednesday is now almost disused. Fairs 22 July. It has a chapel to the mother church.—Tomkin's and Hassell's Tour.

NEWTON OLD, a parish in the hundred of Stow, Suffolk, 3 miles from Stow Market, and 79 from London; containing 67 houses and 451 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 15*s* 5*d.*

NEWTON, a parish in the hundred of Babergh, Suffolk, 2 miles from Sudbury, and 54 from London; containing 47 houses and 354 inhabitants.

NEWTON REGIS, a hamlet in the parish of Clifton, hundred of Hemlingford, Warwick, 4 miles from Tamworth, and 115 from London; containing 62 houses and 302 inhabitants.

NEWTON, a village in the hundred of Knightlow, Warwick, near Rugby, and 86 from London; containing 43 houses and 169 inhabitants.

NEWTON SOUTH, a parish in the hundred of Branch and Dole, Wilts, 5 miles from Salisbury, and 85 from London; containing 100 houses and 541 inhabitants.

NEWTON TONEY, a parish in the hundred of Amesbury, Wilts, 4 miles from Amesbury, and 75 from London; containing 53 houses and 286 inhabitants.

NEWTON ON DERWENT, a township in the parish of Wilberfoss, in the division of Wilton Beacon, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York; 8 miles from York, and 192 from London; containing 36 houses and 168 inhabitants.

NEWTON EAST and WEST, two small hamlets in the parish of Aldborough, Holderness division, east riding of York, near Aldborough, containing 27 houses and 198 inhabitants.

NEWTON MORRELL, a hamlet in the parish of Barton, in Gilling wapentake, north riding of York, 8 miles from Richmond, and 242 from London; containing 6 houses and 40 inhabitants.

NEWTON IN THE WILLOWS, a township in the parish of Patrick Brampton, Hang East wapentake, north riding of York, 4 miles from Bedale, and 227 from London; containing 54 houses and 216 inhabitants.

NEWTON MULGRAVE, a township in the parish of Lythe, in Langborough wapentake, north riding of York, 7 miles from Whitby, and 222 from London; containing 28 houses and 133 inhabitants.

NEWTON ON OUSE, a parish in Bulmer wa-pentake north riding of York, situated on the river Ouse, 8 miles from York, and 207 from London; containing 60 houses and 330 inhabitants.

NEWTON, a township in the parish of Pickering, Langborough, wapentake north riding of York, 3 miles from Pickering, and 228 from London; containing 38 houses and 149 inhabitants.

NEWTON, a parish in Pickering Lythe, north riding of York, 4 miles from Pickering, and 229 from London; containing 33 houses and 154 inhabitants.

NEWTON, a hamlet in the parish of Stonegrave, in the wapentake of Rydall, north riding of York, 5 miles from Helmsley, and 220 from London; containing 10 houses and 69 inhabitants.

NEWTON, a township in the parish of Slaidburn, wapentake of Staincliffe and Ewcross, west riding of York, near Barnsley, and 171 miles from London; containing 72 houses and 378 inhabitants.

NEWTON WEST, a hamlet in the township of Allonby, parish of Aspatria, in Allerdale Ward, below Derwent, Cumberland, 6 miles from Ireby, and 306 from London. The population of which was returned included with Allonby.

NEWTON, a parish in the shire of Mid-Lothian, Scotland, 5 miles from Edinburgh; containing 225 houses and 1060 inhabitants; The whole parish forms a circle of about 3 miles diameter, lying on an inexhaustible bed of coal, having no fewer than 19 different seams, from 2 to 10 feet thick, and some of the pits 27 fathoms below the level of the sea.

NEWTON, a village in the parish of Mearns, shire of Renfrew, Scotland, 6¼ miles from Creetown; containing about 240 inhabitants.

NEWTON DOUGLAS, a considerable town in the shire of Wigton, Scotland, situated on the river Cree and partly in the parish of Peningham, on the road from Dumfries to port Patrick. It was originally called NEWTON STEWART, from its belonging to the Stewarts, the younger branch of the Galloway family; but in 1788 it fell into the hands of William Douglas, Esq. from whence it was called NEWTON DOUGLAS, and was erected into a burgh of barony. It contains 574 houses and 2569 inhabitants, the greater part of whom are employed in the cotton manufacture; it has also a considerable carpet manufactory and a tannery.

NEWTON, a small village in the parish of Blacktoft, division of Howdenshire, east riding of York, 8 miles from Howden, and 192 from London.

NEWTON, a hamlet in the parish of Rothbury, in Coquetdale Ward, west division Northumberland, near Rothbury, 307 miles from London; containing 8 houses and 28 inhabitants.

NEWTOWN, a hamlet in the parish of Chillington, in Glendale Ward, east division Northumberland, 2¼ miles from Wooller, and 321 from London; containing 18 houses and 101 inhabitants.

NEWTOWN, a parish in the hundred of Evingar, division of Kingsclere, Hants, 2 miles from Newbury, and 57 from London; containing 54 houses and 259 inhabitants.

NEWTOWN or TRENEWYDD, a market town in the hundred of Newtown, in Montgomeryshire, Wales, 8 miles from Montgomery, and 178 from London. Its situation on the banks of the Severn is pleasant, being surrounded with rich and fertile land; it contains 263 houses and 910 inhabitants, most of the buildings being very neat and in the Welsh fashion, the most common sort are of lath and plaister, but warm and durable. In the neighbourhood are the remains of Dolevron and Caersws Castles; the intrenchments of the former still appear from the opposite side of the Severn, and are particularly conspicuous from the road through Newtownvale—the latter, Caersws, now an insignificant hamlet two miles distant, appears to have been a town of great antiquity, from the many streets and lanes about it, with some remains of hollow arched fosses. The market is on Saturday. Fairs, last Tuesday in March, first Tuesday in May, 24th June, 21th October, and 16th December.—Pennant's Tour.

NEWTOWN POPPLEFORD, a hamlet in the parish of Aylesbeare, hundred of east Budleigh, Devon, near Sidmouth. Population returned with Aylesbeare.

NEWTOWN BOTCHESTON, and NEWTOWN UNTHANK, two small hamlets in the parish of Desford, hundred of Sparkenhoe Leicester, 6 miles from Hinckley, and 6 from Leicester; containing 18 houses and 94 inhabitants.

NEWTOWN, a village in the county of Leitrim, province of Connaught, Ireland.

NEWTOWN, a village in the county of Waterford, province of Munster, Ireland.

NEWTOWN ARDES, a town in the county of Down, province of Ulster, Ireland, agreeably situated on the northern point of lake Strangford, 9 miles east of Belfast, and 87 north of Dublin. This place is in great repute for its manufacture of fine diaper, and other linens. The lake at low water, affords a fine level strand for many miles, and at high water is navigable for vessels of considerable burthen, the tide flowing up as far as the town.

NEWTOWN BARRY, a village in the county of Wexford, province of Leinster, Ireland.

NEWTON LIMAVADY, a town in the county of Derry, province of Ulster, Ireland, 106 miles, N. W. of Dublin. Newton Saville and Newton Stewart, two villages in the county of Tyrone, province of Ulster, Ireland.

NEWTOWN MOUNT KENNEDY, a town in the county of Wicklow, province of Leinster, Ireland; 17 miles from Dublin.

NEWTYLD, a parish in the shire of Forfar, Scotland. This village is situate on the road from Dundee to Meigle, 3 miles from the latter, containing about 230 inhabitants, who are mostly weavers. The parish contains 224 houses and 781 inhabitants—near the village, are the ruins of the Castle of Hatton, built in 1575, by Lawrence Lord Oliphant, near which are the vestiges of the more antient Castle of Balcraig.

NEW VILLAGE, a village in the division of Howdenshire, east riding of York, 8 miles from Howden, and 192 from London; containing 16 houses and 108 inhabitants.

NEYLAND, see Nayland, Suffolk.

NIBLEY or NORTH NIBLEY, a parish in the hundred of Berkley, Gloucester 3 miles, from Dursley and 109 from London; containing 225 houses and 1211 inhabitants, of whom 157 were employed in various trades. It is a Curacy.

NIBLEY SOUTH, a hamlet in the parish of Westerleigh, Gloucester, 4 miles from Chipping Sodbury.

NIBTHWAITE, a hamlet in the parish of Colton, hundred of Londsdale, Lancaster, 6 miles from Hawkshead, and 270 from London; containing 30 houses and 159 inhabitants.

NICHOLAS ST. a parish in the Isle of Thanet, Kent, 5½ miles from Sandwich; containing 92 houses and 520 inhabitants. See Atwade.

NICHOLAS ST. an island on the coast of Devonshire, of about 3 acres, lying before the mouth of Plymouth harbour, strong both by art and nature, on which is a battery commanding the entrance to Hamoaze and Catwater. On the island are barracks and apartments for a Commanding Officer, but they are generally supplied with water and provisons by boats from the town of Plymouth—this by the inhabitants is generally called Drake's Island, from Sir Francis Drake a native of the neighbourhood. It was of great importance in its command of the Channel before the erection of the Citadel of Plymouth, in the reign of Charles 2d.

NICHOL FOREST, a township in the parish of Kirkandrews or Esk, in Eskdale Ward, Cumberland, 3 miles from Longtown, and 316 from London; containing 139 houses and 668 inhabitants.

NIDD, a hamlet in the parish and liberties of Ripon, west riding of York near Ripon, and 222 miles from London; containing 19 houses and 114 inhabitants.

NICHOLAS St. a parish in the hundred of Dinas Powis, Glamorganshire, Wales, 5 miles from Cardiff, and 165 from London; containing 60 houses and 319 inhabitants. Fair, Nov. 6

NICHOLASTON, a parish in the hundred of Swansea, Glamorganshire, Wales, 10 miles from Swansea, and 216 from London; containing 24 houses and 85 inhabitants.

NIELSON, a parish in the shire of Renfrew, Scotland, 10 miles from Glasgow; containing 517 houses and 3796 inhabitants, viz. 1702 males, and 2094 females; of whom 1247 were employed in trade and manufacture, principally in that of cotton. The parish is watered by two small lakes.

NIGER, a river in Norfolk, which falls into the German Ocean at Clay.

NIMET ROWLAND, a parish in the hundred of north Tawton, Devon, 9 miles from Crediton, and 189 from London; containing 34 houses and 76 inhabitants. It is a rectory value 6*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.*

NIGG, a parish in the shire of Kincardine, Scotland, situated on the north-east extremity of the county, and at the termination of the Grampian hills, 1 mile from Aberdeen, and 14 from Stonehaven, containing 246 houses and 1143 inhabitants. The coast is bold and rocky, and on the N. E. point is a remarkable promontory, forming the south side of the river Dee—at the Cove of Nigg is a good fishing village, called Torry.

NIGG, a parish in the shire of Ross, Scotland, in the form of a Peninsula, washed on the S. E. by the Moray Frith, and on the S. W. by the Frith of Cromarty, 2 miles from Cromarty; containing 338 houses and 1443 inhabitants, of whom 609 were employed in various trades, &c.; near Shandwicke house stands a large obelisk with Hieroglyphic figures, said to commemorate a dreadful shipwreck of the Danes.

NINEHEAD, a parish in the hundred of Taunton Dean, Somerset, 2 miles from Willington, and 150 from London; containing 44 houses and 353 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.* 7*s.* 11*d.* and is in the patronage of the King.

NINFIELD, a parish in the hundred of Ninfield, Rape of Hastings, Sussex, 5 miles from Battel, and 60¼ from London; containing 79 houses and 492 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 8*l.*

NINIANS ST, a town and parish in the shire of Stirling, Scotland, 2 miles from Stirling; containing 1324 houses and 6849 inhabitants, viz. 3217 males and 3632 females; of whom 2689 were returned employed in various trade and manufacture; viz. iron work, making of nails, cotton, and tartan plaid for the army. Besides the Forth which forms it's northern boundary it is watered by the Endrick, the Carron, and the Loch Coulter. The neighbourhood is ornamented by many elegant residences.

NITH or NIDD, a considerable river which rises in the parish of New Cumnock, Ayrshire, Scotland, and falls into the Solway Frith, near the town of Dumfries, where it forms the harbour of that town. Its length in a direct line is 50 miles, and it abounds with salmon and trout.

NITHISDALE, the western stewardry of Dumfriesshire, so named from the river Nith, and formerly gave title of earl to the family of Maxwell.

NITON, a parish in east Medina Liberty, Isle of Wight, Hants, 9 miles from Newport, and 100 miles from London; containing 56 houses and 288 inhabitants. It is seated in a deep vale ornamented with trees, and although within a mile of the sea, the coast is higher than the village and shelters it from the sea breeze. The church is of great antiquity; the cross on the south standing without the wall of the church-yard, raised with large hewn stones, in the manner of steps with a basin at top, seems to have been designed for the purpose of baptism, prior to the use of fonts in churches. The parsonage is a neat new residence, and the living is a rectory united with Godshill.—Bullar's Guide to the Isle of Wight, and the Hamps.ire Repository.

Norottle Grove, the name of a hundred in Northamptonshire, lying near the center of the county to the W. of Northampton.

Nocton, a parish in the hundred of Langoe, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 6 miles from Lincoln, and 127 from London; containing 49 houses, and 287 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* 17*s.* 11*d.* in the patronage of the King.

Noctorum or Knocktorum, a hamlet in the parish of Woodchurch, hundred of Wirrall, Chester, 14 miles from Chester, and 194 from London; containing only two houses and 17 inhabitants.

Noke, a hamlet in the parish of Churchdown, hundred of Dudstow and King's Barton, Gloucester, situate between Gloucester and Cheltenham. Population returned included with Churchdown.

Noke, a parish in the hundred of Ploughley, Oxford, 4 miles from Oxford, and 59 from London; containing 30 houses and 150 inhabitants. It is rectory, value 7*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.* in the patronage of the duke of Marlborough.

Nonington, a parish in the hundred of Wingham, Lathe of St. Augustine, Kent, 7 miles from Canterbury, and 62 from London; containing 90 houses and 502 inhabitants. The church is a curacy with Wymonswold chapel annexed.

Nook, a hamlet in the parish of Simonburn, in Tindal Ward, Northumberland, 5 miles from Bewsham, and 287 from London; containing 16 houses and 81 inhabitants.

Nook, a hamlet in the township of Underbarrow, in the parish and ward of Kendal, Westmoreland, 3 miles from Kendal, and 263 from London. Population included with Underbarrow.

Norbaick, a hamlet in the parish of Bispham, in the hundred of Amounderness, Lancaster, 2 miles from Poulton, and 235 from London. Population returned included with Bispham.

Norbury, a township in the parish of Prestbury, hundred of Macclesfield, Chester, 8 miles from Macclesfield, and 169 from London; containing 104 houses and 592 inhabitants.

Norbury, a township in the parish of Stockport, hundred of Nantwich, Chester, 4 miles from Stockport, and 170 from London; containing 67 houses and 390 inhabitants.

Norbury, a parish in the hundred of Appletree, Derby, on the river Dove, 3 miles from Ashborn, and 142 from London; containing 62 houses and 382 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 6*s.* with Snelson chapel annexed.

Norbury, a parish in the hundred of Cuttleston, Stafford, 4 miles from Newport, and 140 from London; containing 33 houses and 215 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*

Norbury, a township and chapelry in the parish of Ledbury, hundred of Purslow, Salop, 3 miles from Bishop's Castle, and 155 from London; containing 60 houses, and 284 inhabitants.

Norbury, a hamlet to Leatherhead in the hundred of Copthorne, Surry, remarkable for its extensive plantations of walnut trees.

Norcott, a hamlet in the town of Abingdon, and hundred of Hormer, Berks, 1 mile from Abingdon, and 56 from London; containing 14 houses and 69 inhabitants.

Norbuck, a hamlet in the parish of Aston Abbott, hundred of Cotslow, Bucks, 4 miles from Aylesbury, and 40 from London.—Population returned included with Aston Abbott.

Norfolk, a county of England bounded on the north and north-east by the German Ocean, on the south and south-east by Suffolk, on the west by the Lincolnshire Washes, and by part of that county, and of Cambridgeshire. It is almost entirely insulated by the sea, and by the rivers which form its internal boundary. Its figure is almost oval, being about 70 miles long and 45 broad, containing 1,094,400 acres of land, having about 730,000 arable, 263,400 in pasturage, and about 90,000 uncultivated, including woodlands. It contains 1 city, Norwich; 4 boroughs, Lynn Regis, Castle Rising, Thetford, and Yarmouth; and 28 market towns, viz. Alysham, Attlebury, Buckenham, Burnham, Caister, Clay, East-Dereham, Diss, Downham, Fakenham, Foulsham, Harleston, East Harling, Hickling, Hingham, Holt, Loddon, Methwold, Repcham, Setching, Snettisham, Swaffham, Walsham, Walsingham, Watton, Windham, and Worstead. It is divided into 32 hundreds, viz. Blofield, Brothercross, Clackelose, Clavering, Depwade, Diss, Earsham, Erpingham north and south, Eynesford, Flegg east and west, Forehoe, Freebridge Lynn and Marshland, Gallow, Greenhoe north and south, Grimshoe, Guiltcross, Happing, Henstead, Holt, Humbleyard, Launditch, Loddon, Mitford, Suropham, Smithdon, Taverham, Tunstead, Walsham, and Wayland. The whole county contains 47,617 houses, inhabited by 273,371 persons, viz. 129,842 males, and 143,529 females, of whom 38,181 were returned as being employed in various trades, manufacture or handicraft, and 61,791 in agriculture. The face of the country in this large space, varies less than in most tracts of in which every Parish & Place is laid down containing upwards of 40 Houses.

NORFOLK
Cities 2
Boroughs 4
Market Towns 28
Parishes 660
Houses 47,617
Inhabitants 273,371
Acres of Land 2,294,400
Arable 750,000
Pasturage 263,360
Members of Parliament 12
Hundreds
1 Smithdon
2 Brothercross
3 North Greenhoe
4 Holt
5 North Erpingham
6 Freebridge Lynn
7 Freebridge Marshland
8 Gallow
9 Launditch
10 Eynesford
11 South Erpingham
12 Tunstead
13 Happing
14 Clackclose
15 South Greenhoe
16 Wayland
17 Mitford
18 Forehoe
19 Taverham
20 West Flegg
21 East Flegg
22 Grimshoe
23 Shropham
24 Guiltcross
25 Depwade
26 Diss
27 Humbleyard
28 Henstead
29 Blofield
30 Walsham
31 Loddon
32 Clavering
33 Earsham
British Miles.
Cooper del.t & sculp.t
Published January 1.1808 by R. Phillips Bridge Street Blackfriars London.

equal extent in the kingdom; not a hill of any height is to be seen in the whole county, yet in many parts its surface is broken into gentle swells and depressions. On the western extremity adjoining the counties of Cambridge and Lincoln, is a considerable tract of flat fenny land; and, on the east near Yarmouth, a narrow tract of marshes runs from the sea to some distance up the country—several of the western hundreds from Thetford northwards, are open and bare, consisting of extensive heaths, having a light sandy or gravelly soil. To the north east the soil is a light sandy loam, fertile and remarkably easy of tillage. The south east has a moister and deeper soil, and the middle and south abound in clay. The northern and eastern parts are all enclosed and tolerably rich in timber, affording many cheerful and pleasant views.—The lighter arable lands produce barley in great plenty, much of which is malted and exported. Wheat is cultivated in the stronger soils; but the article for which this county is particularly celebrated is turnips, which form the basis of the Norfolk husbandry. The excellence of this culture is that the ground never lies fallow, as the turnips serve to prepare it for corn. This root is principally used for the fattening of cattle, of which great numbers are here fed for the London market. Crops of clover and other grasses, are generally taken alternately with the course of turnips. The fenny parts yield great quantities of butter, which is sent to London under the name of Cambridge butter. The sheep of this county are a hardy but small breed, and much valued for their mutton; their wool is chiefly used in the Yorkshire cloths. Turkies are reared here to a larger size than elsewhere, and form a considerable object of profit to the smaller farmers. Rabbits are extremely numerous on the different sandy heaths. The principal rivers of this county are the great Ouse, which forms the south western boundary, crosses the western side and falls into the sea below Lynn. The little Ouse rises about the middle of the Suffolk border, and falls into the great Ouse, being navigable from Thetford. The Nen forming the western boundary, and falling into the Lincolnshire Washes, communicates by several channels with the Ouse. The source of the Waveney is separated from that of the Ouse only by a causeway: it runs in a contrary direction, and forming the rest of the Suffolk boundary at length joins the Yare a little above Yarmouth, and is navigable from Bungay. The Yare rising near Attleborough, joins the Wensum and other small streams at and near Norwich, flows to Yarmouth and receiving the Waveney and Bure discharges itself into the German ocean; several of the smaller streams flowing through nearly a level country, their streams are slow, and often form shallow lakes, here called broads, plentifully stored with fish and water fowl; on some of them are decoys for wild ducks.—The sea coast is formed either by clayey cliffs continually a prey to the ocean, or by low sandy shores covered with loose pebbles called shingle, and frequently rising into a kind of natural bank composed of sand held together by the roots of the sea reed grass—behind these hills are considerable salt marshes, often inundated by the tides. Banks of sand lie off at sea in various parts very dangerous to navigation, of these the most remarkable running parallel to the coast of Yarmouth form the celebrated Yarmouth Roads, a great resort for shipping, where they ride very secure although the entrance is difficult and hazardous. The city of Norwich has long been noted for its manufactory of crapes, bombazeens, and stuffs of various kinds, but not so considerable as formerly from the successful rivalship of the cotton branches, within these few years. The operation of spinning and preparing the wool, employs the poor of most of the small towns and villages in the county; the wool being brought from Leicester, Lincoln, and Northamptonshire. Its ports are King's Lynn, Yarmouth, Blackeney, and Cley. This county with the eastern ones in general, was the scene of many military transactions and ravages during the Danish incursions, but has had little share in the disatrous events of modern times. Norfolk was antiently inhabited by the Iceni, and was afterwards part of the East Saxon Kingdom, and the Roman way called Ermine-street, crossed this county from Suffolk to Yarmouth. It lies in the diocese of Norwich and province of Canterbury, and contains no less than 668 parishes, and sends 12 Members to Parliament. The total amount of assessment under the property tax in 1806, was 2,414,475*l.* Amount of money raised for the maintenance of the poor in 1803, 204,532l. which was at the rate of 5s. 2d. in the pound. And the average scale of mortality for ten years, appear to have been as 1 to 47¾ of the existing population.

Norgill, a village near Barnard Castle, in the north riding of York.

Norham, a parish situated in that part of the county of Durham called Norhamshrine, being insulated in the county of Northumberland, 6 miles N. E. of Cornhill, and 6 S. W. of Berwick, on the banks of the river Tweed near the mouth of the Till; containing 156 houses and 728 inhabitants. It is a place of great antiquity, said antiently to have been called Ubbanford, and to have been built in the year 830, by Egfrid, Bishop of Lindisfarn. Its church had the privilege of sanctuary, and in it was interred the remains of King Ceulwulf, which were removed from Lindisfarn. Its castle situated on the edge of a rock above the Tweed, has often suffered the fortune of war by the incursions of the Scots—being many times taken and destroyed, and as often retaken by the English and rebuilt. The last attack upon it was before the battle of Floddenfield, when the Scots attempted to take it but could only effect the destruction of the out works. Nor-ham is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Durham.—Hutchinson's Durham.

NORHAM MAINS, a hamlet to the foregoing, ¾ of a mile distant; containing 16 houses and 88 inhabitants.

NORLAND, a township in the parish of Halifax, in Morley wapentake, west riding of York, 2 miles from Halifax, and 194 from London; containing 229 houses and 1181 inhabitants, of whom 1179 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures.

NORLEY, a hamlet to Overton, in the hundred of Eddisbury, Chester, 10 miles from Chester, and 180 from London, on the borders of Delamere Forest, containing 71 houses and 376 inhabitants.

NORMANBY, a parish in the hundred of Aslacoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 10 miles from Lincoln, and 143 from London; containing 49 houses and 235 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Lincoln.

NORMANBY, a hamlet in the parish of Stow, in the hundred of Well, parts of Lindsay, Lincoln, 6 miles from Gainsborough, and 144 from London; containing 5 houses and 20 inhabitants.

NORMANBY on the WOLD, a parish united with Claxby, in the hundred of Walshcroft, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 2½ miles from Market Raisin, and 151 from London; containing 19 houses and 77 inhabitants.

NORMANBY, a hamlet in the parish of Eston, in Langborough East wapentake, north riding of York, near Gisborough, and 248 miles from London; containing 22 houses and 99 inhabitants.

NORMANBY, a parish in Rydall wapentake, north riding of York, 3 miles from Pickering, and 223 from London; containing 21 houses and 148 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*

NORMANCROSS, a hamlet to Stilton, in the hundred of the same name, ¾ of a mile beyond Stilton, Huntingdonshire, and 76 from London. A prison has lately been erected here capable of containing 10,000 men, prisoners of war, and near it are barracks for 2000 men as a guard thereto.

NORMANTON, a township and chapelry to St. Peter's, in Derby, in the hundred of Repton and Gressly, Derby, 1½ mile from Derby, and 125 from London; containing 44 houses and 214 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

NORMANTON SOUTH, a parish in the hundred of Scarsdale, Derby, 15 miles from Derby, and 141 from London; containing 136 houses and 739 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

NORMANTON TEMPLE, a hamlet to Chesterfield, in the hundred of Scarsdale, Derby, 3½ miles from Chesterfield, and 148 from London; containing 20 houses and 141 inhabitants.

NORMANTON LE HEATH, a hamlet in the parish of Nailston, hundred of Sparkenhoe, Leicester, 4 miles from Ashby de la Zouch, and 110 from London; containing 36 houses and 200 inhabitants.

NORMANTON, a parish in the hundred of Loveden, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 5 miles from Grantham, and 116 from London; containing 33 houses and 160 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*

NORMANTON on SOAR, a parish in the hundred of Rushcliffe, Notts, 6 miles from Nottingham, and 120 from London; containing 49 houses and 265 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 7*l.* 11*s.*

NORMANTON on TRENT, a parish in the hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, so called from its situation near the river Trent, over which there is a ferry at Marnham, 2½ miles from Tuxford, and 136 from London; containing 21 houses and 102 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 4*l.* 3*s.*

NORMANTON, a parish in the hundred of Martinsley, Rutland, 5 miles from Uppingham, and 91 from London; containing only 6 houses and 57 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 5*l.* 4*s.* 7*d.*

NORMANTON, a hamlet to Lowestoffe, in the hundred of Mutford and Lothingland, Suffolk, ½ mile from Lowestoffe and 114½ from London. Population included with Lowestoffe.

NORMANTON, a parish in Ayrig wapentake, west riding of York, situate near the Calder, 4 miles from Wakefield, and 180 from London; containing 51 houses and 276 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 7*l.* in the patronage of Trinity College, Cambridge.

NORNEY, a hamlet in the parish of Blyth, hundred of Basset Law, Notts, 3 miles from Bawtry, and 151 from London. Population returned included with Blyth.

NORRIDGE, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Warminster, Wilts, near Warminster, and 98 from London. Population included with Warminster.

NORRIESTOWN, a village in the parish of Kincardine, in Perthshire, Scotland, situate on the summit of a rising ground on the road from Stirling to Inversnaid, in Dumbarton. It is now joined to the village of Thornhill, and contains about 300 inhabitants.

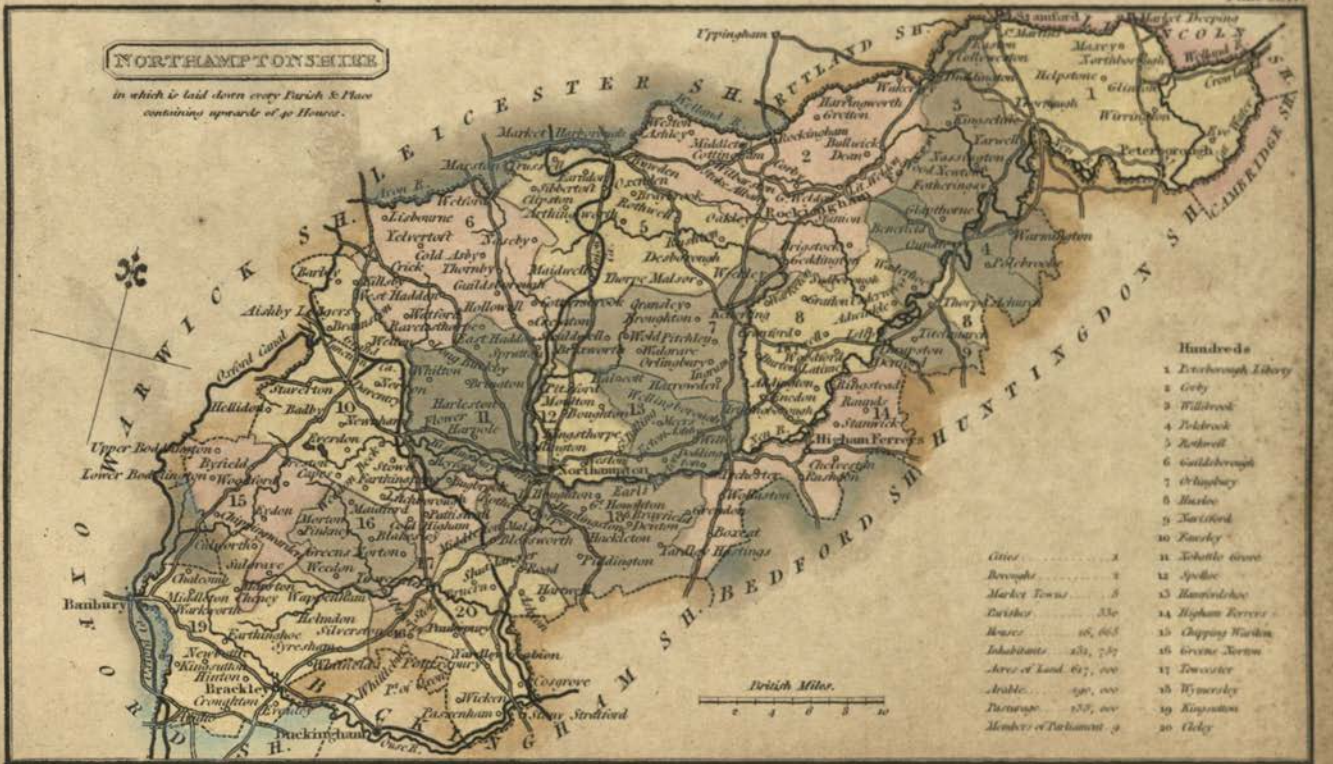
NORRIS, a hamlet in the parish of Huish, in Devonshire.

NORTHALL, a township in the parish of Seapton, hundred of Cotslow, Bucks, situate on the borders of Bedfordshire, 3 miles from Ivinghoe, and 36½ from London; containing 66 houses and 331 inhabitants.

NORTHALL, or NORTHAW, a parish in the hundred of Cashio, Hertford, on the North side of Enfield chace, 4 miles from Barnet, supposed to have been named from Northau, or North Grove, a wood that anciently belonged to the monastery of St. Alban's. It was formerly much noted for its medicinal waters. An elegant mansion was erected here in the reign of queen Elizabeth, by Dudley, earl of Warwick. The village contains 76 houses and 440 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE

in which is laid down every Parish & Place containing upwards of 40 Houses.



Hundreds

1. Peterborough Liberty
2. Corby
3. Willibrook
4. Polebrook
5. Rothwell
6. Guilsborough
7. Orlingbury
8. Huxloe
9. Navisford
10. Fawsley
11. Tobottle Green
12. Spelhoe
13. Hamfordshoe
14. Higham Ferrers
15. Chipping Warden
16. Greene Norton
17. Towcester
18. Wymersley
19. Kingsthorn
20. Cleley

Cities	1
Boroughs	2
Market Towns	8
Parishes	330
Houses	28, 665
Inhabitants	131, 787
Acres of Land	617, 000
Arable	430, 000
Pasturage	187, 000
Members of Parliament	9

Published January 1, 1808, by B. Phillips Bridge Street Blackfriars London.

Cooper del. et sculp.

NORTHALL. See NORTHOLT, hundred of Elthorne, Middlesex.

NORTH ALLERTON. See ALLERTON NORTH, Yorkshire.

NORTHAM, a parish in the hundred of Shebbear, Devon, 1¼ mile from Biddeford, and 202 from London; containing 49 houses and 2054 inhabitants, viz. 888 males and 1166 females, of whom 115 were returned as being employed in trade and 102 in agriculture. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 10*s.*

NORTHAM, a village in the hundred of Mansbridge, Hants, 2 miles from Southampton, on the river Itching, nearly opposite to Bittern, and had anciently a considerable dock-yard. The bridge at this place, of modern erection, is a great improvement to the neighbourhood.

NORTHAMPTON, a borough, market and the county town of Northamptonshire, is situated on an eminence by the side of the river Nen or Nine, 15 miles from Newport Pagnell, and 65¼ from London; containing 4 parishes, 1322 houses, inhabited by 7020 persons, viz. 3244 males and 3776 females, of whom 2496 were returned as being employed in various trades and manufactures, the principal of which are shoes, stockings, and lace; of the former great quantities are sent to the metropolis as well as exported. It formerly contained 7 churches within the walls and 2 without, but the whole town was almost burnt to the ground in 1675, and it now contains only 4. The principal one, All Saints, stands nearly in the centre of the town at the meeting of 4 spacious streets, having a stately portico of eight Ionic columns, with a statue of king Charles II. on the ballustrade. It extends the length of the front, the columns being in couplets, but the remaining Gothic part of the building, appearing over the Grecian architecture, forms rather a singular contrast. The inside is finished in a very elegant manner. The inscription on the portico, purports that the statue of king Charles was erected in gratitude for his gift of 1000 ton of timber and 7 years chimney-money towards repairing and beautifying the church, which was accordingly done in 1712. It has a tolerable good organ and a set of chimes. The church of St. Sepulchre is of a circular form, having a cupola in the middle, supported by 8 Norman pillars. It is supposed to have been built by the Knights' Templars, from a model of that erected over the Holy Temple in Jerusalem. St. Giles's is in the skirts of the town, but has nothing remarkable. St. Peter's is remarkable as a curious relic of our ancient architecture. The streets are regular and the houses uniform, built of a stone dug chiefly at a place called Kingston, resembling freestone. When first exposed to the air it is soft, but becomes very durable and turns of different shades according to its age, from pale cream colour to yellow, and then a dark ruddle. It gives the streets a motley but beautifully variegated appearance. The houses are chiefly slated. The sessions house is a handsome building in the Corinthian style. At the east end of the town, near St. Giles's church, is erected a general infirmary, originally intended only as the town hospital, but having of late years been rebuilt and much extended, with the most commodious arrangements, it is capable of receiving the afflicted poor on a very extensive scale. It is 220 feet long and 45 broad. The street called the Drapery, though not the longest, is the finest in the town, for its breadth and the handsome appearance of its shops. At the east end of the Drapery is the Woodhill, a fine open square of about 600 feet, around which are some neat private houses, and the rest handsome shops. This square forms one of the finest market places in Europe. The stalls and shambles are all temporary, and the horse market held here is deemed to excel all others in the kingdom, both for the saddle and harness. It is the chief rendezvous of the jockies both from York and London. It was anciently fortified with a strong wall, and had a castle, which was held for the parliament during Cromwell's wars. The outer walls of it at the bottom of Gold-street, are kept up, and the inside cultivated, being a circle of about 4 acres. At the north end of the town formerly stood a priory of Cluniacs. In the west suburb was an abbey of black canons, and near the south gate a priory of Augustine's, besides several other religious houses. The town has many charitable foundations, and has sent two members to parliament ever since the reign of Edward I. It is governed by a mayor, 2 bailiffs, 4 aldermen, 12 magistrates, a recorder, town clerk, common council, and 48 burgesses. The number of voters are about 900, and the returning officer is the mayor. It gives the title of earl to the family of Compton. Within 1¼ mile of the town from the London road, is one of the crosses erected by Edward I. in memory of queen Eleanor. In 1263 many scholars retired hither from Cambridge and Oxford, and obtained a royal licence to establish an university; but after continuing some time they were remanded. In 1463 a battle was fought near this town, between the partizans of the houses of York and Lancaster, in which the latter were routed and king Henry taken prisoner by the earl of Warwick, and carried to London. The markets are on Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday. The latter is the most considerable. Fairs, 20th July, 15th April, 4th May, 5th August, 26th August, 19th September, 28th November, and 19th December. The living of All-Saints is a rectory, value 22*l.* and is in the patronage of the corporation. St. Peter's, a rectory, value 34*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.* with Upton and Kingsthorp chapels annexed. St. Sepulchre, a vicarage, value 6*l.* 1*s.* and St. Giles's, a vicarage, value 7*l.* 19*s.*—Bridges's Northamptonshire.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE, an inland county of England, bounded on the north by Leicester, Rutland, and Lincoln shires, on the east by Cambridge, Huntingdon, and Bedfordshires, on the south by Buckinghamshire and Oxfordshire, and on the west by Oxford and Warwickshire, being nearly 60 miles long and from 8 to 22 broad; containing 617,000 square statute acres, having about 290,000 arable and 235,000 in pasturage, and about 86,000 uncultivated, including woodlands. It is divided into 19 hundreds, viz. Chipping warden, Cleley, Corby, Fawsley, Greens-Norton, Guildsborough, Hamfordshoe, Higham-Ferrers, Huxloe, Kings-Sutton, Navisford, Nobottle Grove, Orlingbury, Polebrook, Rothwell, Spelloe, Towcester, Willybrook, and Wymersley, and Peterborough Liberty, commonly called the hundred of Nassaburgh; containing 1 city, Peterborough, 3 boroughs, Northampton, Brackley, and Higham-Ferrers, and 8 market towns, viz. Daventry, Kettering, Oundle, Rockingham, Rothwell, Thrapston, Towcester, and Wellingborough. The whole county contains 336 parishes, 26,665 houses inhabited by 131,757 persons, viz. 63,417 males and 68,340 females, of whom 34,126 were returned as being employed in trade, manufacture, or handicraft, and 29,503 in agriculture. It is in a manner proverbially regarded as a fine and pleasant county, which opinion is confirmed by the number of noblemen and gentlemen's seats contained in it. Its greatest defect being a scarcity of fuel, which is but scantily supplied by its woods, and they have been much diminished by the progress of agriculture. Yet it still possesses some not inconsiderable remains of its ancient forests, particularly that of Rockingham in the north west, and of Salcey and Whittlebury in the south: in the latter that fiercest of British animals of prey the wild cat is still found. There are also several small woods interspersed in different parts of the county. The highest ground in Northamptonshire is in the neighbourhood of Daventry, where the rivers Nen and Cherwell, flowing into the Eastern sea, and the Learn into the Western, rise within a small ditance of each other. A little further northwards, the Avon and the Welland, running into opposite seas, have their springs. About Towcester in the south, the country is hilly and the soil intermixed with clay and a sort of coarse grit stone. Its principal river is the Nine or Nen, which, rising in the west, flows first across the county to the eastern side and then turning northward runs the whole length of the county. From Northampton it is made navigable, and brings up vessels laden with Newcastle and Sunderland coals, which are sold at a high price. It receives many small streams, rising from the north-west side, and at Peterborough it crosses to the Isle of Ely and falls into the sea in Lincolnshire. This extreme part of the county is very liable to inundations and forms the commencement of the fenny tract, which extends through the Isle of Ely to the Lincolnshire washes. The Ouse just touches on the south eastern extremity of the county, forming a tract of rich meadows about Stony Stratford. Its products are the same as those of other farming counties, but it is peculiarly celebrated for its grazing land, particularly the tract lying from Northampton to the Leicestershire border; and horned cattle are here fed to an extraordinary size, and many horses of the large black breed are reared. Much of the arable land is still in open fields and many sheep are fed on the higher grounds. Considerable quantities of woad for the dyers' use are also cultivated. This county is not remarkable for trade or manufacture, except for boots and shoes, which are made in various parts for exportation. It has, however, a small trade in wool-combing and jeney spinning. The air is celebrated for being pure and wholesome. It was anciently inhabited by the Coritani, and under the Romans was comprised in the province of Flavia Cæsariensis; during the heptarchy it belonged to Mercia, and is now included in the midland circuit, in the diocese of Peterborough and province of Canterbury, and sends 9 members to parliament, viz. 2 for the county, 2 for Peterborough, 2 for Northampton, 2 for Brackley, and 1 for Higham Ferrers. The total amount of assessment under the property tax in 1806 was 1,445,615*l.* The amount of money raised for the maintenance of the poor in 1803 was 120,592*l.* at the rate of 4*s.* 7*d.* in the pound. The average scale of mortality for a period of 10 years appears to have been as 1 to 48¼ of the existing population.

NORTHAW. See NORTHALL, Herts.

NORTHBOROUGH, a parish in the hundred of Nassaburgh, Northampton, 2 miles from Market Deeping, and 88 from London; containing 45 houses and 192 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.* and is in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Peterborough.

NORTHAMSTEAD, a hamlet in the parish of Barkway, hundred of Edwintree, Herts, 1 mile from Barkway, and 34 from London. The population is included with Barkway.

NORTH CHAPPLE, a parish in the hundred of Rotherbridge, rape of Arundel, Sussex, 5 miles from Petworth, and 44 from London; containing 92 houses and 621 inhabitants.

NORTH CHURCH, or BERKHAMPSTEAD ST. PETERS, a parish in the hundred of Dacorum, Herts, 2 miles from Berkhampstead, and 28 from London; containing 127 houses and 735 inhabitants. It was formerly a chapel of ease to Berkhampstead. It is now a curacy.

NORTHCOTT, a hamlet in the parish of Luffincott, hundred of Black Torrington, Devon, 5 miles from Holdsworthy, and 215 from London; containing 12 houses and 71 inhabitants.

NORTHCOTT, a hamlet in the parish of Northchurch, near Berkhampstead, Herts.

NORTHCOTT, a hamlet in the parish of Preston, near Cirencester, Gloucestershire.

North Curry. See Curry North, Somerset.

North Cray. See Cray North, Kent.

North Deighton, a hamlet in the parish of Kirkdeighton, in Claro wapentake, west riding of York, 2½ miles from Wetherby, and 196 from London; containing 24 houses and 163 inhabitants.

Northend, a rural little hamlet in the parish of Fulham, near Hammersmith, Middlesex.

Northend, a hamlet in the parish of Finchley, Middlesex, and nearly adjoining thereto.

Northenden, a parish in the hundred of Macclesfield, Cheshire, 4 miles from Stockport, on the river Mersey, and 178 from London; containing 113 houses and 538 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10l. 7s. 6d. in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Chester.

Northey Isle, in Essex, lying between Malden and St. Osyth.

Northfield, a parish in the hundred of Halfshire, Worcester, 7 miles from Bromsgrove, and 120 from London; containing 236 houses and 1313 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.* with Cofton chapel annexed.

Northfleet, a parish in the hundred of Toltingtrough, lathe of Aylesford, Kent, 2 miles from Gravesend, and 20 from London, on the banks of the Thames; containing 291 houses and 1910 inhabitants. It is situated on a high chalk hill, commanding a very extensive view of the river Thames and the county of Essex. The church is an extensive building and contains several monuments of the 14th century. On the north wall is a beautiful alabaster monument to the memory of Dr. Brown, eminent for his skill in natural history, and physician to Charles II. Vast quantities of lime are burnt here, and extraneous fossils have often been dug up. In the flint (of which there are frequent strata and often wrought into flints for muskets). Complete cockle shells filled with chalk are found and often of an extraordinary size. It is a vicarage, value 24*l.* Fairs, Tuesday in Easter and Whitsun week, and on 24th March.—Hasted's Kent.

North Foreland. See Foreland North and South.

Northhales, or Covehithe, a parish united with Benacre, in the hundred of Blything, Suffolk, 15 miles from Saxmundham, and 105 from London; containing 21 houses and 180 inhabitants.

Northiam, a parish in the hundred of Staple, rape of Hastings, Sussex, 8 miles from Rye, and 54 from London; containing 135 houses and 997 inhabitants. Fair 17th September. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 10*s.* 2*d.*

Northill, a parish in the hundred of Wixamtree, Bedfordshire, 3 miles from Biggleswade, and 48 from London; containing 123 houses and 775 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

Northill, a parish in the hundred of East, Cornwall, 6½ miles from Launceston, and 220 from London; containing 154 houses and 782 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 36*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Northington, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish and hundred of Micheldever, division of Basingstoke, Hants, 10 miles from Winchester, and 55 from London; containing 29 houses and 172 inhabitants.

Northleach, a market town and parish in the hundred of Bradley, Gloucester, situated in the centre of the Cotswold hills, on the river Leach, 25 miles from Gloucester, and 81 from London; containing 108 houses and 664 inhabitants, and was formerly a considerable place of trade, particularly in the cloth manufacture, but it is now much declined. The church situated on the side of an eminence is a handsome building, and contains many monuments to the memory of rich clothiers who had lived in the neighbourhood, and been benefactors to it in the 15th century. It has several alms-houses well endowed, and the free grammar school holds the impropriation of Chedworth, worth near 100*l.* per annum. A little beyond the town stands the county bridewell. The town is governed by a bailiff and 2 constables, and has a considerable market on Wednesday for grain. Fairs, Wednesday before 23d April, third Wednesday in May, and Wednesday before 29th September. It is a vicarage, value 11*l.* with Eastington chapel annexed, and is in the patronage of the bishop of Gloucester.—Rudge's Gloucestershire.

Northlewe, a parish in the hundred of Black Torrington, Devon, 5 miles from Oakhampton, and 200 from London; containing 111 houses and 638 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 27*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.* in the patronage of the king.

North Maven, a parish in Shetland, situated at the northern extremity of the mainland, being a peninsula united to the parish of Delting by a narrow isthmus, 100 yards broad at high water, and so low, that at high spring tides it is almost covered by the sea. From this narrow neck the ground rises almost perpendicular as well as the shore around the parish. It is about 20 miles long and 12 broad, and contains 314 houses and 2045 inhabitants. It appears that nearly the whole of the inhabitants of Shetland are employed in agriculture, except in the summer months, when most of the males are employed in the fisheries. The whole is wild and mountainous in the highest degree. Ronas Hill, nearly in the centre, is 3944 feet above the level of the sea.

North Meols, a parish in the hundred of West Derby, Lancaster, 7 miles from Ormskirk, and 216 from London; containing 527 houses and 2096 inhabitants, viz. 1034 males and 1062 females, of whom 159 were returned as being employed in trade and 508 in agriculture. It is a rectory, value 8*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

Northmore, a parish in the hundred of Chadlington, Oxford, near Chipping Norton, and 75 miles from London; containing 52 houses and 334 inhabitants. It is a curacy,

Northolme, a hamlet to Wainfleet, in the hundred of Candleshoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, ¾ mile from Wainfleet, and 132 from London; containing 11 houses and 56 inhabitants.

Northolme, a hamlet in the parish of Edston, in Rydall division, north riding of York, 4 miles from Pickering, and 225 from London; containing 2 houses and 16 inhabitants.

Northolt, or Northall, a parish in the hundred of Elthorne, Middlesex, 3 miles beyond Hanwell, and 10 from London, lying on the right of the Uxbridge road, and 2 to the left of Harrow, near the Paddington Canal; containing 58 houses and 336 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 15*l.* in the patronage of the bishop of London.

Northop, a parish in the hundred of Coleshill Flint, Wales, 3 miles from Flint, and 206 from London; containing 381 houses and 2212 inhabitants, viz. 1180 males and 1082 females, of whom 96 were returned as being employed in trade. It is a vicarage, value 14*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of St. Asaph. Fairs, 14th March, 7th July, and 12th October.

Northorpe, a parish in the hundred of Corringham, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 5 miles from Gainsborough, and 155 from London; containing 16 houses and 105 inhabitants.

Northover, a parish in the hundred of Tintinhull, Somerset, ½ mile from Ilchester, and 122 from London; containing 12 houses and 56 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 12*s.* 11*d.*

North Petherwin. See Petherwin North, Somerset.

North Reps, a parish in the hundred of North Erpingham, Norfolk, 7 miles from Aylsham, and 124 from London; containing 86 houses and 424 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 18*l.* and is in the patronage of the king as duke of Lancaster.

Northsceughs, a township in the parish of Crim Whitton, in Eskdale ward, Cumberland, 8 miles from Carlisle, and 296 from London; containing 41 houses and 202 inhabitants.

Northumberland, a county in the north of England, bounded on the east by the German ocean, on the south by the county of Durham, on the west by the counties of Roxburgh, in Scotland, and Cumberland, and on the north by Berwickshire, in Scotland. Its greatest length from north to south is 64 miles, and breadth 48, and contains 1980 square miles, which may be divided into lands that are, or may be, cultivated by the plough 817,200 acres, and mountainous districts improper for tillage 450,000 acres, making in the whole 1,267,200 acres. It is divided into six wards, viz. Tindal, Coquetdale, Glendale, Bamborough, Morpeth, and Castle ward. The climate in regard to temperature is subject to great variation; upon the mountains snow will often continue for several months when there is none in the lower districts. The weather is very inconstant but mostly runs in extremes. In the spring months, the cold piercing easterly winds are most prevalent, and the longest droughts are accompanied by them, whilst the mild western and southern breezes rarely take place before June. According to the returns made to the house of commons under the Population act, this county contained 26,518 inhabited houses, 35,503 families, 157,101 persons, of whom 73,357 were males and 83,744 females; 23,190 were stated to be employed in agriculture, and 25,758 in trade and manufactures. By a return made to the house of lords and printed by their order in 1805, Northumberland is described as containing 1,809 square statute miles, equal to 1,157,760 statute acres; the number of inhabitants on each square mile of 640 acres 87; and the total number of persons was 157,383. The aspect of this county in respect to surface is marked with great variety. Along the sea-coast it is nearly level, towards the middle the surface is more diversified and thrown into large swelling ridges formed by the principal rivers. The western part (except a few intervening vales), is an extensive scene of open mountainous district, where the hand of cultivation is rarely to be traced. Of the mountainous districts, those around Cheviot are the most valuable, being in general fine green hills, thrown into a numberless variety of forms, enclosing and sheltering many deep, narrow, and sequestered glens. They extend from the head of Coquet down to Allentown; from thence northward to Prendwick, Branton, Ilderton, Wooler, Kirknewton, and Mindrim, and occupy at least 90,000 acres. The other mountainous districts lie chiefly on the western part of the county, some of which adjoin the county of Durham, but the largest portion extends from the Roman wall to the river Coquet and to the Moors, north of Rothbury. Coal is found in abundance through the greatest part of this county, particularly in the lower district; in the south east quarter it is of the best quality, where are also the most numerous and thickest seams from which those vast quantities are exported which supply the great consumption of the London market, as well as the coasting and foreign trade. The coal trade is the foundation of the commerce of the county, and the principal source of its wealth, as well as a never-failing nursery for some of the best seamen in the British navy. The quantity exported from this county may be fairly estimated at 510,000 Newcastle chaldrons, or 956,250 London chaldrons; the Newcastle chaldron being to the London chaldron in the ratio of 8 to 15. In the year 1793 there were employed in this trade on the river Tyne 38,475 persons, and on the river Wear 26,250. Limestone abounds in various parts of the county. Lead ore is found in the mountainous districts on the south-west part of the county, and the ore of zinc is found in great abundance, imbedded with the spar, in most of the veins producing lead ore. Iron ore is obtained in many parts of the county, and of late years the convenience of shipping it at Holy Island has induced the Carron Company to have considerable quantities from thence. The principal rivers are the Tyne, Blyth, Wansbeck, Coquet, Aln, and and Tweed, and innumerable streams which lose their names in the above, spread in every direction through the county. The Tyne and Tweed have been long celebrated for their salmon fisheries; and nearly the whole of the salmon caught are sent to London; in the conveyance of which a great improvement has taken place of late years, by packing them in pounded ice, by which means they are presented nearly as fresh at the London market as when taken out of the river. The coasts are rich in cod, ling, turbot, soles, plaice, whitings, &c. The market towns in Northumberland, are Newcastle, Hexham, Belford, Morpeth, Wooler, Rothbury, Allendale, Alnwick, and Berwick. This county sends 8 member to parliament, viz. 2 for the county, 2 for Newcastle, two for Morpeth, and 2 for Berwick. The total of money raised in Northumberland for the maintenance of the poor in 1803, was 66,106*l.* at the rate of 1*s.* 8¼*d.* in the pound. The amount of the assessment of this county under the property-tax act in 1806, was 1,966,334*l.* In this county there are no canals. Its commerce is derived principally from the coal trade; the principal exports are coals, lead, lead-shot, wrought iron, grindstones, pottery, glass, &c. It is not distinguished by any staple manufactures; the principal are derived from, or connected with, the coal trade and mines; as ship-building, roperies, forges, founderies, copperas, coal-tar, soda, white-lead, potteries, glass-works, &c. Under the heptarchy this county was part of the kingdom of Northumberland, which comprehended all the country between the two seas, north of the Humber to the Frith of Edinburgh. It was governed by earls till soon after the conquest, when it had a distinct sheriff, and was divided into baronies, and those again into wards. It is now included in the northern circuit, in the province of York, and in the diocese of Durham. It gives the title of duke to the ancient family of Percy. The average scale of mortality in this county for 10 years appears to have been as 1 to 50½ of the existing population.

Published June 1, 1808, By R. Phillips, Bridge Street, Blackfriars London.

Cooper del.et sculp.

NORTH WALSHAM. See WALSHAM NORTH Norfolk.

NORTHWAY, a tything in the parish of Ashton on Carron, hundred of Tewksbury, Gloucester, 1¾ mile from Tewksbury, and 104 from London; containing 29 houses and 162 inhabitants.

NORTHWEALD BASSET, a parish in the hundred of Ongar, Essex, 3 miles from Epping, and 20 from London; containing 49 houses and 340 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in the patronage of the bishop of London every other vacancy.

NORTHWICH, the name of a hundred in Cheshire, lying in the centre of the county, between the hundreds of Nantwich and Macclesfield.

NORTHWICH, a market town in the parish of Budworth, hundred of Northwich, Chester, situated on the river Wever, near its conflux with the Dan, 10 miles from Namptwich, 12 from Chester, and 174 from London; containing 340 houses and 1338 inhabitants, of whom a considerable number are employed in the cotton manufacture and the salt works. On the south side of the town are mines of rock-salt, dug to a great depth and extending over several acres, the inside whereof with its chrystal roof supported by pillars, has a beautiful appearance from the numerous candles burnt therein to light the workmen, who dig it away with pick-axes. The salt so dug is dissolved, clarified, and made into culinary salt. Near the brink of the Dan are also several brine pits, from which salt is made. The town has a very antique appearance, and has a well endowed free grammar school. The market is on Friday. Fairs 2d August and 6th December.—Norden's Cheshire.

NORTHWICK, a tything in the parish and hundred of Henbury, Gloucester, 4 miles from Bristol, and 117 from London. Population returned with Redwick.

NORTHWOLD, a parish in the hundred of Grimshoe, Norfolk, 5 miles from Brandon, and 83 from London, situated on the river Ouse; containing 156 houses and 767 inhabitants. This parish and neighbourhood is noted for its production of a peculiar fine sort of barley, much esteemed for malting, which brings a particularly high price at the Ware and London markets. The river is navigable from Stokebridge to Lynn.

NORTHWOOD. See COWES, Hants.

NORTHWOOD, a hamlet to Hayling, near Havant, Hants. Population included therewith.

NORTOFT, a hamlet in the parish and hundred of Guildsborough, Northampton, near Northampton. The population was returned with Guildsborough.

NORTON, a village in the hundred of Bucklow, Chester, 4 miles from Warrington, and 181 from London; containing 30 houses and 220 inhabitants.

NORTON, a parish in the hundred of Scarsdale, Derby, 9 miles from Chesterfield, and 160 from London; containing 306 houses and 1446 inhabitants, of whom 205 were returned as being employed in various trades. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

NORTON, a parish in Stockton ward, Durham, 2 miles from Stockton, and 250 from London; containing 240 houses and 985 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 31*l.* 11*s.* 5*d.* and is in the patronage of the bishop of Durham.

NORTON MANDEVILLE, a parish in the hundred of Ongar, Essex, 8 miles from Epping, and 25 from London; containing 18 houses and 93 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

NORTON, a parish in the hundred of Dudstone and Kingsbarton, Gloucester, 5 miles from Gloucester, and 110 from London; containing 64 houses and 303 inhabitants. It is a curacy, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Bristol.

NORTON, a township in the parish of Bromyard, hundred of Broxash, Hereford, near Bromyard, and 126 miles from London; containing 101 houses and 558 inhabitants.

NORTON CANNONS, a parish in the hundred of Grimsworth, Hereford, 10 miles from Hereford, and 145 from London; containing 57 houses and 282 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Hereford.

NORTON, a parish in the hundred of Cashio, Herts, 1 mile from Baldock, and 38½ from London; containing 55 houses and 248 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

NORTON, a parish in the hundred of Faversham, lathe of Scray, Kent, 13 miles from Chatham, and 44 from London; containing 12 houses and 88 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 10*l.* 18*s.* in the patronage of the bishop of Rochester.

NORTON, a hamlet in the parish of Tugby, in the hundred of East Goscote, Leicester, 8 miles from Uppingham, and 84 from London; containing 26 houses and 128 inhabitants.

NORTON, a parish in the hundred of Sparkenhoe, Leicester, 10 miles from Hinckley, and 109 from London; containing 54 houses and 283 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* in the patronage of the king.

NORTON DISNEY, a parish in the hundred of Boothby Graffo, parts of Kesteven, Lincoln, 5 miles from Newark, and 120 from London; containing 30 houses and 184 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 6*l.* 6*s.* 10*d.*

NORTON BISHOPS, a parish in the hundred of Aslacoe, Lindsay division, Lincoln, 14 miles from Lincoln, and 147 from London; containing 49 houses and 224 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, belonging to the prebendary thereof in Lincoln cathedral.

NORTON SUBCOURSE, a parish in the hundred of Clavering, Norfolk, 8 miles from Beccles, and 115 from London; containing 51 houses and 329 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

NORTON, a parish in the hundred of Fawsley, Northampton, 2 miles from Daventry, and 71 from London; containing 52 houses and 362 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

NORTON DAVY. See GREENS NORTON, Northampton.

NORTON CUCKNEY. See CUCKNEY, Notts.

NORTON BRISE, a parish in the hundred of Bampton, Oxford, 3 miles from Burford, and 71 from London; containing 56 houses and 453 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 9*l.* 7*s.* 11*d.* and is in the patronage of the dean and canons of Christ church, Oxford.

NORTON CHIPPING. See CHIPPING NORTON, Oxford.

NORTON HOOK, a parish in the hundred of Chadlington, Oxford, 6 miles from Chipping Norton, and 74 from London; containing 214 houses and 1032 inhabitants.

NORTON OVER, a hamlet in the parish of Chipping Norton, hundred of Chadlington, Oxford, three quarters of a mile from Chipping Norton, and 75 from London; containing 76 houses and 388 inhabitants.

NORTON, a parish in the hundred of North Bradford, Salop, 4 miles from Drayton, and 16 from London; containing 43 houses and 269 inhabitants.

NORTON MALREWARD, a parish in the hundred of Chew, Somerset, 5½ miles from Bedminster, and 117 from London; containing 20 houses and 114 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*

NORTON UNDER HAMBDON, a parish in the hundred of Houndsborough, Somerset, 5 miles from Crewkerne, and 127 from London containing 49 houses and 334 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 9*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.*

NORTON, ST. PHILLIPS, a parish in the hundred of Wellow, Somerset, 7 miles from Bath, and 106 from London; containing 101 houses and 557 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.* with Henton chapel annexed.

NORTON FITZWARREN, a parish in the hundred of Taunton Dean, Somerset, 2½ miles from Taunton, and 147 from London; containing 79 houses and 371 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 20*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.*

NORTON MIDSUMMER, and NORTON FRIARS. See MIDSUMMER NORTON, Somerset.

NOTRON CANES, a parish in the hundred of Offlow, Stafford, 5 miles from Litchfield, and 129 from London; containing 100 houses and 547 inhabitants.

NORTON, a township and chapelry in the parish of Stoke, hundred of Pirehill, Stafford, 6 miles from Newcastle, and 150 from London; containing 283 houses and 1480 inhabitants, of whom 282 were returned as being employed in trade and manufacture.

NORTON, a parish in the hundred of Blackburn, Suffolk, 3½ miles from Ixworth, and 75 from London; containing 110 houses and 533 inhabitants. It is a rectory, value 14*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.*

NORTON LINDSAY, a hamlet in the parish of Claverdon, hundred of Barlichway, Warwick, 4 miles from Warwick, and 94 from London; containing 23 houses and 95 inhabitants.

NORTON, a parish in the hundred of Malmsbury, Wilts, 4 miles from Malmsbury, and 98 from London; containing 20 houses and 94 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 2*l.* 19*s.* 9*d.*

NORTON BAVANT, a parish in the hundred of Warminster, Wilts, 2 miles from Warminster, and 96 from London; containing 48 houses and 264 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value

6*l.* 10*d.* and is in the patronage of the king.

NORTON, a parish in the hundred of Blackenhurst, Worcester, 2 miles from Evesham, and 99 from London; containing 59 houses and 306 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 17*s.* 8*d.* with Lenchwich chapel annexed, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Worcester.

NORTON BY KEMPSEY, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Kempsey, hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 3 miles from Worcester, and 109 from London; containing 53 houses and 337 inhabitants.

NORTON BREEDON, a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Breedon, hundred of Oswaldslow, Worcester, 6 miles from Tewkesbury, and 110 from London; containing 30 houses and 220 inhabitants.

NORTON, a parish in Buckrose wapentake, east riding of York, ½ mile from New Malton, and 218 from London; containing 138 houses and 615 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

NORTON CONYERS, a hamlet in the parish of Wath, in the wapentake of Allertonshire, north riding of York, 3 miles from Ripon, and 225 from London; containing 5 houses and 56 inhabitants.

NORTON LELLAY, a hamlet in the parish of Cundal, in Hallikeld wapentake, north riding of York, 5 miles from Aldborough, and 215 from London; containing 27 houses and 110 inhabitants.

NORTON, a parish in Osgoldcross wapentake, west riding of York, 8 miles from Doncaster, and 170 from London; containing 101 houses and 479 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

NORTON LOWER, a hamlet in the parish of Western Subedge, hundred of Kiftsgate, Gloucester, 2 miles from Campden, and 92 from London. Population included with Weston.

NORWELL, a parish in the hundred of Thurgarton, Notts, 6 miles from Newark, and 130 from London; containing 103 houses and 468 inhabitants. The living value 48*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.* is appropriated to the prebendary.

NORWICH, a city in the hundred of Humbleyard, Norfolk, 29 miles from Thetford, and 109 from London; containing 41 parishes 8016 houses, and 36,854 inhabitants, viz. 15,792 males and 21,040 females, of whom 12,267 were returned as being employed in trade, manufacture, and handicraft, and 498 in agriculture. Its manufactures are principally those of woollen stuffs, which Mr. Blomefield, imagines was first introduced by the Flemings so early as the reign of Henry I. at a place called Worsted in this county, whence the name of that article. It appears that the manufacture after some time fell to decay, when in 1365 the city invited a number of manufacturers from the low countries, of whom about 1000 came over, when they set up the making of bayes, sayes, arras, &c. and various works mingled with silk and linen yarn; and in 1575 they first made bombazines. Of late years damasks, camlets, and crapes have been made here, but during the present war, its trade has declined, in some measure owing to the restricted intercourse with foreign countries, and the great rivalship of the cotton manufactures. The manufacture itself is confined to the city, but the operation of spinning and preparing the wool employ the poor of most of the small towns and villages in the county. Norwich is situated on the river Yare, and is 30 miles distant from the sea by water and 16 by land. It contains many opulent inhabitants, and some good buildings, but the streets in general are narrow and ill disposed. The first mention of Norwich in history is in the Saxon Chronicle in the year 1004, when Sueno and the Danes destroyed it, when it lay in ruins for seven years. They then returned and are supposed to have refortified its castle, which was first built in the seventh century. It flourished and made a considerable figure in the time of king Edward the Confessor, and had then 25 churches. It now contains 32 parish churches within the city, and four in the suburbs. Its ancient castle is now the gaol, and the spot on which it stands is said to have been a fortress in the time of the Saxons, built by king Offa, about the year 575, afterward replaced by a castle erected by Alfred. In 1525 the sessions were directed to be held here, and in 1399 it was made the county gaol. It stands in the heart of the city, having a deep moat round it, over which is a bridge of one arch. Within the castle is a royal free chapel of exempt jurisdiction. The chaplain was to celebrate mass for the souls of all the kings before and since the conquest, and the wills of all persons dying within the precincts of the castle were proved before the constable and his chaplain; at present it is used only for the prisoners, the chaplain of which is appointed by the justices of the peace for the county. The cathedral was erected in 1096, by Herbert de Losing, (whose statue is over the door of the north transept, and his tomb below the high altar,) but being much damaged by fire in 1171, it was repaired in 1180 by John bishop of Oxford. The churches are ancient buildings, and till of late years many of them were only thatched, one of them still remaining so: they are all of them crusted with flint stones, curiously cut, which is the more remarkable as Norwich is in the midst of a clay country, and there is no flint within 20 miles of it. There are also two churches for the descendants of the Flemings, who have particular privileges and are very numerous. Besides the cathedral and castle, there are several other remarkable buildings, the town-hall, the guild-hall, which was formerly the church belonging to the monastery of black friars; the house of correction, the shire hall where the assizes are held, a lofty market cross built after the manner of a piazza; the bishop's palace, the king's school, first endowed by Edward VI.; the boys of which are nominated by the mayor for the time being, with the approbation of the majority of the aldermen. There are also four well endowed hospitals, and upwards of a dozen charity schools. The Norfolk and Norwich hospital is a most superb building. The Norwich public library was instituted in 1784, and consists of about 5000 volumes. Formerly most of the buildings in this place were thatched, but now all the houses are ordered to be covered with tiles, and they are very pleasantly interspersed with gardens, orchards, and trees. About one mile north-east of the city was a hospital for lepers, and on a hill near Thorp wood a small priory, both founded by bishop Herbert, which at the dissolution was granted to the duke of Norfolk. Few cities or towns seem to have suffered more than this, and few seem to have felt it less; in 1348 near 58,000 persons were carried off by the plague, and in 1505 it was almost consumed by fire. The scale of mortality for the last 10 years appears to have been as 1 to 30¾ of the existing population. The city is governed by a mayor, recorder, steward, two sheriffs, 24 aldermen, 60 common-council, town clerk, sword bearer, and inferior officers. The mayor is chosen on May-day by the freemen. The sheriffs are also chosen annually, one by the freemen, and the other by the aldermen, and the freemen of the several wards choose each their alderman. The mayor is a justice of the peace, during his mayoralty, as are also the recorder and steward within the city and liberties, and after his mayoralty he is a justice for life. It sends two members to parliament, and gives title of earl to the duke of Gordon. There are eight wardens of the weavers chosen annually, and sworn to take care that there are no frauds committed in spinning, weaving, or dying the stuffs. Over the river Yare are six different bridges, and the city is reckoned six miles in compass. The markets are said to be the greatest in England, and furnished with a surprising plenty and variety of goods and provisions. The markets are on Wednesday, Friday, and Staurday. Fairs, Monday, Thursday, and Saturday before and after Whit Sunday. There are five banks and five fire insurance offices.—Bloomefield's Norfolk.

Norwood, a township and chapelry in the parish of Hayes, in the hundred of Elthorne, Middlesex, 11 miles from London; containing 117 houses and 697 inhabitants.

Norwood, a hamlet scattered round an extensive common partly in the liberties of Lambeth, and partly in Croydon Surry, once noted as the haunt of a numerous horde of gypsies. On which common is the noted public house called the horns, formerly kept by the father of the celebrated singer, Miss Catley. It is situated about five miles from London.

Noss, a small island lying to the south-east of Bressay Isle, one of the Shetlands, Scotland, to the south of this island is a rock, perpendicular on all sides, and about 150 feet high, and opposite to it on the island is another rock of the same height, distant 240 feet. The top of this is quite level, producing excellent grass, and feeds a number of sheep in the summer season. The apparent richness of the pasture, and quantities of seafowls breeding thereon, induced the proprietor, some years since, to endeavour to find an expedient of passing to and from the holm, accordingly a daring islander succeeded in gaining the summit, and fixt posts in the ground at about 2½ feet asunder, and having ropes stretched to corresponding posts on the island, a safe conveyance was found in a kind of wooden cradle sliding on the ropes, and by which means sheep are put upon the holm in spring, and taken away in autumn in excellent condition.

Notley Black, a parish in the hundred of Witham, Essex, 1 mile from Braintree, and 39 from London; containing 84 houses and 399 inhabitants, It is a rectory, value 15*l.*

Notley White, a parish 2½ miles from the foregoing, containing 72 houses and 346 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 10*l.*

Notown, a hamlet in the parish of Southwell, Nottinghamshire, 1 mile from Southwell.

Nottingham, a market and the county town of Nottinghamshire, in the hundred of Broxtow, 13 miles from Mansfield, and 124 from London; consists of three parishes, containing 4977 houses inhabited by 28,862 persons, viz. 13,729 males and 15,131 females, of whom 11,698 were returned as being employed in trade, manufacture, and handicraft, and 267 in agriculture. The town is situated on the steep ascent of a hill or rock, overlooking an extensive range of meadows, having a small rivulet on the north side near the town, and the noble river Trent on the south, over which it has a stately bridge of 19 arches, at that part where it is very wide and deep, near the confluence of the Dove, Derwent, Erewash, and Soar. The rock on which the town is built, is of a soft sandy kind, out of which many vaults and cellars are dug, in some places two or three under each other, the stairs which lead to these vaults are also cut out of the rock, having frequently 80 steps. This rock was called of old the Dolorous hill, or Golgotha, from the slaughter of the ancient Britons there, by a piratical northern monarch, called Humber, who being afterwards drowned between Hull and Barton, is supposed to have given his name to the river Humber. It is said that these caves or cellars anciently served the people as a retreat from their enemies, and that its ancient name was Snot rengoham signifying hollow vaults in a rock; at the west end is a very steep hill, and at the south of it is a cliff, which falls in a precipice down the river. On this hill stood a castle of great antiquity, which was rebuilt by William the Conqueror, to keep the English in awe, and so strongly defended both by nature and art, that it was almost impregnable. It was surprised in the barons wars by Robert earl Ferrars. In this castle David, king of the Scots, was kept a close prisoner, as well as the celebrated Roger Mortimer, earl of March: and there is a winding staircase to a place called Mortimer's hole, in which he was seized. It was most probably intended to relieve the castle with men and provisions in case of being besieged. Charles I. erected his standard in Nevil's close, just within the castle, but it was soon after garrisoned by the parliament, and at the end of the war orders were given for its being destroyed. The present castle is a modern building, and belongs to the duke of Newcastle. The building is on a rustic basement, supporting a front of the Corinthian order, having a double staircase, landing at the grand apartment; over the door of the north-east front is an equestrian statue of the founder, carved out of one single block of stone. The east, south, and west sides of the building are encompassed with a yard, paved with broad stones, and secured with a stone breast wall. On the north side is a spacious green, with a door opening into the park, and in a small adjoining park, which formerly also belonged to the castle, are now built extensive cavalry barracks. The streets are broad, open, and well paved; and there are three parish churches here, St. Mary's, St. Peter's, and St. Nicholas's. The first is the principal, and has a very grand appearance from every point of view, being in the form of a cathedral, but the uniformity of the structure has been spoilt by the erection of a new front of the Doric order, it is decorated with many costly monuments, and has a fine organ and a peal of 10 bells. The altar piece of St. Peter's is finely adorned with paintings, and at the west end is a lofty spire, with a ring of eight bells. St. Nicholas's is a small but neat structure. Besides the churches are many meeting-houses for protestant dissenters, some of them not only spacious but elegant structures. The town hall is a noble edifice, supported by pillars of the Tuscan order, where the sessions, assizes, and county courts are held. It has a neat theatre, attended by a provincial company for about three months in the year, and during the races which are held in July, on a two mile course in Sherwood forest, and reckoned one of the the best in England during any weather. There are several charity schools well endowed in the different parishes. The market place is one of the handsomest and largest in England. This town is considered as one of the principal seats of the stocking manufacture, chiefly of the finer kinds of silk and cotton, the cotton for which is spun by machinery, worked by water, and it has a considerable export trade to America and the West Indies. It has also a considerable trade in coarse earthenware and in malting, the ale of Nottingham having long been celebrated. The tanning business for which this town was once noted, is now gone to decay. In the north part of the town there is a hospital dedicated to St. John the Baptist, founded for a master, chaplain, and sick poor as early as the reign of king John; and there was a cell of two monks in St. Mary's chapel on the rock, and near the castle was a house of grey friars, besides a house of Carmelites in St. Nicholas's parish. The town is a county of itself, governed by a mayor, recorder, six aldermen, two sheriffs, two coroners and two chamberlains, with a town clerk and other inferior officers, their privileges are very extensive, and the magistrates are always dressed in scarlet on public occasions. It sends two members to parliament, the returning officers being the sheriffs, and the number of voters being about 1700. The market is on Wednesday and Saturday, and is always well supplied. Fairs, first Friday after 13th January, 8th May, Thursday before Easter, and on 2d October, which last continues nine days. St. Mary's is a vicarage, value 10*l.* 5*s.* St. Peter's is a rectory, value 8*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* and is in the patronage of the king. And St. Nicholas's a rectory, value 2*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.*—Dickinson's Antiquities of Nottinghamshire.

Published June 1st 1808, by R. Phillips, Bridge Street, Blackfriars London.

Cooper del. et sculp.

NOTTINGHAMSHIRE, an inland county of England, bounded on the west by Derbyshire, on the north by Yorkshire, on the east by Lincolnshire, and on the south by Leicestershire, and is about 50 miles in length and 25 in breadth. It is divided into six wapentakes or hundreds, viz. Rushcliff, Bingham, and Newark, on the south side of the Trent; Basset Law, (subdivided into North and South Clay and Hatfield divisions,) Broxtow and Thurgarton, on the north of the Trent. The principal rivers of this county are the Trent, the Erewash, the Soar, and the Idle, together with some tributary streams. Besides these this county has also an extensive canal navigation by means of the river Trent. The only particular circumstance in the climate of Nottinghamshire, is its dryness, there being great reason to conclude that much less rainfalls in it than in the neighbouring counties to the north and south. The surface, except the level through which the Trent runs, is uneven, and may be said to be hilly, though none of the hills rise to any considerable elevation. The soil may be divided into three districts, viz. sand or gravel, clay, and limestone. Nottinghamshire furnishes various sorts of stone for building, coals, lime, and gypsum or plaister stone; the latter has been found in large quantities, lord Yarborough having used columns of 20 feet high in three pieces in his mausoleum, and lord Scarsdale the same in his house at Keddleston. By a return made to the house of lords, and printed in the year 1805, this county is stated to contain 774 square statute miles, equal to 495,360 statute acres; the number of inhabitants on each square mile containing 640 acres is 181, and the total number of persons 140,094. According to the enumeration of England and Wales taken in 1801, by virtue of an act of parliament, that county contains 23,611 inhabited houses, 30,081 families, 542 uninhabited houses, and 140,350 inhabitants, viz. 68,558 males, and 71,792 females, of whom 35,513 were returned as being employed in trade, and 23,904 in agriculture. The amount of the poors' rate raised in the year 1803 was 63,209*l.* being at the rate of 3*s.* 10*d.* in the pound. The amount of the assessment on which the property-tax was levied in 1806 was 1,160,655*l.* The market towns in this county are Nottingham, Newark, Mansfield, Bingham, Worksop, Tuxford, Ollerton, and Southwell. The commerce and manufactures of Nottinghamshire consist in the manufacture of stockings to a great extent; in malting, in the brewing of ale for the foreign trade, and in some other articles which not being of considerable importance are described under the towns in which they are carried forward. The ancient royal forest of Sherwood, is in extent about 21 miles, and in breadth 7, 8, or 9 miles, varying in different places. The whole soil of this forest is understood, to have been granted from the crown to different lords of manors, reserving only the trees and deer; the latter were formerly very numerous, all of the red kind; but as cultivation increased they diminished gradually, and are now entirely extirpated. Hops are a considerable article of produce in this county, principally about Retford and Southwell; they are distinguished by the name of North Clay Hops, and are much stronger than the Kentish. From 1100 to 1400 acres of land are cultivated with this plant. Nottinghamshire sends eight members to parliament, viz. two for the county, and two each for Nottingham, Retford, and Newark. The glory of this county is its noble river Trent; it rises in Staffordshire and crossing that county and Derbyshire enters, Nottinghamshire at its south-western extremity, thence crossing obliquely to the east, runs along its whole eastern side, forming the boundary between it and Lincolnshire. During its whole course it is navigable, imparting fertility to a wide tract of meadows, and affording a ready conveyance not only to the produce of this county, but is the connecting medium of the whole canal navigation of England. Its only inconvenience is its sometimes being subject to floods. From the middle and north-west parts, several streams unite and form the Idle, which joins the Trent at the north-east angle of the county, and the Erewash rises in Derbyshire, which it separates from Nottingham. The Chesterfield canal crosses the northern extremity of the county, and enters the Trent near the mouth of the Idle. The Norfolk mode of turnip husbandry has been introduced with great success upon the forest inclosures, and produces excellent corn, particularly barley. Nottinghamshire formed a part of the territories of the Coritani, and afterwards of the Saxon kingdom of Mercia. It lies in the diocese and province of York, and is included in the midland circuit. The average scale of mortality for 10 years, appears to have been as one 1 to 50 of the existing population.

NOTTINGTON, a hamlet in the parish of Broadway, near Melcomb Regis, Dorsetshire, 125 miles from London, on the left of the Dorchester road; famous for its medicinal spring, which has been found extremely serviceable in cutaneous and scorbutic disorders. It has a strong sulphurous smell, though perfectly limpid, and greatly resembles the Moffatt water in Scotland.

NOUTON, a hamlet to Royston, in the wapentake of Staincross, west riding of York, 5 miles from Barnsley, and 175 from London; containing 60 houses and 325 inhabitants.

NOW, a river in Derbyshire, which falls into the Derwent, below Stratton.

NOWTON, a parish in the hundred of Thingoe, Suffolk, 3 miles from Bury St. Edmund's, and 68 from London; containing 25 houses and 170 inhabitants. It is a vicarage, value 5*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.*

NOVA SCOTIA, a small hamlet 1¼ mile from Ipswich in Suffolk.

NUFFIELD, a village in the hundred of Ewelme, Oxford, 4 miles from Wallingford, and 41 from London; containing 29 houses and 139 inhabitants.

NUNBURNHOLM, a parish in the division of Wilton Beacon, wapentake of Harthill, east riding of York. 2 miles from Pocklington, and 195 from London; containing 22 houses and 125 inhabitants.

NUNEATON, a market town and parish in the hundred of Hemlingford, Warwick, situated on the river Anker, 8 miles from Coventry, and 99 from London; containing 1075 houses and 4769 inhabitants, viz. 2076 males and 2693 females, of whom 2488 were returned as being employed in trade and manufactures, principally in those of woollen cloth and ribbands. The town is tolerably well built. The church has a square tower, in which hang six bells. It has a good free grammar school, founded by the inhabitants in the reign of Edward VI. to which they gave three inclosures in the liberty of Coventry, as belonging to the manor of East Greenwich, and to be held of the crown in soccage. Its name is supposed to have been derived from a convent of benedictine nuns situated here. The market is on Saturday. Fairs, 18th February, 14th May, and 31st October. It is a vicarage, value 24*l.* 14*s.* 7*d.* in the patronage of the king.

NUNEHAM COURTNEY. See NEWNHAM COURTNEY, Oxford.

NUNHEAD, a hamlet to Peckham in Surry.

NUNKERLING, a hamlet in the parish of Bewholm, in Holderness wapentake, east riding of York, 3 miles from Hornsea, and 190 from London. Population included with Bewholme.

NUNMONCTON, a parish in Claro wapentake west riding of York, 8 miles from York, and 208 from London; containing 63 houses and 308 inhabitants. It is a curacy. It formerly had a priory of benedictine nuns founded in the reign of king Stephen.

NUNNINGTON, a parish in Rydal division, north riding of York, 4 miles from Helmsley, and 220 from London; containing 61 houses and 291 inhabitants. It is a curacy.

NUNNY, a parish in the hundred of Frome, Somerset, 4 miles from Frome, and 109 from London; containing 186 houses and 919 inhabitants. Its castle was burnt down by the parliament forces in the year 1645. Fair 11th November. It is a rectory, value 15*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.*

NUNNYKIRK, a hamlet in the township of Nether Whitton, in the parish of Hartburn, Morpeth ward, Northumberland, 7 miles from Morpeth, and 297 from London; containing 3 houses and 10 inhabitants.

NUN ORMSBY. See ORMSBY NUN, Lincolnshire.

NUNRIDING, a hamlet in the parish of Mitford, Morpeth ward, Northumberland, 3½ miles from Morpeth, and 294 from London; containing 7 houses and 43 inhabitants.

NUNSBRIDGE, 63½ miles from London, Hunts, where formerly stood a benedictine nunnery. It was afterwards converted into the mansion-house of sir Oliver Cromwell, cousin to the Protector. It is now called Hinchinbrook house, and belongs to the earl of Sandwich.

